Yet the question is hardly one of ability. It strikes deeper. The higher the civilization, the greater the ordinary deference to woman. It is the high-water mark of Christian gentlemanhood, the way in which intuitively and automatically, when off guard and off duty, so to speak, the man carries himself to women, not of his kinsfolk nor acquaintance, but of the same flesh and blood as his mother, his wife, and his daughter. Whether or not a gentleman in a crowded car shall resign the seat for which he has paid to the woman, who may or may not be a lady, is a point in etiquette to be decided, not arbitrarily, but according to the individual code. Gentlemen of the old school, courtly-mannered and highly bred, are not in doubt on the subject. Influenced by the old-fashioned ideas of gallantry, the courteous deference of the stronger to the weaker, once universally prevalent in their order, they are decidedly uncomfortable if seated while near by a woman makes frantic clutches at the strap, or despairingly sways with every turn of the car.

Others, less fastidious, are oblivious to the possible claim of an aged or burdened woman, provided she belongs to the toiling class, yet are quick to offer politeness and relinquish a place in favor of an elegantly dressed, a young or a beautiful woman. The babe in arms seldom makes appeal in vain to a manly heart, and one rarely sees the mother thus accompanied permitted to wait long for a seat.

The purpose of this little word in season is not to comment on right or wrong in the matter, but simply to relate an incident which may be a straw to show a new direction of the wind, and which is at least interesting from its novelty.

Summer Beverages.

THE only palliating thing about the dog-days is that they make us enjoy to the fullest extent the cooling beverages which refresh our dragging bodies and thereby give fresh impetus to our weary and lagging brain. The laziest member of our party gave his quota of praise to the cooling drink which had just been served to us in dainty tumblers, with an accompaniment of the tinkle of miniature icebergs against their crystal sides.

To indulge too freely in any kind of beverage, even as simple a one as pure water, during the heated term is not only imprudent, but apt to lead directly to very ill results; but there are some easily made drinks which, taken in moderation, are to be recommended for their cooling and refreshing properties.

No matter how simple and easily made, these beverages must be properly and carefully concocted, or they will be insipid in the extreme. Indeed, the more simple they are, the more need is there that the few ingredients should be rightly proportioned and compounded.

Even lemonade, that national liquid which holds a summer-long reign, and is the means of cooling so many throats parching quietly and aristocratically on wide piazzas, or fiercely and plebeianly among the hot and sweltering crowds assembled on country fair grounds and similar gathering places, may be made in more ways than any one at first would believe possible, and the scale of difference between barely palatable and deliciously refreshing is extremely long.

The following method is one of the best: Place in a shallow wooden tray or on a platter two level tablespoonfuls of sugar for each lemon to be used; wipe off the lemons, and bruise them by rolling them over the sugar until enough oil has been extracted to flavor the sugar slightly; pour the sugar into a wide-mouthed pitcher, and squeeze over it the juice of the lemons; add two tablespoonfuls of water for each lemon, and stir until the sugar is dissolved; then strain to remove all bits of pulp and the seeds, and add as much more ice-cold water as will make it pleasant to taste.

Ginger lemonade can be taken in many cases of sickness when the free use of water is not to be indulged in, and is an agreeable tonic drink for any one. Boil twelve pounds of loaf-sugar in five gallons of water for fifteen minutes; add the well-beaten whites of six eggs; stir in well; let it simmer gently for fifteen minutes, skimming off all impurities as they rise; bruise thoroughly half a pound of ginger root, and add it at the same time as the whites of the eggs; after these ingredients have boiled for half an hour longer, pour off over twelve lemons, peeled and sliced. When perfectly cold, pour into a cask, and add two tablespoonfuls of yeast. After it has stood two weeks it is ready for use, and may be drawn off into bottles. Half a glassful diluted with half a glassful of water makes a very pleasant and refreshing drink.

Cream nectar has a well-deserved reputation. It has won renown, steady patronage, and countless dimes for the places where it is served, but there is no reason why it should not be made at home, as its concoction is extremely easy. Take two pounds of loaf sugar and four quarts of water; place together in a porcelain kettle or earthen vessel over a slow fire; when warm, add the whites of four eggs beaten to a froth, and bring to nearly boiling heat, but be careful not to let it boil; skim constantly as long as any impurities rise. Remove from the fire, and when almost cold add four ounces of tartaric acid and the juice and a little of the rind of one lemon for flavoring. A little essence of cloves, nutmeg, and ginger may also be added if liked. When cold, pour in bottles and cork. It should stand for two days before using. To use, dissolve a scant half-teaspoonful of supercarbonate of soda in two-thirds of a glass of cold water; add two teaspoonfuls of the cream, and stir until it effervesces.—Harper's Bazar.

THE EFFECT OF MISSIONARY WORK is plainly visible in Japan. The people of this country seem just now to have awakened from their long sleep, and to be exerting all their strength to come abreast of the most highly civilized nations. A society has been formed to do away with the Chinese characters in writing, and to introduce the Roman letters. A boy can then learn to read better in a few months than he can now in ten years. Besides the saving of time and labor, it is impossible to express all the terms of modern science and knowledge in Chinese characters.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The Land of Fresh Air.

DUST and glare on the city street,
Alleys blistered with scorching heat,
Poor little children fever-flushed,
Waxen faces like blossoms crushed,
Never a breath of the sweet fresh air
In the dingy court and the narrow stair;
What can the babies do but die
Under the fierce and burning sky?

Yet cool and fragrant the green hills are
Under the kisses of sun and star,
Grasses wave and the tall reeds shake,
Ripples dance over stream and lake,
Over the stones the brooklets plash,
Over the cliffs the torrents dash,
Dream the cows in the pleasant shade,
Skip the lambs in the mossy glade;
May we not carry the babies there,
Into the world of the sweet fresh air?

Here they go on the rushing train,
Off to the beautiful farms again,
Up to the sunny fields that lie
Under the face of the open sky,
Down to the homes like happy nests
Hiding in hollows of mountain crests;
There they shall tumble, romp, and play,
Free as the birds, the livelong day,
Have plenty to eat and never a care
While they stay in the land of the sweet fresh air.

Driving the cows to the pasture lot,
Hunting for eggs in the queerest spot,
Fishing for hours beneath the bridge,
Climbing the steeps of the pine-clad ridge,
Cheeks with the roses of health aglow,
Feet that are flitting to and fro;
Very well will the babies fare,
Once in the land of the sweet fresh air.

—Margaret E. Sangster, in Harper's Young People.

Beth's Escape.

DURING the Revolution there lived in a small town in Massachusetts a family named Dare. ; was composed of the mother, a timid little oman; Elizabeth, sixteen and small for her age; nd Dorothy, six years old.

The men of the place, excepting those who were o old and those who were mere boys, had gone to ie war, and as letters at that time were very scarce, one of them had been heard from for a long while.

One morning a boy from a neighboring village galped up to the door of the Dares' house and called at that a body of Hessians were marching upon the wn. He said, also, that the Dares were to go to ie Black's, where there were three or four wagons aiting to take the villagers to L——, a town ten iles out of the track of the Hessians, who were on eir way to Boston. When the boy had passed on tell some of the neighbors, Elizabeth said: Mother, you and Dorothy go on; I will hide some our things and will then follow you." So Mrs. are started with Dorothy. She was unable to walk ry rapidly, and when she reached the Black's she as told that Beth was in a wagon that had gone on fore. Supposing her to have taken a shorter road, e went on with the others.

Meanwhile Beth took the silver, and having put it to a kettle, lowered it into the well, tying the cord a stone a little way down. Then she went to her other's room, and having loosened her long hair, put it up again over the family pocketbook.

After this was done she started down the road to the Black's, but upon arriving there found that she was alone in the village. For a few minutes she was in great perplexity. Then, lifting up a silent prayer for help, she went back to the house, locked herself in, and, putting the key in her pocket, crept into the big, old-fashioned oven.

Fortunately, as it was summer, there was no fire in the fireplace. There was barely room for her to get in and creep far enough back to pull the door almost shut. She did not dare to fasten herself in.

It seemed hours that Beth waited for the soldiers to come. She had just decided to get out of her hiding-place when she heard voices outside. She lay still, scarcely daring to breathe, as she heard the men go round the house trying all the windows and doors, one of which they finally burst open. In they rushed, hunting around for spoil, and swearing loudly when they found there was nothing valuable for them to carry away.

They got out all the food that they could find, and then one of the men took a big pitcher and went out to draw some water. He saw the cord by which the kettle holding the silver was suspended, and took hold of it to pull it up. It broke in his hand, and taking the pitcher of water the man went back into the house to tell the others about it. Oh! how glad Beth was when she heard his news!

When the men were through eating they broke most of the dishes. Gathering up what provisions they could, they coolly remarked that had the occupants of the house only been at home they would have secured both money and silver. They wondered where these people could have gone! When the men had departed, Beth lay still for some time. At length, having grown very hungry, she crawled out snail-fashion from her hiding-place. Finding a few pieces of bread which the soldiers had overlooked, she lunched upon these and then returned to the oven, in which she remained the greater part of that night.

The next morning she went cautiously to the nearest house, and thence to all the other houses in the village. The soldiers had broken into them all and had then left the town. Beth managed to get along until the villagers came back from L——. This occurred on the third day after their flight. Mrs. Dare fainted from joy at the sight of her daughter, whom she had feared never to see again. Yet she soon found strength to thank God, with a trembling voice, for his care over Beth. Let us be thankful that we live in less troubled times.

ANGIE M. MYERS.

All of One Family.

IT was the first of July. The great city railway station was crowded with gay, well dressed people, on their way to some summer resort in the mountains or by the sea. In odd contrast to them was a group of ragged Italian emigrants, with whom a uniformed official was arguing angrily.

"I tell you this is not your station!" raising his voice, as people are apt to do to foreigners. "At the other end of the city. Emigrant station. Two miles. Come, clear out!"

The man of the party shook his head stolidly, muttering "Tollido" as his sole answer, and holding out a bit of written paper.

"Toledo, Ohio," read the train-hand. "The idea of a lot of wretches as stupid as dogs going half round the world with nothing but that scrap of paper to guide them!" he ejaculated to his companions.

He bustled away, and the emigrants shrank back into their corner. The man looked at his pale, hunger-bitten little girl and his wife, and then at the groups who were chattering and laughing about him. Some young girls drew their light dresses aside as they passed him, and a sour-looking, middle-aged woman muttered something to them about "the country being an asylum for paupers." The poor Italian scowled with bitter envy at a party of young, fashionable men. He carried a stick, with a few rags in a bundle; they were equipped with costly rifles and fishing tackle.

Maletesta looked as though he felt himself an outcast from the happy human race. There was no tie between him and these well-to-do people.

A moment later there was a cry, a fall, and a sudden rush of the crowd toward him. His child, a pretty little girl, had slid from her mother's knee and lay on the stone floor as if dead. The wretched Italian threw himself down beside her.

"Ah Gila! Figlia mia!" he cried, in a voice that made the tears start to the eyes of many a woman.

In a moment the great room was alive with help and friendliness. One of the young men had the child on his knee.

"I am a physician," he said, quietly. "She is not dead. It is the heat and—hunger. Jem, go to the nearest drug-shop and bring——," lowering his voice. "And, Will, get some milk from the restaurant."

The young men dropped their guns and rods, and ran; old men, young girls, and negro waiters crowded forward with help. When the child recovered, a dozen eager hands led Maletesta and his wife to the eating-room, and somebody went round with a hat, collecting a fund for their relief. The young doctor still held the child, feeding it carefully, when the old lady, no longer haughty and sour, came up to him.

"As soon as the baby is fit to travel, I will take them all home with me. The man is a vine-dresser, it seems, and my husband is a grape-grower in New Jersey. They shall have their own roof over their heads before night."

The Italian and his wife stood beside her, crying and smiling and crossing themselves. They were believers in the Pope, the doctor was a Baptist, and the good woman a Methodist, but the single touch of suffering had made them all children of one Father. —Youth's Companion.

How a Spider Moults.

THE young did not leave the cocoon until the following spring. When they came out they moved about six inches distant and formed a compact mass like a miniature swarm of bees. Thus they remained a day or two. Finally the mass broke up and formed four groups, and soon after the united force made a thick web five or six inches in length and breadth, and here they left their first baby-clothes strung along the innumerable lines.

When a spider is preparing to moult it stops eating for several days, and fastens itself by a short line of web to one of the main lines of its snare, which holds it firmly while it proceeds to undress. The skin cracks all around the thorax and is held only by the front edge. Next, the abdomen is uncovered. Now comes the struggle to free the legs; its works and kicks vigorously, and seems to have very hard work. But continued perseverance of about fifteen minutes brings it out of the old dress; and it seems almost lifeless, and is limp and helpless for several minutes, but gradually comes back to life and looks brighter and prettier than before.

To young people and even to little children it is an operation of extreme interest. My little nephew watched the moulting of nearly a full-grown pet spider, and ran to his mother saying, "Mamma, my spider undressed and hung his dress on a line."—Mrs. Treat, in December Wide Awake.

Little Heads Together.

CHARADE.

My first you may feel but you never can see,
Though all the day long it around you may be;
My second a child who is orphaned you'll find.
My whole is a word bringing ships to your mind.

LEX.

DIAMOND.

1. A letter in plenipotentiary. 2. Seen in spring-time. 3. Part of a ring. 4. What you like to make. 5. To dig. 6. A Confederate general. 7. In sustenance. V.

CROSSWORD.

My first is in wood, but not in tree;
My second in wasp, but not in bee;
My third is in said, but not in done;
My fourth is in three, but not in one;
My fifth is in bird, but not in lark;
My sixth in listen, but not in hark;
My seventh in give, but not in take;
My eighth is in boat, but not in lake;
My ninth is in boy, but not in girl;
My tenth is in knot, but not in curl;
My whole was a great and clever man,
Guess his name, "Little Heads," if you can.

"ITTALIE."

Answers to Puzzles of August 18th.

Enigma.—Washington crossing the Delaware.

Square Word.—
M O N T H
O M A H A
N A S A L
T H A N E
H A L E D

Pi.—
Gracie rises with a light
In her clear face like the sun,
Like the regal crowned sun
That at morning meets her sight.
Mirthful, merry little one,
Happy, hopeful little one,
What has made her day so bright?

Correct answers from "Prague" and Nellie Lefferts.

Original puzzles for this department are solicited. Address Cousin LOIS, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The Earthquake.

PROFESSOR POWELL, of the U. S. Geological Survey, telegraphed the following record of the recent earth movement to the British Association for the Advancement of Science:

"Earthquake most severe on record in the United States, and affected greatest area. Origin along line of post-quartenary dislocation on eastern flanks of Appalachians, especially where it crosses central North Carolina. Slight premonitory shocks felt in the Carolinas for several days, moderately severe shocks occurring near Charleston, August 27th and 28th. The principal shock, causing great destruction in Charleston, originated in Central North Carolina, August 31st, 9.50 P.M., seventy-fifth meridian time. Thence the shocks spread with great rapidity in all directions with velocity varying from 25 to 65 miles a minute, over an area of 900 000 square miles, one quarter of the United States, embracing twenty eight States, from the Gulf of Mexico to the great lakes and Southern New England, and from the Atlantic sea-board to the Central Mississippi valley. In the Carolinas it was accompanied by land slides, crevasses, and great destruction of property. Half of Charleston in ruins; more than forty lives lost. No sea wave yet reported. A second moderately severe shock felt at Charleston 8 25 A.M., September 1st, minor shocks followed at increasing intervals. The principal shock was felt over this vast area within fifteen minutes and may be recorded at some of the principal points on a scale of intensity of five, as follows: Raleigh 4, at 9 50 P M ; Charleston 5, at 9 54; Cedar Keys, Fla , 2, at 10.05; Knoxville 3, at 9 55; Memphis 4, at 9 55; St Louis 2 at 10 00; Milwaukee 3, at 10.06; Pittsburg 3, at 10 00; Albany 2 at 10 00; Springfield, Mass., 1, at 10 00; New York 2, at 9.53."

THE EFFECT IN VARIOUS LOCALITIES.

About 3,000 of the 12,000 buildings in Charleston are injured to such an extent that they must be re built. Some of the most substantial public buildings are in this condition. Among the hotels, the Pavilion suffered the most, but has resumed business in a degree. The Charleston Hotel is using about 20 rooms.

At Summerville, a summer resort for Charleston people, a few miles west of Charleston, the shocks were as severe as in the city and the ruin more complete. The ground opened and closed, and mud and and steam and sulphurous fumes were ejected.

Savannah was severely shaken, buildings were cracked, chimneys toppled down, bricks hurled into the streets and yards, plastering fell in houses and ornaments and moveable articles. A large number of buildings was injured and the cost of repairs will be large.

Macon, Georgia, reports slight shocks, doing no damage. All the regulator clocks were stopped at Columbus, Miss. At Wilmington, Del., the shock was light. At Raleigh, N. C., the houses were shaken so violently that the inmates sought shelter in the streets. Bells were rung, plastering thrown down, chimneys overturned by the quaking of the earth.

The people of Morristown, N. J., were alarmed by three shocks which rung bells, overturned vases and articles of bric-à-brac, and shook the houses. At Kingston, N. Y., hanging lamps swung to and fro, water splashed out of pitchers, clocks stopped, mirrors were cracked and dishes fell from shelves. At Schenectady, N. Y., two shocks were felt and many persons were made sick.

At Memphis, Tenn., the oscillations of buildings were such that people fled from them. The audiences in places of amusement in various localities in Ohio were so alarmed by the swaying of the buildings that they rushed out into the streets. This extended to Cleveland on the lake. In Chicago, Ill., the upper stories of hotels and other buildings swayed to such an extent that the occupants abandoned them for a time.

In New York and Brooklyn a slight tremor was felt, causing shades to flap against the window sashes, chandeliers to swing to and fro, and rocking chairs to rock.

Shocks have occurred daily at Charleston and Savannah, and the population is camped out on the streets in improvised tents. In the surrounding country pools of water have been formed, similar to geyser pools.

The shocks of Tuesday night were felt from the Atlantic to the Mississippi, and from Mobile to Cleveland, varying in power with the localities.

THE EXPERIENCE OF A TRAVELLER.

The Washington Star publishes the following account of the shocks at Charleston and the ruin suddenly wrought, as given in conversation by Mr. Thomas H. Tolson, of Baltimore, who reached Washington on the 31:

"I was stopping at the Charleston Hotel," he said. "The evening preceding the earthquake had been exceedingly warm and close. There was not a breath of air stirring. The sky had a lurid appearance. Many people noticed and spoke of the stillness of the air. I had been sitting out doors, opposite the hotel, talking with an old gentleman, and about 9.45 bade him good night, went over to the hotel and soon went to my room, which was on the third floor from the ground. When I lit my gas, an extension burner which you pull down, I heard a noise and supposed I had broken something. I made an inspection, but could find nothing broken. Then I went to place my hat on a bureau, and just then the shock came, without any warning. I would have fallen if I had not thrown my hands out and clung to the window. It seemed as though the hotel was lifted up and swung backward and forward a distance of fifteen or twenty inches at each vibration. I was terrified. At the very first shock the lights in the house all went out, and I was in perfect darkness. Then the plastering began to fall. It flashed through my mind that I should endeavor to get out of the house, and I got out into the corridor and groped my way, in utter darkness, amid falling plaster. Other people in the house were likewise groping their way out. When I reached the ground floor I could see a little from the reflection from the street lights. The air was filled with plaster dust. All around was a terrible roaring and moaning sound, and the din was heightened by the falling of timbers. I found the front door of the house closed, a fortunate thing for me, as it saved my life. It took me a moment to find the knob, and as I was looking for it tons of brick fell down from the upper part of the house in front of the door. If I had found the door open I would have been buried under the bricks. I ran out through the heaps of fallen bricks and fell twice in getting to the middle of the street. There I remained terror-stricken.

"Two shocks came after I had reached the middle of the street, one faint one, seven minutes after the first, and another, more violent than the second, nine minutes later. The three shocks occurred within sixteen minutes. I remained in front of the hotel for a long time—until 1 o'clock. I did not know what to do. I was so unnerved that I could scarcely stand. As it became quieter, no more shocks occurring, I went up the street to an open space and remained there until 3 o'clock. There we had another slight shock. At 3 o'clock I went to the Battery Park and found it crowded, several thousands of terrified people having assembled there. There I remained during the remainder of the night. At 5 o'clock another faint shock was felt. At daylight I, like others, felt more encouraged and I moved around to see what destruction had been done. I found all the Battery Front, some of the most costly houses in the city, cracked from the ground to the top, and some portions of the buildings were destroyed completely. All of the Charleston dwellings are built with porches in front, many having substantial pillars, and these porches were all thrown down. There was not a house in Charleston that had its chimneys standing. The terror among the people during the night was intense. They rushed through the streets frantically calling on God to have mercy on them. People who perhaps never prayed before then prayed aloud. Then to this were added the shrieks of the wounded and the lamentations of those who had lost friends. Here and there parties with lights were looking through the ruins for the missing people. The greatest terror and confusion reigned everywhere. The people when the shock came ran, men, women and children, out into the streets in their night clothing and remained in that way during the night huddled together in the street. None would venture back into the houses. The least little shock was likely to throw the houses to the ground. Daylight was never welcomed as it was by the thousands of terror-stricken people in the streets of Charleston Wednesday morning."

Mr. Tolson said that he thought the published estimate of damages was too low, and that three-fourths of the city would have to be rebuilt. The people killed, he said, were killed while leaving their houses by the falling of debris. All who could leave the city, he said, were leaving yesterday, but no trains could get away until yesterday morning.

PROFESSOR STOWE was buried at Andover, Mass., on August 25th; of his character and habits the Hartford Courant says:

Dr. Stowe was one of the most interesting men of his generation. In his late years his infirmity of deafness cut him off a good deal from any intercourse with his fellows, but notwithstanding that he was a most entertaining companion. He had been all his life an omniverous reader in several languages, a keen observer of the peculiarities of human life, and he had a retentive memory; nothing happened in politics, religion, or letters that did not intensely interest him; he was an uncommonly good talker, original in phrase and striking in idea, and perfectly outspoken. He was an optimist and consequently usually took a cheerful view of our affairs, and fairly glowed with patriotism and pride in his country. When he was too ill to be much or long absent from his bed, there were two books that he always kept by him—the Greek Testament and Faust in the original. These books he always had within reach, that he might take them up if he was wakeful in the night, and he wore out edition after edition of them. Almost to the very last he pursued his studies, and to the very last he read the newspapers and was keenly alive to all that went on in the country. He had always been a close observer of England and of English politics, and his knowledge of the public men and the issues in England embraced a long period. His admiration for Mr. Gladstone was always lively, and he was, even in his feebleness, much excited over his Irish schemes.

THE BERKELEY INSTITUTE, a school for girls, is located at Nos. 183 to 185 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn, Long Island. It is now under the supervision and enjoys the active support of a company of gentlemen, highly esteemed in Brooklyn, who have taken out a certificate of incorporation under the laws of this State. The Principal of the Institute is Rev. Alfred C. Roe, a graduate of the New York University, a minister of the Presbyterian Church, and the brother of Edward P. Roe, the cultivator of choice fruits and writer of wholesome popular stories. Mr. Roe began his school for girls in Brooklyn quietly and without ostentation, as a personal venture, but with a resolution to ascertain whether a thoroughly Christian school could be gathered and maintained, in which the instruction should be carried on to about a level with that received by young men in colleges, and where special attention should be given to the development of physical health and vigor. The system adopted by the Principal won so many friends, and in his hands produced such pleasing results that, in order to extend it, gentlemen in the vicinity adopted it, formed a company to develop it, and expect and intend before long to erect and equip a large building for the institution. The full name of the school is the Berkeley Collegiate Institute for Ladies. The name of the Principal has been given, and by addressing him at Lincoln Place all desirable information can be obtained by those who wish it.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Sept. 7th.

THE visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, this side of the Rocky Mountains, increased last week 1,680,324 bushels, making it 42,965,359 bushels, or about 2 million bushels less than on Sept. 5 h, 1885. This is a large stock, but represents more than any other stock the world's supply for months to come. There is need of every grain of it, for the world's production is much less than that of last year, and still more inferior to that of 1884, which was a very exceptional year.

Quotations yesterday were: Wheat here 87 3-8, in Chicago 76 1 4; corn here 51 1-8, in Chicago 40 3-8; oats here 32 1-4, in Chicago 25 1-4. Cotton closed here at: Sept. 9.15-16; Oct. 9.18-19; Nov. 9 19-20; Dec. 9.21-22. Provisions are firm, but not in active demand. The market for hay is not as strong. Choice timothy, old, 80 to 85 cents, clover mixed 50 to 55 Long rye straw 55 to 60, oat 35 to 40, wheat 25 to 35.

Last week was a very dull one at the Stock Exchange, the sales being unusually small. Yesterday there was more activity and a small rise in values. Prices, notwithstanding the dulness, have been well maintained. The returns of railroad traffic are encouraging.

The imports of merchandise last week at this port were valued at $9,208 751, and the exports at $6 556,509 The import of gold for the week ending Sept. 4th, is reported at $3 861 645. Foreign exchange yesterday sold for $4 81 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4 84 1-2 for demand for sterling. The value of exchange is not regulated at present by the state of our foreign trade. Demand abroad has raised the value of silver, and the silver dollar is worth at present 73 cents as bullion.

The Associated Banks reduced loans $3 226,600 gained in specie $1,676,200, lost in legal tenders $2,523,200 and in deposits $3 441,100. To the surplus of reserve $13,275 was added, making it $6,920,425 The average rate for money is 6 per cent, but time loans are made for less on undoubted security.

The national debt was reduced during August $1 910,699. The bonded debt was reduced about five and a half millions. Some other items were increased. The Treasury offered a week ago to redeem at any time $10,000,000 of 3 per cents. Only about half a million have been redeemed.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

The whole city of Charleston, S. C., will have to be rebuilt, but the people are not disheartened by the ruin.... The demand of the Mexicans for the person of Geronimo is said to have resulted in the killing of five Mexicans and wounding of two American soldiers.... A sharp debate over Irish affairs is in progress in the British Parliament. The administration, especially Lord Randolph Churchill, is persistently arraigned. The budget has not been touched.

SATURDAY, 4.—Prince Alexander has received advice from Bismarck dissuading him from punishing the guilty rebels. The officers near and devoted to Alexander are openly opposed to anything like retreat from the Prince's present position. A warm reception was given the Prince on his arrival at Sofia, and his carriage was literally covered with flowers. Various deputations greeted the Prince....Another severe earthquake shock was felt at Columbia, S. C., last night; it lasted twenty seconds, and the effect upon the negroes was perfectly appalling. The shock was felt all along the Southern Atlantic coast. The shock was felt from Jacksonville to Washington ...An earth explosion occurred at Bowdrie, Ill When the noise occurred a cloud of smoke and dust was thrown sixty feet in the air in which were bits of dirt, stumps and roots. A deep hole was left in the earth which has not yet been explored... The Hudson river sea serpent has been seen, it is said, again near Albany, N. Y....All preparations for the great labor parade next Monday has been made. The permit is for 40,000 men. ... Mr. Parnell will submit a land bill for Ireland, report says, to the House of Commons next week.

MONDAY, 6.—Another riot reported in Belfast. An Orange funeral procession was attacked yesterday by Catholics and many stones were thrown....It is stated that Emperor William proposed Alexander's telegram to the Czar as the best means of a reconciliation, and that the Czar's reply was a direct blow at the Emperor ...It is reported that the Prince will resign the sovereign power either into the hands of a council or regency selected to represent all the parties or by a proclamation, as the Sobranjé can only be convened in three weeks....Another severe earthquake shock was felt at Charleston, S. C., Saturday night. The heavens had a pinkish tinge just before the shock, and the air was still. The Mayor of Charleston arrived from Europe yesterday and started immediately for the suffering city....Miss Alice Broom, of Walker Co., Ga., was so badly bitten in the throat by a mad dog that it is feared she will die of her injuries ..Mrs. Victoria A. Schilling has left her husband and gone to the Convent of the Sacred Heart. Her husband is perfectly willing to let her go ... Emma Hubbard, of Amityville, L. I., was killed by an enraged horse biting her in the throat until she was dead....The widow of James K. Polk celebrated the eighty-third anniversary of her birth yesterday.

TUESDAY, 7.—Only a slight shock at Charleston at 11.15 during night of 5th and 6th. None reported since. Confidence returning....In this city liberal gifts are made for the relief of Charleston....Cloutman & Bingham, shoe house in Boston, failed yesterday for about $600,000.... Droughts and extreme destitution continues in Western Texas....The fever at Biloxi, Miss., is not yellow fever....It is now certain that Sedgwick, special envoy to Mexico, did indulge in a disgraceful drunken debauch. ....Labor day was observed yesterday in a half a dozen cities. Procession at Newark, N. J., included about 15,000 men, that at Chicago over 30,000....First bale of new cotton from Georgia has arrived....Parnell has reached an agreement, it is said, with the Tories....Congress of British Trades Unions advocates lessening the hours of labor. ..Heaviest rain storm known passed over Western Scotland yesterday....The abdication of Prince Alexander it is feared will lead to a civil war in Bulgaria....The Island of St. Vincent, West Indies, was desolated on August 16th, by the cyclone which did so much damage along the Texan coast....Parliament began on the estimates yesterday and passed some items. An adjournment on September 15th is now considered probable.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, September 4, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 34,734 pks.; exports 763 pks.

Our market is same as last quoted. The bulk of stock here is in waiting. Holders do not cut back the price far enough to give the market a vigorous start, and buyers are indifferent, and if sales have to be forced name lower prices. English markets are much in the same mood, and business for the week was chiefly limited to a local demand for fine fresh flavored stock. We quote:

Fancy creamery	@23
do dairy (selections)	19 @20
Good to fine	16 @18
Poor to common	8 @13

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 53,404 boxes; exports 30,000 boxes.

Light receipts, cooler weather and fair enquiry caused an advance of fully ½c. per lb. on finest cheese. There were free sales of fine goods at 9¼a 9½c. Night skims were in good demand at 7a8c with some enquiry for sweet full skims at 4a5c. for Southern trade. Market closes firm. We quote:

Factory, white, full cream, finest	9¼@ 9½
" colored, " "	9¼@ 9½
" good to fine "	8½@ 9
" night milk skims	7 @ 8
" skims	2½@ 5

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 17,595 bbls.

Our market has ruled steady all the week, and all fresh stock is well cleared at about last week's prices. We quote:

Near-by marks, strictly fresh laid	16½@17
Western and Canada, loss off	14½@15½

Publisher's Department.

Rheumatism and the Gout, cease their twinges, if the affected part is daily washed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap, which banishes pain and renders the joints and muscles supple and elastic. It is at the same time a very effective clarifier and beautifier of the skin.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Sick Headache. Thousands who have suffered intensely with sick headache say that Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured them. One gentleman thus relieved, writes: "Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." Sold by all druggists. 100 doses $1.

People who live in new countries are liable to be prostrated by malarial fevers. Inhabitants of cities, by reason of bad drainage and unwholesome odors, suffer from similar diseases. Ayer's Ague Cure is warranted a specific for all malarial poisons.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a stuff. 50c.

In many localities Hood's Sarsaparilla is in such general demand that it is the recognized family medicine. People write that "the whole neighborhood is taking it," etc. Particularly is this true of Lowell, Mass., where it is made, and where more of Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold than of any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier. It is the great remedy for debility, scrofula, dyspepsia, biliousness, or any disease caused by impure state or low condition of the blood. Give it a trial.

MARRIAGES.

ANDRE—COLLINS.—In Philadelphia, Pa., at the residence of the bride's mother, on Wednesday, Sept. 1, by the Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D., John K. Andre to Matilda L. Collins, both of Philadelphia.

COLE—ISVISTER.—At the home of the bride's parents, on Sept. 1, by Rev. I. S. Schenck, Henry A. Cole and Mary Jane Isvister, both of West Ghent, N. Y.

FRITZ—WHITEMAN.—At South Bend, Ind., Sept. 1, Mr. William Fritz and Miss Matilda Whiteman, by Rev. N. D. Williamson.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

McCULLOCH.—Wednesday, Aug, 25, Walter McCulloch, in the 9th year of his age.

The deceased was for nearly forty years a member of the Reformed Church of Onesquethaw, N. Y., and for that length of time was a member of the Consistory, and at the time of his death was the Senior Elder. As a husband and father he was kind and loving; as a friend he was firm and true; as a citizen he was loyal; as a consistory-man he was wise in counsel, and faithful in performing all the duties belonging to that office; and as a Christian man he was faithful to the end. No stain ever marred his character, but he lived Christ everywhere; and as he had thus lived as a Christian he died the Christian's death. Not only his family but the church to which he belonged and the community in which he lived, have, in his death, met with a heavy trial, but our loss is his gain, for he could say with the Apostle, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." C. M. P.

VAN MATER.—At Ben Lomond, Goochland Co., Virginia, on the 24th of August, 1886, Mrs. Sarah H. Holmes, wife of Gilbert H. Van Mater, Esq., formerly of Holmdel, Monmouth Co., N. J., in the 64th year of her age.

The intelligence of her death brings sadness to a wide circle of relatives and friends, with whom she had been intimately associated from early life, and who had enjoyed the generous hospitalities of her pleasant home; and none the less to those whom she had taught as children in the Sabbath-school, her husband being superintendent, and successful in his work.

At the age of 20 she united with the Reformed Church of Holmdel and walked before God with her husband, who, though young in years, held a prominent position in the church. They are now separated for a time, and he and his children are left to mourn her loss. They sorrow not as those without hope. R.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy, sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—The Fall Term of the Seminary will open on Tuesday, Sept. 21st.

The committee for the reception of students, consisting of the Faculty of the Seminary and the members of the Board of Superintendents, appointed for that purpose, will meet in James Suydam Hall at 11 o'clock A.M. on that day to receive applicants for admission.

Applicants are requested to have with them their certificates of church membership and their literary credentials.

Furnished rooms in Hertzog Hall are assigned on the first day of the session. Good board can be obtained in the hall on reasonable terms.

CORNELIUS BRETT,
Stated Clerk, pro tem., Board of Superintendents.

HOPE COLLEGE will open its sessions for 1886-87 on Wednesday, September 15th, at 9 o'clock A.M. The Faculty will meet for the reception of new students at 1.30 A.M. The course of instruction at this institution and all its adjuncts have been so far improved that students are invited from the East, as well as from the West, with the assurance of a good education at a very moderate cost. For further information or catalogues address

CHARLES SCOTT, President.

References: Rev. G. H. Mandeville, D.D., 34 Vesey street, New York city; Rev. C. E. Crispell, D.D., Spring Valley, N. Y.; Rev. Wm. J. R. Taylor, D.D., Newark, N. J.; J. C. Benham, M.D., Hudson, N. Y., or the editor.

THE Board of Education of the Reformed Church in America will meet at the Synod's Rooms, 34 Vesey street, New York, on Tuesday, the 14th day of September, 1886, at 11 o'clock A.M.

W. H. TEN EYCK, Rec. Sec.

THE CLASSIS OF ALBANY will meet in the Reformed Church of Onisquethaw Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10 A.M. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting. J. LANSING PEARSE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in regular session on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, in the Church of Schraalenburgh, at 10 o'clock A.M. Classical dues must be paid at this session.

P. V. VAN BUSKIRK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA.—The regular fall meeting of the Classis of Cayuga will be held in the Reformed Church of Utica on Tuesday Oct. 5th, at 7.30 P.M. C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE will meet in the Church of Kiskatom on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10 A.M. Classical dues are payable, and bills of delegates called for at this meeting.

B. VAN ZANDT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF HUDSON will meet in the church at Upper Red Hook, the third Tuesday in September at 10 A.M. The Rev. G. D. Lydecker will be installed pastor of said church at 10.30 A.M, of the same day. T. S. DUSINBERRE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MICHIGAN will meet in regular fall session at Holland, in Hope Church, at 2 P.M., Sept. 21st, the 3d Tuesday of the month. Will the brethren please make a good record of attendance? A. PAIGE PEEKE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONMOUTH will meet in stated session in the Reformed church at Spotswood on Tuesday, the 14th day of September, 1886, at 10 A.M. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. I. P. Brokaw, of Freehold. Consistorial minutes must be presented for examination, and Classical dues should be paid. THEO. W. WELLS, S. C.

THE stated fall session of the Classis of Paramus will be held in the Reformed Church of West New Hempstead on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10.30 A.M. Minutes of consistories are to be presented for examination. Applications for aid from Board of Domestic Missions must be sent 10 days before the meeting to the Rev. John Gaston, D.D., Passaic, N.J., Chairman of the Committee on Church Extension.

Carriages will meet delegates at Sufferns at 9.23, or at Spring Valley at 9.40 A.M.

JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY will meet in regular fall session in the Reformed church at Niskayuna on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10 A.M. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

C. P. DITMARS, S. C.

THE regular fall meeting of the Classis of Schoharie will be held in the Reformed Church of Gallupville, N. Y., on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10.30 o'clock.

D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Blue Mountain on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 11 A.M. Rev. A. J. Sebring is Chairman of the Committee on Synodical Minutes. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

Carriages will be in readiness at Saugerties station on the arrival of the 7 o'clock train from Kingston to convey members of Classis to the church.

J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address Rev. J. Elmendorf, D.D, at 61 East 123d st., New York.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION,

Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

What is it Good For?
TARRANT'S Effervescent Seltzer APERIENT

Cures Constipation Sick Headache and Biliousness. It promotes he Appetite, and invigorates the stomach, to which it imparts tone and vigor, and enables the digestive organs to perform their functions with ease and expedition. It is pleasant to the taste, portable in form, and gives immediate relief in all ordinary ailments arising from a disordered stomach or constipated habit. Take no substitute but demand the genuine Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient, which can be found in every well-regulated drug store.

The Appetite

May be increased, the Digestive organs strengthened, and the Bowels regulated, by taking Ayer's Pills. These Pills are purely vegetable in their composition. They contain neither calomel nor any other dangerous drug, and may be taken with perfect safety by persons of all ages.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, became greatly debilitated, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time my digestion and appetite my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

IMPROVED

I was troubled, for over a year, with Loss of Appetite, and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored. —C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and, at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—Philip Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but gave me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

The Church.

Courage.

STAND but your ground, your ghostly foes will fly—
Hell trembles at a heaven-directed eye;
Choose rather to defend than to assail—
Self-confidence will in the conflict fail.
When you are challenged you may dangers meet—
True courage is a fixed, not sudden, heat;
Is always humble, lives in self-distrust,
And will itself into no danger thrust.
Devote yourself to God, and you will find
God fights the battles of a will resigned.
Love Jesus! love will no base fear endure—
Love Jesus! and of conquest rest secure.

—Thomas Ken.

Sabbath Utilitarianism.

THE Rev. Robert H. Barr, Ph.D., preached in the Old Bushwick Reformed Church, Brooklyn, E. D., yesterday morning from the text, Exodus 16: 30, "So the people rested on the seventh day."

"In this incident," said he, "we find the first incontrovertible observance of the Sabbath among men as a day of rest. No other institution, with perhaps the exception of the passover, was held in such high esteem by the ancient Hebrews, while in their later history we find the prophets constantly attributing the misfortunes of the people in a great measure to their profanation of the Sabbath. We make a great mistake, however, if we regard the Sabbath of the Israelities as simply a day of religious service. It was not so much a day of worship as of rest from the ordinary duties and labors of the week, and it was because of the emphasis given to the former rather than the latter by the pharisees that our Lord declared the Sabbath made for man and not man for the Sabbath. The great Teacher thus rebukes the Puritanism of His day.

"We do not deny to the Sabbath a religious character, but, with Pere Hyacinthe, maintain that the Lord's day is not the day of God only, it is the day of humanity; and if this element entered so largely into the Sabbath as established under a theocratic government, is it out of place for us to emphasize this feature in a land where no religion can ever be established by law? If in this country the Sabbath is to be established by law, it should be and must be on a purely utilitarian basis.

THE LAW AND THE FACT.

"The Sabbath, like many other good things, has been conferred upon us by the Christian Church. The first settlers of New York and New England were Christian men who endeavored to unite State and Church. Among the laws they enacted were those relating to the sanctity of the Sabbath. In the early days of the Colonies these laws were in harmony with public sentiment, and therefore enforced. To such an extent was this carried that a religious service has been broken up to pursue a stranger who had dared to violate the Sabbath law by riding through the town. Since then great changes have taken place in public sentiment, and the Sabbath laws, though modified, are not, and, it is evident, in their present form cannot be enforced.

"To be convinced of this it is only necessary to read sections 259, 265, 275 and 277 of our Penal Code, in which hunting, fishing, gaming, public sports and exercises, dancing and entertainments are prohibited, and then to read our Monday's papers describing Sunday's performances or to walk through certain large sections of our cities and then venture out to the ball grounds and beer gardens. Week after week everyone of these sections of our Penal Code is violated under the eyes and noses of our police.

"Three reasons may be given for this: First, the Sabbath is regarded by multitudes as a purely religious institution, and therefore its observance should not be enforced in a free country; second, these laws are considered remnants of Puritanism and inconsistent with the progressive spirit of our age; third, the practice and example of a large part of our foreign population. The extent of this last may be conceived when we consider that out of 100 arrests for violation of the Sunday law in the city of New York last year only seventeen were persons born in the United States. Forty-four, or nearly one half of the whole number, were Germans.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE?

"But, now, what shall we do with the Sabbath? Must it go? We reply, it would be better far for the nation to give up its maintenance by law than to have the majesty of law constantly sullied by flagrant violations. It is a dangerous thing in such a land and age as ours to teach the masses of the people contempt for law by failure to enforce its provisions. It is not the existence of the Christian Church that is in peril. Christianity achieved many of its grandest triumphs when the Sabbath was unknown and the State itself hostile to the Church. Would the abandonment of the Sabbath promote the interests of the State? Daniel Webster did not think so when he said, 'The longer I live the more highly do I estimate the proper observance of the Christian Sabbath.' Nor William H. Seward, who regarded it 'our chief security for all civil and religious liberty.' Nor George Washington, who frequently expressed by word and deed his estimation of the Sabbath. Surely no American would favor the abandonment of the day of rest on the ground that these men were religious bigots and their opinions valueless.

"Let us get at the facts. In many of our States bureaus of labor statistics have been established. Already these have done a noble work. Labor statistics have been gathered from all parts of our own and other lands. These facts will yet be of the greatest service to labor, capital and legislation. Now, suppose bureaus of Sabbath statistics were established, and Sabbath legislation based entirely on facts collected, what would be the result? In the first place a great deal of prejudice against the Sabbath as a religious institution would be removed, and second, the masses would have more regard for laws based upon the investigations of these bureaus and designed to promote their own immediate welfare.

"We believe it would be found: First, that the observance of the Sabbath promotes health and intellectual vigor; second, that the observance of the Sabbath is of the greatest advantage to labor—seven days' work always means six days' pay; third, that the observance of the Sabbath strengthens and purifies family ties and relations—the family, not the individual, is the unit of national life; fourth, that the proper observance of the Sabbath tends to diminish crime.

"This bureau would find some important facts referred to in the reports of grand juries declaring the growing disregard of the Sabbath the cause of a vast increase of crime. That distinguished jurist, Sir Matthew Hale, says: 'Of all persons who were convicted of capital crimes I found four only who would not confess that they began their career of wickedness by a neglect of the duties of the Sabbath and vicious conduct on that day.'

"Let us give the Sabbath a fair trial, free from all religious or partisan prejudice, by the establishment of some such bureau as has been suggested. Let only such Sabbath laws be enacted as the reports of this bureau shall justify, and we shall soon find that the great thinkers and statesmen who have advocated Sunday observance have not been led astray.'

—New York Herald, July 26th.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 12, THIRD QUARTER.

M. Jesus Interceding.....John 17: 1-26.
T. The Ever-Living Intercessor.....Heb. 7: 14-28.
W. Present before God.....Heb. 9: 11-28.
T. Our Advocate.....1 John 2: 1-17.
F. At the Right Hand of God.....Rom. 8: 28-39.
S. The Body of Christ.....1 Cor. 12: 4-31.
S. Members of One Body.....Rom. 12: 1-16.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN O. VAN DEVENTER.

Sept. 19th.—"Jesus Interceding."—John 17: 1-26.

Golden Text.—"He ever liveth to make intercession for them."—HEB. 7: 25.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"I have prayed for thee."—LUKE 22: 32.

INTRODUCTION.

SINCE it seems probable that the words immediately preceding this prayer were spoken on the way to Gethsemane, we must suppose that Jesus uttered this intercessory prayer in some quiet place, perhaps just under the shadow of the temple walls, before crossing the Kedron. The entire chapter is assigned as our lesson, although the different question books and leaves omit a number of the verses. We ought, however, to study it as a whole, for Jesus evidently intended this for our instruction, as well as for our blessing in answer to its petitions. The prayer reveals the purpose and will of Jesus in behalf of His people, and may be regarded as His last will and testament, under which we are heirs. In treating this lesson we shall choose to take a comprehensive view of the prayer as a whole rather than to dwell at length on some parts to the exclusion of others.

THE LESSON.

I. JESUS COMMITS HIS WORK TO HIS FATHER.—VS. 1-5.

In these verses we see that Jesus had a clear apprehension of the imminence and meaning of His death. "The hour is come." That hour of which He had so often spoken. The hour of Divine appointment. The hour most fit for this final scene in His humiliation. "Glorify thy Son." The words are not like our petitions. They are a demand for certain rights. "I have glorified thee on the earth." He regards His work as fully completed. By undertaking the work of redemption; by His obedient, loving life as a child; by His industrious, humble life as a mechanic; by His words and miracles; by every act of His life, and by every circumstance of His death, He glorified His Father. "The glory which I had with thee before the world was" The temporary separation from the presence of His Father had been painful to endure. Now that His work was accomplished, He longed to return to His rightful place, in the bosom of the Father to share His glory. The Son of Man is thus exalted to the dignity belonging to the Son of God.

II. JESUS COMMITS HIS DISCIPLES UNTO HIS FATHER.—VS. 6-19.

His work had resulted in gathering out of the world this little band of eleven, weak, ignorant, imperfect disciples. He had been their teacher and guardian. It had been His duty and pleasure to give them God's Word. He had instilled into their minds right thoughts of God, and had bestowed upon them the power of an endless life. As He was about to leave them He was giving them a great responsibility, for which they were themselves unequal. He was leaving them in the midst of enemies who had hunted Him to the death and who would hate them because they were His disciples. "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me." His first petition is for their steadfastness. He had kept them thus far, and He confidently leaves them in the hand of the Father, knowing that no one could pluck them out of His Father's hand. "That they may be one." Not the formal unity which may hide essential diversity, but that unity in variety which is the characteristic of life. Each recognizing dependence upon the common head, each rendering service to the several members. "That they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves." The joy of the world they could not have. Henceforth tribulations without number await them, but they may have the joy which kept the soul of Jesus calm through all the storms of His life. The joy of the Father's presence and approval. "Keep them from the evil." From the assaults of the adversary, and the treachery of their own hearts. "Sanctify them through thy truth." To sanctify is to set apart to a holy use, to ordain; and then to become pure and holy as fit for such use. So would Christ have His people pure and serviceable. They were to regard their lives as much devoted to the work of God as the life of Jesus had been. "For their sakes I sanctify myself." Now devote myself as a victim to the altar, dying that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.

III. JESUS COMMITS THE CHURCH UNIVERSAL TO HIS FATHER.—VS. 20-26.

"Neither pray I for these alone." Looking beyond the little company that attended His steps, Jesus sees the ever increasing multitude that no man can number, being gathered out of the world by the preaching of the Gospel. His view ranges from that Pentecostal feast of first-fruits to the day when He should see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied, and He breathes the remaining petitions for all His saints. "Them also which shall believe on me through their word." These disciples who were then present had been led to believe by the words of Jesus Himself, but the words which they should speak in His name and under the direction of the Spirit were to be as powerful to awaken the souls of men to faith and love. These future disciples of all coming ages of the world have as warm a place in the heart of Christ as those who were the companions of His daily pilgrimage. The petitions which He offers for us are very similar to those which he had just offered in behalf of the eleven. "That they all may be one." This desire of our Saviour has been sadly frustrated thus far by the unnecessary and often bitter divisions in His Church. Divisions of organization, and as representing the varying characteristics of men, may be necessary and useful, but like the different members of the same body Christians should recognize each other, and their mutual interests and obligations, so that they may be unified by their common life. "As thou art in me and I in thee" This expression suggests the limits of division. Personality of Father and Son was consistent with their essential unity, and the members of Christ will be the members of each other in proportion to the intimacy of their union with their Head. "That they may be made perfect in one." The perfection of the Church is to be sought and found in this union in Christ. In proportion as we attain to this realization of His ideal will be our influence upon the world. A church that thinks more of Christ than of itself, that is more intent upon saving souls than upon any point of policy or order, that loves all who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity, will be a live, growing and honored church. "Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am." Christ will not be satisfied until His people see and share His glory. His triumph will not be complete until all those whom He has redeemed shall sit down to the Wedding Feast of the Lamb. This wonderful prayer has a great reach, for it embraces all ages, races and conditions; it stretches from the shadow of the Cross to the glory of the heavenly thrones. It embraces all of His disciples of whatever name or order. It secures for them all needed strength for duty, comfort in trial, and hope in death. Similar petitions are rising from our Intercessor's heart continually in our behalf.

The prayer closes with a resumé of its introductory utterances, as Christ recalls His work and care and love.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

This prayer of Jesus teaches us what to seek after:

1. That we may glorify God on earth.
2. That we may always believe on the Son of God.
3. That we may be filled with His joy.
4. That we may be closely united to Him.
5. That we may keep His word.
6. That we may stand fast in His name.
7. That we may be sanctified to His service.
8. That we may be partakers of His glory.

Lessons from the Garden.

BY MARGARET EYTINGE.

SAID the Morning Glory:
When you see the light,
Praise the Lord who kept you
Safely through the night.
Said the purple Pansy:
Learn this truth from me—
You must be contented
If you'd happy be.

Said the white-robed Lily:
You shall blessings know
If like me your thoughts are
Pure as driven snow.
Said the tall and stately
Flower of the Sun:
Greater beauty than a
True heart, there is none.

Said the Rose: The thorns, dear,
That life ever brings,
Are by love and kindness
Robbed of all their stings.
Said the pretty, fragrant
Violet: So live
That your presence always Sweet delight will give.

—Selected.

Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread.

"O TIM, I'm so hungry," and Daisy burst into tears as she laid her curly brown head on her brother's shoulder.

Poor Tim! He was only a little fellow himself, and so hungry that he, too, could scarcely keep back the tears, but he was the elder of the two children, so he must try to comfort Daisy and take care of her, as he had promised his dear mother he would do before she went away to heaven.

To be sure there was their father, but neither Tim nor Daisy ever expected any care or kindness from the rough, ill-tempered man who scarcely noticed them when he was sober, and when he had been drinking abused them cruelly, so the two children clung to each other.

Yesterday morning, after the scanty breakfast had been eaten, he had gone out, and had not returned since then. No wonder that the children were faint and exhausted with their long fast and watched anxiously for his return. The neighbors did not know of the children's hunger, or they would willingly have bidden them share their own scanty meals with their little ones, for the poor are rarely lacking in kindness of heart and generosity, and all the inmates of the tall, dingy tenement knew how sadly the children needed a mother's love and care.

"Are we going to starve?" sobbed Daisy pitifully. "O Tim, when will father come back and bring us something to eat?"

"He'll be back soon now, I know," answered Tim encouragingly as he gently smoothed the brown curls, and kissed the quivering lips.

"O Daisy," he exclaimed eagerly, as a sudden thought came into his mind, "I know what we can do."

"What?" inquired Daisy, as she looked up into his bright face.

"Don't you remember the prayer we learned last Sunday that says, 'Give us this day our daily bread?' That's what we'll do, Daisy, you and me. We'll kneel down here together and say it, and then our Father in heaven will send us some bread right away, for you know the teacher said he always listens when we pray."

Side by side the two little ones knelt down on the bare floor, and with clasped hands and reverent voices repeated the Lord's prayer, never doubting, in their child-like faith, but that it would be at once answered. They almost expected to hear a knock at the door as they rose from their knees, and when, after a few minutes of patient waiting, they heard a strange footstep slowly ascending the stairs, their hearts beat fast with hope and joy.

The steps came slowly along and paused by their door, and little Daisy with a delighted cry of "It's come, Tim!" sprang forward and opened the door before the stranger had time to knock.

It was a gentleman who held a card in his hand, the name on which he was trying to read by the dim light that found its way in through the skylight, and he looked in surprise at the child's bright, eager face as she looked at him expectantly. She seemed to have been watching for him, but there must surely be some mistake, for he did not remember ever having seen her before.

"Can you tell me where James Ryan lives?" he asked.

The bright look faded from the child's face, her eyes filled with tears, and her voice quivered as she answered.

The gentleman was touched by her distress, and pausing a moment he asked kindly, "What is the matter, little one?"

Daisy covered her face with her ragged apron and sobbed, while Tim came forward to answer the gentleman's question.

"We're so hungry, Daisy and me," he said simply, "for we ain't had nothing to eat since father went away yesterday morning, and so we asked our Father in heaven to send us our daily bread, and when we heard you coming we thought he had sent you to bring it to us. Poor Daisy's so disappointed, 'cos she's so hungry," and he put a loving arm around his little sister as he spoke.

"And so he has sent me to bring it to you, my boy," said the gentleman. "Come with me, and I will see that you have a good meal at once. My other business can wait."

How welcome the bountiful meal was to the hungry children, and when they had finished eating the gentleman persuaded them to go with him to a comfortable home, where many little children were sheltered and cared for.

That evening he came to see them, and brought them the tidings that their father had been arrested for theft and would be shut up in prison for a long time. They were sorry for their father, for they loved him, unkindly as he had always treated them, but they were glad that they did not have to leave this comfortable home, where everyone was so kind to them, and where they had enough to eat.

I need not tell you how they learned to love their kind Father in heaven, whose loving care had been about them when their earthly father had deserted them. They never forgot the morning when their earnest petition, "Give us this day our daily bread," had been so quickly answered, and it strengthened their faith in their heavenly Father, who hears and answers the prayer of the least of His children.—Minnie E. Kenney, in Early Dew.

A Temperance Anecdote.

JOHN JONES began at the age of fifteen to build a monument, and finished it at fifty. He worked night and day, often all night long and on the Sabbath. He seemed to be in a great hurry to get it done. He spent all the money he earned upon it—some say $50,000. Then he borrowed all he could; and when no one would loan him any more, he would take his wife's dresses and the bed-clothes, and many other valuable things in his home, and sell them to get more money to finish that monument.

They say he came home one day and was about to take blankets that lay over his sleeping baby to keep it warm, and his wife tried to stop him; but he drew back his fist and knocked her down, and then went away with the blankets and never brought them back, and the poor baby sickened and died from the exposure. At last there was not anything left in the house. The poor, heart broken wife soon followed the baby to the grave. Yet John Jones kept working all the more at the monument. I saw him when he was about fifty years old. The monument was nearly done; but he had worked so hard at it that I hardly knew him, he was so worn; his clothes were all in tatters, and his hands and face, indeed his whole body, were covered with scars which he got in laying up some of the stones. And the wretched man had been so little in good society all the while that he was building, that he had about forgotten how to use the English language; his tongue had somehow become very thick, and when he tried to speak, out would come an oath.

That may seem strange; but I have found out that all who build such monuments as John's, prefer oaths to any other word!

Now come with me and I will show you John's monument. It stands in a beautiful part of the city where five streets meet. Most men put such things in a cemetery. But John had his own way, and put it on one of the finest lots to be found.

"Does it look like Bunker Hill monument?" asks little Amy Arlott by my side.

Not at all. John didn't want to be remembered that way. He might have taken that $50,000 and built an asylum for poor little children that have no home, and people would have called the asylum his monument.

But here we are at the front door. It is a grand house! It is high and large, with great halls and towers, and velvet carpets, elegant mirrors and a piano, and I know not what all—so rich and grand.

This is John Jones's monument! and the man who sold John nearly all the whiskey he drank, lives here with his family, and they all dress in the richest and finest clothes.

Do you understand it?—Eli Perkin's "Wit and Humor of the Age."

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps, find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

The little yellow label on your wrapper informs you to what time your subscription is paid. Kindly consult same, and if in arrears remit the amount due.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Decided Benefit.

Dr. JOHN P. WHEELER, Hudson, N. Y., says: "I have given it with decided benefit in a case of innutrition of the brain, from abuse of alcohol."

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD
FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS for $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1. 0.

A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7°|o FARM LOANS!
SECURED BY
FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000 000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address
E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6°|o, 7°|o, 8°|o

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N. Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

BARLOW'S INDICO BLUE.
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. J. G. WALTHER, Pres. 239 & 241 Second St., Phila. Pa.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK
Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.
The Intellgencer is printed with our ink.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX 853 Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith is its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Arnold, Constable & Co

We Have Now Open

Our Autumn Importation

OF

Choice Novelties in

FANCY WOOL PLUSHES,

BEADED EFFECTS

and

SOLID COLORED DRESS GOODS.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Sole Agents for the United States for the Celebrated

Red Star Brand

OF

Wonderful Wearing

VELVETEEN,

Noted for Its Unequalled Color and Finish. This Fast Pile Dress and Mantle Velveteen was Awarded the Only Gold Medals at the International Exhibition at Vienna in 1873, Paris 1878, and Nice 1883.

To Prevent Imitations a Red Star will be Found Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

These Goods are of English Manufacture, 24 nches Wide, and in 39 Different Colors.

PRICE, 74c.

amples Mailed on Application and Mail Orders Promptly Filled.

R. H. MACY & CO.

A MILLION

BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

RIDGE'S FOOD

s the most reliable substitute known for mother's milk. Its superiority rests on the test of 30 years' experience throughout Great Britain and the United States. A sustaining, strengthening diet for invalids. Nutritious, easily digested and acceptable to the most delicate stomach. Four sizes, 35c. up. Send stamp for "Healthful Hints," a valuable pamphlet, to WOOLRICH & Co., Palmer, Mass.

In the morning from the window, you see so old yet ever new, the blue sky with the floating white clouds, the myriad shades of soft green flecked with all the tints of the flowers. Every time we meet you we try to tell you something more about this old yet ever new and fascinating story of color. Will you read hereafter as we write, under this sign of the Painters' daily toil. The F. J. NASH M'F'G. CO., Nyack, Rockland Co., N. Y., M'f'g's of Ready Mixed Paint. Interesting Circulars Free. If your dealer refuses you these goods apply to us direct.

EDUCATIONAL.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc. J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO., AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITU . 7 East 14th St., N. Y

BRIGHTON HEIGHTS SEMINARY, For Young Ladies, New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y. GEO. W. COOK, Ph.D., Principal.

OSSINING INSTITUTE FOR YOUNG SING SING, N.Y. Ladies & Misses. High Grounds. Best advantages in Music, Art, Elocution. English and Modern Languages. Full or partial courses. 30 miles from N. Y. City. Charges moderate Opens Sept. 21st. REV. C. D. RICE, Principal.

RUTGERS COLLEGE

Grammar School,

New Brunswick, N. J.

PREPARES BOYS AND YOUNG MEN FOR COLLEGE OR BUSINESS.

Additional buildings were last year required, erected and filled.

This year additional teachers engaged to meet the increased number of students.

Rooms carpeted and cared for. Some arranged in suites—a study-room 14x14 with two single sleeping-rooms adjoining. A few single rooms to be had if desired.

Last year at the opening of the school every room was engaged, and many applicants were refused admission because of the lack of room. This year rooms will be reserved as applied for.

For catalogues and further information address E. T. TOMLINSON, HEADMASTER

The Misses Anable's

English, French and German Boarding and Day-School

WILL REOPEN SEPTEMBER 22D.

40 BAYARD ST., New Brunswick, N. J.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE, BOSTON UNIVERSITY, Opens Oct. 14, '86.

Fourteenth Year. Furnishes superior facilities for thorough scientific and practical instruction in three and four years' courses. Entrance examinations, Oct, 11, 12 and 13. Send for announcements to I. T. TALBOT, M.D, Dean.

SIGLAR'S PREPARATORY SCHOOL, NEWBURG-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.,

Gives the best preparation for the best colleges. Two Yale valedictorians in three years. Entrance examinations held at the school by member of Yale Faculty. Daily gymnastics under teacher compulsory. For circulars, etc., address HENRY W. SIGLAR, M.A., (Yale) Prin.

Somerville Seminary, Somerville, N. J.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies and Children re-opens September 15th. Thorough instruction in English branches, Music, Languages and Painting. MISSES PARSONS & LE FEVRE.

VASSAR COLLEGE, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

FOR WOMEN, with a complete College Course, School of Painting and Music, Astronomical Observatory, Laboratory of Chemistry and Physics, Cabinets of Natural History, a Museum of Art, a Library of 15,000 Volumes, ten Professors, twenty-three Teachers. Catalogues sent on application. REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR, D.D., President.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

[Founded A.D. 1820.]

721 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.

REV. HENRY B. CHAPIN, PH.D., PRINCIPAL.

English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 67th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

RAPID PREPARATION FOR COLLEGE OR BUSINESS BY PRIVATE INSTRUCTION.

J. Hasbrouck, A.M, New Brunswick, N. J.

Auburn Theological Seminary.

The term opens September 1st, 1886. For catalogue address WILLIS J. BEECHER, Clerk of Faculty, Auburn, N. Y.

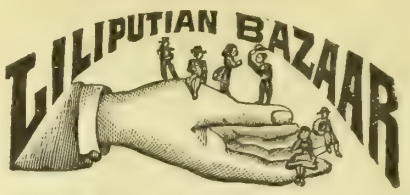
Betts' Academy, Stamford, Conn.

A Boys' Boarding School of the highest grade. 49th year begins Sept. 15th WM. J. BETTS, M.A., (Yale), Principal.

RYE SEMINARY, Rye, NEW YORK. For particulars address Mrs. S. J. LIFE.

NEW FALL STYLES

FOR CHILDREN.



Besides our usual complete assortment in every department, we invite special attention to exclusive novelties in BOYS' CLOTHING and MISSES' and GIRLS' DRESSES.

An early selection will secure desirable styles that cannot be duplicated later in the season.

Mail orders have careful and prompt attention.

BEST & CO.,

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

HIGH NOVELTIES ON EXHIBITION.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO. ARE NOW EXHIBITING THEIR RICHEST AND MOST SELECT STYLES OF IMPORTED NOVELTIES. AN EXAMINATION IS CORDIALLY INVITED.

James M'Creery & Co.,

Broadway and 11th Street, New York.

EDUCATIONAL.

RUTGERS COLLEGE

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

1 hour from New York on the Penna. R. R.

Year begins (examinations for admission) Sept 2, 1886.

SLOAN PRIZES FOR BEST (CLASSICAL) ENTRANCE EXAMINATION; 1st, $400 ($100 CASH); 2d, $350 ($50 CASH).

Sixteen Professors; no Tutors. Classical course full and thorough. Increased facilities for the study of French and German, with a view to practical use. Laboratory work for all students in Chemistry. Well-equipped Astronomical Observatory for students' use. Full Geological Cabinet. 50,000 well chosen books in Libraries.

Ample provision for Electives, Junior and Senior years, in Natural Science, History, etc

The SCIENTIFIC DEPARTMENT is the New Jersey State College. Constant field-practice in Surveying. Full course in Draughting.

THE AIM OF THE COLLEGE—THOROUGHNESS IN ALL WORK.

Best facilities and personal attention for every student. For full information, address Librarian Rutgers College.

Merrill Edwards Gates, Ph.D., LL.D, Pres't

Rutgers Female College,

58 West 57th street, commences 49th year September 22d. Rev. John Hall, D.D., President of the Board of Trustees. Boarding and Kindergarten Departments Address the College.

ALEXANDER INSTITUTE White Plains, N.Y.

23 miles from New York City by rail. Fits boys for College or business pursuits. 30 to 40 pupils 5 Teachers. Board and Tuition per annum $400. For circulars, apply to the Principal, O. R. WILLIS, Ph.D.

HEMPSTEAD INSTITUTE. Hempstead, Long Island, N. Y.

A Thorough English Boarding School for Boys. Primary, intermediate, Higher English and Commercial Courses. Twenty-seventh year begins September 15. Catalogues sent on application.

Riverview Academy, POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Prepares for College and the Government Academies, for Business and Social Relations. Thorough Military Instruction. Springfield Cadet Rifles. BISBEE & AMEN, Principals.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principal.

YOUNG LADIES SEMINARY, 43d YEAR Begins Sept. 22. Address F. CHANDLER, D. D., Prest. Freehold, N. J.

PEEKSKILL (N. Y.) MILITARY Academy.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings 100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN 106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2[illegible]
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Fund together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.

CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 0[illegible]
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0[illegible]
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	50[illegible],040 1[illegible]
Net Surplus	1,8[illegible] 9,841 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,6[illegible]8 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,3[illegible]0 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9[illegible] 2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	2[illegible]6,[illegible]0 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886	10,394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, Jr., } Ass't Sec's.

EQUITABLE

Mortgage Company,

SIX AND SEVEN PER CENT

FARM Mortgages & Municipal in Kansas, Missouri & Nebraska BONDS

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Capital, $600,000.00.

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years sent free on application.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK, 208 B'way, Evening Post Bl'dg. CHARLES N. FOWLER, V.

BOSTON, 23 Court Street. H. H. FITCH, Manager.

PHILADELPHIA, 112 South Fourth Street. CHAS. BENJ. WILKINSON, Manag

KANSAS CITY, Mo. JOHN AVERY, General Manager.

8 Per Cent. Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

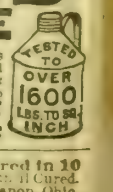
N. W. HARRIS & CO.,

115-117 Monroe St., CHICAGO.

BONDS Of Counties, Cities, &c. of high grade a specialty Send for descriptive lists.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics on their best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London, 86. Pronounced strongest glue known. Send 2 cents for wood cut and circular. If dealer near you does not keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE



Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 Days. No Pay till Cured. J. L. STEPHENS, M. D., Lebanon, Ohio.

FLORIDA.

ACADEMY AND COLLEGE AT DeLAND, FLORIDA.

A first-class Academy for both sexes. Five Courses—College Preparatory, Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial Drawing. First-class Art and Music Departments. Fine New Dormitory Buildings, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this Institution is to give, in the delightful climate of FLORIDA, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England schools. DeLand College will also receive students of both sexes prepared to enter the Freshman Class. Send for Catalogue to

J. F. FORBES, President, DeLand, Florida, or H. A. DeLAND, Fairport, N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 37. WHOLE No. 2929. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE SIXTH GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 26th and 27th, in the Twelfth Street Reformed Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., beginning at half past ten o'clock on Tuesday morning. The morning will be occupied with devotional exercises and the organization of the Conference. In the afternoon the address of welcome will open the service, papers from the Synod's Board and Woman's Board of Foreign Missions will be read, an address will be delivered on the relation of the Sabbath-school to Missions, and be followed by a general discussion. In the evening the Rev. Mr. Booth, of Japan, and Dr. Chamberlain, of India, will address the Conference, and an opportunity for discussion will again be afforded.

On Wednesday morning papers are to be presented from the Board of Domestic Missions and the Woman's Executive Committee; also one from the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions on Medical Missions. Questions relating to Mission work will be received and answered, and an address will close the session. In the afternoon two papers will be read, an address be delivered and time allotted to discussion.

At the concluding meeting on Wednesday evening Committees will report and two addresses will be delivered.

These Conferences have been occasions of special interest and have been greatly enjoyed by those who have participated in them. A full attendance of Classical delegates is desired.

REV. MR. SMYTH of Harlem is reported to have said last Sabbath morning in his last sermon in the old church: "The Reformed Church has a great work to do in Harlem, and there was never a better opportunity than now. You will now have two strong Reformed churches in this part of the city. We have the making of this portion of New York on our hands. Our church is well adapted for the work. We are not denominational, but we unite the spirit of all the creeds. Infidelity has spent its force within a few years. Its guns are all spiked to-day, and there never was a better chance at home and abroad for Christian progress." The earnest Harlem pastor is right. The times are ripening for a great revival. The assaults upon the truth have failed. The injurious results of the desecration of the Sabbath are becoming apparent to the men who have encouraged that iniquity. The editor of an Eastern daily paper which is published on Sunday as well as on other days, entreats the churches to provide a Sunday-school on Sabbath evening for the newsboys who are engaged through the day in selling papers. He sees the evil influence of Sunday work on the boys and their increasing need of religious instruction. The Western Christian Advocate, of Cincinnati, said last week:

> The worst disturbances which occur at the Cincinnati base ball grounds occur on Sunday, and as a result a proposition has been made to abandon the Sunday games. The desecration of the Lord's day has called out a turbulent element which the managers cannot control, and as a measure of self-protection they are driven back toward a proper observance of the Christian Sabbath.

Men are finding out, at Coney Island and at many Sunday resorts, that plying their trade on Sunday doesn't pay, and are looking for opportunities to get rid of Sunday work. Liberal Christianity, as it has called itself, and the New Theology, have lost their charm. Men have tried them and found them unsatisfactory. The attempt of this summer to establish a Liberal Chautauqua, almost within hail of the evangelical assemblies on the other side of the lake, has been almost a failure—eloquent men were there but the attendance was meagre. The New Theology is preached, even in New England, to audiences gradually wasting away in a number of localities. Men are beginning to feel their need of the true Gospel. The mass are not prosperous in their worldly affairs, have been disappointed, defeated, and are beginning to question the wisdom of their worldliness. And above all, iniquity has been bearing its corrupt fruit in the sight of all men. The crime and wickedness of the times is assuming detestable and horrible forms, and men are becoming fearful. It is a time to preach "Repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ," to declare the glorious holiness of God, salvation from sin—not in sin—by Him whom God hath sent. It is a time for earnest, prayerful, confident work. Best of all, God is blessing His truth in most unexpected ways and places. A Christ-like love for souls will not be without a rich reward. The time-honored means will bear the best fruit and the most abundant harvest.

THE INDIANS who are prepared for it, everybody says, ought to have lands in severalty,—a certain number of acres to each person, to be an inalienable possession for twenty or twenty-five years. Every man and woman familiar with the situation of the tribes, and having no pecuniary interest in the continuance of the reservations, is decidedly in favor of the allotment of lands in severalty. The fact that such a division is not made irritates the settlers around the reserves and those seeking for public lands as homesteads. These see that the Indians are occupying thousands of acres they have not need of, which they do not cultivate and from which the game has been driven. Immigration presses upon the boundaries of the reserves impatiently. The Senate has twice, if not three times, passed a bill authorizing the administration to treat with the Indians in relation to a division of the lands secured to them by treaty with farms to be held inalienable for a term of years, for the sale of the remaining lands of the reserve, in regard to the investment of the money paid for the lands in a fund for educational and civilizing purposes, and with respect to the dissolution of the treaties, the tribal relations, and the acceptance of citizenship by the Indians. The bill is the production of the combined wisdom, humanity and legal skill of a Senator from Texas and one from Massachusetts, has been revised and re-revised and criticized and looked at from all sides by the Senate, and received in that body the votes of Eastern and Western, Northern and Southern Republicans and Democrats. The House of Representatives has twice, if not three times ignored it. The bill could have been passed at any time in three days and ought to have been. Nothing can be done until it is passed, until somebody is authorized to act. Valuable time is lost, the civilization of the Indian hindered by the inaction of the lower House of Congress. The Representatives will act as soon as their constituents demand it. To that sort of influence they are constantly obedient. Will the constituencies do a decent and wise and humane thing by instructing their Representatives to call up and vote for the Coke-Dawes Indian bill?

Providence.

A TENDENCY to deny that the hand of God is powerful in such events as an earthquake is manifest. It shows itself most distinctly in the manner in which sermons or prayers, acknowledging an overruling Providence, are spoken of. There is a general feeling, which does not rise to the strength of a conviction, that the Scriptural representation of the Providence of God has been brought under suspicion, if not proved incorrect, by the discoveries of science and the development of the reign of law.

The only true and living God made the world and governs it. He is constantly at work in the operations of nature and the affairs of men, to bring about His plans, and to fulfil His Word. The Bible says so, and the Bible is the best book in existence, is in advance of all other books and is true. There are no reasons of any weight for not believing the Bible, and there is every reason for accepting it as firm and established truth. What the Holy Scriptures declare in regard to the government of God over men and nature is clear and undisputed. There may be, generally is, discussion as to whether the Divine government is mediate or immediate, and in what degree; but that God made and rules the world is believed by everyone who believes the Bible.

With this belief the discoveries of science are not in antagonism. It is a great mistake to suppose that they are. God is not put by science on the outside of a machine, to which He imparted the original impulse and which since then has regulated itself. Science shows us how God rules; but does not exclude God from the universe He has made. On the contrary, the general impression of a contemplation of nature, in the light of science, is of a realm in which a supreme and intelligent energy is everywhere present and everywhere incessantly active. We ask no one to receive this on our assertion alone. The testimony of the philosophy, based exclusively upon the results of the researches of science, is clear and explicit. It has been quoted in these columns more than once. It is now quoted again.

Mr. Herbert Spencer asserts, on scientific grounds, the existence of "an Infinite and Eternal Energy from which all things proceed." He says in his debate with Mr. Harrison, "As originally written, the expression ran—'an Infinite and Eternal Energy by which all things are created and sustained'; and in the proof I struck out the last clause, because, though the words did not express more than I meant, the ideas associated with them might mislead." Of the Infinite Energy, which he calls also the "All-Being," the "Absolute," the "Ultimate Reality," he says, "Everywhere throughout my books, the implication is that our lives, alike physical and mental, in common with all the activities, organic and inorganic amid which we live, are but the workings of this Power." Mr. Matthew Arnold and Mr. Huxley both acknowledge, "the Eternal Power, not of ourselves, working for righteousness." This is Pantheism of course; but is the exact contrary of a denial of a constant Providential activity in nature and among men.

That the description of the attributes of this all-pervading Energy is deficient has been frequently maintained in these columns. There is just as much evidence of Intelligence and of a Moral Purpose in the government of the universe, as we know it, as there is of Energy. Mr. Spencer, Huxley, Tyndall and Arnold agree that man began as a brute, was evoluted into a savage, then into an intelligent creature, and finally into a being with a conscience. Evolution reaches the summit of its development in intelligence and conscience. That the Energy producing such a result is itself without intelligence and morality, is contrary to all observation and experience, and contrary to common sense. All these philosophers appeal to human consciousness, which is only another term for the common sense of mankind.

Besides, on the principles necessarily involved in the great laws of the Conservation of Energy and the Correlation of Forces, no energy can give out, can be transmuted into, anything which it does not possess. If motion is converted into heat, light and electricity or magnetism, it is because all those forces are already in it. The transformation is simply specialising, as it is called, the constituents of the original motion. And heat, light and electricity can be reconverted into simple motion. If the Evolution proceeding from the Infinite Energy results in intelligence and conscience, it is because these qualities are inherent in the Infinite Energy.

It is, therefore, a fact of science, or an induction of science, from a wide and careful observation of phenomena, that an Almighty, Everywhere Present Intelligent and Holy Being, a Person,—because intelligence and morality are the attributes only of a person—rules over, to quote again Mr. Spencer's words, "our lives, alike physical and mental, in common with all the activities, organic and inorganic, amid which we live."

Therefore, the earthquake is, as the Bible declares, a visitation of God. The hand of God is to be recognized in this startling and impressive event. But this visitation is not necessarily a punishment or a rebuke. God chastises the good to make them better. He "scourges every son he receives," scourges, therefore, those He loves, who are the chosen subjects of His grace. He does also lay His hand on men, on communities and on nations, in wrath and in punishment of their transgressions.

"Old Colony" Papers.

THE NEW JERSEY MARCHES.

A Reminiscence of Editorial Life (1880-3.)

IV.

THERE is, in fact, a general aspect of forlornness about the whole of what I have termed the fauna of this American Campagna. The human beings who, in this age of steam, are found travelling on foot or by vehicle along such primitive and tedious highways, can hardly be expected to display much force or fashion. The old country wagons are the faded relic of the market-wagon of other days. The occupation of the toll-keeper is not gone; but his spirit is broken, and his glory departed, and his tolls sadly reduced since the day when he stood sentry at the gate of a great city's supply, or kept his drawbridge on the whirl for the deeply laden schooners and periaugas that sailed the Hackensack and Passaic rivers. The smartest equipages which pass his doors are now the funeral carriages and hearses, that one often sees crawling blackly along the congenially desolate roads. The cows, watched by a ragged boy or a blowzy girl, or standing knee-deep in a dirty puddle and absorbed in switching off the flies; the dispirited dogs, following close perhaps on the heels of a still more spiritless man or woman; the old horses, to whom the mercy of being turned out to die has not yet been accorded,—are dismal enough.

The only enterprising element of life remaining is the Mosquito. In fact, it may be said that he has vitality and aggressiveness enough to make up for all other decay. He fiddles, like an entomological Nero, most merrily when all about him is going to destruction. The decay and desertion are his opportunity, as the desolate places of Tyre and Babylon are to the jackal and the satyr. He is not only uncomperable by his environment; he revels in it, and recruits his strength as in a sanitarium, and furbishes up his weapons for raids across the Marches after the manner of the ancient Scottish borderers. These are alike his fastnesses and his pasture fields. The Jersey meadows are to the mosquito what the breeding and fattening beds of New York and Chesapeake Bay are to the oyster. The Jersey mosquito is the "saddle-rock" of his species.

We have had a varied and cyclopædic experience of this grim tormentor, and can not only testify—from memoranda writ on fleshly tablets—that Science rightly finds "several genera" and many species of the wretched pest, but that the Jersey variety is easily the champion. His voice is pitched upon a more strident and relentless key. His stab is of the "envious Casca" and the "et tu, Brute" sort. His agility is simply a miracle of thimble-rigging. He is indomitable; and, though a man transform himself into an animated wind-mill with ceaseless flap of arms and canvas, he would be certain to fasten on the juiciest vein at the first moment of truce. He knows no such word as discouragement, and will fight it out on that line if it takes all night. He is a child of the day, as well as of the night. He knows the movements of every pic-nic party, and he is alike on hand in the hay-field with Patrick and Cuffy, and dancing attendance at Miss Flora McFlimsey's ball. He does not hang sheepishly about the grounds like many another of his species, but walks straight up to the front door or soars serenely through the window, announcing himself by telephone, and registering his name at once on the first fair cheek or bald head he meets.

Such border warfare may not be so picturesque or heroic as the exploits of the Black Douglas or the Black Prince on the Scottish Marches, but it has been vastly more triumphant and irrepressible, involving a greater aggregate of misery and, we venture to assert, of blood-shed. And it is by no means a pleasing thought to us who retain the chivalric spirit of heroic times, (however it may bring a grin of satisfaction to the assertor of woman's prowess in the rough and tumble of life) to be informed by our scientific friend, that all this shrill defiance and sharp and venemous assault are to be credited solely to the females of the race!

I cannot stop to report with due minuteness what may be called the flora of the Jersey Marches. These are really quite varied and attractive, even to one who sweeps over the field in a steam-car. The fat black soil is too indolent to be forced into productive industry, and every attempt to utilize it for market-gardening, nurseries, or prosaic crops of any kind, has been a failure. But its savage nature decks itself in gorgeous flowers, and in fact developes not unreadily growths after its kind,—which kind is to do things on a large and lavish scale with as little effort and to as little purpose as possible. It is a region of broad expanses, of brimming rivers, of magnificent distances, of lush and prodigal vegetation, of tantalizing possibilities. But beyond a coarse salt grass, difficult to harvest and of limited utility, the soil appears to produce nothing to "pay for its keep" and its annual rescue from drowning. Its theory evidently is that the world owes it a living, and that it exists for its own sake, like Art. It rejects the utilitarian philosophy, and is doubtless outraged at our humble endeavor to extract a moral from it. It refuses to grow morals, any more than melons or mutton.

The principal crops are flags and bulrushes, and all manner of reedy and sedgy growths. It might well answer as the special refuge of the naiad Syrinx, flying from the repulsive approaches of Pan. The ditches are fringed and mostly concealed by this species of greenery. Here, like an army with tufted soldier caps or thrusting up their antiquated spear-heads, are the Cat-tails, joy and treasure of the boyish heart. Whenever I find so much as a single member of the species, I am straightway transported as by a magic wand to the wide meadows of the Upper Hackensack, gathering "punk" for the coming Fourth of July. With breeches rolled up high upon my bare and boyish legs I stand trembling with eagerness, if not apprehension, on the brink of the swampy pool, vainly striving to reach the fat and furry heads of the wary and treacherous cat-tail, whose Quilpish delight is to plant itself just far enough from terra firma to be out of arm's length, while near enough to tempt the venturous youth. It has evidently "considered" the water-lilies in this particular,—that most lovely and coy of flowers. Its strategy is doubtless copied from that of Bruce in the Scottish Marches, already alluded to, where he posted his troops among the bogs within tempting distance of Edward's horsemen. And more than once have I emerged, a black prince, from an unlucky slip into the inky swamp.

Here too grows the Calamus, or sweet-flag, whose tender pinkish sprouts and pungent root were alike acceptable to the puerile palate; and to have a pocketful of its marrowy seeds was to have found a vegetable bonanza.

In August the Marches are brilliant with the rose-like blossoms of the marsh-mallow, aquatic cousin of the holly hock and the rose-of-sharon. It need not be said how kindling to the young and candy-loving imagination is the very name of this denizen of our Marches. Spring and early summer, too, come with their laps full of gold and sprinkle these meadows, despite their brackish soil, with their share and their species of the cowslip and the daisy. The autumn trails over them its russet robe of many-tinted and neutral-tinted richness. And behind all, the early or the belated traveller sees, eastward or westward, the glorious and wide-expanded roses of the dawn and of the sunset over the city spires or beyond the Orange hills.

One is tempted to include the shanties among the flora, so seeming a growth are they rather than a construction, and resembling mouldy and unwholesome toad-stools which have sprung up out of the dampness and the muck. The smoke-wreaths and smoke-flowers of the locomotives have been mentioned, whose flaring trails in the distance so much resemble the foliage of the Venetian sumach, which we aptly call the "smoke-tree." The rivers are so low, and level with the surrounding marsh, that one seldom sees them till he is just upon them; and accordingly their sails appear rather like white growths upon the land. So winding are these streams, that a sloop within a few moments will seem to have turned squarely about, though forging straight ahead, and several vessels pursuing the same direction will point to every quarter of the compass.

Trees there are none, worthy of the name. Some straggling willows by the water-courses, and an occasional maimed veteran of other days holding out its stumpy limbs with a few flattering rags of leaves, would complete the inventory.

But enough. These are getting to be "weary marches" indeed to the patient reader. Let me advert to but one more feature. There is a singular mountain, which rises abruptly like an island midway in the flat expanse, known as Snake Hill. As the traveller passes south of it in the railway train, he can hardly fail to have been struck by its suggestive shape. Possibly, imaginations might differ as to its resemblance. Polonius might think it like a camel, or backed like a weasel, or very like a whale. I can understand that it might be taken for an elephant, lying down with his proboscis stretched before him. But I myself can see only a great gray lion couchant, with his head between his paws and tail extended along the ground behind him.

And it has always presented itself to me as the subdued and saddened Genius of the moors. He has seen his swampy realm invaded by Gael and Saxon alike; his broad domain narrowed steadily by encroaching civilization; his river arteries cut, his luxuriant fields cropped close, his soil quaking everywhere with the rush of rail-cars; his eyes blinded by the smoke, and his nostrils defiled by the stench, of factories and engines; the whole scene, which was once the picture of free and untamed and lavish life, despoiled, disfigured, dried up, shorn, and contracting about him,—a railroad running over his very feet, and a poor-house fastened like a scab upon his shoulder. And the poor Lion of the Jersey Marches lays him down like any dying dog, and hides his diminished and still diminishing head.

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

Lutheran Co-operation in Foreign Missions.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: In connection with your very kind and appreciative notice of two articles in the Lutheran Church Review for July you add, "But will our brethren allow us to ask if the General Synod and the General Council, indeed all the Lutheran bodies, i. e, all who hold in any degree to the Augsburg Confession, could not form a federative union, to act together, say in the cause of Foreign Missions?"

It is a matter of gratification that this question has been put to us, since it affords an opportunity to make a statement of what has been done in this direction, without appearing to make a boast or parade of what ought to be one of the most natural and easily effected results among all evangelical Christians, but which, alas, is only too rare even among different branches of the same denomination.

Between three and four years ago the Missionary

Committee of the Lutheran Church in the South made the proposition to the Board of Foreign Missions of the General Synod to send a man from their territory to India, under the auspices of said Board. The proposal was promptly and most heartily accepted; and a young man of high promise and devoted spirit from Virginia was appointed as the missionary from the Church South. Failing health, however, compelled him to resign shortly before the time set for his departure.

In March, 1884, our Board informed the Committee of Missions of the General Synod South that we had recently received into our employ as missionary and were about to send to India, Rev. W. P. Swartz, a son of Rev. Joel Swartz, D.D., and a graduate of our College and Seminary at Gettysburg, and suggested that, as they had declared the purpose of sending a missionary to India through the agency of our Board, they should assume the support of Rev. Swartz until such time as the Church South could furnish a suitable person as missionary from their territory. This proposal of the General Synod's Board was no less heartily and promptly responded to by the Southern brethren, and the Chairman of their Committee, Rev. W. C. Schaeffer, of Richmond, Va., in his official acceptance of the proposition closed his letter with these words: "The North and the South strike hands in India."

In March, 1884, Rev. Swartz was appointed to the work; and, after spending a year in canvassing the Church in the South, during which time he succeeded in organizing fifty-five Children's Foreign Missionary Societies, forty Auxiliary Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, and four Synodical Societies, besides creating a widespread interest in the cause throughout the Southern Church, he sailed for India in July, 1885. Besides supporting Brother Swartz, a number of pupils in our boarding school in Guntur are supported by Sunday-schools and individual members. It is also worthy of note that the Church in the South has donated to our mission a printing press and outfit, which has been made the beginning of a Mission Publishing House in Guntur, and from which the Guntur Mission News, printed both in English and in Telugu, is regularly issued.

The women of the South also expect, in the near future, to send to India a Zenana lady who will cooperate with the ladies who are now laboring at Guntur under the direction of the Executive Committee of our Woman's Society.

The foreign work of our Southern brethren, through the agency of the General Synod's Board, has been carried on thus far without the least jar or friction, giving proof that a "federative union" between different bodies is not only possible but, in this case at least, is already an accomplished fact.

As between the General Council and the General Synod there has not been so much progress made in this direction; and yet we have good reasons for believing that the day is not far distant when at least a practical working union between the two bodies will be entered into. And here again the foreign field is likely to become the meeting ground, as the following action of the Guntur Conference indicates. At the April meeting of that body this resolution was adopted: "Resolved, That the Guntur Conference extend a cordial invitation to the Rajamundry Mission Conference to unite with it in a joint Conference, hoping that a more intimate coöperation and more mutual encouragement may in time result. We request, also, that the Rajamundry Conference appoint one of their members to arrange with a member appointed by this Conference to fix the time and programme and other particulars of the proposed meeting."

In a communication to the Lutheran Missionary Journal a short time ago, Rev. L. B. Wolff writes:

"The Mission had the pleasure of entertaining the Rev. Dietrich, of our Rajamundry Mission, during the first week of February. He dropped in on us and we were happy to see him, and talk with him about the work in the Godavery. Your missionaries would be delighted to have our fellow-workers more intimately associated. Differences are not so great and doctrinal lines are not so sharply drawn, when Christ's army comes in contact with their heathen foe. An exhibition of Christ becomes our supreme duty. We may have more blessed things to speak of as the result of this visit after a time, and as the effect of certain other meetings which it is proposed to hold."

These are a few of the facts that indicate that, while the Lutherans cannot exactly agree as yet on all points in church polity, forms of service and other non-essentials, we are, nevertheless, not hopelessly divided when it comes to the all-important and intensely practical work of evangelizing the heathen world. Some of us who are not very far advanced in life still entertain the hope of living to see the day when there will be brought about a "federative union" between the different branches of our Church to act together not only in the cause of foreign missions, but in every other good cause; and that, possibly, when we have thus been working together for a while in the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom, we may possibly make the discovery that there is no very serious obstacle to our entering into an "organic union proceeding from within outwardly and resting upon agreement as to fundamental verities."

GEO. SCHOLL, Secretary B. F. M., General Synod.

HANOVER, Pa., August 18th, 1886.

The Funeral.

I WAS walking in Savannah, past a church decayed and dim,
When there slowly through the window came a plaintive funeral hymn;
And a sympathy awakened, and a wonder quickly grew,
Till I found myself environed in a little negro pew.

Out at front a colored couple sat in sorrow, nearly wild;
On the altar was a coffin, in the coffin was a child.
I could picture him when living—curly hair, protruding lip—
And had seen perhaps a thousand in my hurried Southern trip.

But no baby ever rested in the soothing arms of Death
That had fanned more flames of sorrow with his little fluttering breath;
And no funeral ever glistened with more sympathy profound
Than was in the chain of tear-drops that enclasped those mourners round.

Rose a sad old colored preacher at the little wooden desk—
With a manner grandly awkward, with a countenance grotesque;
With simplicity and shrewdness on his Ethiopian face;
With the ignorance and wisdom of a crushed, undying race.

And he said: "Now don' be weepin' for dis pretty bit o' clay—
For de little boy who lived dere, he done gone an' run away!
He was doin' very finely, an' he 'preciate your love;
But his sure 'nuff Father want him in de large house up above.

"Now He didn' give you dat baby, by a hundred thousan' mile!
He just think you need some sunshine, an' He lend it for a while!
An' He let you keep an' love it, till your hearts was bigger grown;
An' dese silver tears you're sheddin's jest de interest on de loan.

"Here's yer oder pretty chilrun!—don't be makin' it appear
Dat your love got sort o' 'nop'lized by dis little fellow here;
Don't pile up too much your sorrow on deir little mental shelves,
So's to kind o' set 'em wonderin' if dey're no account demselves!

"Just you think, you poor deah mounahs, creepin' 'long o'er Sorrow's way,
What a blessed little picnic dis yere baby's got to-day!
Your good faders and good moders crowd de little fellow round
In de angel-tended garden of de Big Plantation Ground.

"An' dey ask him, 'Was your feet sore?' an' take off his little shoes,
An' dey wash him, an' dey kiss him, an' dey say, 'Now, what's de news?'
An' de Lawd done cut his tongue loose; den de little fellow say,
'All our folks down in de valley tries to keep de hebbenly way.'

"An' his eyes dey brightly sparkle at de pretty things he view;
Den a tear come, an' he whisper, 'But I want my paryents, too!'
But de Angel Chief Musician teach dat boy a little song;
Says, 'If only dey be fait'ful dey will soon be comin' 'long.'

"An' he'll get an education dat will proberbly be worth
Seberal times as much as any you could buy for him on earth;
He'll be in de Lawd's big schoolhouse, widout no contempt or fear;
While dere's no end to de bad t'ings might have happened to him here.

"So, my pooah dejected mounahs, let your hearts wid Jesus rest,
An' don' go to critercisin' dat ar One w'at knows de best!
He have sent us many comforts—he have right to take away—
To de Lawd be praise an' glory now and ever!—Let us pray."

—Will Carleton, in Harper's Weekly.

The Causes of the Earthquake.

THE crust of the earth is not quiet anywhere. The delicate instruments, made to show and record its movements, prove that earth-tremors are very frequent. These almost constant and moderate quakings are ascribed to a variety of causes. Internal forces, not sufficient to produce a volcanic outbreak, may shift their pressure and consequently their support of the rocks resting on them. Water, finding its way after a time through a fault or fissure in the rocks, may be converted into steam and exert a lifting force bringing about some change in the position of the overlying strata. Or water may have taken up something on its way, which may find at the greater depth another thing with which it enters into a chemical action, and that sets free and generates a gas which soon establishes a high pressure on the surrounding rocks and forces some readjustment in their position. One alteration of position produces another. The strata of the earth's crust show that in past ages such movements were extensive, sudden and violent.

Besides, the earth is believed to be cooling and contracting slowly. The crust in such a process must be reduced to a somewhat smaller sphere. This requires a piling up of such materials as can be moved on the top of others. The process is similar to the squeezing together of the skin on the back of one's hand; it presses the skin into ridges. Some question this secular cooling. At all events, if it has advanced during the last four or five thousand years it has done so very slowly.

Recently it has been urged that the increase and decrease of the pressure of the atmosphere over large areas, as indicated by the barometer, has power to effect the elevation and depression of the crust of the earth. Such changes in the pressure of the atmosphere over a large district are to be reckoned only by millions of tons. It is not improbable that they may alter the position of strata of rocks.

Whatever may be the cause, the crust of the earth is not stable, is in almost constant motion, and elevations and depressions are frequent. And, what is chiefly important to us is, that the Atlantic coast of the United States has been for some time one of the most active, if not the most active portion of the world's exterior. As all know, the movement has not been rapid but as a century of time or somewhat less is reviewed, it is found that the changes have been considerable. These alterations of the position of the land have been attended with very moderate tremors of the earth; the number on record is large.

To these facts and theories we venture to add the suggestion that the removal of pressure by tapping the subterranean reservoirs of oil and gas has aggravated the movement of the Atlantic coast section of the earth's crust. The natural oil has been lying under great pressure, probably of gas but also, perhaps, of other substances. How great that pressure was has been indicated by the spouting of the oil wells, throwing the oil to a great height in the air when the boring reached the underground reservoir. The pressure of the natural gas, which is so extensively used in Western Pennsylvania and a part of Ohio, rises in some instances to hundreds of pounds to the square inch. Now this pressure has been supporting something down below, and the down below is the bottom of a basin with shelving sides. In other words, the strata of the rocks dip or slant down into the valley, and the valley is the bottom of the basin on which the sides rest. The oil wells and the gas wells have been taking the support out of the bottom of the rock basin. A pressure of some fifty pounds to some hundreds of pounds to the square inch, indicated by the flow of the oil or gas, has been holding up something, probably a great deal. Perhaps the pressure was greater than was needed to support the overlying masses of rock and soil. That is very likely. The gas has been compressed. But the time comes when the equilibrium is destroyed, when the support required is removed from the superimposed strata. Then the strata must seek a new support, and as they extend on a rising slant for a long distance, and as they are the support of other strata beyond, the movement until a new support is reached will extend over a wide area, an area of hundreds of miles. The movement will be greatest on the periphery or rim of the bowl, and there cracks and fissures are most likely to occur.

In mining, supports are left or inserted to hold up the roof. This is always done, even when the mining is carried on at very moderate depths. But the oil wells and gas wells have been taking out a mighty uplifting and supporting force and have put nothing in its place. A subsidence of the roof and sides of the reservoirs of oil and gas, when the point of equilibrium has been passed, is, it seems to us, inevitable. The pressure downward is chiefly lateral, for the overlying strata are not horizontal or perpendicular but inclined, as the geologists say, they dip. This lateral pressure extends back hundreds of miles. That the upholding force, manifestly existing in the internal reservoirs of oil and gas, can be removed and nothing happen, seems impossible. Something must cave in or move down.

Now in Charleston the earth movement was from southeast to northwest, that is, toward Western Pennsylvania, and Western Virginia, and Southern Ohio, where a mighty sustaining force has been removed from under a part of the earth's crust.

More may occur, if this theory is correct. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. Chemical activity on a large scale may be instituted. Substances may be brought together which will generate large amounts of gas and produce an eruption. Fissures may be opened through which water will flow to the hot interior, be converted into steam, exert great pressure, bringing about another adjustment of the rocks or resulting in an explosion. These are among the possibilities. Such results have followed in the past history of the earth's crust.

Something new has happened. A gradual movement, imperceptible ordinarily except by the help of delicate instruments, has been converted into a rapid one. Is that something the removal of upholding force by tapping the internal reservoirs of oil and gas?

J. M. F.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

Madison Avenue Reformed Church.

BY ABRAM R. VAN NEST, D.D.

SUNDAY, September 5th, was a memorable occasion in the annals of this venerable church, which we used to know as the Northwest. It was founded in the year 1807, and consequently is about sixty years of age. Its first minister was Rev. Christian Bork, who came to us from the German Reformed body. His ministry was eminently successful, and at once it took a front rank among the strong churches of the city, enjoying frequent seasons of refreshing from the Lord. In the annual reports to Synod we find several years when more than a hundred persons were added on confession of faith, and the old people used to mention with enthusiasm the good times they had in old Franklin Street under Father Bork. He was a Boanerges who carried the spirit of a Hessian soldier, which he had been, into the pulpit.

Then came the Rev. George Dubois. He was one of our own young men from New Brunswick, and seemed possessed of a saintly spirit. The church still grew, but his life was quite a contrast to that of his predecessor. He was gentle in manner and sought the things that belong to peace.

Then followed the Rev. James B. Hardenberg, D.D. He was a prince among the children of Israel, a man of commanding personal appearance. He was a true shepherd over his flock, and not the least lamb of the fold suffered from neglect. Having occupied several important posts in the Reformed Zion, he came with a certain prestige to this important church. Eminently successful as a pastor, his charge was thoroughly organized and yielded the best results. He was a man greatly beloved. Under his care the church was removed to West 23d street.

His successor was Rev. Hervey D. Ganse. Coming in the prime of life, one of the brightest men our Seminary had produced, he soon filled the vacant places in the sanctuary and the congregation became very flourishing. Seldom has a church been blessed with such a succession of shining lights and been so continually prosperous. In an evil day, as it seemed to many, the old house which had been consecrated with so many precious memories was abandoned, and a more expensive location at 57th street and Madison avenue was selected. The church erected was one of classic beauty, but it was far from the old people, who reached it with difficulty, and Mr. Ganse made but little impression on the surrounding vicinity.

Dr. Reed succeeded him. He was a most delightful man and a good preacher, but the church did not fill.

But now has come upon the scene Dr. Kittredge, of Chicago. He comes with the eclat of great success in the West, nor is he unknown amongst us. Formerly he was connected with the body that afterward created the Memorial Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. Charles S. Robinson is pastor, and he has many devoted friends in this city.

The church property is very valuable, estimated as worth half a million of dollars, and if "the survival of the fittest" is the rule for churches, this congregation has the best right to be, for they have paid off more than $100,000 of debt, and several of the leading officers have given $10,000 each.

Last Sunday was the opening service of this new and hopeful ministry. Churches still feel the effect of the summer solstice, but the place was full,—it was hard to find seats,—and this church has a delightful gallery which was pleasantly occupied. Dr. Kittredge is a man of middle age, full of spirit, with a beautiful round head and compact frame. He speaks with much rapidity and bristles all over with facts. The subject of his sermon was in Matthew 3: 16, "The signs of the times." He said there were three orders of students: one were the croakers; a second class, those who clothed every thing in a golden light, and then the true observer who could read the evil and the good. The great danger was the materialism of the age—the love of Mammon which was so universal. The other was social immorality, upon which he enlarged most plainly.

Still the world was getting better. One great evidence was the general sentiment against the sin of intemperance. At the beginning of the century an English traveller wrote, "A striking feature of the Americans is intemperance," and he gave a gloomy picture of the habits of clergymen in the past, who to a large extent became sots; now all is changed. It is no more genteel to have wine on the table, and a drunken clergyman cannot be tolerated. In allusion to Ingersoll's assertion that Christianity was near its death, he brought a great array of figures; first the gifts for foreign missions, reaching some $59,000,000 contributed by Christians, and nearly as large a sum for home work, while in 1800 missions had no place. He spoke of the large results in various heathen countries, and suggested that Christianity, if it was dying, made a pretty lively corpse.

In reply to the charge that faith is declining among Christians, he took four points for examination: first, the belief in a personal God; second, in the inspiration of the Bible; third, in the eternal punishment of the wicked; fourth, in the vicarious atonement of Christ; and showed that not one in ten thousand believers failed in these vital points. With regard to punishment, he suggested that many had a wish that some time and in some way the punishment might end, and that was about all that these doubters expressed. We submit the trouble is these people want to be wise above what is written. God alone can disclose His own counsels.

The sermon was delivered with great earnestness, and was most encouraging and hopeful. He declared himself a Boston man and of the old Congregational stock, with large charity for all those who love Jesus. He showed that the Church in this country was advancing quite in proportion to the growth of population, and especially in the orthodox direction. Everything in the man indicated great vigor for work for the extension of Christ's kingdom. I heard of his private visits and inquiries about what hospital the family visited, and that he expressed hope that every member of his church would have some special mission, so that those who have been sitting at ease in Zion are getting quite conscious that their peace will be seriously disturbed by this new advocate.

Everything looked full of promise, there was a large attendance of young people, and such preaching and such united efforts must surely reach the heart of this great city. We predict that Madison Avenue Church made a wise investment of ten thousand dollars a year when they made it the salary of this valient preacher of righteousness. May God bless them and their faith.

Another Dutchman is now preaching near by. Rev. C. P. Masden, long pastor of the Second Reformed Church in Philadelphia, and greatly blessed there, is now preaching in the beautiful Methodist church at Madison avenue and 60th street.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10th, 1886.

....BICENTENNIAL.—As will be seen in a notice in another column the First Reformed Church of Hackensack, N. J., will observe its two hundredth anniversary on Thursday, Sept. 23d. There is to be a historical discourse in the morning, a Dutch service in the afternoon, and addresses by ex-pastors in the evening. The occasion cannot fail to be very interesting. These two centuries of Christian life encourage our faith. This venerable church has never exhibited greater vigor than it does to-day.

....STANTON, N. J.—The first Sunday in September was a day of great interest in the Reformed Church. The pastor had announced that it would be observed as "Old Folks' Day." The attendance was very large, and almost half of the congregation were aged people. The church was decorated with foliage, flowers, grains, etc., with banners and appropriate inscriptions. The sermon was to the "fathers and mothers in Israel," and all the music was of fifty years ago. It was an inspiring sight, that army of noble old veterans of the Cross! and the young were deeply impressed by their presence. An experience meeting was held in the evening, at which three men, who joined the church about fifty years ago, told what great things the Lord had done for them. P.

....ROTTERDAM, N. Y.—The First Reformed Church, having undergone extensive repairs, will be re-dedicated, (D. V.,) on Thursday, Sept. 30th. Sermon in the morning by Rev. Dr. Gleason, of Hudson, N. Y., and in the evening by Dr. DeBaun, of Fonda, N. Y. L.

....POMPTON, N. J.—Rev. J. A. Trimmer of the Presbyterian Church, Woodside, N. J., began his work as pastor of the Reformed Church on September 1st.

....WARWICK, N. Y.—At the Reformed church, Sunday, September 5th, eight persons were welcomed into fellowship by the pastor, Rev. V. B. Carroll, making twenty-one received during the past six months, (three communions), of whom eleven came professing their faith, and ten with letters from other churches. During less than ten years one hundred and eleven have united with this church. Of this number twenty-three have died or removed from the village. The active membership at date is one hundred and fifty-four. The benevolent contributions show a gratifying development. There were reported in 1877, $161; in '79, $399; in '82, $573; in '84, $777; in '85, $826; in '86, $926.

....KERHONKSON, N. Y.—The Mission Band of our church have been busy for some weeks past in gathering grapes, cat-tails, ferns, clematis and bitter-sweet vines, and other things suitable for winter house decoration. They are ready now for orders to a reasonable extent for these articles. The purpose, should they realize anything from them is, to devote the proceeds to relieving the Board of Home Missions of a part of the appropriation necessary to sustain this church.

Their collection of grasses is varied and choice. They have been well preserved. They can now supply orders for the following at prices named: Cat-tails, 30, 40 and 50 cents per doz., according to size, securely packed and delivered at express office at Ellenville. Grasses, a good-sized bunch, such as can be spanned with one hand, 30 cents per bunch, postpaid. Clematis and bitter sweet vines, cured for use, 50 cents per lb., postpaid. White balsam, same as grasses. Pressed ferns and autumn leaves gathered and prepared according to order. It is too soon yet. Especial care will be taken in preparing sumach sprays, colored or green. Address the pastor, Rev. W. B. Darrach, Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., N. Y.

....THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA at a special meeting held at Marion, Wayne Co., N. Y., August 13th, dissolved the pastoral relation between the Rev. Matt. Kolyn and the Church of Marion, and Mr. Kolyn, having received a call from the Church of Spring Lake, Mich., was dismissed to the Classis of Grand River. The Classis also adopted the following minute:

"Resolved, That in dissolving the pastoral relation existing between the Rev. Matt. Kolyn and the Reformed Church of Marion, this Classis desires to put upon record their appreciation of the faithful work done by our brother; and, while regretting exceedingly that a mutually pleasant and profitable relation must be dissolved, would commend him to the further guidance of His Master, trusting, too, that he may find as useful a field and as affectionate a people as he is about to leave." S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN, in special session, September 2d, dissolved the pastoral relation between Rev. Wm. Schmitz and the Reformed Church of Pottersville, at their mutual request. He has removed to Roxbury, Delaware County, N. Y., as he has received a call from the church in that place.

Rev. Curtis E. Long has accepted a call from the Reformed Church of High Bridge, Hunterdon County, N. J. His installation has been appointed for September 23d, at 3.30 P. M. S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC met in special session in the Reformed Church of Fairfield, N. J., September 8th, and dissolved the pastoral relation existing between Rev. B. C. Miller, Jr., and said church. S. C.

The Result and Once More.

"Though he will not rise and give him because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth."—LUKE 11: 8.

WHEN three weeks since we advertised in these columns for a loan of $5,000 for a term of ten years at 4 or 5 per cent interest, for the building of the Second Reformed Church of Kalamazoo, we hoped and prayed that the Lord might incline some one whom He had blessed with "earthly store" to respond to the appeal. The prayer has undoubtedly been heard, but answered negatively. The willing party has not been found.

Now, in the name of Christ, whose we are and whom we serve, we call upon churches and individuals to send in their contributions for us to the "Church Building Fund of the Reformed Church," with instructions. If the Executive Committee can loan us the required sum, we will give every security in our power and obligate ourselves to refund the amount in full at the earliest opportunity.

A strong, united effort was recently made by the Reformed Church to save a costly church building in North Brooklyn by removing the embarassing debt with which it was encumbered. The effort proved successful. Will the call to save a church organization, young, vigorous and promising, by providing a building for it fail of success? It cannot be!

A brother clergyman of other religious persuasion, acquainted with our needs and prospects, made bold to suggest the willingness of the denomination he represented to house us and have us. The suggestion was not entertained for a single moment, though we need not have done violence to our religious beliefs in order to subscribe to the creed of that Church.

But can the Reformed Church, in consistency with her hopes for a future, suffer one of her youngest and most promising churches to remain shelterless on the eve of winter, and to be tempted by another denomination with a promise of home and comfort? No young woman, I fancy, would accept the proposals of a young man if, though promising to love and feed her well, he purposed to keep her out of doors during the first winter of their married life—especially not if she had another and better suitor.

The Second Reformed Church of Kalamazoo has raised for all purposes, during the fourteen months of her existence, the surprising sum of $2,150, without the help of other churches or the Board. "She hath done what she could." When I enter the homes of some of her members I feel tempted to say, more than she should. The church-site has been cleared, architect's plans and specifications completed, contractor's figures obtained, and—we can go no further. The sound of the winds as I write reminds me of the fast-approaching equinoctial storms, and that it is but five months before the expiration of our lease will call us to vacate our rented church, and then—what? A. VENNEMA.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., September 10th, 1886.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION held its first regular meeting on Monday at the Synod Rooms, 34 Vesey street. The Rev. John Davis was elected President, and Rev. Robert H. Barr, Secretary. At the next meeting, September 20th, Rev. David Cole, D.D., will give an exegesis of 1 Cor. 9: 27, "Paul a castaway."

....EAST GREENBUSH, N. Y.—A harvest home festival was held at the Reformed Church on Thursday, September 9th, during the afternoon and evening. The lecture-room was tastefully decorated with the various productions of the soil. A large pyramid of fruits and grains was erected in the centre of the room and was greatly admired. A night-blooming cereus of exceeding beauty, belonging to Miss E. Yates, was on exhibition during the evening, and added much to the pleasure of the large number present, many of whom had never before seen the like. The day, though very warm, was, on the whole, favorable to the success of the entertainment.

The aged members of the church were out in force, and spent the long interval between the exercises in social chit-chat and in calling to remembrance the former days. Lively addresses were delivered during the day by Rev. R. A. Davison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Greenbush, and Rev. J. B. Armstrong, pastor of the M. E. Church of East Greenbush, and in the evening by Nelson Davenport, Esq., of Troy, and Rev. P. R. Day, of Albany. The whole impression produced by the exercises, enlivened as they were by the singing of a number of excellent pieces by the church choir, was most happy.

A fact lending additional interest to the occasion was that just one hundred years had elapsed since the building of the First Reformed Church of Greenbush. A marble tablet, set in fruits and flowers, was placed immediately over the desk, bearing the inscription:

BUILT 1786. ENLARGED 1829.

Next year will be the centennial of the organization of the church, which, it is expected, will be appropriately celebrated.

The exercises closed with a brief congratulatory address by Rev. Dr. Steele, pastor of the church. The financial result fully equalled expectation.

....THE CLASSIS OF HOLLAND held its regular fall session at Vriesland, Mich., September 8th. The Rev. J. P. DeJong preached the sermon from 1 John 1: 7.

Three young men were examined and recommended for support from the Board of Education.

A committee was appointed to organize two churches if they should think it proper to do so.

It was strongly urged that the interest in missions and in education should be promoted by every possible lawful means in our churches.

Rev. A. Zwemer was dismissed to the Classis of Iowa, within whose bounds he has accepted a call. The Classis adopted resolutions expressing regret to part with one of the most aged pastors of this Classis, as also our sincere sympathy with this brother in the loss he sustained by the death of Mrs. Zwemer. S. C.

...HARLEM, N. Y.—The Rev. G. H. Smyth preached his last sermon as pastor of the First Reformed Church last Sabbath morning. The old white frame building which for many years has sheltered a devout congregation was crowded. Five years ago Mr. Smyth became the pastor; the membership was less than two hundred. It has risen to between seven and eight hundred. A Second Reformed Church has been organized, a division of the property made, a part sold and a beautiful new church erected. Next Sabbath Rev. Mr. Smyth and two hundred members go to the new church. Five hundred remain with the First Church. Rev. Dr. J. Elmendorf began his work in the old church by preaching his first sermon as pastor-elect last Sabbath evening. The First Church occupies a part of the old site; the Second Church is on the corner of Sixth avenue and One hundred and twenty third street.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—Rev. A. Zwemer, of Graafschap, Mich., has accepted the call of Free Grace Church, Sioux Co., Iowa.... The Third Church of Pella, Iowa, has called Rev. J. Smit, of Wortendyke, N. J....English services are held regularly every Sabbath in the Reformed church at Coopersville, Mich., Rev. J. H. Karsten, pastor.

Fulton Street Prayer-Meeting.

TWENTY-NINE years of prayer, bringing inestimable blessings to thousands of souls, will be commemorated on Thursday, September 23d, when the Fulton Street Daily Noon Prayer Meeting will hold its twenty-ninth anniversary, at noon, in the Middle Reformed Dutch Church, on the corner of Lafayette Place and Fourth street in this city. Addresses will be delivered by ministers of various denominations, thanksgiving be offered to God for the past and supplications for a large blessing on the thirtieth year. The influence of this meeting once extended around the world. Shall it again?

American Bible Society.

THE Board of Managers met at the Bible House on September 9th, 1886, William H. Crosby, Esq., Vice-President, in the chair. Religious services were conducted by the Rev. D. B. Coe, D.D.

Grants of books to the value of $7,850 were made for distribution through colportage and other agencies at home and in foreign lands.

Letters were presented from all the Society's agents in foreign lands, with communications concerning the circulation of the Scriptures and the various hindrances which are encountered in carrying out their work. Mr. Loomis refers to the prevalence of cholera in Yokohama; Dr. Gulick makes brief mention of the outbreaks of violence against foreign missionaries in Szechuen, in which one of the Society's agents is rumored to have suffered loss; Mr. Hamilton speaks of the embarrassment experienced in Mexico in consequence of the recent excitement on the border; Mr. Brown reports a six weeks' trip to the province of Paraná; Mr. Milne had gone from Bogotá to Honda, in Colombia, making frequent sales of Scriptures on the way; Mr. Whipple reports the work done by colporteurs in Persia, and Dr. Bliss concerning affairs in Constantinople. Mr. McKim, in Cuba, is making steady sales and meeting with encouragement.

The receipts in August were $46,153.05; issues from the Bible House during the same month, 56,430 volumes. Total receipts since April 1st, $203,486.11; issues since April 1st, 418,578 volumes.

The General Outlook.

....RECENT LIBERAL BEQUESTS AND GIFTS.—The Presbyterian reports that a lady has placed the sum of $200,000 in the hands of Rev. H. S. Hoffman and Mr. C. M. Morton, for the purpose of establishing in West Philadelphia a Divinity School for the Reformed Episcopal Church. With the seminary a church is to be established, and the parish and seminary are to be so connected that the pastors shall be professors, and the young students are to assist in parochial work. It is said that $100,000 will be spent upon the buildings, which are to be erected in a lot already purchased at Chestnut and Forty-third streets.

....The will of Catherine E. Coyle, of Washington, gives the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church of Washington $500; Sabbath-school of same, $500; to Dr. Chester, pastor, $500; to the Central Presbyterian Church, $500; to the Tract Society, $300; to the Women's Work for Women Society of the Metropolitan Church, $300; to the Women's Benevolent Association, $300; to the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies, five shares Bank of Washington stock; to the Metropolitan Church Poor Fund, and to aid in building a parsonage, five shares each of the same.

....The Baptist Church has received the following bequests from a banker in Detroit, Lorenzo B. Austin: American Baptist Missionary Union, $5,000; Baptist Theological School, at Ongole, India, $1,500; American Baptist Home Missionary Society, $3,000; American and Foreign Bible Society, $1,000; to be used in distributing Bibles in the Southern States, etc., $500; to the Woman's Baptist Home Missionary Society of Michigan, Denison University, Granville, Ohio, $2,000; and to the Baptist churches which he formerly attended in Akron and Middleburg, Ohio, $4,000.

....It is announced that the five sons of Mr. James S. Kirk, recently deceased in Evanston, Ill., have determined to erect a memorial library building for Northwestern University, at a cost of from $50,000 to $70,000.

....The late Philo Carpenter, of Chicago, bequeaths to Oberlin College, Ohio, $2,000; Ripon College, $2,000; Iowa College, $2,000; Berea College, Kentucky, $5,000; Chicago Theological Seminary, $2,000; Chicago Historical Society, $1,000; American Congregational Union, $2,000, and makes the Chicago Theological Seminary his residuary legatee.

....The Armour Memorial Mission Church of Chicago is almost completed. Mr. Armour also contemplates the establishment of a free hospital on the grounds.

....Adrian College has lately received three bequests from friends; one of $2,800, another of $2,000, and the third of $500.

....The late Archbishop Trench bequeathed $15,000 to the Episcopal Church in Ireland.

....At the Methodist Conference just closed in Dublin, Sir William McArthur gave $75,000 toward the erection of a new building on the Methodist College grounds at Belfast, where young women may be educated.

....The Rev. Dr. Wallace, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Newburyport, Mass., sends the following facts to the Evangelist in relation to a venerable Christian lady The one hundredth birthday of Miss Phebe Harrod, the oldest member of this church (having entered its communion by profession seventy-one years ago), was celebrated Aug. 28th. She retains all her faculties, her memory is stored with precious hymns and passages of Scripture, and her conversation is entertaining and profitable to all who visit her. She is a native of this city, of Puritan ancestry, and was next to the youngest of ten children, the most of whom attained advanced years. She remembers to have seen Washington and Lafayette, and has seen all the pastors of this church excepting the first. Her house has ever been a place of hospitality, and she retains a deep interest in the activities and charities of the church. She is widely known and greatly beloved. Her spirit is one of calmness and cheerfulness, and her faith and trust exemplify the promise, "And even to old age I am He, and even to hoar hairs will I carry you; I have made and I will bear, even I will carry and deliver you." A large number called and extended their congratulations, and letters or telegrams were received from all the ex-pastors living, and from many prominent persons in various parts of the country. Brief congratulatory exercises were held in commemoration of the event. The pastor read the Scriptures and offered a prayer of thanksgiving. An original hymn, composed by a member of the church, was sung. Words of welcome were spoken by J. T. Brown, Esq., and an address made by Hon. Richart T. Spofford, who also read a poem written for the occasion by his wife, Harriet Prescott Spofford, residents of this city.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 8.—Prince Alexander has been informed that the Czar accepts the proposals made by the Bulgarian notables as the conditions of the Prince's abdication, and that the Czar will recognize the regency, the union of Bulgaria and Roumelia and the independence of the country, and will appoint a Russian military plenipotentiary resident at Sofia....Fresh shocks of earthquake were felt yesterday in Athens and neighboring places....A terrible hail storm reported in Paris and suburbs. The loss of glass is estimated at $1,000,000 ... There are rumors of revolt in India... The "Mayflower" beat the "Galatea" by over twelve minutes....Three persons killed and six wounded at an election riot in Texas.

..Thomas F. Plunkett disappeared last Friday from Hartford, Conn., with $50,000 in cash and a large amount of negotiable paper of the Hartford Silk Co. He was President of the Hartford Silk Co. in Tariffville, and Treasurer of the Union Manufacturing Co. in Manchester ...Several slight shocks of earthquake at Charleston, S. C., again reported. Liberal offerings are carefully distributed and no distinction is made of race or color. Thousands of dollars have been raised for relief of the sufferers. ....Work will begin next week on the bridge at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., across the Hudson river.

THURSDAY, 9.—Alexander has signed the deed of abdication and departed from Sofia. A great crowd of people witnessed his departure and thousands lined his route through the town. The people were much affected....All hope of a compromise between the government and Mr. Parnell has been abandoned since the interview between Lord Hartington and Lord Salisbury....A new lake has been discovered in Cuba; the springs which recently appeared near the village of Ceibadelogua flow so freely that it is feared the village will be inundated. A portion of it is now three feet under water, and the inhabitants are panic stricken and leaving the town in great numbers ... The Cayuhoga Valley Railway attempted to lay a track on a prominent street in Akron, O., despite the earnest protest of residents, who say the track would be a death trap. While the men were at work one thousand business men turned out and made an attack on the railroad hands, and the track was torn up and thrown into the Ohio canal... It is said that Mrs. Schilling, Mr. Morosini's daughter, is at the Ursuline Convent in Montreal, and that Mr. Morosini gave Schilling $15,000 to leave the city.... The situation at Charleston is improving. ....The sea serpent reported seen yesterday morning in the Connecticut river opposite Cromwell. Two men were rowing on the river, when suddenly the boat was struck and lifted nearly out of the water, throwing the men off their seats.

FRIDAY, 10.—Prince Alexander arrived at Turn Severin, Austria, in a yacht, and was greeted with cheers by Hungarians. The school children of Lom Palatka strewed the Prince's pathway through the city with flowers. He says Germany, Austria and Russia had forbidden him to execute the plotters against him, thus depriving him of the very essence of power, and abdication was the only honorable mode of escape from such a position....Mr. Louden, once a prominent member of the Irish National League, accuses the League of investing the funds sent from America, instead of using the money to help evicted tenants....The Queen of Spain is seriously ill with consumption, in a form similar to that which caused the death of King Alfonso....An attempt was made to wreck a Staten Island rapid transit train over the creek north of Stapleton....The race between the "Mayflower" and "Galatea" was a failure yesterday on account of the dense fog ...The "Empire State" ran aground on Sandy Hook beach yesterday in the fog. She had four hundred passengers on board viewing the race between the "Mayflower" and "Galatea." ...Subscriptions rapidly increasing for Charleston. The homeless people drenched by rain, making their condition more terrible than before. Two slight shocks felt yesterday.

Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Saratoga Springs Again,

WITH MR. JONES AND MR. SMALL.

THE last week in August found the Saratoga season in its culminating glory. The races ended on Saturday, the 28 h, and that day witnessed also the garden party at the Grand Union Hotel, when the children of small growth promenaded and danced in the afternoon, and the children of larger growth crowded the walks and platform in the evening. The toilets of the evening were elaborate and elegant, one of the most striking being embellished with diamonds of such great price that a detective followed immediately, in order to protect their lady show case. For this worldly spectacle we had fortified ourselves by an excursion to R und Lake in the morning, where we had heard the Rev. Samuel Jones, of the Georgia Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Round Lake is midway between Albany and Saratoga, and has a summer camp-meeting population of several thousands. The tabernacle, where the services are held, is but a few minutes' walk from the station. It will hold three thousand people.

When we reached the platform a prayer-meeting was in progress, which was participated in by many present. At half past ten Mr. Jones arrived on the platform, and, after singing, solo and choral, by Mr. Uxell, of Chicago, and his choir, prayer was offered, a collection taken, and the sermon began, lasting an hour and twenty minutes.

REV. SAM JONES.

Some of the readers of the INTELLIGENCER may like to know how the noted evangelist appears. Let them imagine a somewhat slight man of middle age, of average height, with dark complexion, black hair and moustache, with dark eyes, arrayed in a black suit, with a white tie. His voice is conversational, somewhat monotonous and drawling, with a twang and yet dashes of vigor and enthusiasm, which carry the witty or stinging utterance with great power home to the hearer. He begins with his hands behind him; then they drop to his sides; then wave in graceful gesticulation, or cleave the air in passionate entreaty or denunciation.

The text was Acts 10: 2: "A devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God always." The division of the sermon was textual. In the first place Cornelius was a devout man. Under this head the politics of the country were scathingly reviewed, and men were urged to be devout practically in public and daily life. Secondly, Cornelius was one who feared God with all his house. At this point family life was held up in its religious opportunities and deficiencies, and the pious customs of the Jones' family were minutely and tellingly rehearsed for the edification and rebuke of the multitude. Thirdly, Cornelius gave much alms to the people. He served as an excellent example for imitation to the people of this age. The Church was urged to liberality.

Throughout the sermon occurred witty utterances, which arrested the attention and excited laughter or exclamations of surprise. But all these sayings had an earnest moral purpose to rebuke sin and praise righteousness. True, the noble English of the academy, forum, and university pulpit suffered at the hands of the great evangelist; but God prefers righteousness to rhetoric. As usual, the bon-mots were noticeable and may be reported here:

SENTENTIOUS SAYINGS.

"A well-rounded, symmetrical character is the idol of God's heart."

"Thank God, there's no such thing as a pauper in heaven."

"I've got a family-prayers plank in my religious platform, and I'll carry it through all my life."

"Let's succeed in being religious, whether we succeed in anything else or not."

"This country will never be what it ought to be until we mix the ten commandments with our politics."

"Put a devil in office, and then ask God to bless him!"

"The Republicans have come out and championed beer; only they didn't put it in the platform; they put it under the platform."

"The South has nothing against the North. We're sorry we ever fired on that old flag."

"May we have a party for morals in America, and have all the devils on the other side!"

"If any man lives like Cornelius, he is called a crank—cracked. If you call that being cracked, I want to be bust wide open."

"A devout man—through and through. It broke out all over him."

"A man who can't have a revival preaches against them. A man hates to see a disturbance in a graveyard."

"I wish every home in America was a religious home."

"A lawyer said to me, 'When I've got a strong case, I want a jury of Presbyterians. The Shorter Catechism, swallowed in their youth, makes them do right.' What do you Methodists swallow in your youth?"

"I tell you, mothers, you get a grip on God and you can manage your boys."

"Brother, did you ever try to swap bread and ham for some of heaven's bread?"

"People say I talk about myself too much. The main difficulty is I've talked about you a little too much."

"When a man gets out of a job, he sits down and tells a lie about Sam Jones."

"The Lord doesn't let a man lose every time he seems to lose."

"I'd rather risk the chances of a generous old sinner out of the church than the chances of a stingy member of the church."

"What is hell but selfishness on fire?"

"A large ear is said to denote a generous man. Many a preacher in this country ought to get tons of fertilizers for large ears."

"A fellow's going to plank down for value received. When the Gospel's done all for a man, he will give his bottom dollar to send the Gospel to those who don't have it."

REV. SAM SMALL.

Mr. Jones is said, in his preaching at Atlanta, Ga., to have been the means of converting Mr. Samuel Small, an accomplished gentlemen, who had been in the habit of looking too long upon the wine when it is red. Mr. Small has joined Mr. Jones in his laudable evangelism, and spent some days at Round Lake with him. Sunday morning, August 29th, Mr. Small came to Saratoga and preached in the Methodist Church an hour and six minutes to an appreciative congregation of two thousand souls.

Mr. Small is apparently about thirty-five, slender, of good size, brown-haired and brown-moustached. He has a large nose, crowned with spectacles. He speaks in a somewhat monotonous and strident voice, but with great energy and excellent diction. His text on this occasion was St. Matthew 16: 3: "O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

He opened with the usual theological doctrine of God's revelation of moral truth in creation, Scripture and incarnation. The Holy Spirit carries on the work of redemption through the Christian Church. No philosophy of man's device can supplant or antagonize the authorized revelation and means of redemption. Men scan the signs of the times, and base on them optimistic or pessimistic theories. Optimistic signs are the growth of the Church and missionary activity; pessimistic are the labor troubles, political corruption, worldliness in the Church, antagonisms to soul life. But God is with His Church, and as we read the signs of the times in a Christian spirit, all is well. Many denunciations were stinging; many eulogies beautiful in imagination and diction.

Afterward came a personal statement from Mr. Small of his conversion, September 15th, 1885, and his happiness since; ninety drunkards having been reclaimed under his efforts in Atlanta since that time. This brief speech was, in some respects, more impressive than the whole sermon which preceded. Many wept for joy, and all seemed gratefully to realize that the same mighty Spirit who founded the Church at Pentecost and strove effectually to convert Saul and Augustine and Bunyan, was still at work, with trophies and coronations for the crucified Christ.

Messrs. Jones and Small returned to the sunny South, and the prayers of all earnest Christian hearts will go with them for the abundant success of their witness and exhortations for the Lord.

CONVENTIONS.

September is a convention month at Saratoga. The Free-Thinkers, Spiritualists, Unitarians, and Social Scientists are on the programme.

Phi Beta Kappa convened in national council last Wednesday, a week ago, the first instant, in the Court of Appeals room in the Town Hall, at which it was our fortune to be a delegate from the Columbia Chapter, New York. There we met as fellow delegates the Hon. Matthew Hale, President of the Council; Col Thomas W. Higginson, Vice President; Dr. Winsor from Harvard, Professor Adolph Werner, of New York, Dr. Darling, of Hamilton College, and many other vives illustres. The principal business was the election of officers and senators, and the granting of three new charters for Rochester University, Dickinson College and Lehigh University, of Pennsylvania. De Pauw University, of Indiana, must wait yet three years. A declaration was made that, in the opinion of the Council, the society was not a secret organization, and then, with thanks to the authorities for their hospitality, the assembly adjourned.

THE AUTUMNAL VISITORS.

Autumnal weather came after the earthquake and the latter rain. Charleston has been often remembered and compassionated in conversation and in public prayers. Dr. Cuyler, in his sermon last Sunday morning, alluded sympathizingly to the stricken city. He tarries with us a little longer at Dr. Strong's,—that happy place where Christian love reigns—and with him have been gathered the Rev. Drs. Page, of Leavenworth, Kansas, Bullock, of Washington, Rabinkam, late of Philadelphia, Cunningham, of Nashville, and Prof. Wallace Bruce, the Shakesperean scholar. That sweet voiced daughter of God, Miss Sarah Smiley, gave us a Bible reading of forty minutes' duration on the subject of consecration, one Sunday evening, and another night Dr. J. J. Roche came to lead prayers, at which Mrs. Knapp sang beautiful soli, accompanied by Dr. Roche's accomplished son, the Rev. Olin Roche, assistant at St. Peter's in New York, who presided at the organ.

The bands have gone from the Grand Union and the Kensington Hotels, and that at Congress Hall has been divided and part dismissed, but the one at the United States still plays. The sky is daily splendid, the air is balmy, and the springs have not yet given out.

The most recent signs of the activity of the Reformed Church here have been the presence of the courtly Dr. Hartley, of Utica, moving among the guests at the Grand Union, and the Rev. Daniel H. Martin, of New York, whom we saw happy among a group of ladies on the piazza of the States.

E. J. RUNK.

The Hindus of Southern India.

BY REV. JOHN H. WYCKOFF.

PART I.

THE Madras Presidency, which forms the southern portion of the peninsula of India, contains a population of about 31,000,000. Of this number, fully 29,000,000 are Hindus; the remainder being Mahommedans (1,900,000), Eurasians (half castes), Europeans, and other foreigners. The Hindus, excepting a very few of the old warrior and merchant castes, may be all included under three divisions: Brahmins, Sudras, and out-castes; the Brahmins constituting 4 per cent, the Sudras 75 per cent, and the out-castes 20 per cent of the whole.

The Brahmins, although being so small a portion of the population, are by far the most influential section. From time immemorial they have formed the learned caste, and continue to hold that position. They are divided into two classes—religious and secular. The former devote themselves exclusively to religious duties, and act as priests to the Sudras. They officiate at the temples; perform ceremonies at marriages and funerals; name auspicious days; read and teach the Shasters, and attend to other duties peculiar to the priestly office. The secular class take up salaried appointments, chiefly under government, but not such as require any manual labor. The majority of the government posts open to natives are filled by them. They act as local magistrates, lawyers, clerks, professors, and teachers. Probably 60 per cent of the pupils in English schools are Brahmins. Of 1,394 university graduates in 1883–84, 899 were of this class. They possess wonderfully acute intellects; in fact, there appears to be no intellectual attainment to which they are not capable of rising. For indomitable perseverance and patient performance of duty, the Brahmins cannot be surpassed. But with their good traits is mingled so much hypocrisy, selfishness and pride, that few of them win the confidence and respect of Europeans. In many points they correspond to the Pharisees of Christ's day; but the Pharisees seem to have been men of upright moral walk, while the Brahmins are cunning, deceptive and untruthful. Their one object in life is self-exaltation, to accomplish which they do not hesitate to resort to the very lowest species of craft and fraud. Of the two classes, the moral character of the secular appears to be better than that of the religious section; their contact with English gentlemen and English literature tending to create in them a measure of manliness and self-respect. The religious class live by imposing upon the credulity of the Sudras. The expedients that they adopt for encouraging the superstitions of the people and extorting from them money, are so varied and so wicked as to be almost incredible. A short acquaintance with the Brahmins is sufficient to convince one that they belong to a race distinct from the rest of the Hindus. Well made, with finely modelled lips and nose, fair complexion and high forehead, they stand out from the bulk of the people superior in physical and intellectual endowments. In other words, they are the same race as ourselves, being a part of that great Aryan stock which formerly existed in Central Asia; but separated, a portion of them to people Europe and the rest to settle in India. "They are an example," says Hunter, "of a class becoming the ruling power in a country, not by force of arms, but by the vigor of hereditary culture. One race has swept across India after another; dynasties have risen and fallen; religions have spread themselves over the land and disappeared; but since the dawn of history the Brahmin has calmly ruled, swaying the minds and receiving the homage of the people, and accepted by foreign nations as the highest type of Indian mankind."

But by far the largest class of the Hindu population are the Sudras. This term, meaning slave, and used by Menu to denote the lowest of the four great castes, is a misnomer when applied to the Dravidians of Southern India, who hold a position far superior to the Sudras of North India. The Sudras of the South are virtually the people. They own the soil and till it; they are the artisans and tradesmen. The Brahmins are the head; the Sudras the trunk of the body politic. When the Brahmins came amongst them they were rude and uncivilized. Through them they learned the arts and sciences, and many of them now possess all the refinement and culture of their teachers. It is a question, though, whether the Dravidians would not have been better off without the civilization of the Aryans. For while the Brahmins improved their dialects, and taught them many useful arts, yet, by bringing them under the influence of a pantheistic religion they perverted their moral sense, and bound them fast to error by the chains of caste. Consequently, we find the morals of the Sudras quite as corrupt as those of the Brahmins. They are deceitful, cunning, woefully avaricious and licentious. Blind adherence to ancient custom is the sole religion of the Sudra. He deems it as perilous to forsake custom as for the locomotive to quit the line. With the theory of religion he has nothing to do; that he relegates to the Brahmins. He concludes that as it is easier, so it is better to believe than to reason. Occasionally he takes a cocoanut, breaks it before the village idol, pours the milk on the ground, prostrates himself before it with folded hands, and makes a short petition for some temporal blessing. This, together with a faithful attendance upon the religious festivals and the usual offerings to the village priest, make up the practical side of his religion. His creed, as taught him by the Brahmins, has been outlined by some one as follows:

"He believes the stone idol which stands in the village street to be really and truly God. Would his forefathers have worshipped it if it were merely stone? Does it not avert danger, remove diseases, send rain and fruitful seasons? Would it do this if it were not God?

"He believes in the omnipervasion of God; and concludes that as we cannot see the great God, we must worship something in which He is.

"He believes that all men are puppets, moved to virtue and vice by God who dwells in them. This rids him of all personal responsibility and makes him indifferent to his future destiny, whether it be heaven or hell.

"He believes in the transmigration of souls; and that he is in bondage to the deeds of a former birth. He is thus a firm fatalist. All that he enjoys or suffers is inevitable; cannot be otherwise.

"He believes in the indulgence of God. That the feeding of a few lazy Brahmins or mendicants is sufficient to remove his most heinous crimes."

Moreover, he is a tenacious caste-holder. As the Brahmins have held aloof from the Sudras, constituting themselves a distinct caste, so they have encouraged the Sudras to form themselves into different castes. It is not known how many divisions of the Sudras there are, but they certainly number several hundreds. Besides the cultivators, which are the most numerous, there are weavers, smiths, shepherds, potters, carpenters; each trade constituting a distinct caste, and the members of different castes not being allowed to eat, drink, nor intermarry with one another. Each caste is further divided into classes; each class sub-divided; and the process of division is often carried to such an extent that a person is forced to marry within a circle of fifty or sixty families. A man who violates caste-rules is excluded from caste-privileges. No man is allowed to give him work, water, food or fire, nor have any intercourse with him. He is thus either forced to relent or become an out caste altogether. As a matter of practice, the different castes are beginning to change their occupation. As the Brahmins have left their priestly calling to take up lucrative appointments under government, so the Sudras are abandoning their hereditary trades and engaging in whatever occupation they find most profitable or congenial. They now compete with Brahmins for the very highest offices, so that it is not an uncommon thing to find a Sudra magistrate with Brahmins for subordinates. They send their children freely to the English schools, and during the last ten years the study of Sanscrit has also been revived amongst them, and even the Vedas, which Menu declared were not for the "ears of Sudras," is being studied by them in the sacred tongue.

Glances Across the Sea.

BY REV. HENRY E. DOSKER.

V.

IT were sheer folly if the rich possessions of the Church in the Fatherland should pass entirely out of the hands of the Orthodox without a struggle; if they should tolerate to be thus easily robbed of their own. Who will allow an alien to coolly thrust the owner from the door which opened to let him in, in disguise, and did not close upon him in time to prevent his arrogant attempt not only of ruling all things within with a high hand, but of claiming as his own that to which he never had, nor ever can have, a sound title.

The Orthodox, alone of all the factions in the Dutch Establishment, can lay a sound claim to the ecclesiastical possessions. Are not they alone truly and fully in accord with those to whom these rich holdings were given, as a sacred trust, centuries ago? Would not the very fact of any part of them being in the hands of avowed unbelievers be a violation of that trust? We cannot wonder, therefore, if we see the deposed brethren and their followers endeavor to obtain, in the civil courts, that justice which the ecclesiastical courts have so flagrantly violated.

The suspended members, shortly before their deposition, formulated fourteen questions as to the right in law of the Classis of Amsterdam, which were submitted to various lawyers of national repute. One of them was Mr. A. J. W. Tarncombe Sanders, a man of great celebrity, and moreover a recognized Liberal, and politically and ecclesiastically a decided antagonist of Dr. Kuyper and his followers. He spent a great deal of time in carefully looking over this entire matter. The result? A clean and complete justification of the position taken by the Orthodox; a bitter and scathing condemnation of the Classis and its illegal proceedings.

In his decision he laid special stress on his negative answer to the second question, which read as follows:

"Do Art. 18, General Regulations for the Reformed Church, and Art. 1, Regulations for the Consistories, allow a Classis, which has provisionally suspended a certain number of the members of the consistory of any congregation, to assume, in such congregation, consistorial powers?"

Unqualifiedly denying the right of Classis to do anything of the kind, least of all under the given circumstances and in the congregation of the capital, he calls every act of the Classis of Amsterdam, from the suspension of the 80 members of the Consistory until now, utterly illegal, and holds that no judicial tribunal in the Netherlands will, even for one moment, uphold the Classical proceedings.

A like position, among others, was taken on the question by that celebrated Dutch jurist, Prof. Mr. B. J. L. Baron de Geer van Jutfaas. It may be well to state, between parentheses, that Mr. is the official title given to jurists in all written documents.

As an indication of the change in popular opinion just now setting in, I may remark, that the Classis of Haarlem, by an overwhelming majority, not only of the Orthodox but also of the Moderns in it, protested against the actions of the Classis of Amsterdam. There is but very little doubt that the case will pass from the ecclesiastical to the civil tribunal, where less prejudice and greater fairness appears to await the defendants in the case.

All the while the fire is burning at other points. The Consistory of Leiden resolved, with 10 versus 9 votes, to admit a number of Modern candidates to the full communion of the Church. But almost immediately and before the cries of disapprobation from the side of the Orthodox had died away, it became known that the new members were received on their papers, but immediately forbidden the Lord's Supper until such time as the Consistory should have investigated their doctrinal soundness. With a slight change of base the struggle of Amsterdam promises, therefore, to be repeated at Leiden.

The Church of Veenendal made a show of fight against the admission of Moderns to the Lord's table, but the protest wilted under the heat of Synodical threats. In still another church, that of Ede, in Gilderland, a considerable number of the church communicants have petitioned the Consistory to break with the Synodical judicatories, and to assume, for the while, an independent position.

Strong efforts are all this time making to establish some kind of an interim. Dr. Kuyper himself favors the idea. Dr. Hoedemaker has attempted, in a brochure, to formulate a "modus vivendi."

One of the most feasible plans appears to be that which was published in the Herant a few weeks ago. Fundamentally it is one with the plan of Dr. Hoedemaker, from which it differs in some details. It proposes, for a term of twelve years, to suspend the existing regulations. Groups of equally-minded members of the church are meanwhile allowed to unite and to organize separately. If they number over five per cent of the membership of the church, they shall share, pro rata, in the salary fund. They are to exist by the side of the former organization, but within the pale of the Reformed Church. Their ministers are to be candidates for the ministry in Dutch or foreign seminaries, of recognized ecclesiastical standing, and they are to be recognized by the Church as ministers after the lapse of the interim. If, meanwhile, nothing new is established, the old order of things returns after twelve years.

Now this thing appears to me somewhat visionary and impractical. It smacks too much of calculation. The leaders of the opposition in the Netherlands had better remember the sad condition of affairs existing in Germany in the sixteenth century during the historical Augsburg and Leipsic interims. They were productive of naught but evil and worked no good. Better far, war to the knife than a false peace. If the issues are just and righteous the Lord will fight His own battles.

Meanwhile, the Roman Catholics are gloating over the division in the ranks of the Protestants. They absorb almost entirely the inflowing new population. They number to-day two-fifths of the population of the Netherlands, and confidently claim that the day will soon dawn, at the present rate of progress, when the New Church, the chief bone of contention at Amsterdam in the present embroglio, the old cathedral of Amsterdam, will be theirs once more. In this same connection it is interesting to know that one of the watchmen appointed by Classis to take the place of those who represented the party of the suspended, but were removed with police interference, is a Roman Catholic.

It were better, if the property question should be decided adversely, at once to free the Church from the State, to risk with God what the earlier seceders risked in 1834 and what the Scotch risked in 1845. A Free Church alone is a working, a living Church. No encouragement could be greater than that of the history of the Free Church of Scotland, which, as Dr. Kuyper himself proudly quotes, in forty-five years, besides a yearly amount, which last year rose to the magnificent figure of £600,000, or, together with the interest on invested funds, to that of £850,000, has raised no less than £2,000 000 for general endowments. If the Christian Reformed Church in the Netherlands is strong and efficient to-day in all its departments, why should a magnificent Free Church of Holland be counted a Utopian idea?

THE NIGER COUNTRY.—The large territories on the great river Niger, which, under the Conference held at Berlin for the distribution of colonial possessions in Africa, were assigned to Great Britain, are to be governed by a Company. A Royal Charter, published in the London Gazette, bestows on the National African Company (Limited) powers of governing and defending the territories it has acquired from the native Princes, covering the entire "basin of the Niger," equal to those possessed by the old East India Company of India. They can, for example, raise troops, issue a coinage, and pass laws. The consent of the Secretary of State is, of course, necessary to all their acts, and the Company cannot divide the produce of Custom duties as profits, or other taxes, but must expend them upon the administration of its territories. It is curious that both in Africa and Borneo we should fall back upon this old device; but it has some advantages, not the least of which is that it removes these rude regions, while they are being civilized, from the direct control of Parliament, and keeps the administration in experienced hands. The National African Company may possess a great empire by-and-by, if they know how to manage Negroes without enslaving them; and their Chairman will have more power than most kings.—Spectator, London.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE LOGIC OF INTROSPECTION; or, Method in Mental Science.” By Rev. J. B. Wentworth, D.D. Dr. Wentworth will not be accused of lacking the courage of his convictions. After an introductory discussion of Method, in which it is maintained that in all science the true method is to be found in the spontaneous action of the Rational powers, he boldly challenges Induction, and charges the Baconian method with producing materialism, sensationalism, positivism, and other philosophical heresies. The author also takes his position with those who hold that the mind knows not things, but their appearance or what the senses report about them. Half a dozen chapters are occupied with a criticism of Dr. McCosh's position in regard to intuitions and induction. The remainder of the book is largely devoted to an application of the method of introspec tion to philosophical investigation in search of truth.

No one will question the ability of the volume. It contains a great deal of careful and consecutive thinking, of delicate analysis, and nice discrimination, and will lead many to at least temper the application of induction with a use of introspection. Some portions of the discussion remind us of the hypotheses of the Theosophists. No doubt Theosophy, with all its errors, has in it important truths, and something is to be learned from it. Dr. Martineau's objection that it is without elevating power, is like an attempt of a man to lift himself by his waistband, is a strong one. There is also some affinity between introspection and the philosophy of Buddhism, and, therefore, one is apt to be rather shy of it. Whether Dr. Wentworth avoids such introspection as is undesirable and has succeeded in attaining its true value, we are not ready to say. His argument is certainly worthy of a hearing and of careful consideration. Our statement is very general, a fact we are aware of, but how to make it more particular in the space at out command, we do not see. (Phillips & Hunt.)

....“A CRITICAL HISTORY OF THE SABBATH AND THE SUNDAY IN THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.” By A. H. Lewis, D.D. This compact little volume of nearly six hundred pages presents the views of the Sabbatarians. Dr. Lewis writes in a good spirit, has collected a great deal of material, and tries to be fair. But he does not always succeed. He attacks the early date of the second half of the Didache, against the opinion of nearly all the critics who have examined the subject, and his attempt to overthrow the rendering, “the Lord's Day,” in chap. 14: 1 of “The Teaching,” is obviously futile. On page 48 we read, “The Epistle of Ignatius to the Magnesians is a forgery,” whereas its genuineness in the shorter recension has been established by the researches of Bishop Lightfoot, in whose conclusion Harnack concurs. It is not worth while to go through the book. If the opinion of the Seventh Day men is solid, it is impossible to see how our Lord's promise of guidance to the Church has been fulfilled, for on that view He has left ninety-nine hundredths of His disciples in error for eighteen centuries! (The American Sabbath Tract Society.)

....“POVERTY GRASS.” By Lillie Chace Wyman. Excellent short stories descriptive of scenes in humble life fill these pages. Readers of the Atlantic will recognize “Valentine's Chance” at once. The style of the writer is admirable, as she manages the narrative so as to bring the scenes vividly before the thought, and knows how to make the actors talk according to their position. Each tale is in some sense a “study” by itself; factory life being a favorite subject. The story of “A Child of the State” presents the Reform School in what we fear is too truthful an aspect, dark as is the picture drawn of the management. For good reading, to those who like the sketching of real existence about us, we heartily commend this volume. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

....“THE MAKING OF PICTURES.” By Sarah W. Whitman. For a young person starting in art work these twelve short talks will be of assistance. They give useful hints as well as afford a distinct understanding of the various processes by which pictures are obtained. The style is simple and clear, and the reader is not wearied or puzzled by trifling or technical details. We heartily commend the work for its educational value. Intelligent appreciation of pictures is more and more demanded by the progress we are making, and this work of Mrs. Whitman opens the way for the study of larger books on special branches. (The Interstate Publishing Co., Chicago and Boston.)

....“THE GREAT MASTERS OF RUSSIAN LITERATURE IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.” By Ernest Dupuy. Translated by N. H. Dole. This volume appears very seasonably, since there is such a furor about Russian writers just now and a corresponding desire to know their personal history. The author treats of Gogol, Turgenief, and Tolstoi, giving a sketch of their lives and a rapid criticism of their principal works. The translator has done his work well, and has added further particulars in an appendix. To all interested in the subject the book will be very acceptable, but for our part we do not see in these writers the power that is claimed for them, nor do we recognize in their works any substantial or permanent addition to the world's literature. Each author is preceded by a likeness. These are not much to speak of as works of art, but they certainly have individuality and are expressive. (T. Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“A SECRET OF THE SEA,” etc. By Brander Matthews. The name of the author insures the ready acceptance of this new volume from his pleasant pen. He knows how to write a short story, and New York city life usually furnishes him most capital themes. Six of these stories are contained in the book before us, among which “Esther Feverel” is, perhaps, our favorite, though each one has some special attraction. For those who like to take up a book to read in the family circle for the pleasure of the circle around the evening lamp, we are sure no disappointment will result if they choose Brander Matthews' work. It is well done throughout. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“TALMAGE ON RUM,” is the title given to a pamphlet published by the National Temperance Society and Publication House, containing eight sermons and addresses delivered by T. De Witt Talmage, D.D. It is well known that what the pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle opposes he never spares; what he goes against he goes against with all his might, and in this pamphlet he deals out some sturdy blows against the great rum demon and the tobacco habit.

....“EXERCISES FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF THE SENSES FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.” By Horace Grant. American Edition. Edited by Willard Small. This book is for children too young to learn to read and write; it is a text-book for the nursery, and may be made valuable there in affording to the little folks instruction with amusement. Section II., on Paper-cutting, anyone in charge of little children can use with advantage. (Lee & Shepard.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

. ..The special features of Lippincott's Magazine for September are: the conclusion of the fresh and realistic local story, “Taken by Siege;” another of Clinton Scollard's exquisitely modulated and imaginative poems; a short story by “J. S. of Dale;” Brander Matthews' “Random Recollections,” and John Baumann's “Experiences of a Cow-Boy;” and two curious contributions by women, one a devout believer in Keely's “Etheric Force,” and the other drawing from the story of the Fall in Genesis the conclusion of woman's original superiority to man. There is not a dull page in the whole number.

....The New Princeton Review for September is hardly up to its usual high average. The criticisms and reviews are very carefully and satisfactorily done. Mr. W. C. Prime has an entertaining and sadly instructive article on Country Churches in New England, and Mr. Ormond states The Agnostic Dilemma with great clearness and force. But the gem of the issue is the opening paper, by Mr. Stedman, on Genius, in reply to Mr. Howells' curious assertion that genius is simply an extraordinary faculty for taking pains, or “only the mastery that comes to natural aptitude from the hardest study of any art or science.” The writer, with great acuteness and insight, and with a wide range of illustration, utterly upsets this notion, if indeed it needed upsetting. When hard work will make a fine statue out of common limestone, then will pains convert ordinary aptitude into genius. Say what any one will, it is ever true, as Mr. Stedman says, “Not every mind catches fire with its own friction,” and the one that does stands apart in quality from all the rest.

....The Old Testament Student for September is a very valuable number. It contains an exhaustive article on the Divisions of the Decalogue, by the Rev. Dr. Chambers, a very satisfactory discussion of Shekhar and Leaven in Mosaic Offerings by President Hovey, who pulverizes one of the main supports of “the two-wine theory,” a fair statement of the Ethical Value of Pagan Religions, by Dr. J. A. Smith, and a judicious paper by Prof. E. L. Curtis on the Old Testament Prophet. Prof. Beecher's notes on the S. S. Lessons are fresh and pointed. This monthly at a dollar a year is as cheap as it is valuable.

....The second number of Vol. VII. of the American Journal of Philology is at hand. It is filled with philological matter of the best quality, and such as can be gotten from no other source in our country. The editor, Dr. Gildersleeve, furnishes a very valuable paper on The Consecutive Sentence in Greek. The Journal is a great credit to American scholarship and should be liberally supported.

....The Methodist Review for September has an instructive paper on Women and Missions, and a scholarly and suggestive article entitled A Plea for the Study of Literature, a very superficial discussion of Evolution in Religion, and a very well-filled Editorial Miscellany. Dr. Curry makes his department abound with information, while at the same time it is fruitful in suggestion.

....The Forum for September has eleven articles, all of suitable length and on timely topics. That headed Confessions of a Baptist is particularly poor, since the writer, having surrendered all that is peculiar to the body, is unfit to criticize it. The last paper in the number attributes the growth of intemperance to “the life-blighting tyranny of Sabbatarianism.” There may be on record a more absurd statement than this, but if so we have never seen it. This paper is in sharp contrast to the first article, by Prof. Sumner on Industrial War, which is full of good sense.

....The September number of the Magazine of Art opens with a critical notice of Art in Australia, prompted by the pictures from that island-continent in the Colonial Exhibition, which has made a profound impression on English minds this summer. Three examples appear as engravings. Paper No. 2, on Current Art, dealing with this year's exhibition by the Royal Academy, no lover of art can afford to neglect. The four illustrations from the paintings are very pleasing, and besides a full-page engraving of The Sower, from a painting by Hamo Thornycroft appears as a spirited and engaging frontispiece. A full-page engraving of K. Meyer's picture of A Nunnery, Bruges, will be admired. The number has other attractive features.

....Babyhood, always good, seems to grow better every month. A glance through the September number impresses us as the best yet published. Its pungent editorials on pertinent topics, appropriate articles, practical suggestions in regard to just what mothers need to know, render it invaluable to them or to any who have the care of children. The magazine merits fully all the praise it receives.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Harper & Bros.: Mary and Martha, The Mother and the Wife of George Washington. By Benson J. Lossing, LL.D. Illustrated by Fac-similes of Pen-and-Ink Drawings by H. Rosa. 8vo, pp. 348. $2.50; also,

Contributions to the Science of Education. By William H. Payne. 12mo, pp. 358. $1.25; also,

The Iliad of Homer. Books XVI.—XXIV. With Explanatory Notes. By W. S. Tyler, D.D. (Harper's Classical Series.) 12mo, pp. 420. $1.50; also,

Voyages of a Merchant Navigator of the Days that are Past. Compiled from the Journals and Letters of the late Richard J. Cleveland. By H. W. S. Cleveland. With Portrait. 12mo, pp. 245. $1.25; also,

Into Unknown Seas; or, The Cruise of Two Sailor-Boys. By David Ker. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 176. $1.

The Interstate Publishing Company, Chicago and Boston: The Making of Pictures. Twelve Short Talks with Young People. By Sarah W. Whitman. 16mo, pp. 131. 60 cents; also,

Entertainments in Chemistry; Easy Lessons and Directions for Safe Experiments. By Harry W. Tyler, S.B. 16mo, pp. 79. 60 cents; also,

Through a Microscope: Something of the Science together with Many Curious Observations Indoor and Out, and Directions for a Home-Made Microscope. By Samuel Wells, Mary Treat and F. Leroy Sargent. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 126. 60 cents.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Stockton's Stories. First and Second Series. By Frank R. Stockton. 2 vols. 12mo, pp. 201 and 242. $1.25 each; also,

A Secret of the Sea. By Brander Matthews. 12mo, pp. 220. $1.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: A White Heron, and Other Stories. By Sarah Orne Jewett. 16mo, pp. 254. $1.25.

Robert Carter & Bros.: The Life of Christ. By the Rev. William Hanna, D.D., LL.D. Illustrated. 3 vols. 12mo, pp. 360, 344, and 324. $3; also,

Storm Signals: Sermons Preached in Metropolitan Tabernacle, London. By C. H. Spurgeon. 12mo, pp. 422. $1; also,

My Pearl. By Alida W. Graves. 12mo, pp. 344. $1.25.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.: Meditations of a Parish Priest. Thoughts. By Joseph Roux. Introduction by Paul Mariéton. Translated from Third French Edition by Isabel F. Hapgood. 12mo, pp. 213. $1.25; also, St. John's Eve, and Other Stories. By Nikolai Vasilievitch Gogol. Translated from the Russian by Isabel F. Hapgood. 12mo, pp. 380. $1.25.

F. H. Revell, Chicago: Biblical Theology of the Old Testament Based on Oehler. By Revere Franklin Weidner. (Theological Encyclopædia and Methodology.) 12mo, pp. 224. Cloth, $1.25.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Hon. Horatio Seymour, LL.D., Ex-Governor of the State of New York, Late President of the Oneida Historical Society. By Isaac S. Hartley, D.D., Second Vice-President O. H. S. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 80.

Francis: A Socialistic Romance, Being for the Most Part an Idyll of England and Summer. By M. Dal Vero. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 93.) 16mo, pp. 154. 25 cents; also, Ottilie: An Eighteenth Century Idyl. By Vernon. The Prince of the 100 Soups. Edited by Vernon Lee. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 542.) 4to, pp. 53. 20 cents.

As It Was Written. A Jewish Musician's Story. By Sidney Luska. (Cassell's Rainbow Series.) 16mo, pp. 253. 25 cents.

Checkmated, and Other Stories. (Cassell's “Select” Library of Entertaining Fiction.) 16mo, pp. 142. 15 cents.

The Diary of Samuel Pepys, 1660-1661. (No. 33, Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

September.—New Englander and Yale Review, The Church Review The Expositor.

October.—The Quiver.

Colgate & Co's CASHMERE BOUQUET PERFUME

For the Handkerchief

THIS EXQUISITE PERFUME CLINGS WITH REMARKABLE TENACITY TO ALL WOVEN FABRICS

NEW VOLUMES IN

Cassell's "Rainbow" Series.

As It Was Written.

A Jewish Musician's Story. By SIDNEY LUSKA. 12mo, paper. Price, 25 cents. Also in 16mo, cloth extra. Price, $1.00.

"One of the most powerful novels of the year."—St. Louis Republican.

"A capital novel....It cannot fail to impress itself as an able and moving dramatic effort."—New York Times.

"We have seen no book of late years to which the term absorbing in interest could more appropriately be applied."—Boston Herald.

NEW EDITION.—NOW READY.

35,000 KING SOLOMON'S MINES.

KING SOLOMON'S MINES 35,000

King Solomon's Mines.

A Thrilling Story founded on an African Legend. By H. RIDER HAGGARD. 1 vol., 12mo. Price, 25 cents. Also in cloth extra. Price, $1.50.

The London Saturday Review says of "King Solomon's Mines:"—"To tell the truth, we would give many novels, say eight hundred (that is about the yearly harvest), for such a book as 'King Solomon's Mines.'"

Complete Catalogue sent free.

Cassell & Company, Limited,

739 and 741 Broadway, New York.

Issued September 1st.

A NEW EDITION OF GOSPEL HYMNS

CONSOLIDATED.

With Words and Music.

☞ By the use of smaller type, the 426 Songs have been condensed into 304 pages, but the same order is preserved as in the original issue.

40 Cents in Tinted Paper Covers.

45 Cents in Boards.

50 Cents in Limp Cloth.

Add 5 cents each if ordered by mail.

The price of this favorite work is now so low that it can be adopted everywhere.

Former editions still published at old prices.

BIGLOW & MAIN, NEW YORK. | The John Church Co. CINCINNATI, O.

"OUR BABY'S First and Second Year."

By MARION HARLAND,

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,

REED & CARNRICK,

MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

Useful for Everybody.

MANY MISTAKES MENDED

IN READING, WRITING and SPEAKING.

12mo. 320 pages. $1 by mail.

N. TIBBALS & SONS, New York

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF

STEPPING HEAVENWARD.

BY MRS. E. PRENTISS.

12mo, 432 Pages. Cloth, $1. By mail, $1.10

Originally published in 1869, this book at once attracted wide attention. It has been translated into the French, German, Norwegian and Swedish Languages. More than have been sold in the United States, while the sales in England and the Colonies have been very large, no less than five English publishers having reprinted it. In this country there is still a large, constant demand for it. The present edition, complete in every respect, is issued in response to many inquiries for a cheaper edition.

75,000 COPIES

ALSO A NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF

The Life and Letters of Mrs. Prentiss

Crown 8vo, 575 pages, with steel portrait and five illustrations. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.65.

The demand for a cheaper edition of this remarkable Memoir, of which have already been sold in the United States and Great Britain, has led to the present issue. Complete in every respect.

20,000 COPIES

The two books will be sent by mail on the receipt of $2.50, or singly at the above-named price.

ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & COMPANY,

38 West Twenty-third St., New York.

Local Agents wanted to sell these and other popular books. For terms and territory apply to the publishers.

RECENT ISSUES BY THE Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NEW EDITION OF

WHAT IS PRESBYTERIAN LAW?

(REVISED AND ENLARGED.)

Containing the Decisions of the General Assembly to 1885, inclusive.

By Rev. J. ASPINWALL HODGE, D.D.

12mo. Price, $1.75.

AMONG THE TREES AT ELMRIDGE

A sprightly book for boys and girls, about our forest and fruit trees.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.

CHERIE'S ANSWERED PRAYER.

Carries the reader to a village in France, and opening to him a form of life new and instructive.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

WALTER HARMSEN.

A thrilling story of Reformation days in the Netherlands.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,

1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

The Latest Work on Agriculture is "MODERN HIGH FARMING," by FRANCIS WYATT, Ph. D. Published by C. E. BARTHOLOMEW, 22 College Place, New York City. Price One Dollar, Postage Free. Write for Descriptive Table of Contents.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

BARNES' NATIONAL INK.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s NEW BOOKS.

A White Heron, and Other Stories

By Sarah Orne Jewett, author of "A Country Doctor," "Deephaven," etc. 18mo, gilt top, $1.25.

CONTENTS: A White Heron; The Gray Man; Farmer Finch; Marsh Rosemary; The Dulham Ladies; A Business Man; Mary and Martha; The News from Petersham; The Two Browns.

Poverty Grass.

Short Stories by Lillie Chace Wyman. $1.25.

CONTENTS: Hester's Dower: Saint or Sinner; Luke Gardiner's Love; The Child of the State: "A Stranger, yet at Home;" And Joe; Bridget's Story; Valentine's Chance.

Memoirs and Letters of Dolly Madison.

1 vol., 16mo, $1.25.

A delightful book on one of the charming historic women of America.

Riverside Pocket Series.

This series will include ten books which have already won no small degree of popular favor. They will be well printed and bound in cloth, at Fifty Cents each. The first number is—

DEEPHAVEN. By Sarah Orne Jewett, author of "A Country Doctor," etc. Cloth, 50 cents.

 For sale by all booksellers. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers,

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston,

11 EAST 17TH ST., NEW YORK.

CLASSIC COLLECTIONS OF PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

The following elegant and correct editions of celebrated musical works are in constant demand by good players.

BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS, LEBERT and VON BULOW EDITION. In paper, 2 vols. each,	$3.00
The same in Cloth, embossed, 2 vols. each,	$6.00
CHOPIN'S MAZURKAS. In paper,	$1.00
CHOPIN'S NOCTURNES. Cloth, $1.50, paper,	60 cts.
CHOPIN'S WALTZES. Cloth, $1.25, paper,	50 cts.
SCHUMANN'S ALBUM, Op. 68 and 15. paper,	$1.00
SONATINEN ALBUM, Fingered by Kohler. Cloth, $1.50, paper,	75 cts.
CLEMENTI'S SONATINAS. Op. 36, 37 & 38. paper,	50 cts.
KOHLER'S KINDER (Childrens') ALBUM. paper,	75 cts.
MENDELSSOHN'S SONGS without words. Cloth, $1.50, Paper,	$1.00

The above books, with the exception of Beethoven's Sonatas, are reprints of Peters' celebrated editions of the same works, and are extra good and correct editions, and faithful copies of the originals.

Piano Classics, recently published, is a book filled with unusually good piano pieces of medium difficulty, by modern composers.

Price, Cloth, $1.50, Boards, $1 00.

Any Book Mailed for the Retail Price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

FOR CHOIRS

A Low Priced Collection of Music.

IDEAL ANTHEMS

BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.

The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.

"IDEAL ANTHEMS" contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.

Price, 35 cents each by mail, postpaid; $3.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid.

☞SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O. And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,

The Care and Feeding of Infants

Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART.

 By John B. Gough. ***

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞Distance no hindrance a. we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

The Labor Movement in America.

By Prof. RICHARD T. ELY. 12mo, $1.50.

This book is the result of several years' work on the part of Professor Ely, who is an acknowledged authority, both in Europe and America, on economic and social topics. It is the most complete historical sketch yet published of the origin and growth both of socialism and of labor organizations. No pains have been spared to secure accuracy. Professor Ely has collected for years books, pamphlets, labor newspapers, constitutions of trades-unions, and like material, with this in view; and, during the preparation of this book, he has traveled several thousand miles, visiting communistic settlements and leading industrial centres, and forming the acquaintances of labor leaders. His picture of the present condition of the labor movement may be relied upon as taken from life.

Stories from Life.

By SARAH K. BOLTON, author of "Poor Boys who Became Famous," "Girls who Became Famous," etc. 12mo, $1.25.

A collection of Mrs. Bolton's bright and entertaining short stories, which inculcate good moral lessons, and hit off many of the follies and shams of the present day.

In Perils Oft.

By W. H. DAVENPORT ADAMS. 12mo, fully illustrated, $1.50.

A book of daring adventures and heroic deeds by soldiers, sailors, travelers, and men of renown, in various parts of the world; being incidents in the lives of such men as Sir Sidney Smith, Earl of Dundonald, Arminius Vámbéry, Joseph Wolff, Lieutenant Schwatka, Sir Samuel Baker, W. G. Palgrave, Professor Palmer, General Gordon, and others.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,

13 ASTOR PLACE, NEW YORK.

Philadelphia Third Reformed Church.

This historic church, formed by the Rev. Dr. Geo. W. Bethune, having passed through fires and having been sustained in its trials by the grace of God and by the unanimous vote of the Particular Synod of New Brunswick, and also by the General Synod, at its last session, now seeks a pastor to build again her broken walls. Any minister who thinks he can do more good in a great city like Philadelphia, can obtain all information relative to the Third Church by addressing GEORGE F. GORDON, 857 North Broad street, Philadelphia, Pa.

FOR SALE.

A splendid 18-stop church organ, with two banks of keys and pedals. A great bargain. ALSO, several smaller organs. Send for a description to REUBEN NICHOLS, Builder. Warerooms, 32 and 33 Richmond St., Philadelphia Pa

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa FOR OIL.

Seethis "NOTES ON DECORATIVE ART," free for postage. Covering information on Tapestry, Lustra, Kensington, Oil and Mineral Painting. Regular lessons by mail. Painted and chromo designs to rent. Orders executed.

42 W. 23d St., H. A. JOHNSON, New York.

Church Decoration.

Church Furnishing.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

J. & R. LAMB,

59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,

SING SING, N. Y

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Incompatibility.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE fortitude with which we bear the misfortunes of others finds its correlative in that peculiar quality of human nature which makes it interesting, if not agreeable, to hear of the disasters which have befallen our neighbors. Among the numerous woes to which flesh is heir, that of incompatibility, as applying to people who by ties of blood or through social relationship must dwell together, is by no means the lightest. The plaint goes back to the morning of the world. "And Rebekah said to Isaac, I am weary of my life because of the daughters of Heth; if Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth, such as these which are of the daughters of the land, what good shall my life do me?"

Who has not sympathized with the poor, worn mother, querulously crying out against the fate which had brought the alien-hearted women into her tents, imperiously demanding that her darling should be mated with some one more congenial to her nature, more satisfactory to her traditions? That we find the same throb beating through all literature, from Homer to Shakespeare, inspiring all mythologies, and uttering itself in the story and song of the day, proves that though one generation passeth away and another generation cometh, the characteristics of the race do not materially alter. When everything is said and done, it is, after all, happiness that we cry for, simple household happiness; a bundle in which are bound peace at the fireside, merry talk at the table, quiet communion in the chamber, the fond and faithful resting of one soul upon another, the development of gifts and graces, the unselfish courtesies and tender demonstrations which are as cordial to the fainting and bread to the famishing on the journey of life. The whole circle of benedictions inherent in the name of home has to do with compatibility or its reverse. Think of poor little Aurora Leigh, carried a motherless baby from her Italian home to the English aunt standing at the door to welcome her brother's legacy,

> "Straight and calm,
> Her somewhat narrow forehead braided tight,
> As if for taming accidental thoughts
> From possible pulses; brown hair pricked with gray
> By frigid use of life."

Think of Mr. Tulliver finding in his "little gell" the homely comfort and wholesome joy which were denied him in the companionship of his amiable but foolish wife. Think of the univocal condemnation of the step mother in most of the books and on many of the lips of otherwise candid and thoughtful people. The reason being, doubtless, that the danger of incompatibility is greater in this than in any other enforced contiguity of which we have knowledge. Think of Colonel Newcome and the Campaigner, of Little Dorrit and Mrs. General; nay, cast your eyes nearer home and see, among your friends and kindred, the petty annoyances, the absurd situations, the endless wear and tear and friction which are the product of this one cause, and then, if you are honest and impartial, cease to join the superficial crowd who speak as though incompatibility were a mere intangible mist of morbid sentiment or the precipitate of wounded vanity.

To live in the same house day by day, year by year, with persons who have "ways," like the ill-tempered sister in "Mistress and Maid," or who nag and criticize and interfere, like the relatives of Katy's husband in "Stepping Heavenward," is more than a mere grievance, it is tribulation. Whether it winnow your chaff from your wheat by its salutary discipline, or simply bruises your wheat, leaving nothing but chaff as a residuum, must depend on the manner in which you receive and accept the process. Nothing is more certain than that the adversity which ennobles our character, rendering it lovelier, purer, and sweeter, outworks in another to acerbity and harshness. The one, saying tacitly, "Shall we receive good at the hand of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil also?" discovers an opportunity for service and a Divine blessing in the companionship which jars upon the nerves, irritates the temper, and tries the soul. The other, striving fractiously against bit and rein, loses strength in the never-ceasing struggle and develops a state of mind allied to demoniac possession.

So much being said, when the incompatibility of your associates and yourself is acknowledged, it remains to confess that martyrdom is not always saintly, nor even patient suffering invariably well-pleasing to nor yet appointed of the Lord.

In the case of husband and wife, the right and Christian thing is to bear and forbear, ignoring points of difference, cultivating harmony, and determining to dwell in mutual respect and tranquility. But in many homes the disturbing element is introduced by a person who has no natural right in that particular place; by some bit of human driftwood thrown on that special shore, and finding comfortable lodgment, to the trouble and loss of those who are the legitimate occupants.

Disagreeable maiden aunts or crusty bachelor uncles, who through mistaken pity for their loneliness in life are asked to become parts of a family in which their apparent mission is to set everybody at variance, would be properly left to isolation, and would themselves be happier in most instances, if independent. For walking up and down another's stairs is heart aching work at its best, and much of the ill-temper in this world is only dissatisfaction and misery in a state of effervescence. Let us be charitable as we may, but let us be careful how we take under our roofs, as permanent inmates, those who are for any reason likely to be incompatible with those who have a prior date of tenancy.

And instead of eating one's soul out in nervous anguish, beating against the bars of home as if it were a cage instead of a nest, it would often be the truer wisdom and the deeper kindness to change wholly the conditions which are so constantly exasperating.

Suffering per se is not honorable. It is rather the opposite, in that it bears witness always to disease or unripeness; in that it is itself incompatible with perfection of peace, or completeness of suitable environment.

A hair shirt is no whit more dignified than a velvet gown. There is no halo round the brow which assumes the aureole of pain to no possible benefit of self or others. It is when the crown of thorns is bound upon One who royally endures that He may see of the travail of His soul, and be satisfied that the eyes of all the world are drawn to the suffering Redeemer. Far different the Cross our Master bore in meekness from the crosses we carry with arrogant complacency. Needless suffering of soul or body is pagan, though it may be stoical. The fire which hallows must be of heavenly kindling, and it never touches one of us in vain.

Salutations.

LET us glance at some of the foreign changes rung upon the "How are you?" of our common English speech. It is astonishing how this commonplace salutation differs among various peoples. To begin with, most of us say "How de do?" and then think we have said "How do you do?" Perhaps "How are you?" accenting the first word instead of the second, would be more elegant and sensible. "Hope I see you well," is the salutation of some people; then we generally shake hands, and women almost as invariably kiss each other. Few races, apart from the Anglo-Saxon, possess the hand shaking trait in so marked a degree. Every one will recall the story of the ceremonious Celestials, who, on meeting an acquaintance, clasp their own hands, palms together, and gravely move them up and down.

The old Greeks hoped their friends might "be of good cheer," while the Romans wished that those they met might find "health and safety." There were good reasons for each of these salutations. The average Greek was always prone to gayety, and the attainment of happiness was his ideal. So we might interpret his "Be of good cheer" to mean, "Be happy while you may"—make the most of the present. But the more austere Roman, environed by the cares of state and of a world empire, threatened by foes without and foes within, chose aptly enough a more significant greeting. "Health" was his constant desire, because his beloved Rome was often enveloped in miasmatic fogs. "Safety" was, next to health, his first desire, because in the turmoil of the time all alike were in peril—high and low, rich and poor, saint and sage.

The volatile Frenchman is not ashamed to kiss as he asks, "How do you carry yourself?" and the slow-moving Germans hug each other bear fashion as they exclaim, "How do you find yourself?" The graceful Italian, child of sunny skies, indulges in both hand-clasp and kiss after he has flung his fingers high in air and cried, "How do you stand?" The Hollander's "How farest thou?" is accompanied by a hearty slap on the shoulder; but when two Swedes fall gracefully into each other's arms and gaze over each other's shoulders, they exclaim, "How can you?"

In China, if travellers' tales are trustworthy, "Good-morning" grows comic. It means there, we are told, "Have you eaten and enjoyed your rice? and is you stomach working well?" Imagine putting such an inquiry to an American or an Englishman! Yet the Chinaman evinces much wisdom in his matutinal salutation. A good appetite for the initial meal of the day, be it composed of bread and butter or of rice, means, as a rule, a good day, and bringing in its train a good night, pleasant sleep, and an invigorated mind and body for the morning again. "A person whose digestive organs are working well is a man whose temper is apt to be equable, and who will, therefore, generally speaking, be happy and sunny minded." It would almost seem, therefore, as though John Chinaman's "Good-morning" is among the wisest we have named.

The Polander, whose history is one of sadness, inquires in a subdued tone, "Art thou gay?" the dignified Turk crosses his arms, bows low, and says, slowly and distinctly, "I will request of Allah that thy prosperity be increased." The undemonstrative Friend gazes calmly at his approaching acquaintance, and without nod or smile remarks, "How is thee?"

Our immediate English ancestors said, "Save you, sir," or "madam," or "God save you," and two centuries ago men and women both "kissed for courtesy," as it was termed. But English-speaking males have long considered such salutations between persons of their own sex to be absurd and effeminate. Harper's Bazar.

A Happy Thought.

WE cull this from Good Housekeeping:

"It is a grave mistake which so many housemothers make to crowd Saturday so full of extra work—cleaning and baking, and mending and making—until midnight commands the needle to fall from the weary fingers. One of the sweetest and saintliest of the mothers of the generation now growing old, used always to call Saturday 'The Preparation Day,' borrowing the old Jewish designation of the day before the Sabbath. Morning was given to the careful preparation of house and food and apparel for the holy morrow; afternoon to the preparation of herself. Not religious preparation—her soul was always ready for spiritual joy—but she would not have a tired body or a jaded mind to drag upon the upsoaring spirit. The hours was spent in reading, in still idleness, in looking over and cutting slips from accumulated newspapers, in a walk, a drive, above all in companionship with the children.

"Many a rainy afternoon was spent in repeating to them the poems with which her richly endowed mind was stored—cantos of Scott, sonnets of Shakespeare and Milton, long poems of Goldsmith and Cowper and Dryden, ballads of Burns and Motherwell, the earlier poems of Longfellow and Tennyson, the Hebrew melodies of Bynn, the sacred songs of Keble, or Newton, or Montgomery. Many a winter afternoon was spent in pasting pictures into the great scrap-book, which was one of the institutions of the family, in learning the intricacies of the Chinese puzzle, or in solving the enigmas or charades of Merry's Museum, the one children's magazine of those days. Blessed Saturday half-holiday! Day of sweet and joyful preparation! Why cannot mothers and mistresses take the initiative in the new reform, and inaugurate such a half-holiday in all the households in the land?"

How to Judge Canned Goods.

A HINT now about tinned goods, meat especially. Note, when about to purchase, the condition of the tin; if bulged outwards, don't have it, even as a gift! We will explain the process of canning, to give weight to our warning.

The meat is packed in tins while raw, then sealed, and cooked in an outer vessel of boiling water, with sometimes the addition of a chemical to raise the temperature. When cooked, the can is pierced, and, as soon as the air and steam have been expelled, it is soldered. Experts know when it is ready for soldering; a moment too soon, and the mischief is done, because if air is left in, the tin bulges, and the meat will not be good. On the contrary, if the tin has sunk, it is an infallible sign of goodness; it proves a vacuum, which is natural, as the meat shrinks when no air is left in the tin.

Some may say, what matter if air be left in the tin? Simply this: nitrogen, an element of air, imparts to bodies with which it comes in contact a tendency to change and decay.

Often, on opening a tin of preserved goods, people are heard to say "the air is escaping," instead of which, the slight hissing sound is the result of the air rushing in, another proof that there was a vacuum. Well, we go so far as to say that, assuming the outward sign of goodness above referred to; a label bearing the name of a good exporter or importer, and also a reliable vendor of the article, whether meat, fish, milk, soup, or vegetable, the chances are a million to one against any being injured, much less poisoned, by tinned goods.

Another caution, though: always look out for any little globules of solder that sometimes find their way inside the tin; and take care, specially in the case of salmon and lobster, to empty the contents, as soon as opened, into an earthenware vessel This is necessary for everything except milk.—Cassell's Family Magazine for September.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

Only Half an Hour.

AT a quiet summer resort a few years ago some children were gathered together one Sunday morning, having a "home Sunday-school." The oldest one was a girl of sixteen, who actually would neither wear very long dresses nor put up her hair, although all the children insisted that she was a "young lady." The nearest church was five miles distant, and the little ones, not knowing of anything they could do which their mammas would consider right for Sunday, had gone to Miss Bessie and asked her to amuse them until their mothers would have returned from church. So she had taken them out to the summer-house not far from the hotel, and they were all having a delightful time.

Near the hotel were three cottages, miserable, dirty ones, which many of the servants of the hotel called their "homes." One of these was situated a short distance back from the summer-house, where the little people were having their Sunday-school. At the first sound of singing a woman walked noiselessly out and hid under the shadow of one of the large overhanging rocks. She was one of the laundresses, and as she had three children to support, her life had been one of hard, hard work, with little ease or even comfort.

After singing "Jesus loves me, this I know," Bessie asked each one of the children to recite a verse. When all had done so, one of the girls exclaimed: "But, Miss Bessie, you haven't said a verse. Don't you know any?"

The class all laughed at this, but Bessie, smiling, too, replied: "Yes, Helen, I do know some, and you may hear me recite my verse. Of course, I ought to do what I ask of you. 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'"

"Very nicely recited," said Helen, in a motherly tone, "but I think that the teacher ought to say two verses."

Bessie replied, "All right, little monitor, I'm willing. 'Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.' Is that enough?"

"Yes," solemnly answered Helen, "now can we sing 'Shall we gather at the river?'"

After the children's voices had joined in the hymn, the young people went home. But the seed had been sown in the heart of the poor, weary woman who had been listening, and when she went back into her shabby house she knelt by the side of her bed and said: "Oh, Lord Jesus, Thou knowest that I am 'heavy laden' and that I want rest. Please give it to me. I take Thee at Thy word; Thou wilt not 'cast me out.'"

The next day Bessie was unexpectedly obliged to leave, and she never knew what good her half-hour's teaching of the little ones had done. But it was one of the small things which so often, especially when done "in His name," accomplish more than work which seems more important. E. M. C.

Ruben's Faith.

OUR Mexican minister was telling me this evening about his little boy Rubén (Reuben). Once the father was very poor—so poor that the children had no clothes, and he had no money with which to buy them even the few garments that were necessary. Poor little Rubén was very much distressed, and said to his father: "Papacito, what shall I do for clothes?" "My little son," said his papa, "go and ask God to give you a coat, and to give your brother and sister clothes." A little while afterward the father was told that Rubén was alone in the church; so he went very quietly and looked in, and there he was kneeling, his little hands clasped and his face upturned, and praying: "Oh, dear God, give me some clothes, and my little sister and brother too; hear me and help me, dear God, for Jesus' sake;" and the poor little voice choked with tears. That afternoon, to the wonder and grateful joy of that family, a present was sent these three little ones of enough money to buy each one a garment.

This little boy is only about seven years old, and about two years ago he was suffering a great deal with an inflamed face. One night his father, hearing a noise from the children's corner, went quietly over, and there was Rubén kneeling and praying, "Oh, dear God, help me, and make me better of this dreadful pain; take it away and make me well." The tears were rolling over his cheeks, and he was in great trouble, but asking with all faith for help. After he got up and went back to bed, his father went to him and gave him some medicine which soothed the pain, and in the morning he said to him: "Papacito, the dear God came to me and cured me last night; I asked Him, and He came." I wish I could give you this in the sweet Spanish words, for it seems to me that the speech of the little children is indescribably sweet in this musical language; but you will see the wonderfully strong faith of this little lad, which was the fact which impressed me most forcibly. Many of the little Mexican children have this beautiful faith and trust in God, and it is something very touching. Remember little Rubén, and pray that he may grow up a good, earnest, faithful Christian.—Mary E. Cochrane, in Children's Work for Children.

The Boat-Dwellers of Japan.

YOUNG people who live in London or New York may fancy that our cities are crowded, and that many families must live without very much air to breath or space for the boys and girls to play in. What would they say to the boat-dwellers of Japan? In that crowded country hundreds of families spend their lives and bring up their children upon the water, and know nothing of the land, except as they make an occasional visit to it when obliged to purchase supplies or attend to some unusual business.

In every bay along the coast are found hundreds, if not thousands, of small craft called "junks." These are small, flat bottomed boats, and are owned and inhabited by a man and his family, just as houses are in other parts of the world. Their business is the transportation of goods and merchandise of all kinds, and their navigation is a sort of family affair. One traveller says:

"I have seen a boat twenty feet long most adroitly managed by three children all under seven years of age. I am told that, notwithstanding their aptness at swimming, many boatmen get drowned, for no boat ever goes to another's aid, nor will any boatman save another from drowning, because, as he says, it is all fate, and he who interferes with fate will be severely punished in some way."

Among these wonderful aquatic families children of three years old will sometimes swim like little fish, and if one is backward in learning, he will be thrown overboard, and teased and tormented until he is obliged to learn the art in self-defence.

Ah! it is in reading and learning about the people of other lands that we find how much we have to love and be thankful for in the broad free life of our own. But even here there are children who would be the better for such frequent baths, and perhaps you would have great difficulty in persuading the little Japs that life in the hot and crowded streets of our great cities was to be preferred to that of the junk-men on the rivers and harbors of their own country.—Harper's Young People.

Satan's Four Servants.

SATAN has a great many servants, and they are all busy and active ones. They ride in the railway trains, and sail on the steamboats, they swarm along the highways of the country and the thoroughfares of the city, they do business in the busy marts; they are everywhere and in all places. Some are so vile looking that one instinctively turns from them in disgust; but some are so sociable, insinuating and plausible, that they almost deceive at times the very elect. Among the latter are to be found the devil's four chief servants. Here are their names:

"There's no danger." That is one.

"Only this once." That is another.

"Everybody does so." This is the third.

"By-and-by." This is the fourth.

When tempted from the path of strict rectitude and "There is no danger" urges you on, say, "Get thee behind me, Satan!"

When tempted to give Sunday up to pleasure, or to labor, and "Only this once" or "Everybody does so" whispers at your elbow, do not listen for a moment to the dangerous counsel.

All four are cheats and liars. They mean to deceive and cheat you out of heaven. "Behold," says God, "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." He has no promise for "By-and-by." —Selected.

A Bird's Nest.

WHAT do I see?
An empty nest in the apple tree,
Where the mother-robin is calling and crying
To her mate on the bough above replying,
Wild for the touch of a downy breast
In the vacant nest!

How can it be?
This lonely nest in the apple tree,
Yesterday full of a chirp and flutter,
Such notes as a callow throat can utter;
Four little fledglings, closely pressed
In the happy nest!

Ah, woe is me
For the ruined nest in the apple tree!
Could the little robber have known the sorrow
Left to linger for many a morrow,
Would he have come on the cruel quest
That spoiled the nest?

—Youth's Companion.

A Diamond Will Burn.

IN the year 1694 it was discovered by actual experiment at Florence, that a diamond would burn. Cosmo III. had one fixed in the focus of a burning-glass, and after some exposure to the rays of the sun, it cracked, coruscated, and finally disappeared like a ghost, leaving no trace behind. Another potentate, the Emperor Francis I., tried a number of valuable diamonds in the heat of a smelting furnace, and may have felt some gratification in finding they had disappeared. This was in 1750, and about twenty years later a magnificent diamond was burned in France. A jeweller named Le Blanc denied the possibility of burning diamonds, and suspected some unfair play on the part of Macquer, the chemist who conducted the operation. He had often, he asserted, exposed diamonds to great heat, with the sole result of increasing their brilliancy. Then another jeweller, Maillard by name, who seems to have had a suspicion of the scientific truth, put three diamonds into an earthen bowl pipe packed in powdered charcoal, and exposed them without injury to intense heat. Lavosier, who was present, proved in 1776 that by shutting out the air the diamond was preserved in a furnace, but that the admission of oxygen, with which the carbon combines, allows the diamond to burn like a piece of coal.—Evening Post.

Little Heads Together.

WHAT IS IT?

There is a verb which means to spatter,
Behead it, but it does not matter—
A letter lost is still not missed;
The word is spelled quite as you list.
Behead again and there remains
What is often over a pair of reins.
Behead once more—a tree is seen—
Long may it boast its wealth of green!
Behead again—a sound is heard;
It means be quiet, yet is no word. LEO.

SQUARE WORD.

1. The muse who presided over history. 2. The moon. 3. Public places. 4. A kiln to dry hops. "ITTALIE."

PI.

I vahe a uoshe ni chiwh ot vlle,
Lpaesnat, nda airf, dan dogo,
Sit raheth si wncrdeo thiw rmawht nda glith,
Tis raodb hwit ndaittes dfoo.
Dna I, nwhe stied htwi reac or nobtd,
Og ni dan htus ym rrssoow tou.

Answers to Puzzles of August 25th.

Acrostic.—
A- bari -M
A- bedneg -O
R- amese -S
O- liv -E
N-icodemu-S

Beheadings.—1. S-hut. 2. S-hame. 3. G-out. 4. L-east. 5. T-rice. 6. S-word. 7. G-loom.

Diamond.—
D
A R T
D R E A M
T A R
M

Correct answers from "Prague" and Nellie Lefferts.

Puzzles and answers may be sent to Cousin LOIS, at this office.

A MEMORIAL SERVICE.—Next Sunday, September 19th, from half past three to half past four in the afternoon, a service in memory of the late Jerry McAuley will be held at the McAuley Cremorne Mission, No. 104 West Thirty-second street, near Sixth avenue. J. Noble Stearns, Esq., will preside, and brief addresses may be expected from leading ministers and laymen.

CELESTIAL AFFAIRS.—There is nothing about the position of the planets to warrant the assertion that it is such as to create storms and other terrestrial disturbances. Five years or so ago there was a remarkable alignment of the planets, to which we called attention at the time. Since then the planets have been drawing away from each other.

The earthquake was followed by rapid magnetic variations, and it is inferred that a magnetic storm had a part in causing the tremor of the earth. Not at all. The exhibition of magnetic waves was simply the friction and retardation and abrupt stop of extended motion, and necessarily motion was transformed into heat, electricity and magnetism, as it constantly is.

Saturn is becoming again a most interesting object, although not as bright as last year. The orb rises now about half past twelve in the evening, and will rise between three and four minutes earlier every succeeding evening.

Jupiter is concealed in the rays of the sun. Mars is nearly in the same condition. Venus is not far from the sun.

Autumn begins at about 10 o'clock of the evening of the 22d.

Hints for Farmers.

(Selected from the Cultivator and Country Gentleman of September 9th.)

HUNGARIAN GRASS FOR HORSES.

EDS. COUNTRY GENTLEMEM: Is the belief that this grass is injurious to horses founded upon fact, and if so, what is the explanation? Is Hungarian grass desirable for feeding sheep with? Cows appear to thrive upon it.

W. G. D.

(Answer by Prof. E. W. Stewart.)

This belief of the injurious effect of feeding Hungarian grass to horses has the basis of a few cases where this grass has been fed to horses after maturing its seed. The seed is too fine to be masticated or digested, and if in such cases it were fed in considerable quantity, it would be likely to produce indigestion and other serious diseases in the horse. And if this grass is cut in full blossom, the hay may be so dusty as to be injurious to horses with weak lungs. For hay, it should be cut just before blossom, when it will be found a very nutritious profitable hay for horses. The larger sorts of millet are of the same general character, and if the seed of golden millet is allowed to mature, the seed should be threshed and ground into meal, when horses will do well upon this millet meal fed upon cut millet straw.

Hungarian grass cut early makes good sheep hay, but although the sheep can digest more of the small seed, when allowed to ripen, yet the seed is not profitable to feed sheep in the straw, because they cannot digest it all, and this is wasted, if nothing worse, when fed to sheep.

It is much more profitable to feed any stock when cut before blossom and cured into very sweet nutritious hay. It then contains its full amount of nutriment, which it would have in stalk and grain, were it allowed to ripen. We have fed matured Hungarian to cows in milk. They eat with avidity at first, but on examining the droppings, the seed is found principally to have passed undigested, and like ripe, second crop clover, the seed in the droppings will grow vigorously. All such fine seeds are wasted as food when fed unground.

Ground Hungarian seed is said to have an injurious effect upon pigs when fed alone, but if mixed with other feed is quite harmless. If this seed be ground to feed to horses, it should always be mixed with moistened cut hay or Hungarian hay. But this crop has its greatest feeding value when cut green and cured into hay.

EXPERIMENTS IN GRAFTING.

EDS. COUNTRY GENTLEMAN: Largely for the purpose of interesting students, we carry on each year a varied series of experiments. Not infrequently these experiments are the most interesting features of our gardens to visitors. From a small plat of grafting practices made last spring, I select these notes:

Prunus pumila, the wild sand cherry, is doing well root-grafted upon peach; upon stocks of choke cherry (Prunus virginiana), the wild plum (P. americana) and common cherry scions did not start.

Prunus pissardi, the new purple-leaved plum, is growing remarkably well upon Prunus americana stocks. The foliage is much darker upon these wild plum stocks than upon common plum stocks. We have a number of trees of this remarkable plum, and the foliage has maintained its rich purple during an excessive drouth. Purple beech has faded. If this plum were hardy here, it would be a great acquisition. With us it has appeared to take better upon the wild plum than upon the cultivated one.

Prunus maritima, the dwarf seaside plum, is doing well on stocks of the wild plum (P. americana.)

Prunus simoni, from China, is thrifty on the wild choke cherry (P. virginiana); it is also growing on peach. On common cherry it did not take. Scions of one and two-year-old wood were used. Both sorts grew.

Prunus virginiana, choke cherry, failed to grow on both peach and common cherry.

Prunus serotina, the wild black cherry, failed to grow on cherry.

Chickasaws upon choke cherry failed to grow.

A Pond's Seedling plum started upon the wild black cherry, but the stock died.

Pond's Seedling and others are doing well on Prunus americana stocks. Scions of Pond's Seedling have grown to exceed the stock in diameter. One has already grown five feet high.

Apples upon the common wild choke berry or "nanny berry" (Pyrus arbutifolia) are growing nicely, though slowly.

Birket pears are starting off nicely on this same choke berry.

Two-thirds of the pears crown-grafted and root-grafted on wild thorns failed to grow.

Most pears start well on apple roots.

A number of Cornus florida scions were inserted upon Cornus paniculata stocks. The scions remained fresh, and appeared to be upon the point of starting until July, when they all died.

Apple roots upon which buds had started were inserted in limbs of an apple tree. They are making a good though slender growth.

The most remarkable grower of all our grafts is the Marianna plum. Scions set last spring three feet high on Prunus americana stocks have made a bushy and stocky head three feet, and more in diameter. This plum is a remarkably clean and vigorous plant. Upon a very exposed slope it endured the severe weather of last winter without the slightest injury. We have not yet fruited it.

It is probable that many of the grafts which now promise well will not endure long. L. H. BAILEY, JR.

MICHIGAN AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Sept. 14th.

THE Associated Banks of this city and vicinity, belonging to the Clearing House here, reduced loans last week $1,474,800, gained in specie $2,907,100, lost in legal tenders $2,248,300 and in deposits $243,400. The surplus of reserve was increased $713,650, making it $7,634,075. The average rate on call loans was 5 1–2 per cent, a large number of transactions being at 6 per cent. Commercial paper was taken at 5 1–2 to 6 per cent. The rate on demand loans yesterday was 5 to 6.

Imports of merchandise last week at this port were valued at $8,384,804, a little below the corresponding week of last year, and the exports at $6,365,586, about $100,000 below those of the same week of 1885. The import of specie during the week was, of gold $1,311,983, of silver $53,914; the export of gold $16,804, of silver $158,999. Foreign exchange sold yesterday at $4.82 for 60-day bills and $4.85 for demand. The export of breadstuffs during August the Bureau of Statistics reports amounted to $15,116,881 against $7,709,950 in August of last year: of cotton to $3,186,650 against $3,066,424 in August, 1885; of petroleum $3,778,105 against $4,576,504 in August last year.

The Stock Exchange has weathered two very dull weeks, and on the whole and in view of the increased value of money, has exhibited a great deal of strength. Yesterday the market was more active than it has been for a month, and quotations steadily advanced. Railroad earnings continue favorable. The activity was chiefly in stocks; bonds were not so much in request, but prices were firm. West Shore 4 per cents are a fairly good barometer, and closed at 102.

It turns out that India has been about stripped of wheat to pay its debts to England, and England's action in regard to silver has brought about a sad financial condition in her most valuable dependency. Tables show that the food supply in India diminishes in every ten to twelve years. One of those periods is now due, or nearly so, and if, when it comes, the country shall have no better supply than at present, there will probably be another of the fearful famines from which the people have suffered in the past. It is the story of Ireland over again—large exports of food to England, while the people are starving. The situation is tending toward a change in Britain's policy in regard to silver. Besides this, German manufacturers are carrying on a strong and successful competition the world over with English manufacturers.

The visible supply of grain in the United States, east of the Pacific slope, and in Canada, as made up yesterday, shows an increase for the week of 1,906,671 bushels of wheat, 441,216 bushels of corn, and a decrease of $321,573 bushels of oats. The visible supply of wheat reported was 44,872,030 against 45,022,702 bushels a year ago. But the world needs all we have to spare and will call for it in due time. The crop of this year is turning out better than was expected. European markets were reported quiet yesterday. Quotations in this country for October delivery were: Wheat here 88 cents, in Chicago 77 1–4; corn here 50 3–4, in Chicago 41; oats here 31 5–8, in Chicago 26 1–4. The closing quotations for cotton yesterday were: Sept. 9 7–8; Oct. 9.10–11; Nov. 9.13; Dec. 9.16–17; Jan. 9.23–24. The market for hay and straw is moderately supplied and the demand is light. Choice timothy is worth 75 to 80 cents, long rye straw 55 to 60.

General trade, as indicated by the clearances last week, shows an increase of over 9 per cent on that of this time last year. The great dry goods houses here report the largest trade of some years.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

A tendency toward a confederation of Central American States reported....Cholera severe in Corea....Flood on Walnut creek, North Carolina, carries away bridges and flouring mills....Liberal Unionists will oppose Parnell's Land Bill in the House of Commons.

SATURDAY, 11.—Prince Alexander has arrived at his father's house in Darmstadt. ....The Bulgarian people have been informed that Russia is disposed to exert her influence to establish party concord and restore quiet ...A slight earthquake shock felt in Sagua, Cuba....The Bishop of Tonquin states that seven hundred Christians have been massacred, forty villages burned in the Province of Manhoa, and that nine thousand Christians are dying from hunger. ....Another American schooner seized by Canadian authorities....Adam Forepaugh, Jr., promised next Monday to give a novel show of a horse walking on a cable over Niagara Falls, but is prevented from doing this by a letter from Henry Bergh of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals....The two rival yachts dry their sails and will endeavor to sail to-day.... The work in Charleston among the ruined buildings going on rapidly. No more tents needed. One of the wealthiest men in the city who lost about $50,000 of his $1,000,000 has raised the rent on all his buildings twenty-five per cent. A richl Aderman who escaped without serious damage has his horses in tents, while his poor neighbors are shivering on the outside. A young man drew all his savings from the bank and distributed it among the poor and needy.... The total amount so far received at Charleston for the sufferers is $160,000 ...Geronimo, the Apache chief, is in prison at San Antonio with other Apaches....Col. Gilder left Winnipeg, Manitoba, on Thursday evening on his trip to the North Pole.... The Danish authorities warn American fishermen off from the coast of Greenland. They were there to catch halibut.

MONDAY, 13.—A serious silver problem arouses English financiers. The cause of this is the fall in the price of rupees....Alexander's fête day was the occasion of great rejoicing at Philippopolis. Russia will indicate her position precisely to the Sobranje at the decisive moment....Great precautions were taken to protect the Czar during his journey to Poland to witness the army manœuvres. The windows of the cars were closed and the blinds drawn down in order to prevent the discovery of the carriage occupied by the Czar....Thousands of people in Newfoundland are in a starving condition. The Labrador fisheries are a failure this year. ....The American schooner "Moro Castle" seized for smuggling....Jaehne's clerk, George W. Alter, was arrested last week, and confesses Jaehne's work with thieves and Aldermen. Inspector Byrnes withholds certain names, but says well known persons are implicated....Two distinct shocks of earthquake felt yesterday at Akron, Ohio. ....A shock of earthquake felt in Mexico. ... Thirteen hundred dollars received last night at Wallack's for Charleston sufferers. ....The thunder storm last night unroofed three houses in Harlem, N. Y. Many shade trees and buildings were wrecked in the town of Westchester....The "Mayflower" won the second international yacht race, retaining the America's cup. Arrangements are in progress for another "Mayflower"-"Galatea" race.

TUESDAY, 14.—Republican Governor elected yesterday in Maine by nearly 14,000 plurality. Third party vote about 3,500. ....Fears that steamer "Gracie Barker" has been lost with about 1,000 passengers on Lake Michigan, near St. Joseph, Mich. ....Roof of mine fell in yesterday morning near Scranton, Penn.; one miner killed, 6 imprisoned. Party at work for their rescue. ....More damage reported in Harlem, N.Y., by blow of Sunday evening....Irishmen here in conflict with the Clan-na-gael.... Alderman Jaehne's receiver and comrade, Geo. W. Alter, tells the whole story of villainy....Wilhelm Liebknecht, German socialist, arrived yesterday from Europe.... Charleston has received $200,000 for relief. ....Country around Akron, Ohio, had earthquake on Sunday evening....General tailors' strike in this city feared, affecting 15,000 men and women....A conflict expected over Parnell's land bill. Mr. Gladstone, who has been seeking rest on the Continent, coming back to take part in the debate.... Bulgarians still cling to Prince Alexander. National Assembly met yesterday, will elect a prince....France seizes English fishing boats at Havre....The altar curtains took fire from the candles in church at Radua, Transylvania, on Sunday, during early mass, causing a rush in which 15 persons were crushed to death, 30 severely and 100 slightly wounded....Parliament is busy on the appropriation bills. Irish Supply strongly resisted last night by Parnellites and Radicals.

DeLand Academy and College, DeLand, Fla., opens Wednesday, October 13th. The purpose of its founder, Hon. H. A. DeLand, of Fairport, N. Y., was to establish in Florida a Christian High School and College for both sexes inferior to none in this country in character and rank.

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York

Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.

Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, September 11, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 27,886 pks.; exports 724 pks.

On fancy last week's creamery make and for any strictly fresh specially fine private dairy the market is a trifle higher but well supplied with offerings. There is considerable fresh make butter carried over unsold, and for ordinary fresh the market is dull and slow, as well as for all early makes, unless of exceptionally fine quality. The weather has been warm and even sultry, and the butter market partakes of the lassitude incident to such weather, and closes dull and in buyers' favor on all kinds except strictly fancy fresh make butter. We quote :

Fancy creamery	23½@24
do dairy (selections)	20 @21
Good to fine	16 @18
Poor to common	8 @13

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 68,697 boxes; exports 28,682 boxes.

The market started out all right this week but exports fell off sharply, and at the close there was more stock carried over unsold than it was convenient to carry, and there was an undertone of weakness to the market, although the week marks up an advance in price. We quote :

Factory, white, full cream, finest	9½@ 9¾
" colored, " "	9¾@ 9⅞
" good to fine	8½@ 9
" night milk skims	7 @ 8
" skims	2½@ 5

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 13,525 bbls.

Our market has ruled steady all the week, and all fresh stock is well cleared. We quote :

Near-by marks, strictly fresh laid	17½@18
Western and Canada, loss off	15 @17

MARRIAGES.

ALTENBURGER—SCHETLOCK.—At South Bend, Ind, at 3 P.M., Sept. 9, by Rev. N. D. Williamson, Mr. Frederick Altenburger to Mrs. Amanda Schetlock.

BORN—KELDER.—At the home of the bride's parents, on the 8th of Sept., by Rev. A. Vennema, Samuel Born and Anna Kelder, all of Kalamazoo, Mich.

BYRON—DIPPEL.—At New Durham, N. J., on Sept. 5, by Rev. I. W. Gowen, Hannah Dippel, of East New Durham, to Irving Byron, of New York city.

DICE—HEARTLEIN.—At the Reformed Church parsonage, South Bend, Ind., 2 P.M., Sept. 9, by Rev. N. D. Williamson, Mr. Benjamin F. Dice to Miss Emma D. Heartlein.

FINNIN—FRANZMANN.—At the residence of the bride's parents, town of Union, N. J., on Sept. 8, by Rev. I. W. Gowen, Everett B. Finnin, of New York, and Rosetta Isabel Franzmann.

HESSELINK—DEN ADEL.—On Aug. 25, at the bride's home, Bernard Hesselink and Cornelia Den Adel, by Rev. A. Vennema, all of Kalamazoo, Mich.

KIRK—DUNCAN.—At Newark, N. J., Sept. 9, by Rev. J. A. Davis, Hon. Wm. H. Kirk to Miss Rachel E., daughter of the late Robert Duncan, Esq., all of Newark, N. J.

LUDLOW—SCHISSLER.—At New Durham, N. J., on Sept. 6, by Rev. I. W. Gowen, Minnie Schissler to Samuel Ludlow, both of West Hoboken, N. J.

PUTMAN—STERLING.—On Wednesday morning, the 8th, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. J. C. Lowe, Mr. Simon M. Putman, of Rotterdam, N. Y., to Miss Estella Sterling, of Princetown, N. Y.

SMITH—BALDWIN.—At New Durham, N. J., on Sept. 8, by Rev. I. W. Gowen, Thomas Smith and Rose Baldwin, both of Brooklyn, N. Y.

VOORHIS—WINFIELD.—In Newark, N. J., Sept. 8, at the residence of the bride's aunt, by Rev. J. N. Voorhis, Miss Emily Winfield, of Toledo, O., to Graham C. Voorhis, of New York city, son of the officiating clergyman.

Publisher's Department.

Rheumatism and the Gout, cease their twinges, if the affected part is daily washed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap, which banishes pain and renders the joints and muscles supple and elastic. It is at the same time a very effective clarifier and beautifier of the skin.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is made only by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. It is prepared with the greatest skill and care, under the direction of the men who originated it. Hence Hood's Sarsaparilla may be depended upon as strictly pure, honest, and reliable.

If you have sick or nervous headache, take Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They will cleanse the stomach, restore healthy action to the digestive organs, remove effete matter (the presence of which depresses the nerves and brain), and thus give speedy relief.

Bronchitis is cured by frequent small doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—The Fall Term of the Seminary will open on Tuesday, Sept. 21st.

The committee for the reception of students, consisting of Rev. Messrs. J. H. Oerter, D.D., David Waters, D.D., Lewis Francis and John Hart, of the Board of Superintendents, and the Faculty, will meet in James Suydam Hall at 11 o'clock A.M. on that day to receive applicants for admission.

Applicants are requested to have with them their certificates of church membership and their literary credentials.

Furnished rooms in Hertzog Hall are assigned on the first day of the session. Good board can be obtained in the hall on reasonable terms.

CORNELIUS BRETT,
Stated Clerk, pro tem., Board of Superintendents.

THE BI-CENTENNIAL of the First Reformed Church of Hackensack, N. J., will be celebrated on Thursday, Sept. 23d, 1886. In the morning a Historical Address will be delivered by the pastor. In the afternoon a Dutch service, similar to that in vogue two hundred years ago, will be held. In the evening addresses will be delivered by several pastors, once connected with the church.

All former members are cordially invited to attend. Persons wishing entertainment will please address Garret Oldis, Esq., Chairman of Entertainment Committee, Hackensack, N. J.

THE CLASSIS OF ALBANY will meet in the Reformed Church of Onisquethaw Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10 A.M. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting. J. LANSING PEARSE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in regular session on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, in the Church of Schraalenburgh, at 10 o'clock A.M. Classical dues must be paid at this session.

P. V. VAN BUSKIRK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA.—The regular fall meeting of the Classis of Cayuga will be held in the Reformed Church of Utica on Tuesday Oct. 5th, at 7.30 P.M. C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA will meet in stated fall session in the Reformed Church of Tyre, the first Tuesday (5th) of October, at 3 P.M. Vacant churches to report, and Classical dues to be paid in at this session. J. WHITBECK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE will meet in the Church of Kiskatom on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10 A.M. Classical dues are payable, and bills of delegates called for at this meeting.

B. VAN ZANDT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF HUDSON will meet in the church at Upper Red Hook, the third Tuesday in September at 10 A.M. The Rev. G. D. Lydecker will be installed pastor of said church at 10.30 A.M., of the same day. T. S. DUSINBERRE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ILLINOIS will meet in regular session in Church of Havana, on 3d Tuesday (21st) of Sept., at 2 P.M. Consistorial minutes to be presented. J. S. JORALMON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF IOWA will meet in regular fall session Sept. 15th, 1886, at 9 A.M., in the Reformed Church of Harrison, Douglass Co., Dakota. Consistorial minutes to be presented. Rev. A. Buursma will preach the Classical sermon on the evening of the first day. Delegates will please see to it that they arrive in Plankinton, Dakota, on Tuesday, Sept, 14th, in order to be met by the Committee on Entertainment.

P. S.—Change of day from Tuesday to Wednesday was rendered necessary on account of train connections. L. DYKSTRA, S C,

THE CLASSIS OF MICHIGAN will meet in regular fall session at Holland, in Hope Church, at 2 P.M., Sept. 21st, the 3d Tuesday of the month. Will the brethren please make a good record of attendance? A. PAIGE PEEKE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY will meet in ordinary session in the Church of Manheim on Monday evening, Sept. 20th, at 7 o'clock. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

Conveyances will meet delegates at Little Falls from train going east on N. Y. C. R. R. at 2.31 P.M.; from train going west at 3.59 P.M.

A. J. HAGEMAN, S. C.

THE stated fall session of the Classis of Paramus will be held in the Reformed Church of West New Hempstead on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10.30 A.M. Minutes of consistories are to be presented for examination. Applications for aid from Board of Domestic Missions must be sent 10 days before the meeting to the Rev. John Gaston, D.D., Passaic, N.J., Chairman of the Committee on Church Extension.

Carriages will meet delegates at Sufferns at 9.23, or at Spring Valley at 9.40 A.M.

JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Boonton, on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial records should be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting. Rev. H. W. Teller, (D. V.,) will preach the Classical sermon. S. T. SEARLE, S, C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Church of Cold Spring, on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial minutes to be presented and dues to be paid.

A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will hold its stated fall session in the Second Reformed church in Somerville, N. J., on the second Tuesday, the 12th of October, 1886, at 10.30 A.M. Classical dues and bills of delegates are payable at this session.

JOHN F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN made the following appointments for the installation of the Rev. Curtis E. Long, at High Bridge, N. J., on September 23d, at 3.30 P.M.: Rev. Edward G. Read to preach the sermon, or Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff, his alternate; the Rev. J. F. Mesick, President of Classis, to preside and to read the Liturgy, containing the charges to pastor and people, and Rev. P. M. Doolittle, his alternate. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 5th, at 10.30 A.M., at Schodack Landing. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting. EDWARD A. COLLIER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SARATOGA will meet in regular fall session in the Reformed church at Schaghticoke, on Tuesday, September 21st, 1886, at 10.30 o'clock A.M. J. W. BEARDSLEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY will meet in regular fall session in the Reformed church at Niskayuna on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10 A.M. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

C. P. DITMARS, S. C.

THE regular fall meeting of the Classis of Schoharie will be held in the Reformed Church of Gallupville, N. Y., on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, at 10.30 o'clock.

D K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Blue Mountain on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 11 A.M. Rev. A. J. Sebring is Chairman of the Committee on Synodical Minutes. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

Carriages will be in readiness at Saugerties station on the arrival of the 7 o'clock train from Kingston to convey members of Classis to the church.

J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address Rev. J. Eimendorf, D.D , at 61 East 123d st., New York.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. G. D. Lydecker at Upper Red Hook, N. Y.

Board of Education.

RECEIPTS FOR JULY, 1886.

From North Passaic, N.J., $25; 2d New Brunswick, N.J., 51.64; Germantown, N.Y., 4; Greenport, N.Y., 1.59; Holland, N. Y. city, 3; 2d Astoria, L.I.; 8; 2d Bergen, N.J., 1.09; North Holland, Mich., 14.50; Greenville, N.J., 10; Tyre, N.Y., 5.10; Pascack, N.J., 6 36; Niskayuna, N.Y., 10; Peapack, N.J., 8; 1st Raritan, N.J., 9.50; 2d Grand Rapids, Mich., 14.18; Neshanic, N.J., 14.53; a friend, Albany, N.Y., 5. Total, $191.49.

SPECIAL FUND.—Wm. N. Clark, Esq., $5.

RECEIPTS FOR AUGUST, 1886.

From Fulton, Ill., $18.55; Gibbsville, Ill., 17,29; Blooming Grove, N.Y., 8; Berea, N.Y., 5; Caatsban, N.Y., 17.60; Hagaman's Mills, N.Y., q.c., 7.08; Chittenango, N.Y., 7.66; Ponds, N. J., 4; Rev. Chas. S. Dutton, refund, 35; Gravesend, L.I., 25; New Hurley, N.Y., 24.25; Sayville, L.I., 2.11; Shawangunk, N.Y., 7.25; Greenleafton, Minn., 5. Total, $183.79.

F. J. HOSFORD, Treasurer,
34 Vesey Street, N. Y.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE
The Great Invention,
For EASY WASHING,
IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.
Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

SCROFULA

Humors,

Erysipelas,

Canker, and

Catarrh,

Can be cured by purifying the blood with

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for Scrofulous Humors. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting, result than any medicine I ever used.—E. Haines, No. Lindale, O.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.—Mary C. Amesbury, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, in a few months, was cured.—Susan L. Cook, 90½ Albany st., Boston Highlands, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I have ever tried. I have taken it for Scrofula, Canker, and Salt Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach.—Millie Jane Peirce, South Bradford, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5.

The Church.

Names Written in Heaven.

THE disciples came back, after their work. The Spirit had worked with them, and the devils were subject to them, and they had power over disease, and they had power over the enemy, and they were filled with success. They were probably having a sort of jubilee meeting, and Christ comes and says: "Rejoice not that the spirits are subject unto you; but rather rejoice because your names are written in heaven." This brings us face to face with the doctrine of assurance. I find a great many people up and down Christendom who do not accept this doctrine. They believe it is impossible for us to know in this life whether we are saved or not. If this be true, how are we going to get over what Christ has said as we find it here recorded? If my name is written in heaven, how can I rejoice over it unless I know it? These men were to rejoice that their names were already there; and whoever are children of God, their names are there, sent on for registry before.

A party of Americans, a few years ago, on their way from London to Liverpool, decided that they would stop at the Northwestern Hotel, but when they arrived, they found the place had been full for several days. Greatly disappointed, they took up their baggage and were about starting off, when they noticed a lady of the party preparing to remain.

"Are you not going, too?" they asked.

"Oh, no," she said, "I have good rooms all ready."

"Why, how does that happen?"

"Oh," she said, "I just telegraphed on ahead, a few days ago."

Now that is what the children of God are doing; they are sending their names on ahead; they are securing places in the mansions of Christ in time. If we are truly children of God our names have gone on before, and there will be places awaiting us at the end of the journey. You know we are only travellers down here. We are away from home. When the war was going on, the soldiers on the battlefield, the Southern soldiers and the Northern soldiers, wanted nothing better to live in than tents. They longed for the war to close, that they might go home. They cared nothing to have palaces and mansions on the battlefield. Well, there is a terrible battle going on now, and by-and-by when the war is over God will call us home. The tents and altars are good enough for us while journeying through this world. It is only a night, and then the eternal day will dawn.—D. L. Moody, in Words and Weapons.

Andover.

FOR a long time the ministers and earnest lay-workers all through the Mississippi Valley have heard with sorrow and grief of the strife which Andover has created throughout the East. But the poisoned seeds which some of the professors of that Seminary have been scattering broadcast, are beginning to bear fruit in the West as well as at the East.

has already been the occasion of the destruction of more than one church and character in the East, and now, unrebuked as they have been, they are spreading too fast in the Valley of the Mississippi. Their doctrines are sugar coated. They have much to commend them. The men who preach them are, for the most part, excellent and true ministers of the Gospel; but we shall point out, for the sake of truth, a few of the dangerous tendencies that are apparent, in their own words.

We have been slow to pronounce positively against Andover Theological Seminary. Many of our friends thought we were too slow, but we wanted to be careful, to judge no man hastily. We did not open our mouths until they struck at the American Board. The teachings of Dorner have been enlarged upon, especially that phase of the German theologian's doctrine which dealt with eschatology. Our readers are somewhat familiar with these teachings already; probation for all heathen, infants and imbeciles who have not had what might be called a fair chance to hear the Gospel in this life, an opportunity to hear it in the next.

We should be slow to judge any brother, and especially the professors in so venerable an institution as Andover. It is well enough that these brethren know, however, that there are rumors and definite charges that they are drifting in many respects from the foundations of the faith; that they look lightly upon the Word of God. A young man well known hereabout, who spent a year in Andover, says:

One of the professors in lecturing to his class referred to some of the miracles in the New Testament and with a toss of his head told his students that intelligent Christians long since rejected such stories as belonging to the same category as that of Jonah and the whale, which, he said, "of course no one believes to-day."

Now we should be glad to learn that there is some mistake about this and similar statements made concerning Andover. We have felt for some years that the most serious charge to be brought against the school was that it does not send forth men evangelistic in spirit, and with a zeal quickened by contact with earnest souls. We know there are exceptions, but as a rule our observation has led us to conclude that few men come forth from Andover with a burden for souls and an anxiety to save men from the wrath which is to come. Every examination of their men reveals the fact that they are brimful and running over with speculations concerning higher criticism, and the destiny of men beyond the grave Horace Bushnell's injunction that some questions would better be hung up for future reference, seems to be discarded at Andover.

Another strong objection lies against what is known as the New Theology. If some men are to have an opportunity in the other life, why not others? It will be very easy to believe, after having adopted the former theory, that any number of mortals who have heard the Gospel imperfectly either in heathen lands or here, will hear it again in the other world. The next step is inevitable. The whole race, even the most incorrigible, will at last be brought to repentance, holiness and happiness. This is Universalism. Are we prepared for that? Have we not protested against it with the open Bible, and besought men all these years to turn away from such strange doctrines?

What the future has we do not know. We prefer to leave it with God. Our commission here is to preach the Gospel to every creature, to snatch men as brands from the burning, to warn them to flee from the wrath to come, and to lay hold upon eternal life. All these things are plainly set forth in the Word of God. Let us not depart from it.—The Advance, Chicago, September 2d.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

REVIEW. THIRD QUARTER.

M. The True Shepherd.....Ps. 23:1-6.
T. Triumph over Death.....1 Cor. 15:41-58.
W. Behold, thy Salvation Cometh.....Isa. 62:1-12.
T. Jesus Comforting His Disciples.....John 14:1-14.
F. Jesus the True Vine.....John 15:1-17.
S. Another Comforter.....John 16:1-15.
S. Jesus Interceding.....John 17:1-26.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Sept. 26th.—Review.

Golden Text.—"Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever."—ISA. 9:7.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"I have finished the work thou gavest me to do."—JOHN 17:4.

INTRODUCTION.

IN the lessons of this quarter we have been dealing with lofty themes and stirring events. The last six months of the life of Jesus constitute a period of activity and instruction that stands by itself as the climax of His career. We note a deeper spirituality, a more triumphant tone, a fuller revelation of the deep things of God. The miracles as well as discourses were calculated to awaken new thoughts in the minds of the disciples and to fit them for the work so soon to devolve upon them. As Jesus drew near to His passion we see the Divine glory becoming more evident in His claims and in the power manifested by Him; this glory is also expressed by the devotion of His followers in public and in private. The most natural division of the lessons for review will be into two groups, viz.: The closing scenes of His public ministry, and the closing scenes of His private ministry.

THE REVIEW.

I. THE CLOSING SCENES IN THE PUBLIC MINISTRY OF JESUS.—LESSONS 1-6.

LESSON FIRST.—JESUS AND THE BLIND MAN.—JOHN 9:1-17.

"One thing I know, that whereas I was blind now I see."—John 9:25.

After escaping from those who attempted to stone Him, Jesus was passing along the streets of Jerusalem when His attention was arrested by the sight of a blind man seeking alms. Recognizing here an opportunity to bestow blessing and convey instruction at the same time, He stops, and, answering the query of the disciples as to the reason for this affliction, sends the man to Siloam to wash and be healed. The prompt obedience of the man was followed by immediate healing, and this by spiritual vision.

LESSON SECOND.—JESUS THE GOOD SHEPHERD.—JOHN 10:1-18.

"I am the Good Shepherd; the Good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep"—John 10:11.

In these two parables of the door and the shepherd, Jesus sets forth His peculiar relations to His people. As the Door He provides us admission and protection; as the Shepherd, He furnishes us with guidance and provision.

LESSON THIRD.—THE DEATH OF LAZARUS.—JOHN.—11:1-16.

"Our friend Lazarus sleepeth, and I go that I may awake him out of sleep."—John 11:11.

The enmity of the Jews had become so open that it was no longer safe for Jesus to remain in Jerusalem or its vicinity, hence we find Him retiring to the borders of the Jordan, where He conducted His school of the Prophets. While here the news is brought to Him of the serious illness of Lazarus, the brother of Martha and Mary. His action at first was strange and not easily understood. We learn, however, that He was seeking to give His disciples new and more correct views concerning Providence and His own relation to life and death. Tarrying until He knew that Lazarus was dead and buried, He then deliberately returns to Bethany, where His life would be in peril on account of its nearness to Jerusalem.

LESSON FOURTH.—THE RESURRECTION OF LAZARUS. JOHN 11:20-44.

"Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life."—John 11:25.

Jesus on His arrival found a sorrowing yet submissive household. The faith of the sisters had been sorely tried during the last few days, yet we find them still clinging to their friend. With words of comfort, which have become the watchwords of Christian triumph over death, Jesus brought consolation to their hearts, and then by the exercise of His creative power, removed the sorrow entirely from their home. It is especially significant that this, almost the last miracle of His ministry, should have been the most remarkable of all. The effect of this event was to win friends and to still further enrage His enemies.

LESSON FIFTH.—JESUS HONORED.—JOHN 12:1-16.

"Blessed is the king of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord."—John 12:13

After another season of retirement, this time in the hill country of Judea, Jesus again approached the city where He was soon to suffer. He reached Bethany about a week before the Passover, where He found a hearty welcome awaiting Him. The households of Simon and of Lazarus united to do Him honor, while Mary poured out her heart's devotion in the costly anointing which Jesus accepted and made immortal. The next day He received royal honors for the first and last time during His life. Amid the waving of palm branches and the shouts of the multitude He rode into the midst of His enemies, the true King of the Jews.

LESSON SIXTH.—GENTILES SEEKING JESUS.—JOHN 12.20-36.

"And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me.'—John 12:32

After the first outburst of enthusiasm the influence of His enemies began to be felt more and more, so that Jesus could feel and see the falling off of His adherents, for fear of the Jews. It was while His own people were thus judging themselves unworthy of eternal life, that the Greek proselytes came seeking an audience with Him. In connection with their visit Jesus uttered some of the most significant lessons of His life, especially the bold declaration of the Golden Text.

II. THE CLOSING SCENES IN THE PRIVATE MINISTRY OF JESUS.—LESSONS 7-12.

LESSON SEVENTH.—JESUS TEACHING HUMILITY.—JOHN 13:1-17.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."—John 13:17.

On the way to the upper room where they were to eat their last meal with Jesus, there arose an unseemly contest about primacy among the disciples, so that when they arrived at their destination no one was disposed to volunteer to perform the humble service of washing the feet of the company. Jesus, in order to meet this emergency, to rebuke the self-seeking spirit, and to inculcate true sentiments of brotherly love, Himself stooped to the place and service of a menial. His glory was never greater than at that moment.

LESSON EIGHTH.—THE WARNING TO JUDAS AND PETER.—JOHN 13:1-38.

"Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."—1 Cor. 10:12.

While at the table Jesus gave a last opportunity to Judas to forsake the path of death which he had begun to tread. He made known to the disciples the fact that one of their number should betray Him, while to John He indicated who the traitor was. Then, knowing that Satan was seeking to destroy another of the company, He gave Peter a warning which he did not heed, but which he afterward remembered with bitter tears of regret and repentance.

LESSON NINTH.—JESUS COMFORTING HIS DISCIPLES.—JOHN 14:1-14.

"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me."—John 14:1.

The effect of the warnings given in the last lesson was very dispiriting, so that the disciples' hearts were full of sorrow. Jesus took pains to lift the cloud that was settling so black upon their spirits and to pour in upon them the light of His gracious promise of a heaven prepared for them, to which He promised to bring them to share His eternal glory. Meanwhile, they were to walk by faith and to serve Him in their daily lives.

LESSON TENTH.—JESUS THE TRUE VINE.—JOHN 15: 1-16.

"I am the vine, ye are the branches."—John 15: 5.

In order still further to encourage and strengthen them He told them, through the parable of the vine, of their necessary dependence upon Him, and of the fruit which they were to bear as branches of this living vine. Their life was to depend upon their intimate union with Him; His fruitfulness, or success in His work, was to depend upon their faithfulness to Him.

LESSON ELEVENTH.—THE MISSION OF THE COMFORTER.—JOHN 16: 5-20.

"He will guide you into all truth."—John 16: 13.

The promise of the Holy Spirit was the culminating truth in this comforting series. He was to take the place of the absent Jesus and carry on His work, according to His plans, unto perfect success. He was to enlighten and save those who would accept His work, and to instruct and condemn those who should resist His gracious influences.

LESSON TWELFTH.—JESUS INTERCEDING.—JOHN 17: 1-26.

"He ever liveth to make intercession for them."—Heb. 7: 25.

In this marvellous chapter we see the heart of Jesus revealed, and are taught something of the scope of the redemption which He purchased for us on the Cross. The safety of His people amid the snares of the world, their unity in Him, and their share in His glory, constituted the burden of His intercession. He still exercises this office in our behalf, and the spirit of His requests is doubtless the same as that manifest throughout this prayer.

CENTRAL TRUTHS.

1. "While I am in the world I am the light of the world."
2. "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want."
3. "Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister and Lazarus."
4. "He that hath the Son hath life."
5. "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing."
6. "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."
7. "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted."
8. "Without me ye can do nothing."
9. "I am the way, the truth, and the life."
10. "For me to live is Christ."
11. "I will not leave you comfortless."
12. "I have prayed for you."

False and True Courage.

"TWO fools" more went through the Whirlpool Rapids at Niagara Falls, two or three Sundays ago, inside of a barrel, ingeniously made with keel and rudder. But there was no bravery about that at all, only foolery; they risked their lives for the sake of being looked at by 15,000 people and talked about in the papers. But, just the day before, another adventure, really brave, occurred at the famous Lachine Rapids in the St. Lawrence River, a little above Montreal. A merchant from that city was in his steam yacht, accompanied only by his daughter, eighteen years old, and his engineer. It was in the night, and, before they had discovered their mistake, they had passed their port; the yacht struck the pier of a bridge, and was capsized. The engineer made for one of the piers and was saved by the bridge workmen. The father, not being a good swimmer, the daughter took off the life-preserver she had on, and gave it to him, herself striking out for the shore. Hearing him call for help, she returned to him, held his head out of water with one hand, and swam with the other. Just as they were nearing the Rapids, the workmen reached them with a boat, and picked them up. The girl's name was Flora Greene, and she ought to have a wreath of greenest leaves and fairest flowers, besides the Royal Humane Society's medal. That was true heroism, and puts to shame the vainglory of the se fish men who sailed through Niagara Rapids in their barrel-boat.—The Congregationalist.

A Very Intelligent Bird.

WE conversed some time together—
You may think it quite absurd—
But I found that quail in the orchard
A most intelligent bird.

He chose a shady corner
Before he would alight;
I inquired, "What is your name, sir?"
He said at once, "Bob White."

He had an air of business,
The knowing little sprite!
So I asked about his family;
He said at once, "All right."

I thought I'd like to see them,
And asked him if I might;
Perhaps it was the thought of toast
That made him say, "Not quite."

"Permit me just a glimpse, sir,
They must be a cunning sight—
Then tell me what's the reason."
He winked, and said, "Too bright."

I said, "Don't you get dizzy
When you swing at such a height?"
He hopped upon a loftier twig,
Then answered back, "You might."

Though from answers dissyllabic
He never swerved a mite,
Yet he always had an answer,
The roguish little wight.

At last I tried to catch him—
He showed no sign of fright,
But simply spread his winglets,
And chippered back, "Good-night."

Your parrots and your mocking birds
You may think are very bright;
For wit and for intelligence
I recommend "Bob White."

—Mary E. Vandyne, in The Congregationalist.

Plants that Eat Insects.

THESE plants are so constructed as to attract insects, capture them in various ways, and feed upon them. A few of these plants have been gathered from the swamp lands of North Carolina and California, and others have been sent from India, Australia, and Madagascar. Perhaps the best known of the group is Venus's Fly Trap. The leaves vary from one to six inches long, and at the extremities are placed two blades or claspers. On the inner walls of these claspers there are placed six irritable hairs, any one of which receiving the slightest touch from an insect is sufficient to bring the two blades together with such rapidity as to preclude any possibility of the fly escaping. A correct idea of how the trap closes on its victim may be obtained by bringing the two hands rapidly together, the fingers of the one being firmly pressed between those of the other. This plant readily discriminates between animal and other matter; thus if a small stone or piece of wood be dropped into the trap, it will instantly close, but as soon as it has found out its mistake, and it only takes a few minutes, it begins to unfold its trap and the piece of wood or stone falls out. On the other hand, should a piece of beef or a blue-bottle fly be placed in it, it will remain firmly closed until every piece of organic matter is absorbed through the leaf. It will then unfold itself, and is ready for another meal.

Another species is called "The Vegetable Whiskey Shop," as it captures its victims by intoxication. The entire shop is shaped after the manner of a house, with the entrance projecting a little over the rim. Half way round the brim of the cavity there are an immense number of honey glands, which the influence of the sun brings into active operation. This sweet acts as a lure to passing insects, and they are pretty sure to alight on the outside edge and tap the nectar. They, however, remain there but a brief period, as there is something more substantial inside the cavity in the shape of an intoxicating liquid, which is distilled by the plant. The way down to this beverage is straight, as the entrance is paved with innumerable fine hairs, all pointing to the bottom, and should the fly walk crooked its feet become entangled in them. When the fly has had its first nip, it does not stop and fly right out, as it could do, but it indulges until it comes staggering up and reaches that portion where the hairs begin; here its progress outward is stopped owing to the points of the hairs being placed against it. The fly is now in a pitiable plight; it attempts to use its wings, but in doing so only hastens its own destruction. It inevitably gets immersed in the liquid, and dies drunk.

Another species distills an intoxicant of its own; but owing to the entrance to its inner parts, it excludes the great majority of insects and admits but a select few. The individual pitchers somewhat resemble an inverted parrot's bill, with a narrow leaf-like expansion running along the top. The color is light green, beautifully shaded with crimson. The inside of the pitcher is divided into three parts: the first, nearest the entrance, is studded with minute honey-glands, and is called the attractive surface; a little further down the inside very minute hairs are situated with their extremities all pointing to the other chamber. This is the conducting surface. Lastly, the small hairs give place to the longer ones, amid which are placed secreting pores, which give forth the intoxicating nectar. This is termed the detentive surface. When the pitcher has caught a sufficient number of insects, the nectar gives place to a substance which enables the plant more readily to digest its food.

Another species is the mosquito catcher. It grows about one foot high, and the leaves, after reaching a certain height, divide into long, narrow spathes, covered with hairs, each coated with a bright gummy substance. This during sunshine gives to the plant a most magnificent appearance. If a plant be placed in a room where mosquitoes abound, all the troublesome pests will in a brief period be in its steady embrace. It is most interesting to watch the method by which it secures its prey. Immediately the fly alights on the leaf, it may be that only one of its six legs stick to the sweet, viscid substance at the extremity of the hairs, but in struggling to free itself it invariably touches with its legs or wings the contiguous hairs, and is immediately fixed. The hairs meantime are not idle; they slowly but surely curl round and draw their victim into the very centre of the leaf, thus bringing it into contact with the very short hairs, which are placed there in order to facilitate the process of sucking the life-blood from the body.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Invaluable as a Tonic.

DR. J. L. PRATT, Greenfield, Ill., says: "It is all that it claims to be—invaluable as a tonic in any case where an acid tone is indicated."

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hands would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: "I am entirely well."

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

BLUE. Its meritorious WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. A. S. WILTBERGER, Prop., 23 N. Second St., Phil., Pa.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY

FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000,000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made from an infant

150 MEALS for $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1. 0.

☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION,

What is it Good For? TARRANT'S Effervescent Seltzer APERIENT

Cures Constipation, Sick Headache and biliousness. It promotes the Appetite, and invigorates the stomach, to which it imparts tone and vigor, and enables the digestive organs to perform their functions with ease and expedition. It is pleasant to the taste, portable in form, and gives immediate relief in all ordinary ailments arising from a disordered stomach or constipated habit. Take no substitute but demand the genuine Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient, which can be found in every well-regulated drug store.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT TRADE MARK REGISTERED

Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N. Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

CURE FOR THE DEAF

PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 50 CTS.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

Arnold, Constable & Co

OUR FALL STYLES

Now Open at Retail

IN

Plain and Fancy Plushes, Velvets, Etc.

An Inspection Solicited.

Now on exhibition at RETAIL, a splendid selection of elegant FALL NOVELTIES in Fine Dress Goods, viz.: BEADED MATERIALS and Rich Fancy Wool Plushes, suitable for Combination Suits; also, an extensive variety of Choice Colorings in New Plain Fabrics.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL

Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN

106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Fund together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.

CYRUS PEC Secretary.

HOME

INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 0
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	301,040 1
Net Surplus	1,389,341 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,668 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,300 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9 2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	226,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886	102,394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P & Sec'y

T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR., } Ass't Sec'ys

CARPETINGS

AND

Upholstery Goods

Our Novelties for the Fall trade are now on exhibition.

This assortment surpasses that of any previous season.

An early inspection invited.

W. & J. SLOANE

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

NEW YORK.

HIGH NOVELTIES ON EXHIBITION.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO. ARE NOW EXHIBITING THEIR RICHEST AND MOST SELECT STYLES OF IMPORTED NOVELTIES. AN EXAMINATION IS CORDIALLY INVITED.

James M'Creery & Co.,

Broadway and 11th Street, New York.

A pamphlet containing information concernin the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty five years will be sent free on application to the

Equitable Mortgage Co., 208 B'way, N.Y.

8 Per Cent. Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

N. W. HARRIS & CO.,

115-117 Monroe St., CHICAGO.

BONDS Of Counties, Cities, &c. of high grade a specialty. Send for descriptive lists.

Two houses exactly alike in different places, need to be differently painted to go well with the different landscape around them. Try our pure colors $1.35 per gall. The cheapest. The Best. You'll say so. The F. J. NASH M'F'G. CO., Nyack, Rockland Co., New York. Interesting Circulars Free. If your dealer refuses you these goods apply to us direct.

DURKEE'S

GAUNTLET

WARRANTED PERFECTLY PURE TRADE MARK

E. R. DURKEE & CO.

BRAND

SALAD DRESSING

UNEQUALLED FOR EXCELLENCE.

Without a rival as a dressing for all Salads, and as a sauce for Cold Meats, etc. It is prepared with extreme care; all its ingredients are of the purest and best; and will keep good for years.

BEWARE OF ALL IMITATIONS.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 Days. No Pay until Cured. J. L. STEPHENS, M. D., Lebanon, Ohio.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Sole Agents for the United States for the Celebrated

Red Star Brand

OF

Wonderful Wearing

VELVETEEN,

Noted for Its Unequalled Color and Finish. This Fast Pile Dress and Mantle Velveteen was Awarded the Only Gold Medals at the International Exhibition at Vienna in 1873 Paris 1878, and Nice 1883.

To Prevent Imitations a Red Star will be Found Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

These Goods are of English Manufacture, 24 inches Wide, and in 39 Different Colors.

PRICE, 74c.

Samples Mailed on Application and Mail Orders Promptly Filled.

R. H. MACY & CO.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

RIDGE'S FOOD

is the most reliable substitute known for mother's milk. Its superiority rests on the test of 30 years' experience throughout Great Britain and the United States. A sustaining, strengthening diet for invalids. Nutritious, easily digested and acceptable to the most delicate stomach. Four sizes, 35c. up. Send stamp for "Healthful Hints," a valuable pamphlet, to WOOLRICH & CO., Palmer, Mass.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

UNEQUALLED FOR CEMENTING WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, PAPER, LEATHER, &c. Awarded GOLD MEDAL, LONDON, 1883. Used by Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., Pullman Palace Car Co., &c. M'f'd only by the RUSSIA CEMENT CO. GLOUCESTER, MASS. SOLD EVERYWHERE. Sample Tin Can by Mail, 25c.

EDUCATIONAL.

Rutgers Female College,

58 West 55th street, commences 49th year September 22d. Rev. John Hall, D.D., President of the Board of Trustees. Boarding and Kindergarten Departments. Address the College.

ALEXANDER INSTITUTE White Plains, N.Y.

23 miles from New York City by rail. Fits boys for College or business pursuits. 30 to 40 pupils. 5 Teachers. Board and Tuition per annum $400. For circulars, apply to the Principal, O. R. WILLIS, Ph.D.

PEEKSKILL (N. Y.) MILITARY Academy.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

16 years perfect success, 12,531 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating $8,369,200

All the Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity to amount of 5,135,820

We have decided to place ourselves on a plane above every competitor. Hereafter every mortgage that we negotiate will bear our full legal

UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE OF BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST,

Interest 6 per cent. payable as in the past, by half yearly coupons, at the

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

Assets to the value of nearly a MILLION DOLLARS are pledged by our guarantee.

SEND FOR PAMPHLET CONTAINING FACTS AND FIGURES, FORMS, AND 450 TESTIMONIALS.

Our Law Department will collect Bonds and other securities in all the Western States for individuals and corporations.

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

EDUCATIONAL.

RUTGERS COLLEGE Grammar School,

New Brunswick, N. J.

PREPARES BOYS AND YOUNG MEN FOR COLLEGE OR BUSINESS.

Additional buildings were last year required, erected and filled.

This year additional teachers engaged to meet the increased number of students.

Rooms carpeted and cared for. Some arranged in suites—a study-room 14x14 with two single sleeping-rooms adjoining. A few single rooms to be had if desired.

Last year at the opening of the school every room was engaged, and many applicants were refused admission because of the lack of room. This year rooms will be reserved as applied for.

For catalogues and further information address E. T. TOMLINSON, HEADMASTER

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,

AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

BRIGHTON HEIGHTS SEMINARY, For Young Ladies, New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y. GEO. W. COOK, Ph.D., Principal.

OSSINING INSTITUTE FOR YOUNG SING SING, N.Y. Ladies & Misses. High Grounds. Best advantages in Music, Art, Elocution. English and Modern Languages. Full or partial courses. 30 miles from N. Y. City. Charges moderate Opens Sept. 21st. REV. C. D. RICE, Principal.

The Misses Anable's English, French and German Boarding and Day-School

WILL REOPEN SEPTEMBER 22D.

40 BAYARD ST., New Brunswick, N. J.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE, BOSTON UNIVERSITY, Opens Oct. 14, '86.

Fourteenth Year. Furnishes superior facilities for thorough scientific and practical instruction in three and four years' courses. Entrance examinations, Oct, 11, 12 and 13. Send for announcements to I. T. TALBOT, M.D., Dean.

SIGLAR'S PREPARATORY SCHOOL, NEWBURG-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.,

Gives the best preparation for the best colleges. Two Yale valedictorians in three years. Entrance examinations held at the school by member of Yale Faculty. Daily gymnastics under teacher compulsory. For circulars, etc., address

HENRY W. SIGLAR, M.A., (Yale) Prin.

Somerville Seminary, Somerville, N. J.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies and Children re-opens September 15th. Thorough instruction in English branches, Music, Languages and Painting. MISSES PARSONS & LE FEVRE.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

[Founded A.D. 1830.]

721 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.

REV. HENRY B. CHAPIN, PH.D., PRINCIPAL.

English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 67th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

HEMPSTEAD INSTITUTE. Hempstead, Long Island, N. Y.

A Thorough English Boarding School for Boys. Primary, Intermediate, Higher English and Commercial Courses. Twenty-seventh year begins September 15. Catalogues sent on Application.

Riverview Academy, POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Prepares for College and the Government Academies, for Business and Social relations. Thorough Military Instruction. Springfield Cadet Rifles. BISBEE & AMEN, Principals.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address

SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principal.

YOUNG LADIES SEMINARY, 43d YEAR Begins Sept. 22. Address F. CHANDLER, D. D., Pres. Freehold, N. J.

RAPID PREPARATION FOR COLLEGE OR BUSINESS BY PRIVATE INSTRUCTION.

J. Hasbrouck, A.M., New Brunswick, N. J.

Betts' Academy, Stamford, Conn.

A Boys' Boarding School of the highest grade. 49th year begins Sept. 15th WM. J. BETTS, M.A., (Yale), Principal

RYE SEMINARY, Rye, NEW YORK. For particulars address Mrs. S. J. LIFE.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 38. WHOLE No. 2930. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A PASTORAL LETTER was prepared by a committee of the last General Synod, was adopted and recommended to "be read in every church on the second Sabbath of October, and that the ministers of all our churches be instructed to preach on the subject at the same time." The letter begins on page 207 of the Minutes. It relates to the devotion of young men to the ministry.

A PAPER, mainly relating to Brown's Catechism, prepared by the Rev. Vernon B. Carroll, has a place on the twelfth page, in the hope that the points presented may receive attention from the Classes. Some of the answers of the catechism are, to say the least, partial and, therefore, misleading. That they utterly ignore the position of baptized children, as it is declared in all the standards of the Reformed Church, is beyond dispute. Should such a catechism be taught to the children of our Church?

DR. WARNACK, pastor at Rothenschirmbach, has since 1874 been the editor, in coöperation with Professors Christlieb and Grundemann, of the Allgemeine Missionszeitschrift. Monatsschrift für geschictliche und theoretische Missionskunde, a journal of the highest character for its accuracy and fulness of information, its wide range of observation and its genuine evangelical spirit. He has necessarily, therefore, become very familiar with the work of foreign missions wherever and by whomsoever prosecuted. The article on the sixth and seventh pages from his pen may be confidently relied upon as a trustworthy representation. The statistics given are carefully drawn from the best sources, and they are manipulated only in the interest of absolute truth. We are under great obligations to Dr. Chambers for translating it for our readers.

MR. LABOURCHERE, in a letter from London to the New York World, makes the following statement which seems strange enough:

Mr. Beecher is a very eloquent man, but he has not financially done well in this country. He appears to have been engaged on a starring tour throughout England by an impresario. We are not accustomed to sermons at so much per head. A correspondent has forwarded me an entrance ticket to the South Cliff Church, Scarborough, September 12th, on which occasion, says the ticket, "the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher will preach." Then follows a notice—"To meet the heavy expenses, this ticket is given on the tacit understanding that the holder will contribute to the collection not less than two shillings." What heavy expenses? Obviously, the charge is made by the impresario. For the appearance of Mr. Beecher this may be right and proper, but assuredly this is a new departure in pulpit oratory.

Statements and counter-statements are made in regard to the reception of Mr. Beecher by the people of Great Britain. So far as we can judge from the reports in our English exchanges, both are true. Mr. Beecher is esteemed by our British cousins as he is here. Those who are attached to the belief of the evangelical churches are often offended by his denunciation of parts of their faith and by his levity in the pulpit; and, on the other hand, a large number of people, especially in the large towns, listen to him with evident pleasure. The evangelical journals criticize his discourses, sometimes with severity, the friends of the new theology generally praise them.

MUCH GOOD WORK was done in this city and outside of it last winter in the way of manifesting an interest in the neighboring non-church-going families, and in inviting them to the house of God. It certainly was not in vain, for God rules and rules to bless such endeavors. Experience must have been acquired, and those engaged in the efforts must have gained some preparation for still more effective work during the winter before us. What use shall be and can be made of that experience those who conducted those most praiseworthy and often self-denying Christian endeavors are best qualified to decide. At all events, manifestations of a kindly interest in those who are living without God ought not to be discontinued, and what vantage ground was gained last winter ought not to be abandoned. A great multitude is in urgent need of a Christian faith and hope and of Christian principle to regulate life. This multitude is at our doors. The Gospel is committed to the Church in trust for and to be communicated to those who are perishing through lack of knowledge. Christian duty is to discharge the obligations of this trust. Nothing has ever yet been accomplished without going at it, and it is by application to the demands of duty that we learn how a duty can be successfully discharged. Shall not the work of last winter be followed this winter by work no less earnest, and, if possible, still more wisely conducted?

Earthquakes Improved.

IN the year 1738 there was published at Utrecht in Holland a small pamphlet, entitled "A Summons to Repentance: To the inhabitants of that portion of America denominated New Netherlands, on the occasion of an earthquake which occurred on the 7th of December, 1737, about eleven o'clock at night. In Two Sermons. The first upon Rev. 16: 18, the second upon Job 9: 6. Explained, applied and delivered by Theodorus Jacobus Frelinghuysen." (A translation is to be found in the volume of Frelinghuysen's Sermons, by the Rev. Wm. Demarest, issued by the Board of Publication, R. C. A., in 1856.)

In the preface, addressed to the pious reader, the author says that it is the duty of Zion's watchmen to improve all opportunities of time and place, and he hopes, therefore, that no one will take it ill that he makes use of "the earthquake which occurred here and elsewhere, as in Pennsylvania and New England," to move his hearers to godliness and stir them up to repentance. Although now in the forty-sixth year of his age, he had never previously felt an earthquake, but by this one he was awakened out of sleep, which, however, was a source of gratification rather than regret, as it suggested matter for varied meditation. Hence these two discourses, which are published for general edification. One was delivered at Six Mile Run, N. J., December 11th, 1737, the other at North Branch the following Sunday. The author apologizes for some similarity in matter and expression between the two discourses on the ground of the similarity of subjects.

The first discourse has reference to fearful occurrences in air and on earth as emblems of coming judgments. In this he refers as follows to the event which occasioned the sermon: "At various periods slight earthquakes have been experienced here, although (as I have been informed) without injury; but upon the past Wednesday, at about eleven o'clock at night, there was a great earthquake, or at least greater than usual, since by means of it our doors, windows, beds and houses were shaken, and our china and tinware rattled." He then proceeds to argue that this is a merciful foreshadowing of what will occur when the day of wrath shall have come, and makes an earnest appeal to all classes of sinners to turn from their evil ways. "The earth trembles, because our hearts tremble not; the earth trembles, and so upbraids us as being more insensible than itself, harder than the very rocks; the earth trembles, and reproves us for our earthly-mindedness, setting our affections on things that move and perish; the earth trembles, and opens its mouth as it did for Korah, Dathan and Abiram—and will one day do the same for all who repent not." The discourse is concluded with the words of the second Psalm: "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."

In the second sermon the preacher refers to the former, and appeals to the pastor's call as requiring him again to revert to the subject, "which shall now be done, with heart lifted up to God for His assistance." The text leads him to speak of these terrestrial convulsions as the work of God's hand. He divides them into natural and supernatural. The former proceed from natural causes, the latter are wrought immediately by God on signal occasions; for example, at the giving of the law of Sinai (Ex. 19: 18), the death of Christ (Matt. 27: 51), and at His resurrection (Matt. 28: 2). To this class the preacher assigns the recent commotion. "Since the basis of this country is rocky, the earthquake which recently occurred here seems to have been supernatural, and intended to signify that the wrath of God is revealed from high heaven against all ungodliness, and that plagues are about to come upon us for our wickedness." He then recites instances of these convulsions in other regions, such as Turkey, Italy and the West Indies, and adds, "In the year 1727 the neighboring province of New England was visited by an earthquake, on which occasion the distinguished Dr. Cotton Mather issued a small essay, under the title 'The Terror of the Lord,' with remarks on earthquakes, an edifying and godly work. In this land light earthquakes have also occasionally been felt, although hitherto with no injurious effects; but on the 7th of December there was one that set in commotion doors and windows, chairs and houses, and was noticed throughout the whole land."

Treating the occurrence as the work of Him "who shaketh the earth out of her place and the pillars thereof tremble," the preacher dwells on the almightiness of Jehovah as a consideration adapted to move and stir all classes of men not consciously at peace with Him,—the ignorant, the careless, the worldly-minded, the outwardly correct who make a Christ of appearances, the hypocrites and dissemblers, the convinced but not converted, the almost Christians, those who began well but turned aside, indeed, all ungodly, natural men. These are bidden to tremble, not in an affected way like the Quakers, nor with slavish fear like Felix, but with holy awe like Moses and the true children of God. For there is solid comfort offered to genuine mourners, viz., such as are contrite in heart, loathe themselves on account of their sins, fly to the Son of God as refuge and mediator, and are supremely anxious to do only that which is well pleasing in the sight of the Lord. The sermon concludes with the admirable advice of Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar, "Therefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee and break off thy sins by righteousness and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor, if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquility."

Few will concur with the colonial minister in his views of scismology or his conviction that the commotion was either a judgment upon the sins of the age or the precursor of such a judgment. But that it was a lively image of the final overthrow, that it testifies to the uncertainty of all sublunary things, and that it gives solemn warning to all who have no hope beyond this earth, is as true to-day as it was a century and a half ago. We speak of the solid globe, and the common phrase for perpetuity is "while the earth stands;" but the solidity of the globe is not inconsistent with frightful convulsions, and the earth at times quakes in such a way as to cause ruin or death to a multitude. But there is one thing stable when all else moves to and fro and the earth staggers like a drunken man. This is the city of God.

God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved:
God shall help her and that right early.

Believers, therefore, since they receive a kingdom that cannot be shaken, have reason in view of the rocking soil and falling tenements and crumbling walls of the recent disaster, to congratulate themselves on their unchangeable home, the heavenly Jerusalem.

For not like kingdoms of the world
Thy holy Church, O God!
Though earthquake shocks are threatening her,
And tempests are abroad;
Unshaken as eternal hills,
Immovable she stands,
A mountain that shall fill the earth,
A house not made with hands.

"Old Colony" Papers.

Notes from a Summer Journal.

READING-ROOM versus BAR ROOM.... A SABBATH MORNING....A MOONLIGHT NIGHT AMONG THE HILLS.

THE New York Nation recently remarked, that it knew of only two summer hotels which had real reading-rooms. I have been at one of these, this summer. There are plenty of hotels which pretend to have reading-rooms,—places where there are tables and inkstands and files of newspapers, and which are liberally furnished with spittoons. Here men may be found lounging for a smoke or a chat, or to read the daily paper or write a letter. But it is quite a different thing to find one of the largest and best rooms in the house, with the finest outlook and flooded with light and fresh air, the counterpart of the parlor and furnished with luxurious chairs and sofas, devoted to this purpose.

Here are writing tables and files of newspapers, but there is also an assortment of the best magazines and weeklies. Above all, there is a real library, limited of course, but admirably selected. There is a reference library of dictionaries, cyclopædias, concordances, commentaries and the like. And there is a choice collection of standard and current literature, secular and religious, composed of just the books one is in the mood to read on a summer vacation, and not one of which is there simply to fill up the shelves. Here may be seen at almost any hour of the day or evening a large proportion of the guests, including ladies and children, lured thither by an irresistible attraction. On days when the weather does not invite to out door haunts, the library is a veritable refuge to an otherwise listless company, and in the evenings it fairly holds its own against the parlor at the other end of the house. It need not be said that this not only is the most popular resort, but gives the keynote to the whole hotel life, taking off much of the bare, sensuous, commercial aspect, and giving to cultivated people a sense of coziness and homelikeness which "staying at a hotel" in this country rarely affords.

There are not a few of us who, thank God! can never have the home feeling without the home altar. And in this hotel the family worship is the feature of the day. The proprietor gathers his guests about him in the parlor after breakfast for a few moments spent in reading the Bible, singing a hymn, and prayer for God's blessing on themselves and the interests which are dear to them all. It is as gratifying as it is surprising to see the conformity of almost everyone to this voluntary service; and to most of the inmates it is not only not a yoke or an impertinence, but a decided addition to the comfort and the privileges of the house.

I confess to a fastidiousness of taste, which welcomes not only these positive advantages, but rejoices in a hotel where there is no bar-room, secret or obtrusive, and no vulgar smell of liquor or tobacco tainting the sweet country air; where no Sunday paper flaps its bat-like wings across the Sabbath light, and no excursion train breaks the peace of the Lord's day, and destroys the sense of religious retirement with God and nature.

It is Sabbath morning. That restful word is in tuneful harmony with the whole scene about me. I have stolen away to Pine Cliff to look and meditate, and read the journals of Maurice and Eugenie de Guerin, under the Crusoe-like thatch of the large and shady summer house which perches upon the rocky edge of this high and beetling crag. I am seventeen hundred feet above the dwellers by the sea. At my feet stretches, far below, a sunlit sea of living green, whose bed is scooped out among the great hills. I look sheer down upon the tops of pines, chestnuts, oaks, and all the shaggy and crowding trees of the wood. Here and there are patches of cleared land, stained yellow with the recent crops of rye or oats, or brown with the upturned soil, or variedly green with the tints of a vigorous and well-watered summer.

A few scattered houses and gray barns, as rude as the stony and stumpy soil on which they have been built, rather add to the wildness and ruggedness of nature. In the midst of them a little wayside chapel, with its miniature bell-tower, tells of a voice in this wilderness for God,—tells, too, that these praying and reading guests are not forgetful of the needy souls and the humble homes on which they look down from their hotel piazzas. In the distance Sky Top stands out in the clear morning light with its tower, marking the spot where America's other hotel reading-room nestles in the glen and by the lake below.

It is strangely suggestive to be sitting so far above the world, and so far out from the very mountain from which the rocky shelf projects, with the wooded earth breaking like a sea at your feet, and to let your imagination dive like the swallow or fly away like the dove or soar like the eagle over the wide and deep scene. It is as humbling to the heart as it is exalting to the mind. I am oppressed with a sense of vastness and solitude and silence, with the little place which man fills in creation after all, and the narrow and unsublime fret which is called life. I am in sympathy with hermits in their mountain refuges, with the Pisgah and Carmel hours of men who have withdrawn into the shadow of God, and talked with Him above the world, and looked over into Canaan, and heard "the still small voice" over all the din and glare of a quaking and electric scene.

The silence here is sublime, and absolute, except as it is dreamily broken by the crowing of a cock or the baying of a dog in the valley far away, or nearer by the drowsy hum of a bee, the gentle twitter of a bird, the sibilant song of an insect, or the flutter of a light breeze among the pines. And the Sabbath air is thuriferous with the scent of pine and sassafras and sweet fern and pennyroyal and wintergreen, and above all with the earthy and woodsy smell of the steaming soil.

It is so pleasant to the flesh and the spirit alike, that I am tempted to linger, and to miss the religious service in the parlor. It were easy to argue that God is here and in His holy temple, and that one might pray and meditate in quite as edifying a frame as in a temple made with hands—not to say, a hotel parlor. But I long ago learned the difference between a vague religious sentiment, however delightful and profitable in its place, and the "two or three gathered together in My name." General religiousness of mood needs to be concentrated by the act of definite worship, and by presence in a scene expressly dedicated thereto, to be crystallized into hymn and prayer, to be humanized by the fellowship of kindred minds, and directed by words of godly exposition and exhortation. So I take one more deep inhalation of the Sabbath spirit that sanctifies the hills and valleys, and mingle my little tide of devotional feeling with the sea of worship which already sounds through the open windows of Gains, mine host.

It is the last night of my sojourn among these hills and lakes. The scene is in striking contrast to that which I have just described. I am standing alone on the balcony which clings like a swallow's nest to the topmost story of the great hotel, which itself is planted on the very pinnacle of the mountain. The moon is riding, as round and bright as a ball of phosphorus, through a cloudless and almost starless sky. The lake far below me looks like a Plutonian shield of clouded steel, except where it flashes and sparkles in the angle of my vision with the direct rays of the moonlight. The white rocks gleam below me, checkered by the black shadows of the mountain pines which have thrust themselves through the sterile crevices.

I am enclosed by a foreground of dark wooded heights, on the farther side of the lake and across the deep valley on the left; but beyond, there reaches into indefinite space an undulating line of misty gray hills, silvered with the moonlight and like the mountains of a dream. Far as the eye can see, all is utter wilderness, a vast stillness, a suggestive solitude, seemingly another sphere and at heavenwide distances from the noisy and teeming "centres" of the world,—the vision which the psalmist had in his mind when he sighed, "Oh that I had wings like a dove! then would I fly away and be at rest; lo, then would I wander far off and lodge in the wilderness."

And yet the scene about me is quite as tranquillizing as that for which the Hebrew singer longed. The sounds are few, and all in harmony with the place and hour. I hear the continuous swash of wavelets on the beach, and the softer murmur of the pines in the gentle wooings of the night breeze. Out on the lake I catch the softened thud of oars, and the tinklings of a banjo. Now and then a boat shoots across the luminous belt of water, like an insect on the surface of a brook. From the moonlit bowers floats up to me the laughing talk of young men and merry maidens. I have not forgotten the intoxicating spell of a midsummer moonlight night like this upon young hearts, amid such wild and romantic scenery. I share the sentiment in all its vague and mystic suggestiveness, if not in its exhilaration; and I breathe a prayer that when their young dream has passed, they may awake to the "realties" of life to find them not less softened and glorified, by a light which never was on land or sea.

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

The Hindus of Southern India.

BY REV. JOHN H. WYCKOFF.

PART II.

THE rest of the Hindus of Southern India are included under the title of Out-castes. They number about one fifth of the population. Some have thought them to be aboriginal tribes anterior to the Sudras, but the more common opinion is that they are Dravidians, possibly some of them Aryans, who for various offences have been expelled from caste and reduced to their present position by long years of oppression. Theoretically, they are not supposed to have any caste, but in reality they have nearly as many divisions as the Sudras, and are almost as great sticklers for caste rights and privileges. By far the most numerous class among them are the Pariahs, who probably make up three-fourths of the whole. The hereditary position of the Pariahs is that of servants to the high-caste Sudras, by whom they are treated with the utmost severity. Many of them have sold themselves and their families for a few rupees into a servitude practically perpetual, since there is no hope of their being able to command a sum sufficient to redeem themselves.

Nearly all the servants to Europeans in India belong to this class. They are employed from necessity, since no respectable Sudra could be found who would perform many of the menial services required, such as killing and cooking beef, cleaning shoes, etc., against which the Pariah has no scruples. In recent years the military and police departments have been open to them, and some of them have attained considerable distinction in government service. In point of physical strength and courage they are superior to most of the other castes, and though naturally inferior in mental calibre, yet when opportunities are offered they show themselves capable of intellectual advancement. They follow the religion of the Brahmins, but have their own priests, called Valluvar, who are named in derision—the Brahmins of the Pariahs. Nearly all the educational efforts amongst them have been made by the missionaries, and as they advance in intelligence they usually accept Christianity, which raises their social position.

Next to the Pariahs, the most important of the out-caste races are the Chucklers or shoe-makers. In the Telugu country they are found in large numbers. They rank lower than the Pariahs, and live in separate hamlets, their occupation being held in detestation by all classes. A Pariah will no sooner take his meals with a Chuckler, than a Brahmin will eat with a Pariah. Although working in leather was their original calling, many of them now cultivate the soil, and they are said to be more industrious and thrifty than the Pariahs.

There are many other inferior castes, such as the Pallis, Pulias, Kuruvers, etc., but as they are only found in certain districts they do not deserve particular notice. The Brahmins and high-caste Sudras regard all the inferior classes with the utmost contempt, requiring them to live outside of the village, and not allowing them to approach within a certain number of paces from them. In giving evidence in court the low-caste man has to stand off at a distance and shout out his answers to the high-caste judge. In some districts, should a low-caste man when travelling on the public highway see one of high-caste in the distance, he sounds the note of warning that he is coming, and then hastens off the road, probably into the briars on the one side or into the mire on the other, lest the high-caste man be polluted. With the introduction of railways and schools, but above all with the spread of Christianity in India, these distinctions are gradually passing away, and there are cases where Pariah officials have high-caste Sudras and even Brahmins holding positions subordinate to them!

It will be interesting to inquire, before closing this article, from which castes the native Christians are chiefly drawn. The converts of the first Roman Catholic missionaries were principally Sudras, together with a few Brahmins. They were not required to make any renunciation of caste; and afterwards, when the lower classes applied to be received, the question of caste was compromised by erecting a partition in the church and having separate doors of entrance for the two classes. This was no doubt done with the hope that as the converts advanced in Christian knowledge they would cease to carry out class distinctions. But, although two hundred years have passed since Xavier and Robert de Nabali labored in India, the spirit of caste is as strong in their churches as ever. The early Lutheran missionaries of Tranquebar unfortunately adopted the same policy as the Roman Catholics, and even such good men as Ziegenbald and Swartz were deceived into thinking that with the spread of Christian principles caste would die of itself. But, as has been well said, in yielding to caste they took "a viper into their bosom." Even to this day in some churches of the Lutheran Mission two cups are used at the Lord's table, and native pastors of different castes refuse to eat in each other's houses.

It is a cause for thanksgiving that the missions which were established later profited by the experience of these early missionaries. With the single exception of the Leipsig Lutherans, named above, all the Protestant missions are one in requiring their converts to renounce caste with all its outward manifestations. The Conference held at Ootacamund in 1858 passed strong resolutions on the subject, which were unanimously reaffirmed by the Bangalore Conference in 1879.

There is no doubt that this change in the policy of the missions respecting caste has had a tendency to repel the higher classes from Christianity, for during the last thirty years the number of Brahmins and respectable Sudras that have come into the Church has been very small. The Christians of Tinnevelly, where the native Church has made the greatest advance, are largely of the Shanar caste, or palmyra-tree climbers, which is one of the lowest divisions of the Sudras. In the Madura Mission of the American Board, nearly all castes are represented, but the larger proportion of the converts are Pariahs; while in the Arcot Mission of the Reformed Church at least nineteen-twentieths are of this class. The Christians of the Baptist Mission among the Telugus, where there have been such large accessions, are principally of the shoe-maker caste; and those of the Guntoor Lutheran Mission chiefly shoe-makers and Pariahs.

It will thus be seen that by far the greater portion of the native Christians in the Madras Presidency are from the out-caste races and inferior castes of the Hindus. This may at first sight seem a discouraging feature of the missionary work; but a more careful inquiry will convince one that such is not the case. It is almost universally admitted, by those who are acquainted with the social and religious system of the Hindus, that it is better for Christianity to begin in the manner it has—from the lower classes and work upward. In no other way do we see how the pernicious caste distinctions which are the bane of Hindu society can be kept out of our churches. True, the native Church may be longer dependent upon the liberality of Christians in America, but she is more firmly established, her members are stronger and holier, and the spirit of unity and brotherly love that they exhibit is a constant rebuke to the proud caste spirit of the heathen. As the native Church advances in intelligence and influence, the high-caste Hindus cease to think of the low origin of her members, and are attracted by the kindness and love that they exhibit. Already the gulf that separates high-caste heathen from the native Christian community has been considerably narrowed, and the day will come when it will be completely bridged.

BOUNDBROOK, N. J.

Boston Letter.

SEPTEMBER 8th, 1886.

TWO hundred and fifty years! True, it seems only a dot on the ever-turning cycle of the ages, but in American history it is a long lapse, and Harvard College may justly be proud of a life spanning this space. Next November, the seventh day, it will be two hundred and fifty years since the General Court of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay passed a vote agreeing "to give four hundred pounds toward a school or college, whereof two hundred pounds shall be paid the next year and two hundred pounds when the work is finished, and the next Court to appoint where and what building." I wonder who made that motion thus to give away this marvellous amount. Doubtless, there were opponents into whose dull brains this motion had to be pounded hard before it would make any impression; but a wonderful issue of good has come from that proposal. To celebrate this anniversary Harvard intends, on Saturday, November 6th, to let its undergraduates make all the noise they please, with their literary exercises in the morning and athletic strifes in the afternoon; and blazing torches in the evening will give a crown to the day's proceedings. Sunday, the 7th, Foundation Day, Dr. F. G. Peabody will conduct commemorative exercises in Appleton Chapel in the morning, and Dr. Phillips Brooks in the evening. All clerical graduates are requested, wherever they have a pulpit, to echo in their services the jubilant blast at Cambridge. Monday, the 8th, Alumni Day, James Russell Lowell will give an oration and Oliver Wendell Holmes a poem. On the General Committee of Arrangements I notice these among the prominent names: George Bancroft, F. H. Hedge, W. H. Furness, A. P. Peabody, Robert C. Winthrop, E. R. Hoar, J. H. Thayer, G. F. Hoar, T. W. Higginson, Wm. C. Endicott, Alex. Agassiz, C. F. Adams, Jr., and Robert T. Lincoln. Harvard has brightened the American galaxy with its share of stars.

Monday, "Labor Day," went off with a grand hurrah in Boston. Thousands of wage-workers were in line, the hat makers preceded by a tremendous drum and bearing aloft an enormous chapeau; the bakers in white carrying in each pair of arms a long and well-browned loaf; the brick layers displaying an immense trowel; the carpenters sporting a leviathan saw that was inscribed "set on eight hours;" the cigar makers illustrating on a barge their superfluous profession and scattering specimens amid the scrambling crowd, and—so on. It was a very creditable, orderly and happy celebration. A more significant event on "Labor Day" was the acceptance by the new State Board of Arbitration of a declaration of methods which will be scattered broadcast. Employer and employé are invited to bring their differences before this Board for settlement in an amicable manner. When I think of a long continued fight that has echoed discordantly amid the shoe shops at Brockton and around the tan-pits of Salem and Peabody, I welcome the announcement that our State Board has not only gone into office, but, hanging hat and coat on the nail, propose to all interested parties business at once.

There has been much to unsettle business in Boston since the present year opened. Recently, have been serious defalcations, and among these that of William Gray, Jr., a descendant of an old-time, famous Boston merchant, "Billy Gray." How tragic was the defaulter's death! From South Boston Heights one sees the shapely range of highlands known as the Blue Hills, only a few miles away, their highest summit in the town of Milton. I have again and again enjoyed the rare suburban view from this high standpoint. When Gray knew that he would be obliged to face his defalcations, he went home one Monday morning, harnessed up his horse and buggy, and drove off to the lonely hills. Tying his horse to a tree, he climbed the mountain path, made his way over rough rocks and jagged stumps, and reached a cluster of pine trees whose branches drooped above a big flat rock. There he lay down and with a revolver ended his life. The body was not found until Wednesday. There it was in that tragic seclusion, the rain, Monday night, dripping down as if in sorrow on the pale, silent features that felt not their touch, that heard not the moan of the lonely wind murmuring over the bleak mountain-top. Suddenly said justice had been defeated by this suicide. To my mind, it was a terrible penalty self-inflicted, this lifting of the transgression to the height of that mountain-top, this awful dying, as it were, in the sight of all men, this open branding of the family name with a disgrace burnt in deep. Mr. Gray's prominence in Boston's social circles gave the sin and its punishment an unusual publicity.

As it is now September, we are slowly getting over "vacation." The Boston schools this year begin the second Monday in the month, and any school-boy knows that this means one more blessed week than the old arrangement. There has been a big country rush this year, and in spite of dull times, failing resources, and empty pockets, more people than ever get away from summer to summer. They come back with new thoughts from new experiences and new scenes. We speak of a change of scene. What a picture I witnessed one summer, looking off one early hour. Behind me were the dark green marshes, and around me the emerald of the coast grass fringing the sand-hummock under my feet. A broad strip of sand bordering the ocean showed a strange, rich shade of olive. The water beyond was so blue, such a cold, freezing indigo, but how warm with color were the heavens in the east above that chilling sea! A great fold of cloud dropped low the gayest fringes of gold and crimson. Were invisible hands arranging a dais for the throne of the coming king? As the time for the monarch's appearance approached, those colors in the sky became sharper, more golden, more crimson, and yet the sea was cold and blue as ever. Toward the shore, though, there were little shining waves, as if some of the arrows of the coming light had gone over the main body of the sea and dropped near the beach. Was not that tinting artistic?

I would like to shift the train of thought to one that is the very opposite of the æsthetic, and ask a question: Do you believe in the sea serpent? It has been a prominent subject for vacation discussion this summer. Though sneered at, yet there has been very sincere testimony given in the direction of such a monster's existence, a Boston teacher who, I understand, is a Congregational deacon, solemnly declaring in print that with his own eyes he saw the "critter." Cape Ann seems to be one of its favorite haunts. Do I believe in the sea serpent? Yes, I am strongly inclined to think that some day it will all be proved to be true, that there is such a being as the sea serpent, and, as Prof. Agassiz has been asserted to say in substance, that in the list of marine wonders a sea serpent had a place logically, my inclination toward belief has been strengthened.

Just now another snake, that twisting, slippery, gigantic evil, Drink, is attracting attention. The subject of temperance is arousing to still greater heat its already warm advocates in Maine. The parsons of this State will soon convene in Worcester, rallying round "the bottle" not to admire but break it if they can. The call for this convention comes from such clergymen as Dr. D. O. Mears, Secretary Woodworth, of the American Missionary Association, and Dr. Daniel Dorchester. This intensified agitation is significant If any political party is inclined to sneer at these movements, and refuses to notice them, it will be so much the worse for the party, as in the case of mule versus locomotive.

Now that we are giving attention to Drink, let us not forget Drug. As I have previously said, opium ought to receive our attention. The use of it has increased, is increasing. I had occasion lately to refer to De Quincey. There was Samuel Taylor Coleridge, whose philosophical studies helped bring the Germans to England. If he does not take special rank as an original investigator in the sphere of philosophic thought, he certainly was a brilliant reflector of the light of others. If not a sun, he is a very bright star. At one time Coleridge was an opium eater. He knew what it was to wear those chains which move without noise and yet so often bind like death. He broke away, though, from this bondage, and while his habit is a warning to those who are tempted to begin this course, his final victory is an encouragement to those who would leave it off.

There soon will be something to communicate in the ecclesiastical world. Just now, the great denominational gatherings elsewhere are beginning to receive special notice. Unitarians are looking toward Saratoga, Episcopalians toward Chicago, and Congregationalists are thinking of Des Moines and Chicago. At the Board meeting in Des Moines the retribution question will be likely to find place in its relation to missions. I notice an earnest voice from the West saying, "Don't bring it up." Discussion may be averted, but a question uppermost in men's thoughts is not likely to be sunk down out of hearing.

NEPONSET.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

The New Second Reformed Church of Harlem, N. Y.

THE first service in the buildings recently erected for the Second Church of Harlem was held last Sabbath morning. The situation of the church is one likely to lead to eminent usefulness. It is at the corner of 123d street and 6th avenue, in a district of growing importance, and with a population of over 200,000 souls. The buildings, church, chapel and parsonage, are near completion, and the dedication will take place on Thursday, September 30th. They from a handsome group. The architecture is Old English Gothic, and the material of the walls is a sandstone peculiar for its softness at the time it is cut, which hardens by exposure to air and light, and becomes more durable with age. The spire of the church building is one hundred and ninety feet high; the vestibule is paved with French tiles, the Mosaic work being of great beauty. The windows of colored glass are enriched with familiar sacred emblems and monograms. The Rose Window is very lovely. The entire cost of the buildings and their appointments will be $150,000.

The service of Sunday morning was conducted in the chapel by the Rev. G. Hutchinson Smyth, who has vacated the pulpit of the First Church, in which he has been eminently successful for five years, to take charge of the new parish. The chapel, which seats about five hundred, was crowded. The service from the beginning to the end was impressive. Much attention was given to the musical part. "The Lord is mindful of His own," from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," and the canticle, "O be joyful in the Lord," by C. B. Rutenber, who has become the organist of the church, were sung with excellent effect by the choir, and the congregation joined in several hymns with reverent fervor.

The sermon was worthy of the occasion. The pastor, the Rev. G. Hutchinson Smyth, is an Irishman by birth, and was formerly a Presbyterian. He has accomplished much in the past and there are hopeful signs for the future. His address is easy and familiar, with a touch of humor worthy of his race, but never aiming at effect. He preaches the Old yet ever New Gospel, with directness and eloquence. His voice is sweet and sympathetic, and his face beams with "good will" to his fellow men. A strong man with a purpose, a brave man for Christ, a man to govern and lead by love. True to the traditions of the Reformed Church, he read just before preaching from the symbols of its faith,—the Heidelberg and the Westminster Catechisms. The text of the sermon was 2 Corinthians 8:5, and the theme was the Apostolic injunction in regard to Christian giving; it must be liberal, voluntary, cheerful. The generous heart is happy; the miser is miserable. "The Second Church of Harlem," he said, "is not established in a spirit of petty rivalry toward other churches. It trus s for its prosperity to the mission it has to perform in the neighborhood." Those who would know how to give of their substance must take in the first place an important step; they must "give themselves unto the Lord." That is a "home mission" work none should dare to postpone. The Apostles had to tarry in Jerusalem until they themselves had received the blessing of the Holy Ghost. Not until a man has gained the victory over his own prejudices and sins, can he serve God. He spoke earnestly to the young people in the congregation, and of the work the Second Church expected of them; adding, with a radiant expression on his face, "I love these children, my brethren, and if you find me in heaven, I hope you will find the children of my parish with me." The first essential to faith in God, is faith in God's Word, and in what it declares of man; of his sin, of the Divinely provided escape from sin in Christ. What rational man can deny that he is a sinner? Every man knows he is, by conscience, experience, and the conviction of sin by the Holy Spirit. No man will lend another a thousand dollars without a sufficient bond. Men are in distrust of each other, afraid of each other, till, by Divine Grace, they are changed in spirit and nature. New men love one another and can serve each other and serve God. They can serve God even when He commands them to do things that appear impossible to the natural man, to human experience, to human precedent.

He reminded his hearers that some months ago, when they set themselves to the great work on which they were entering, a gentleman, a merchant of New York, had said: "All that I am, and have, and hope to be and to have, I now and forever devote to the Lord." That was a grandly Christian purpose, and worthy of emulation by all. "Those noble words," said the preacher, "have been ringing in my heart ever since; they have gone with me everywhere. I have heard them above the voice of the sea; and on the moors and the mountains, in my far distant native land. In our worship here let us join not only our hands but our hearts, and we shall strengthen each other's moral life, and our Church will live in an atmosphere of spiritual joy. This spot of the earth will be the better for our living, and souls in glory will rejoice with us." G.

....OUR FOREIGN MISSIONS.—The Executive Committee at its last meeting appointed Mr. John A. Otte, M.D., a medical missionary to China. Dr. Otte was granted permission to spend a year in the Netherlands in the further prosecution of his studies at the University of Utrecht, and in presenting the cause of missions to China among the Reformed churches of Holland. The Board was invited to take this course by Mr. Vant Lindenhout, who founded and is at the head of the large Orphanage at Neesbosch, and has recently made an extended tour in this country. Assurances are also given by him that, as the result, the interest of many churches in the Netherlands in the missions of our Church will be awakened and probably take substantial shape, and that thus the Reformed churches in the two countries will be brought into close relations of acquaintance, sympathy and co-operation.

Mr. William I. Chamberlain was also formally appointed to join the Arcot Mission. Mr. Chamberlain will spend the fall and winter in visiting the churches in the interest of missions, and be in readiness to proceed to India in the spring with Dr. Chamberlain.

The Board has received, with expressions of hearty thanks, from Mr. James A. Williamson, for many years a member of its Executive Committee, the valuable gift of a portrait of his uncle, the Rev. David Abeel, whose name has so long been held in honor among us, and by whose suggestion the Amoy Mission was established in 1844. Additional value attaches to the portrait as the work of the late Prof. S. F. B. Morse.

....PORT JERVIS, N. Y.—The Reformed Church, whose spire was taken off by the gale in February, is again ready for public worship. During the past six months the congregation has worshipped in the chapel, where they have had very comfortable accommodations, although somewhat straightened. They now re-enter the sanctuary, which has been made more beautiful and attractive than ever.

A neat spire, in harmony with the architectural design of the church front, has taken the place of the one destroyed. While not so high by about twenty feet, in other respects it presents a marked improvement upon the old one. The changes in the interior are very great and elicit expressions of unbounded admiration. The ceiling overhead has been covered with ash; the side walls have been beautifully tinted in modest, chaste colors; the entire woodwork within either painted or varnished; an elegant new carpet placed upon the floors; the cushions newly covered; new pulpit furniture supplied; a place fitted up for the choir at the side of the pulpit and made exceedingly attractive in appearance, and to crown the whole a noble organ, the gift of the Farnum brothers, placed in the rear of the desk. This instrument, besides possessing all that richness of tone for which the Odell organs are celebrated, is ornamented in a manner to harmonize admirably with the colors of the room, and is one of its most attractive features. The whole interior of the church when lighted up by night presents a scene of rare beauty.

The church was first re-opened to the public on Tuesday evening, Sept. 7th, at an organ recital by Henry Eyre Browne, of the Tabernacle Church, Brooklyn, when a large audience was present and were furnished with a musical treat such as is rarely enjoyed. On Sunday, the 12th inst., public religious services were held for the first time, both morning and evening, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Dr. G. Talmage, assisted at the morning service by the Rev. Dr. Mills. Large audiences were present at both services, which were of the most interesting character.

An admirable discourse, well suited to the occasion, was preached by the pastor in the morning from 1 Kings 6:7. After a fitting allusion in the opening to the circumstances connected with the assembling anew in the sanctury after a period of six months, some points of resemblance between the building of Solomon's Temple and the erection of God's great spiritual temple, consisting of redeemed souls, now going forward throughout the whole world, were presented. At the evening service the discourse was founded upon Ps. 122:1, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord," and contained some suitable thoughts as to what constitutes the house of the Lord and the feelings that should characterize those who attend upon its services.

This church and congregation have much reason for thankfulness and joy. The desolations of their sanctuary have been more than repaired. Everything connected with the church edifice and with its worship has been made unusually attractive and inviting. And, with these, spiritual blessings have been bestowed to an extent that has been most gratifying. Several accessions have been made to the membership from the world at the last two communions, of such a character as to greatly cheer the hearts of God's people and to inspire the hope of yet richer blessings to follow. The church can "sing of mercy as well as of judgment,"—of mercies flowing out of calamities. M.

....THE COMMITTEE OF THE CLASSIS OF WISCONSIN appointed for that purpose, organized a Reformed (Holland) Church at Englewood, Ill., on August 25th, 1886, of thirty-five members, nearly all members of the First Reformed Church of Chicago. Two elders and two deacons were chosen. Englewood is between Chicago and Roseland, about seven miles distant from each. At present there are living in the vicinity more than a hundred families, the number increasing greatly every year; also there will, with God's blessing and a suitable pastor, within a short time be a strong Reformed Church. B. B.

....HUDSON, N. Y.—The First Reformed Church will celebrate its semi-centennial anniversary on Sunday, the 26th, and Monday, the 27th inst. The sermon on the morning of the 26th will be preached by Rev. D. D. Demarest, D.D., the oldest of the former pastors of the church now living. The subject of this discourse will be "The Church a Witness for God." The evening sermon will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Gleason, the present pastor, upon "The Essentials of a True Church." On Monday afternoon a review of the history of the church for the half century will be given by Mr. Stephen B. Miller, and in the evening a social reunion will be held in the parlors of the church. The occasion promises to be one of considerable interest.

....THE SCHOOL OF THE COLLEGIATE R. D. CHURCH reopened on Tuesday of last week under favorable auspices. All of the teachers were present, and most of the pupils. There was an accession of several new scholars, and all looked bright and cheery after the summer vacation. Rev. Kenneth F. Junor, M.D., was present, and during the opening exercises addressed the scholars on the necessity and importance of exercise for the development and growth of all their God given powers, spiritual, intellectual and physical, and urged upon all to be actively and earnestly engaged in their various duties and to diligently improve the coming season in acquiring the means of future usefulness in the Church and in the world.

Parents may apply for the admission of their children on any school day, from nine to three o'clock, at DeWitt Institute, 160 West 29th street.

....KERHONKSON, N. Y.—By a misprint last week it was said that the Mission Band of the Reformed Church have been gathering "grapes." Perhaps they have; but the word ought to have been "grasses."

Of the distribution of profitable reading matter among the men and their families who live on the canal boats, the Rev. Mr. Darrach, the pastor of the Reformed Church, writes: "Our supply of boatmen's papers is exhausted and the demand and appreciation is increasing. Those most sought after are St. Nicholas, Harper's Young People and The Youth's Companion, of which we have a dozen volumes bound in strong paper—they are eagerly sought for. If kind friends can send us more, the harvest of interest and improvement is sure. The Christian Herald, Christian Weekly, British Workman, and papers of that sort, are also very useful; but our applicants will read anything sound and healthy. Our library for lending now numbers 200 paper bound volumes and magazines, and 100 bound books. Those who are disposed to send papers, magazines or books, which will interest and benefit our boatmen and their families, will please address Rev. W. B. Darrach, Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., New York.

North Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: The following statement appeared in your issue of September 15th: "A strong united effort was recently made by the Reformed Church to save a costly church building in North Brooklyn, by removing the embarassing debt with which it was encumbered. The effort proved successful. Will the call to save a church organization, young, vigorous and promising, by providing a building for it fail of success?"

I think this statement needs qualification, lest it give rise to a misconception. I was installed pastor of the North Church on January 13th, 1886, and found a debt of $20,000 upon the property and the parsonage gone; $1,500 salary was promised me. This was made up of $1,000, which depended on the respect paid by the churches in the South Classis of Long Island to a resolution passed by that Classis October 20th, 1885, appropriating $1,000 for the North Church, and 500, depending on the good will of the Board of Domestic Missions. I felt convinced that the debt would prevent accessions to our numbers, and the consistory concluded to try and reduce it to $10,000, which is the largest amount that the actual condition of the church will permit them to carry. I agreed to apply the $1,000 promised by Classis to this purpose, and to get in addition $500 from personal friends. The North Church was to do what it could. Moreover, I made urgent and repeated appeals in person and by letter to ministers and consistories of some 200 churches in our denomination, and received assurances of sympathy in abundance and promises of help from many.

To day the situation is this: Our interest bearing debt is now $12,000, to which must be added the $400 mentioned below as borrowed from the Church Building Fund, and which is now due. So it appears that we have paid off $8,000 of the $10,000 needed to secure our future. This $8,000 is made up as follows:

From churches of South Classis	$225 00
From other churches outside of South Classis	771 21
Total		$996 21
Loan from Collegiate Church (5 years without interest)	$1,000 00
Loan from Church Building Fund (now due)	400 00
Loan Total		$1,400 00
Gifts of individuals in Brooklyn		5,603 79
Total		$8,000 00

Of the remaining $2,000, $1,200 is promised by churches and individuals, and the pastor became responsible for $800, to be paid next year if he can get any salary. In view of what we have already done, and the great assistance promised us as soon as we reach the $10,000 limit, some body ought to give us $800 + $400 right away. The paragraph is in error, therefore, when it says that "the strong united effort made by the Reformed Church" (which has produced $996.21) "has proved successful in removing the embarrassing debt."

Perhaps we have been too persistent in asking for outside help, and we may, therefore, ourselves have furnished ground for the impression that most of our aid has come from other churches. If so, we desire to correct that impression, and this the figures above given should do. We have not yet received the help which we think the merit of this work entitles it to, and we should be ashamed to believe that the $996.21 received to date has materially crippled the general benevolence of the Church. We are anxious to reduce our debt to $10,000. For when this is done $5,000 is available without interest provided the balance can be placed on the same terms before January, 1887.

In the paragraph quoted above, stress seems to be laid upon the effort made to "save a building." We, who are on the ground, care for the "building" only for the sake of the people who worship in it, and the good it enables them to do to the community about them. This 20th Ward of Brooklyn has a population of 27,000, (the greater portion of which are American Protestants), and church accommodations for about 10,000. One of these men, a mason and builder, told me last week that he was as much of a heathen as he would be if living in Africa.

In despite of our embarrassments, and the uncertainties of the future, we have received 20 into our communion since March, 1886, and have a list of 17 from our immediate vicinity who hope to unite with us at the earliest opportunity. One hundred and one persons were present at our last communion. We, too, are making sacrifices that we may live. All services in behalf of the church are voluntary, except the sexton's duty, and to secure uniformity, the pastor at a recent meeting proposed to divide even this duty among the members of the church, in order to economize on the meagre salary now paid to the sexton for his excellent service. The proposition was not accepted because the sexton volunteered to donate a part of his labors.

There is to-day in all our land no better field than that which the city of Brooklyn presents to the enterprise of the Reformed Church in America.

WILLIAM D. PERRY,
95 Adelphi street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

SEPTEMBER 16th, 1886.

....SOUTH BRANCH, N. J.—The lawn festival, recently held under the auspices of the Ladies' Benevolent Society of the Reformed Church, netted the Society over $60.

....GREENVILLE, N. J.—The church was opened on Sunday, September 12th, after being closed during the summer for improvements. The interior has been newly painted and carpeted, new furniture put in, and a new and valuable Sunday-school library added.

...PERSONAL.—The Rev. John L. Stillwell, of Athenia, N. J., has accepted a call from the Church of Bloomingburgh, N. Y., which was made vacant by the death of the Rev. James B. Wilson in April....The Rev. W. A. Wurts has resigned at Woodstock, N. Y., and accepted a call from the Church of Berne, N. Y....The Rev. J. F. Zwemer, of Alto, Wis., has accepted the call of Alton, Iowa.

....A GOLDEN WEDDING.—Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson Lines, of West Thirty fifth street of this city, celebrated their golden wedding a few days ago. The minister who married them fifty years ago, their two married daughters with their husbands, and a select company of friends, were gathered around a bountiful wedding feast, and participated in the enjoyment of a very pleasant evening. Mr. and Mrs. Lines were born, baptized and reared in the Reformed Dutch Church, and have for it a strong affection. They are still in vigorous health, and a calm trust in God has evidently tempered for them the power of time and of the inevitable troubles of life.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met last Monday morning at the Synod Rooms, 34 Vesey street, when the Rev. David Cole, D.D., read a paper on the subject: "Paul a Castaway," being an exegesis of 1 Cor. 9:27. The subject was warmly discussed by many of the members. Next Monday morning the Rev. Dr. E. A. Reed will read an essay on "The Liturgical Position of the Reformed Church." All ministers of the Reformed Church are cordially invited to attend.

....THIRTY-FOURTH STREET CHURCH, N. Y.—The pastor, Rev. James M. Dickson, D.D., who returned home last week after an absence of nine weeks, during which he visited California, Oregon and Washington Territory, addressed his people on Sabbath evening on "The Lessons on Christian Duty," suggested by such a trip. His plea was for greater zeal in the work of Domestic Missions; for more of the Gospel for the great growing West. C.

...NEPERAN, N. Y. (UNIONVILLE).—The ladies' fair held September 8th and 9th was a gratifying success. It resulted in a net profit of $300. An autograph quilt, gotten up under the supervision of the pastor's wife, Mrs. P. A. Wessels, realized $61.80. At the close of the fair Mr. and Mrs. Wessels were pleasantly surprised by a present from the congregation of a richly trimmed and painted clock with bracket.

Memorial.

THE Rev. Abram Thompson died at Readington, N. J., on Saturday last. He had suffered for two years from cerebral meningitis. The chief and most honorable fact in regard to his ministry is that, with the exception of two years when he filled the position of Rector of Rutgers College Grammar School, he had labored as a missionary at home. After graduating from Rutgers College in 1857 and from the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick in 1861, he devoted himself to the work of a teacher in an academy and a preacher at Pella, Iowa.

In this work he was successfully engaged for ten years. During a part of 1871 and and 1872 he was the pastor of the church at Pekin, Ill., when he returned to Pella and served the Second Church for two years. Then followed the Rectorship of the Gram mar School at New Brunswick. In 1877 he was chosen as the pastor of the Knox Memorial Chapel in this city, to which he ministered faithfully until prostrated by disease about two years ago. Twenty-one years of home missionary service constitute a record worthy of remembrance. During a large portion of his residence in this city Mr. Thompson was the efficient Stated Clerk of the Classis of New York. His death will be lamented by hundreds in the West and the East, including many led by him to a knowledge of the preciousness of the Redeemer and many whom he prepared for usefulness and encouraged in the outset of their career. Abram Thompson has been taken from us, but an inspiring example remains with us.

The General Outlook.

....The American Board will hold its seventy-seventh annual meeting at Des Moines, Iowa, in the Grand Opera House, beginning Tuesday, October 5th, at 3 o'clock P M., and closing Friday morning, October 8th. The Rev. J. L. Withrow, D.D., of Boston, will preach the annual sermon on Tuesday evening.

....The National Council of the Congregational Church is to be held in the Union Park Church, Chicago, beginning Oct. 13th.

....The Reformed Church of France is small in numbers but strong in influence. She numbers only 750,000 out of a population of over 30,000,000. And yet in the cabinet of ex-President McMahon, out of nine ministers five were Protestants. A Catholic once asked him why when there were so few Protestants he had so many in his cabinet. He answered that he could not help it, it was because they told the truth. It is a very interesting fact that at the Sorbonne, the University of France, which drove Calvin out of Paris and condemned Protestants in the severest terms, the rector of the faculty of the Sorbonne is to-day a Protestant. Out of the French Chamber of Deputies one-twelfth of them are Protestants. And they are not the smallest twelfth by any means. They are very influential in that Chamber. The name of Dr. Pressense, who is a life member of the Chamber of Deputies, is sufficient to indicate the character and strength of the Protestants there. Most, if not all of these, are members of the Reformed Church of France, the old Huguenot Church.—The Moravian.

....The Wesleyans of Great Britain, at their late Conference in London, gave earnest consideration to the religious condition of the great city of London. More than $100,000 are spent yearly by this Church in building chapels in London, and the attendance upon Methodist worship has increased by 56 per cent in twenty years. They propose, in addition to other efforts, to found a great West End Mission in a district of the city four miles long and two miles broad, where there is no Methodist church.

....The Presbyterian Observer alluding to Bishop William Taylor's work in Africa, says: "He has begun two chains of missions across Africa, and hopes to start two more during the year. His missions are founded upon principles novel but sound. He enters into agreement with chief and people, agreeing on his part to import good preachers and teachers from the New World free of expense to the tribe, and to purchase tools and machinery for industrial schools. The chief and his people, on their part, are required to give a thousand acres of land for each school-farm; to clear and plant, immediately, a few acres of the farm, to provide subsistence for the preachers and teachers; to build houses for the workers, and to pay a small monthly fee for the tuition of day scholars. Boys and girls may work for their tuition. Those wishing a full course, must be allowed to remain in the school at least five years. By this agreement the natives are made to feel that they have made a valuable acquisition, and the mission is at once put upon a permanent, self-supporting basis."

....The Methodist Advocate defends the Northern Methodist Church against the allegation in the Southern Christian Advocate, that it had "not been eminently successful in its work among freedmen," with these words: "It seems to us that the reception of more than two hundred thousand colored people into our Church in less than twenty years, is rather a conspicuous achievement. That is almost half as many members as the Church South has altogether. Then the thirty institutions of learning and the thousands of churches which we have established for the freedmen since the war, would indicate that we have been somewhat 'eminently successful' among these people."

....Ladies of wealth are beginning to consider their duty in regard to the education of their sex, and are apportioning some of their possessions to this purpose. Lately a Miss Gamble in England, left nearly one hundred thousand dollars to Girton College, the most conspicuous Women's College in Great Britain.—Presbyterian.

....Maharanee Surnomoyce, a generous Hindoo lady in Calcutta, has given $75,000 to found a hall of residence for native women students of medicine. The government has contributed ground for the building.

....An exchange says: "With their usual large-heartedness the Orphanage girls at Bareilly, India, when they heard of the proposed church among the new converts in the Jungal, put their heads together and by grinding grain and in other ways earned pice enough to make nearly three dollars. Such giving brings its own reward."

....The St. Louis Methodist Advocate says: "During the Conference year, now soon to close, there has been a larger ingathering of members to the Methodist denomination in Missouri than in any one of the last ten or fifteen years. They have been gathered by hundreds and in some parts of the State by thousands."

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 15.—It is stated that alterations made in the last moment in Parnell's Land bill have only served to increase the government's dislike of the measure. All members of the Conservative party and a number of Liberal Unionists will oppose the second reading....It is stated that the Porte has informed the Bulgarian Government that Turkey accepts Prince Alexander's abdication, and promises not to occupy Bulgaria so long as the country is quiet and law and order are preserved....The Sultan demands the evacuation of Egypt by the English, and Russia supports the demand....A collision occurred between a passenger and freight train on the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railway thirty miles from Buffalo. Seventeen lives were lost. The engineer of the freight train is blamed, and immediately disappeared....The "Gracie Barker," thought to have been lost, is all right, having run into Petroskey until the storm passed over ...A man who murdered Mayor Bowman of East St. Louis in November, 1885, has confessed his guilt and is now in Covington, Tenn., in jail. He says he was employed by a vice-president of a railway company, who paid him $2,000 to kill Bowman. ....The rebuilding of Charleston is delayed by the high wages demanded by the workmen... The N. Y. State Labor Assembly meeting, at Syracuse, yesterday approved boycotting.

THURSDAY, 16.—It is stated that the provisions which were expected to make Mr. Parnell's Land bill acceptable have disappeared, and everybody is surprised, including his Liberal allies. The prospects of a quiet winter in Ireland and elsewhere have not improved during the last few days.... Cholera is rapidly increasing in Austria. The people are afraid to trust the doctors and conceal their sick as long as possible. The people are too much frightened to help one another....A suspension bridge across the Ostrawitza river in Moravia fell in yesterday while a squadron of Uhlans was riding across. Seven persons were killed and many injured....It is stated that when Daly, the dynamiter, was arrested there were found in his house in Birmingham letters from Brennan which prove it was Daly's intention to obtain admission to the strangers' gallery in the House of Commons and throw a bomb on the table during the debate; the Parnellites, of course, would be cautioned to absent themselves on that day. If Daly's plan had been carried out every leading statesman in the House on both sides, including Mr. Gladstone, would have been killed or maimed....The list of the dead in the railroad accident thirty miles from Buffalo now numbers twenty-three. The engineer is still missing....Claude B. Laselle, son of a well-known shirt manufacturer of New York city, was arrested in Chicago and taken to Boston, Mass., to answer to the charges of forgery and other crimes committed in Boston....Brooklyn, Iowa, partly destroyed by fire. Total loss $100,000....Great Britain sets foot on Thaso, an island in the Egean Sea, and Turkey is alarmed ...The French are reported as seizing the lands of the Christian missions in the New Hebrides....460 Apaches from Arizona reach St. Louis on their way to Florida ...The imprisoned miners near Scranton, Penn., not yet reached ... Lieut. Foster, of the "Minnesota," the quartermaster and some of the crew, reassert that they saw the sea serpent off 27th street, North river.

FRIDAY, 17.—The total number of cholera cases in Japan since its first appearance this year is 59,000, of which 37,000 have died. At Torai, Corea, 6,000 deaths are reported in one month....The celebration of Independence Day in Mexico passed off with great eclat. The decorations cost $70,000. ....England, Austria and Italy have recognized the Bulgarian regency ...Thirteen missionaries left Boston yesterday to go to foreign lands. Seven were young women who go to take positions in the seminaries of Brouse, Adabazar, Adana, and Martin, in Turkey, and Ahmednagar in India. The others go to Central Turkey, Japan and India.

(Continued on page thirteen.)

Our Contributors.

A Sermon of Figures.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN BY TALBOT W. CHAMBERS, D.D.

IN the second volume of his "Missionsstunden," Dr. G. Warneck offers to his readers an article bearing this title, the substance of which is herewith reproduced.

There are various sources from which a preacher can select his texts. The most common and natural is the Bible, from which so many thousands of sermons have been taken, yet the source is still unexhausted, as it always will be. Nature also furnishes material. The heavens declare the glory of God, and the smallest worm is a miracle of His wisdom and goodness. The world is full of images, and when we see the invisible in the visible and learn from the kingdom of nature the laws of the kingdom of heaven, we follow the example of the pattern of all preachers. So, too, history, sacred and secular, abounds with themes. It is very instructive to trace the ways of God, and see how all lines of human progress are guided by Him whose kingdom ruleth over all. But on this occasion the text is sought not from the Bible or nature or history, but from a source usually deemed the dryest and most tedious—figures. It is not true that figures never lie, and often statistics are at fault; and in the things of the kingdom they have only a dubious worth, since here there is weighing rather than counting, and the outward appearance is not regarded, but the heart. Still there is need of discrimination. Figures are instructive, and even in the kingdom of God statistics may edify if taken cum grano salis. The significant part they play in missions I will now endeavor to show.

THE WORLD'S POPULATION.

Many learned men have sought to ascertain the number of the earth's inhabitants, but they have not reached a sure result, because there are so many countries in Asia and Africa where a census has never been taken, and one can only estimate the actual fact. Still, in such vast numbers an error of a few millions more or less is not of much account, and we may accept the conclusions of statisticians as at least an approximation to the number of immortal beings on the face of the earth. This is not less than 1,434 millions. 1,434 millions! How easy to utter the words; but how hard to conceive clearly what they mean? A skilful reckoner can count 6,000 in an hour, but if he worked ten hours a day it would take seventeen days to count a million. The million, if laid in a pile one upon another, would make a column higher than the spire of the Cologne Cathedral. Ah, we cannot form a distinct conception of 1,434 millions. But God the Lord hath counted them; He calleth them all by name; not one faileth. Not only that, He cares for them all and guides all their ways. They make the household of our heavenly Father, and He gives them their food in due season. What a testimony do their numbers furnish to His power, wisdom and love!

But these millions all have immortal souls. Everyone of them is an individuality, not merely as the brute, a specimen of his species, but an independent personal being, of more worth in the eyes of God than the whole irrational creation. Each one, too, has his own history, and God knows his thoughts and feelings, his joys and sorrows, and He directs his way according to His wise counsel, so that not a hair falls from his head without Him. What a multifarious, many-sided thing is the Divine government of the world! Still more, widely as these millions differ among themselves, in one point there is no difference,—they are all sinners. Neither in Europe nor any other part of the earth is there a single man able of himself to acquire a righteousness that is of avail before God and so gain a title to eternal life. White and black, civilized and savage, all alike are under the power and the condemnation of sin. Fourteen hundred and thirty-four millions of men in this condition—what a mighty power is needed to save such a mass of corruption, and what a tender-hearted love to attempt to save such a multitude of sins and sinners! But we read, God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son. He alone could and would save these lost millions. Save them all? Yes, all, for everyone that believes in Him does not perish but has everlasting life. What a love it is that takes in all these varied millions! The Lord Jesus understood the breadth of this love, and hence He said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," tell it to all the millions in Asia and Europe and Africa and America and Australia that God has sent me into the world, that I am its Saviour and that my blood is the propitiation for the sins of the whole world. What a work it is? To make the Gospel known to all these millions, to invite them to the Saviour that they may believe on Him and be baptized into the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost. This, this is the work of missions.

RELIGIOUS CHARACTER.

And what has it so far accomplished? I will answer in figures. Now more than a fourth part of mankind, viz., over 400 millions, are at least nominal Christians. Of the rest seven millions are Jews, 175 millions Mohammedans, 800 millions heathen. At first glance it seems very small that almost 1,900 years since the command was given only a fourth part of the race is in any sense Christian. And truly it is a reproach to Christ's followers. Had they been always and everywhere Christians indeed, had they cherished a confident faith in the victorious power of the Gospel, a burning zeal for the extension of the kingdom, and a holy earnestness to live as disciples of the Saviour, much more would have been accomplished. But the Gospel should not be held responsible for what is our fault. If we consider the lukewarmness and indolence, yes, the unbelief and immorality of so many who call themselves Christians but are not, if we take into account what a gigantic enterprise missions is and that real Christians are only a weak instrument, "carrying the treasure in earthen vessels," we must admit that it is an extraordinary fact, a mighty testimony to the power of the Gospel that to-day of all religions on the globe Christianity has the most adherents, and that 400 millions of all countries, nations and tongues, call Jesus Lord. Especially considering from what a small beginning this number was gathered, with what feeble means the work was carried on, and how violent an opposition it has always encountered. Still there are more than 1,000 millions of non-Christians on the earth. But the work of evangelization does not stand still; unceasingly from one decade of years to another a growing army of the soldiers of the cross occupies one non-Christian land after another, and every year the number of Christians is increased through the mission about ten thousand. Nor will this cease till Christ reigns, and the whole circle of the earth lies at His feet.

But to-day 1,000 millions know nothing of the Saviour, walk in darkness and are servants of sin and death. 1,000 millions! What an abundance of misery and pain, of shame and horror, of despair and longing does this monstrous number cover? I make no picture of these sad details; opportunity for that will come later. For the present let me only show how massive is the misery in whose varied forms these 1,000 millions live. If we could see it all in one heap, the thousands of human victims which even to day are sacrificed, the fearful pain caused by superstition and witchcraft, the remorseless despotism under which uncounted millions sigh, the wrongs of women, the streams of blood and tears set running by slavery, and besides, all the sins of cruelty and hardheartedness, the shameless uncleanness and robbery and murder, and finally all the lack of peace and comfort which makes the living and the dying of these millions so sad—if we could take in at a glance this entire mass of suffering, surely we should have no hearts in our bodies if we did not feel constrained to go to their help and obey Christ's command. Certainly most of them dwell far away. The Gospel has taken a peculiar course through the world. It has become an alien in the land where it began, and is at home in lands where it was an alien. It originated in the East, and to-day has its chief seats in the West. For a little while it bloomed in Asia Minor and North Africa, while in the regions of the North and West it fulfilled a world-wide mission. Europe with its 327 millions and America with its 100 millions have become each a Christian domain, while the almost 800 millions of Asia and the 205 of Africa are almost wholly heathen and Mohammedan. But the remoteness of the heathen should be no bar to our sympathy. The commission is, "Go ye into all the world," and in our day the good God has greatly abridged distances by the steamship, the railway and the telegraph. And though there is still much to be done in Christendom, we must still say with the Apostle, "I am a debtor both to the Jew and to the Greek," the Christians and the non Christians; and doing our duty to one, we should not neglect the other. God be praised that in our day the Church has really awoke to a sense of its obligation to the far-off heathen. It is true that for almost two centuries the evangelical Church forgot this duty. But there exists a recalling office of the Holy Ghost. "He will bring to your remembrance all that I said unto you." It is cheering and instructive to see how often this promise has been fulfilled in the history of the Church. See, for example, the Reformation and the awakening under the rule of Rationalism. With what power did the Spirit remind men of forgotten truths, and bring these again to honor. Just so with the duty of missions. In Germany and England and America did the Holy Ghost, first in smaller, then in ever-enlarging circles, recall the disciples' minds to this duty until it became a matter of conscience, and now there is no division of the evangelical Church in any land that does not take part in the work. So strong is this conviction that the 19th century is truly called the mission-century. Everywhere a spontaneous impulse leads to the formation of missionary societies. In Europe and America there are 80 of these, and if we add those of South Africa, India and Austria, there are about 100. This number is easily spoken, but what a wonderful development of gracious acts and affections is shown in the founding, the maintenance and the growth of each of these societies! It constitutes the most refreshing part of modern church history, for it is animated by lively faith, brotherly love, childlike piety, courageous witness bearing, earnest prayer, holy self-sacrifice, in short, everywhere there meets us the breathing of a Divine life.

HEROIC CHRISTIAN EFFORTS.

How small and in the world's eye how contemptible was the beginning of modern missions, and yet to what a power has it now grown! At the commencement of this century there were not much more than 200 missionaries, of whom by far the most were from the little Moravian Church; at the end of 1884 the number reached 3,000, and, if you add the women, married and unmarried, over 6,000! What an amount of self-denial and heroism, of love for Christ and for man, of faith and patience, of labor and toil for the kingdom of God, is implied in this number! We are to resolve the whole into its parts, and consider the individual men and women who make up this number so as to see the history, the labor and the endurance of each. I will not affirm that everyone of them was competent to his high calling, or might be deemed a pattern of discipleship; but I know that the life of many has glorified God. When Livingston visited England after his great exploring tour, he was much praised for his sacrifices. It was true he had labored much, lacked much, suffered much, but what did he reply to this exaggerated praise. "People talk of the sacrifices I made in spending so large a portion of my life in Africa. Can you call that a sacrifice which is only a small payment on that great debt to God which can never be fully discharged? Say rather that it is a privilege; I have never made a sacrifice." He was indeed a chief among missionaries, but many who are far less known, thought and acted in the same way. At a solitary station on the East African coast stood for twenty years in great privation and toilsome work our countryman Rebmann, whose name is known to few. When he came back blind and utterly broken in health, and men extolled his patient endurance, he said, "What have I done? I have simply, like a soldier, held my post till the relief came." How many missionary men, women and children yearly succumb to the climate, and still the field is not forsaken, and always the gaps are filled up; for example, the North German Society labors on the west coast of Africa, a real land of death. Of the 54 laborers sent out since 1847, 27 up to 1881 had fallen by the fever, and of 33 women, 13 sank into an early grave. Still other deaths have occurred since. Yet how edifying is it to read the letters of the remaining men and women, who themselves are not far off from the grave? "Ah, what are we who carry on the Lord's work? Clay in the potter's hand, dust and ashes enduring but for a day. Yet we are so esteemed that for us the blessed Saviour gave His life. And we would be in our measure saviors for this people, and not cease to risk our lives for the brethren—according to His command." Thus, on the death of a colleague, wrote one who not long afterwards fell himself and when dying urged the rest, "Brethren, be earnest in the work of the Lord. The combatants fall, but the work goes on because it is the Lord's." The Moravian Church since 1735 have sent to Surinam 426 men and women, of whom 176 fell victims to the climate, besides the children not counted. Such figures tell the story of Christian heroism and self-sacrifice. "Had I a thousand lives," said one of the old Sierra Leone missionaries who died early, "I would gladly give them all to save only one poor African." The same is to be said of the parents who surrender their children to this work. A German father wrote in his son's album, "My gift to missions is my only son." An American mother wept because she had no second child to send to the savages who had slain and eaten her only son. A pastor at Basle, when he heard of the death of three of his children on the field in swift succession, still said with tearful eyes but in a firm voice, "We do not go back." A young Canadian went to Eromanga to take the place of a brother who had been slain by the men he was seeking to save. These are a few out of hundreds of cases that show that the hercism of Christianity has not yet died out. No; figures are not dry. They preach loudly of the deeds of faith and love.

THE GIFTS OF THE CHURCHES.

Let us now look at missionary contributions. It is a stately sum that all Protestantism gives yearly. At the beginning of the century it fell far short of a quarter of a millon of dollars, yet in the year 1884 it reached nearly nine millions, all voluntary gifts. There are indeed many large gifts from the rich, such as Mr. Jones, who in the course of ten years gave the Church Missionary Society nearly a million, and a Mr. Otis, who bequeathed quite a million to the A. B. C. F. M. But speaking generally, the nine millions came from the small contributions of the lower and middling classes. I well know that urgent effort is needed to secure these gifts, and many of them are of no worth in the eyes of Him who "loves a cheerful giver." But still there are not a few, like the widow's mite, which before Him who weighs and does not count, are of more value than the millions of the rich. There is a vast store of self-denying love and cheerful self-sacrifice involved in these nine millions. When a poor miner out of joy at the beginning of a new mission in Africa gives $25, a sempstress from her slender wages $5, a maid-servant a like sum, a journeyman the fifth of his yearly earnings, a child the whole of its savings, when the mother of a large but poor family daily lays by two cents for the treasury, when here a peasant gives the whole produce of his bee-hives and there a mechanic all that he gains by working overtime,—these are timely offerings of love that are grateful to God. It is a charming history that tells of the collection of such offerings.

There is, indeed, another side to the subject. There are many contributions that stand in startling contrast with the means of the giver. While large sums are spent in luxury, the King of heaven receives so little that the gift is an offence. Especially with us in Germany is an increase in the gifts of the higher classes greatly to be desired. While in Great Britain more than four millions of dollars are given yearly, and in North America more than two, the receipts in Germany and Switzerland do not amount to $750,000, and single gifts of thousands or even of hundreds are rare. Our British friends are richer than we are, and their wide colonial possessions bring the matter closer to them; still it is a shame that we are so far surpassed. May the colonies which Germany has begun to found stimulate our efforts correspondingly! Nine millions is indeed a large sum, yet compared with the work to be done it is very small. Plainly the effort to evangelize the world needs large means. The management at home, the equipment of thousands of missionaries, their journeys to distant lands, the purchase of lands and erection of houses, schools and churches, the education of native helpers, the maintenance of missionaries and their families, without considering unforeseen accidents, such as destruction by war or the elements, sicknesses or the premature deaths of laborers, etc., all costs money. If one reckons the cost of such works as the Suez Canal or the St. Gothard railway, which with all their importance are not to be compared with the world's evangelization, how small do these nine millions become. And still—what a surprising spectacle! the Lord makes it suffice. One is continually reminded of the feeding of thousands with five loaves and two fishes. The voluntariness of the gifts forbids any certain forecasting of their amount; as the work expands the expenditures increase; and still, on the whole, there is as much as is required. Missionary gifts are under the direction of Him who rules the hearts of the givers, so that growing needs are covered by growing receipts. This is the sermon which figures preach to us in the matter of contributions.

THE RESULTS OF MISSIONS.

Let us now turn to the results that have been achieved. These are not to be estimated in figures. Thousands and tens of thousands who have not been baptized yet feel the blessed influence of missions. Heathen customs have been renounced, harshness and cruelty alleviated, superstitions shattered, ignorance done away, new moral views imparted, and the foundations of a Christian civilization laid. But apart from this, what say the figures? At the end of 1881, 2,283,700 heathen had been evangelized. Not all of these had been baptized, but all were under Christian instruction, and 575,000 were in full communion. At the end of 1884 there were at least 2,400,000 adherents and 650,000 full church members. 2,283,700 evangelized heathen—that is a significant number. I am far from declaring that each one of these, even those who receive the sacraments, is a mature believer. Certainly, the majority have much weakness, and their Christianity is still in its juvenile stage. Yet how many striking instances of wonderful Divine guidance, of the power of the Gospel, of real conversion, of childlike faith, of devout prayer, of love for the Word, of willing self-sacrifice, of heroic endurance for the confession of Christ, are included in these 2,283,000! How much toil has been expended, how many obstacles overcome, how much patience of faith exercised to attain this number!

How widely spread in different lands are these 2,283,000! If we make a journey around the globe, almost everywhere do we meet more or less of them. In Labrador and Greenland, among the Indians and negroes of British America and the United States, in the West Indies, on the coasts of Central and Southern America, and even in the wild Terra del Fuego, 688,000 of heathens have been gathered into Christian communities. If we leave San Francisco and go across the Pacific Ocean we find in the Sandwich Islands, in Micronesia and Melanesia and Polynesia, in New Zealand and Australia, missionary converts numbering 240,000 souls. If we turn to the Indian Archipelago and from there go to the Japanese Islands, and then to the Asiatic Continent, India, China, Persia and Asia Minor, we find 754,000 heathens who have become Christians. Coming at last to Africa we meet with converts in Madagascar, among the Caffres, Bechuanas and Hottentots of South Africa, the negroes of the interior, and the west coast from Congo to Senegambia, amounting to 577,000. Surely this is a wide sowing of the seed, and the Church has taken seriously the command to go into all the world.

THE LITERARY CONQUEST.

And how many different languages are spoken in these lands! I know not if it is altogether correct, but men say that there are in the world 1,000 languages and 3,000 dialects. What a mountain of difficulties lies in this confusion of tongues. Since the Gospel must be proclaimed to every people in their mother tongue, the missionaries must learn hundreds of tongues and dialects. What pains this requires. Often, indeed, the language must be reduced to form, no European having previously given it attention. I cannot say exactly in how many tongues the missionaries preach, but according to the report of the British and Foreign Bible Society for 1883, the Bible has been translated in whole or in part into 354 languages. Of these 80 are European, but some of these belong to non-Christian people (in Turkey, Lapland, etc.). The rest are pure heathen tongues in which nearly all the versions have been made by evangelical missionaries. I will not speak of the linguistic toil involved in these 250 translations, but what a flood of light and life have they carried into heathendom, into the regions of darkness and death! It is true many of these are the work of beginners and need improvement, and I have no idea of comparing them with the masterpiece of our Luther. Still, if we know what a blessing Luther's version has been and still is to the German people, we can foresee what a gift even a moderately well-executed translation must be to a heathen people, especially for one whose language had never been reduced to writing or which had in effect no literature. Who can tell the blessed history of the various versions which missions have bestowed upon the heathen world of to-day? That is one of those histories which will be fully known only in eternity.

Where the Bible is given to a people it follows, of course, that they are taught to read it—and this means a school. In every place the evangelical mission becomes the mother of a school. At first blush it seems a small affair for a missionary to open a school, attended, perhaps, by only a dozen children. But with such a school there begins a new departure in a people's history, in the history of its culture and civilization. Now see the figures again. In all parts of the mission field there are to-day not less than 13,000 schools of different grades, attended by from 600,000 to 700,000 scholars. That is an imposing number. How much teaching and training has gone forth from these establishments, and is still going forth! How much real enlightenment have they diffused over the earth! From these schools come the native helpers. In every field especial attention is given to the matter of raising up an indigenous ministry to whom the work may be transferred while the missionaries seek another heathen people. There are about 25,000 such native helpers, of whom the most are teachers, but there are 1,700 ordained pastors and evangelists whose support for the most part comes from the people they serve. This also is an eloquent number, showing how Christianity has taken root in foreign soil, and that it is not dependent upon the presence of missionaries from Christian lands. Even supposing the churches discontinued their missions—which, however, is not to be thought of—the work would not cease any more than it did after the death of the Apostles. The slips transplanted from Christendom have already become fruit-bearing trees whose seed guarantees the continuance of the process.

THE LAW OF PROGRESS.

But I must come back to the 2,283,000 converts. In proportion to the thousand millions of non-Christians, this is indeed a small number. But we stand in the first stage of the present mission period. Even in Apostolic times the work went on slowly in the first century, but afterwards the numbers increased like capital at compound interest. By a Divine law each mission period passes through three stages, although these are not sharply distinguished from each other, and do not always require an equal space of time. The first is the sending forth of the men and their preparatory work. This is concerned about the conversion of individuals and the laying a foundation for church life. The results are not striking, and the number of converts is small. The second stage is that of the organized work of native laborers, by which there is a further development of Christian life, and the first story is erected upon the foundation laid. In this period the growth, although not obvious, is significant, and the Christian movement reaches the higher classes. The third stage is that of the Christianizing of the great body of the people. Before this is reached, centuries pass away. At present the mission work for the most part is in the first stage, in a few it has reached the second, and only in Madagascar has it by a bound reached the third. But figures show that the result comes in an ascending line. Two examples are given, which are designedly not taken from the most fruitful fields. In the year 1857 the Basle missionaries, after thirty years of self-sacrificing toil on the Gold Coast, counted only 367 Christians; in 1867 this number had grown to 1,509, in 1877 to 3,355, and in 1883 to 5,567; that is, in thirty years it had increased twelvefold. In India and Ceylon the number of native disciples in 1851 was 128,000, in 1861 it had grown to 213,000, in 1871 to 318,000, and in 1881 to 523,590. During the first half of the century the growth of each ten years was about 30,000, while in the latter half the increase for each of the three decades was about 134,000, that is, more than fourfold. In China, after ten years' toil, men counted 351 in full communion; in 1863, 1,974; in 1868, 5,743; in 1872, 8,000; in 1877, 13,075; in 1881, 19,660; that is, in the last five years there was an increase of 6,625, while in the first ten years only a twentieth part of this number were admitted to the Lord's table. Such figures are very instructive. In the face of them the prejudiced notion of the fruitlessness of missions must give way. It is altogether natural that the growth at first should be small, but when the chief difficulties are conquered then it becomes rapid. This is shown by more weighty circumstances than figures, but these are not to be despised, especially before those who even in things of the kingdom regard only what is visible and palpable.

THE DIVINE JUDGMENT.

In God's presence other things besides figures are considered. In His sanctuary weight is regarded more than number. Man sees the outward appearance, but God beholds the heart. Hence, we are far from overvaluing figures and making more of them than they deserve. Many a one is counted a Christian whose name is not in the book of life. Never have numbers done much toward proving the truth and power of the Gospel. A dozen men of living faith whose consecrated life in imitation of Christ reveals the regenerating power that lies in the Gospel, are a mightier testimony to Christianity than thousands who are merely registered by name. That is also a preaching of numbers which we should not forget. A day is coming in which the searcher of hearts will take in hand the numbering, and He will count only those who can stand the weighing in the balances of the sanctuary. May He grant that we then may be reckoned with those who are to inherit the kingdom, and that of the converts among the heathen of to-day, very many may be found to belong to this blessed company.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE IRISH QUESTION.” Mr. Gladstone’s pamphlet on “The Irish Question,” issued just previous to his departure for the Continent, August 25th, has already appeared in print in this country. It is written with, at least, his usual force and animation, and in a tone of hopeful courage which augurs well for the success of the movement of which he is the leading spirit. It is in two parts, entitled respectively, “History of an Idea” and “Lessons of the Election.” Part I. is chiefly occupied in vindicating his own course, in introducing his scheme for Irish Home Rule, from the charge of undue reticence or concealment concerning his intentions on the one hand, and of undue precipitancy on the other.

In Part II. he discusses the Lessons of the late election as regards: 1. The Liberal Party; 2. For Ireland; 3. The Purchase and Sale of Land in Ireland; 4. The Conservative Character of Home Rule for Ireland; and 5, asks the question, “To which Party is the work reserved” of securing self-government to Ireland in Irish affairs? As might be supposed, it is the work of a master. It cannot fail to increase the confidence of the Irish patriots and friends of Ireland generally, in the strength, justice and final triumph of their cause. There are many passages we would gladly quote, but more gladly refer the reader to the pamphlet itself, which can be had for the small sum of ten cents. (Scribners.)

....Books for the approaching holidays are making their appearance, and if the vanguard is a fair example of the host following on, we may as well surrender at the outset, for criticism will surely be disarmed and admiration captivated. The first to come to us is of necessity a very handsome and entertaining volume, for it is the product of the combined skill of such artists as George H. Boughton and Edwin A. Abbey. It is the story of “SKETCHING RAMBLES IN HOLLAND” very agreeably told and illustrated. The artists evidently enjoyed the excursion very much and through pen and pencil seek to convey that enjoyment to a wider circle. Flat as the country is, the Netherlands attract and hold the artist. He finds in the extended landscape, the quaint buildings and the people, no end of picturesque objects which gratify and fill his eye. Messrs. Boughton and Abbey visited not only the Hague and Scheeveningen and the localities familiar to all tourists, but were drawn into the regions of extreme North Holland and into quiet but picturesque nooks and corners in that comparatively unknown land, and have recorded their experience on these pages, adorning the narrative with many of the drawings from their portfolios. The result is a very attractive volume. It has been excellently printed, for which the press-room deserves praise, and is tastefully bound. As a birthday or holiday present the book is likely to be in demand. (Harper & Brothers.)

....“VOYAGES OF A MERCHANT NAVIGATOR.” By H. W. S. Cleveland. For all who would learn the character of our American merchants and seamen in the early days of this century, this book will possess a wonderful interest. It contains a sketch of the life of Captain Richard J. Cleveland, of Salem, Mass., who was born in 1773 and died in 1860. There are pages in it which read like extracts from De Foe, and yet are sober truth. The young merchant sailor who could start from Havre at the age of twenty-six with a capital of $2,000 and in seven years return home with a fortune of $70,000, gained by legitimate trading under the greatest difficulties, certainly affords a story which has all the elements of romance. But this is but half of the book, and the pages which tell of reverses are as stirring as those which record early success. The style in which the work is given merits the highest commendation for its simplicity and tender, filial expression. The subject of the memoir published his own narrative in 1842, and we are astonished that it should have gone out of print, for the extracts from it show it to have been worthy of a place with Dana’s “Two Years Before the Mast,” and like volumes. Fathers who wish to show their boys of what stuff the American seaman and merchant was made in former days, can do no better than to buy this biography, for their own reading first, and then for handing over to the younger members of the household. (Harper & Brohters.)

....“ALDEN’S CYCLOPEDIA OF UNIVERSAL LITERATURE.” Vol. IV. This continues the excellent work already auspiciously begun, carrying the names from Cable to McDonald Clarke. Some eighty names of authors, with brief biographies, critical notes, and extracts from their works, are given in this volume. All lovers of good literature must prize such a cheap, handy, and complete compendium of the most noted writers, especially as the names of our modern American authors are given rightful space. We only begin to wonder “whereunto the thing will grow,” as we look upon the endless stream of books and the surprising number of men and women who are forcing their thoughts upon the modern world. (John B. Alden.)

....“THE PHANTOM CITY.” A Volcanic Romance. By William Westall. It might not be correct or just to ascribe the existence of this book to the stimulating effect upon the imagination, or the somewhat phenomenal success of “King Solomon’s Mines.” Yet it is strongly suggestive of that singular and entertaining romance, while it has distinct and not inconsiderable merits and points of interest of its own. We have read it with no less pleasure than the other.

For basis of fact it has the massive and mysterious ruined cities of Central America, and the “legend” that somewhere in “the vast region lying between Chiapas, Tobasco, Yucatan and Guatemala—a region never trod by the white man’s foot, there is a great aboriginal city, with white walls, grand temples and gorgeous buildings in the same style of architecture as the ruins of Uxmal and Palenque, and inhabited by the same race as that which once held sway over the greater part of Central America.” All approach to the city is barred by savage tribes, who remorselessly kill intruders into the vast wilds that surround it, and through which those who seek it must pass.

The difficulties and final success of the attempt—by means of a balloon—the appearance of the Phantom City, the character and customs of the Phantom people, the perils, sufferings, successes and final escape of the daring discoverer are depicted in a simple and unpretentious style, and with interest sustained to the end. (Cassell & Co.)

....“GLORIA VICTIS.” A Romance by Ossip Schupir. From the German by Mary Maxwell. “APHRODITE.” A Romance of Ancient Hellas, by Ernest Eckstein. From the German by Mary Safford. Both of these volumes are from the press of W. S. Gottsberger, to whom we are indebted for the faithful reproduction of much modern German fiction. The translation is fluent and idiomatic, though we confess inability to understand the phrase “defiant mountains.” The first named volume is clever and interesting, though the plot is unnatural and by no means clear. The second is far better. It has the color of the time and place to which it refers, and reflects the spirit of the old Paganism with great accuracy. Thoughtful readers will get as much benefit as pleasure in going through the pages of this well-written romance.

....The “RELIGIO MEDICI” of Sir Thomas Browne, “VOYAGES FOR THE NORTHWEST PASSAGE,” from Richard Hakluyt, and “THE DIARY OF SAMUEL PEPYS” form the three last numbers of “Cassell’s National Library.” To mention the books selected is enough to show the character of the whole library. No one surely can complain of being shut out from the best of reading while such a collection is seen issuing weekly from the press at the cost of but ten cents for each volume. (Cassell & Co.)

....“THE RIVERSIDE MUSEUM.” By Jak. The readers of a previous book, “Birchwood,” will find in this new volume their old friends introduced, though each work is complete in itself. In a pleasant, easy style the writer shows how children aiming at improvement can find around a village the objects in Nature which will develop thought and knowledge. The mutual help we can give one another is also admirably set forth. Boys and girls of a thoughtful, curious disposition, will find the “Museum” profitable and interesting reading. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“HON. HORATIO SEYMOUR, LL.D.,” is the title of a handsome pamphlet containing a memorial of the late ex-Governor of New York, prepared originally for the Magazine of American History, by Isaac S. Hartley, D.D., of Utica, Second Vice-President of the Oneida History Society, of which for many years Mr. Seymour was President, and one of the most useful members. Some additions have been made to the paper in preparing it for this edition, and by the courtesy of the editor of the historical magazine, the excellent portrait of Gov. Seymour and the engravings of the interior and exterior of residence and of the view from its commanding which were admired in the periodical, now adorn this tribute of esteem and respect. Gov. Seymour in domestic and social life, and in his public relations, not now regarding his political career, which we do not discuss, was a most courteous, genial, intelligent gentleman. No man was more heartily interested in the life of the county in which he lived, and the State had no more loyal citizen. Few men were as familiar with the history of the State, and few were as able to draw valuable conclusions from that history. Dr. Hartley’s memorial is a most becoming one. It will be very agreeable to the thousand of friends of the late Governor. They will read it with great pleasure and value it highly. Everything about the pamphlet befits the theme.

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....In the Homiletic Review for September, Prof. E. D. Morris, D.D., furnishes an interesting paper on “Probation After Death,” and Dr. Talbot W. Chambers discusses the question, “Ought Prohibition to be Made a Political Question?” enforcing with his usual vigor nine distinct arguments on the negative side. Dr. John Hall leads off in the Sermonic Section with a thoughtful discourse on “Cheer for Despondent Souls” from John 20: 28, 29. “Before the Altar of the Unknown God” is very ably treated by Rudolph Koegel, D.D., Chief Court-Preacher, Berlin. Other sermons and sketches and miscellaneous contributions follow, of deep interest and practical importance.

....The Pulpit Treasury for September has for its frontispiece a portrait of Rev. H. B. Hartzler, of the Evangelical Association of Cleveland, Ohio. His sermon on “Christ our Example of Obedience,” preached before the faculty and students of Adelbert College of Western Reserve University, is given the first place. Other excellent sermons follow. The editorials are terse and timely. “Leading Thoughts of Sermons” are suggestive and valuable. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D., contributes another good practical paper on “The Christian and the World.” It is a number of merit throughout.

....The Mitterlungen der Geograp. Geselschaft zu Jena, Band IV., Heft 4, contains for its chief article the conclusion of the Rev. J. N. Cushing’s report of a journey in Northern Siam, a very instructive and valuable paper. Mr. Cushing finished his tour in Bangkok, where he thinks the labors of the missionaries have hardly yielded a result corresponding to the time and labor bestowed. He thought that the work done among the Chinese population of the city was more fruitful than that expended upon the Siamese. The congregation he saw in the Chinese Chapel consisted entirely of men, which is unusual. The reviews of books, which are candid and discriminating, speak very favorably of Gundert’s Work on Missions, and of Dr. Warnack’s timely brochure on the question, What the Germans Owe to their Colonies? Like his other writings this is “thoroughly thought out, clear and exact, everywhere hitting the nail on the head.”

...The Bookbuyer for the month has a portrait of Donald G. Mitchell, illustrations in tints and not colored from Les Lettres et les Arts, and from four or five recent American books, with the usual quantity of conscientious reviews.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Charles Scribner’s Sons: A History of Greek Literature from the Earliest Period to the Death of Demosthenes. By Frank Byron Jevons. 8vo, pp. 509. $2.50; also,

The Age of Electricity: From Amber-Soul to Telephone. By Park Benjamin, Ph.D. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 381. $2; also,

The Making of New England, 1580-1643. By Samuel Adams Drake. With Many Illustrations and Maps. 12mo, pp. 251. $1.50.

The Century Co.: The Boys’ Book of Sports and Outdoor Life. Edited by Maurice Thompson. Illustrated. Tall 8vo, pp. 352.

G. P. Putnam’s Sons: Woodstock: An Historical Sketch. By Clarence Winthrop Bowen, Ph.D. 8vo, pp. 64. $1.

Thomas Whittaker: True Words for Brave Men. By Charles Kingsley. 16mo, pp. 246. 75 cents.

John B. Alden: Alden’s Cyclopedia of Universal Literature. Vol. 4. 16mo, pp. 477. 60 cents.

Roberts Bros.: A Flatiron for a Farthing; or, Some Passages in the Life of an Only Son. By Juliana Horatia Ewing. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 284. $1.

National Temperance Society: The Making of a Man. The Story of Rasmus. By Julia McNair Wright. 16mo, pp. 326; also,

Little Stories for Little People. The Brooklet Series. Edited by Miss L. Penny. 6 vols. Each having 36 engravings. 16mos, in box. 72 pages each. 25 cents each, $1.50 for set.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.: The Labor Movement in America. By Richard T. Ely, Ph.D. 12mo, pp. 378. $1.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Ancient American Politics. By Hugh J. Hastings. Edited and Revised by his nephew, Hugh Hastings. (No. 543, Harper’s Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 146. 30 cents; also, Baptized with a Curse. A Romance. By Edith Stewart Drewry. (No. 94, Harper’s Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 212. 25 cents.

Milton’s Earlier Poems. Including the Translations by William Cowper of those written in Latin and Italian. (No. 34, Cassell’s National Library.) 32mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

The Sheltering Arms. Twenty-Second Annual Report. New York, 1886.

PERIODICALS.

September.—The Art Journal, The Musical Herald.

October.—The Magazine of Art, The Atlantic Monthly, Cassell’s Family Magazine.

The Saloon in Politics.

WHAT have the seven thousand saloons of New York city done for her? They have fastened upon her citizens the most shamefully corrupt government ever endured by a community indulging in the illusion that it was free; they have almost made it impossible for an honest, educated man to touch local politics, much less take office; they have degraded the conduct of public affairs to their own low level; they have brutalized every institution they have had to do with; they have perverted and spoiled the democratic system, making a hissing and a reproach of American citizenship and the suffrage, establishing political shambles, pondering to the worst vices of the worst classes, defiling everything decent and pure with their ribald scoffing, and producing at intervals, as proof of their quality, tendencies, and power, such abominable scandals as that of the Tweed Ring, or the more recent sale of votes in the Board of Aldermen. But evil as are the results of the combination between the saloon and the politicians, it is not just to hold the latter responsible for all the mischief they cause. In truth, they are the result of conditions which could not produce anything better, and it is unreasonable to blame the product while refusing to interfere with the generating agencies. The saloon is an arrangement for the maintenance and propagation of the worst vice with which humanity is afflicted; a vice which destroys every elevating influence, kills shame, manhood, ambition, family affection, honor, all that makes life worth living; a vice which fosters brutality, self-indulgence, and all the train of ignoble and degrading passions and inclinations. Now, the purpose and intent of the saloon being what it is, the developments noted are simply what ought to have been expected when so large a share in the government of the country was permitted to be seized by this sinister agency. The American system of government is theoretically sound. The means of education are accessible to all. But when our children have passed through the public schools and enter into active life, if they wish to take part in public affairs they must descend to the saloon for instruction in politics, and in the same institution the foreign immigrants must graduate before they can exercise the right of citizenship. These are our political schools, in fact, and they give the tone to our politics, city, State, and national. The candidate for office finds it indispensable to "make himself solid with" the rum power. He must buy the favor of the saloon-keepers. He must frequent these places and flatter the vanity of those who gather there. Through them he must obtain the votes of the idle, the vicious, the criminal, classes. He must become familiar with all the ward "strikers" and loafers. He must be represented at the caucuses which are always held where drink abounds. He must defer to the views of men of the lowest intelligence. He must subscribe to platforms drawn up by demagogues and time servers. Is it any wonder that self-respecting men so often shrink from these ordeals, and prefer the obscurity of private life to a political career demanding such sacrifice and such debasement? The foreigner who lands in this country obtains his first ideas of its governmental system from the saloon. There he is introduced to the lowest intrigues of factional conflict. There he is taught that the chief end and aim of politics is to make as much as possible for the "workers." There he is enlisted into one or the other of the great organizations which have reduced party politics to periodical battles for plunder, to contests for the opportunity to misgovern. There he learns that honor and principle are simply "molasses to catch flies," as a notorious politician once expressed it. There he is made to understand that he is not expected to think for himself, but that he must obey implicitly the party mandates, reverence the saloon-keepers of his ward, submit himself humbly to his "boss," and on election day be thankful that he can sell his vote for a couple of dollars or a debauch on bad whiskey. This is no fanciful picture. There is not a considerable city in the United States in which purchased votes are not cast by the thousand at every important election, and these votes are almost invariably bought and paid for in and through the saloon.

It is absurd to expect that under such a state of things politics can be anything but corrupt. It is absurd to look, in parties dependent upon the saloon, for enlightened patriotism, progressive policies, or any real care for the welfare of the nation. The country is now in a defenseless condition. All the riches of its sea-board cities lie at the mercy of any fifth-rate power with which we may happen to quarrel. Yet it has been impossible to rouse Congress to action. While throwing itself with feverish zeal into struggles over place and patronage, while exhibiting demagogic eagerness in squandering the public funds upon unnecessary local works, it has shown itself indifferent to this vital question; has betrayed a want of public spirit which would be remarkable and perplexing, were it not apparent that members have been desirous only of enacting measures redounding to their personal or party advantage. A Congress which refuses to investigate the liquor traffic, and will not authorize the necessary appropriations for the defense of the coasts against foreign enemies, is in one sense a pattern legislature. It is a pattern, that is to say, of the best that can be expected from the saloon in politics. It can be relied upon to protect the rum power. It cannot be relied upon to defend the country against invasion from without or corruption from within.—George Frederic Parsons, in September Atlantic.

"OUR BABY'S
First and Second Year."
By MARION HARLAND,
With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,
REED & CARNRICK,
MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

Philadelphia Third Reformed Church.
This historic church, formed by the Rev. Dr. Geo. W. Bethune, having passed through fires and having been sustained in its trials by the grace of God and by the unanimous vote of the Particular Synod of New Brunswick, and also by the General Synod, at its last session, now seeks a pastor to build again her broken walls. Any minister who thinks he can do more good in a great city like Philadelphia, can obtain all information relative to the Third Church by addressing GEORGE F. GORDON, 857 North Broad street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Issued September 1st.
A NEW EDITION OF
GOSPEL HYMNS
CONSOLIDATED.
With Words and Music.
☞ By the use of smaller type, the 426 Songs have been condensed into 304 pages, but the same order is preserved as in the original issue.
40 Cents in Tinted Paper Covers.
45 Cents in Boards.
50 Cents in Limp Cloth.
Add 5 cents each if ordered by mail.
The price of this favorite work is now so low that it can be adopted everywhere.
Former editions still published at old prices.
BIGLOW & MAIN, NEW YORK. The John Church Co. CINCINNATI, O.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

FACE, HANDS, FEET,
and all their imperfections, including Facial Development, Superfluous Hair, Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, Moth, Freckles, Red Nose, Acne, Bl'k Heads, Scars, Pitting and their treatment. Dr. John H. Woodbury, 37 N. Pearl St., ALBANY, N.Y. Est'b'd 1870, Send 10c. for book

Scribners' Important New Books.

A History of Greek Literature.
From the Earliest Period to the Death of Demosthenes. By FRANK BYRON JEVONS, M.A., Tutor in the University of Durham. 1 vol., crown 8vo, $2.50.
The reader who is anxious to gain a sound knowledge of the literature of classic Greece will find Mr. Jevon's book thorough-going and accurate.
"A sound and useful piece of work. * * * Very readable."—[Saturday Review, London.

The Age of Electricity. From Amber-soul to Telephone. By PARK BENJAMIN, Ph.D. Illustrated. 1 vol., 12mo, $2.
The wonderful advances which have been made in practically applying electric force to the service of man have made such a book as this almost a necessity. Mr. Benjamin gives a popular and comprehensive account of the advancement of electric science from the earliest to the latest times. Of special interest and importance are the descriptions of the most recent inventions and achievements. The book is profusely illustrated.

The Making of New England. 1580-1643. By SAMUEL ADAMS DRAKE. Illustrated. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.50.
Mr. Drake has told the story of New England in such a marvelously vivid and graphic way that his book reads like a romance. But, interesting as it is, it has also a special claim upon readers, in that every statement has been verified by the light of modern research. The illustrations are admirable, and are to be found on almost every page.

An Outline Study of Man: or, The Body and Mind in One System.
With Illustrative Diagrams. Revised Edition. By MARK HOPKINS, D.D., LL.D. 1 vol. 12mo, $1.75.
"It is, I think, the greatest and most useful of the books of the greatest of our American educators, Rev. Dr. Hopkins, and is destined to do a great work in forming not only the ideas, but the character of youth in America and in other parts of the world."—GEN. S. C. ARMSTRONG, Principal of Hampton Institute.

The Rescue of Greely. By Commander W. S. SCHLEY, U.S.N., and Prof. J. R. SOLEY, U.S.N. Illustrated from the Photographs and Maps of the Relief Expedition. New Edition. 1 vol. 12mo, $2.
An admirable supplement to Lieut. Greely's own book.
"The book is singularly well done," says the New York Times. "The whole story is told in plain facts, plainly and intelligently stated, and the adjectives are few. Rarely is a great story narrated so simply and yet so effectively."

Psychology, The Cognitive Powers
By JAMES M'COSH, D.D., LL.D., President of Princeton College. 12mo, $1.25.
"This work will be the crowning literary labor of the learned author, as it will be the ripened fruit of a life-long study and of thirty-four years of teaching in this branch of science."—[Christian Intelligencer.

THE BOOK BUYER. An Illustrated Monthly Summary of American and Foreign Literature. Annual Subscription, $1. Send for Sample Copy.
EACH NUMBER CONTAINS: Portrait of a well-known Author, London Letter, Illustrations from the New Books, with Reviews, News and Notes, Foreign Notes, Special Articles on Literary and Bibliographical subjects, etc., etc.
 These books for sale by all booksellers, or sent, post-paid, on receipt of price, by Charles Scribner's Sons, 743--745 Broadway, N. Y.

RECENT ISSUES
BY THE
Presbyterian Board of Publication.
NEW EDITION OF
WHAT IS PRESBYTERIAN LAW?
(REVISED AND ENLARGED.)
Containing the Decisions of the General Assembly to 1885, inclusive.
By Rev. J. ASPINWALL HODGE, D.D.
12mo. Price, $1.75.
AMONG THE TREES AT ELMRIDGE
A sprightly book for boys and girls, about our forest and fruit trees.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.
CHERIE'S ANSWERED PRAYER.
Carries the reader to a village in France, and opening to him a form of life new and instructive.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.
WALTER HARMSEN.
A thrilling story of Reformation days in the Netherlands.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.
Address orders to
JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,
Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

Church Decoration.
Church Furnishing.
DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.
J. & R. LAMB,
59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for
PLATFORM ECHOES
or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART.
• By John B. Gough. •
His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞ Distance no hindrance. We give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. M. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

CLASSIC COLLECTIONS OF PIANOFORTE MUSIC.
The following elegant and correct editions of celebrated musical works are in constant demand by good players.
BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS, LEBERT and VON BULOW EDITION. In paper, 2 vols. each, $3.00
The same in Cloth, embossed, 2 vols. each, $6.00
CHOPIN'S MAZURKAS. In paper, $1.00
CHOPIN'S NOCTURNES. Cloth, $1.50, paper, 60 cts.
CHOPIN'S WALTZES. Cloth, $1.25, paper, 50 cts.
SCHUMANN'S ALBUM, Op. 68 and 15. paper, $1.00
SONATINEN ALBUM, Fingered by Kohler.
Cloth, $1.50, paper, 75 cts.
CLEMENTI'S SONATINAS. Op. 36, 37 & 38. paper, 50 cts.
KOHLER'S KINDER (Childrens') ALBUM. paper, 75 cts.
MENDELSSOHN'S SONGS without words.
Cloth, $1.50, Paper, $1.00
The above books, with the exception of Beethoven's Sonatas, are reprints of Peters' celebrated editions of the same works, and are extra good and correct editions, and faithful copies of the originals.
Piano Classics, recently published, is a book filled with unusually good piano pieces of medium difficulty, by modern composers.
Price, Cloth, $1.50, Boards, $1.00.
Any Book Mailed for the Retail Price.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

POPULAR LECTURES.
SUBJECTS
1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors.
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events
Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,
SING SING, N. Y

BARNES'
NATIONAL INK.
FOR SALE.
A splendid 18-stop church organ, with two banks of keys and pedals. A great bargain. Also, several smaller organs. Send for a description to REUBEN NICHOLS, Builder. Warerooms, 32 and 33 Richmond St., Philadelphia Pa

CHEAPEST BIBLES Ever furnished Agents. Extra Terms and Large CASH PREMIUMS
FORSHEE & McMAKIN, CINCINNATI, O.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE,
Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it.

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

A BIG OFFER. To introduce them, we will Give Away 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 23 Dey St., N. Y.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

The Black Dog.

BY CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

"LADY KEW'S black dog" has passed into a proverb among reading people, and his existence under one form or another is recognized by nearly every one. There is hardly a family connection or a circle of friends in which at least one member may not be found who, by virtue of some taint of the currish disposition, does not compel consideration from those about him. For, lamentable as the fact may seem, it is none the less undeniable that no one receives such eager deference, such ready service as the possessor of an easily ruffled temper. The man or woman who is always prompt to sacrifice personal comfort to the convenience of others is usually the first to be imposed upon. It may not be in accordance with the instructions of the goody-goody tales, but it is a fact.

A moment's consideration will recall countless illustrations of the truth of this statement to the memory of the most optimistic student of human nature. In every society it is the gentle, self-denying one who is permitted to yield inclination and service. Even the closeness of the marriage tie affords few exceptions to this rule. The enunciation of such a belief sounds like the offer of a premium to irritability, and for the sake of faith in one's kind it is to be hoped that the practice of fretfulness and senitiveness is more frequently involuntary than studied. Viewed from a selfish standpoint, no more effectual means of securing one's own way can be devised than the establishing of a reputation of having a sensitive and lightly offended disposition. The owner of this idiosyncrasy is humored with the indulgent treatment one accords to a person mentally or physically deficient, rather than with the calm disregard of pettishness which would seem to be the wiser course under the circumstances. The good-humored consideration granted in these cases is more nearly akin to moral cowardice than one would willingly admit. The dread of a "row" is innate in nearly all refined natures. It is generally among those of a coarser strain that one finds the pugnacious humor whose tendency has been condensed in the expressive Irish phrase, "spoiling for a fight." More frequently one shrinks from conflict and submits more willingly to imposition than to discord.

A naturally hasty temper does not necessarily place its possessor in the position of a family bugbear. The quick flash that comes and goes in the same instant is less dangerous than the dull, smoldering wrath that makes a purgatory for those brought within the radius of its influence. Such a temperament wields great power, however, and one that could never be gained by a gentler character, from that peculiarity that renders fear of punishment a stronger motive than love of righteousness. The thought that a certain course of conduct renders another unhappy is less liable to induce its practicer to alter it than would be the dread of arousing resentment. The "black dog" rules with a powerful sway. Judiciously exercised, a sullen temper, a sharp tongue or a mental thin skin may hold in trembling subjection a whole family.

Of the same genus as the proprietors of the aforementioned amiable traits are those whose self-boasted candor makes countless fellow-creatures mourn. Perfect openness and sincerity are extremely noble qualities in the abstract, but taken in the concrete they are painfully apt to produce disagreeable results. The experienced in such matters cannot forbear a shudder when they hear the announcement, generally made with an air of conscious merit, "Well, as for me, I am one of the very candid people. I always say just what I think!" It may be noted, in passing, that this frankness seldom extends far enough to induce the utterance of pleasant truths, but usually exhausts itself after having prompted the delivery of criticism or rebuke. Occasionally it has the grace to attempt to veil itself under a compliment that compares present improvement with past delinquencies.

"I am so glad to see you have changed your style of wearing your hair," exclaimed one friend (?) to another. "Of course I did not like to mention it before, but now that you have altered it I will say that dressing it as you did made you look too ridiculously like a common Irish girl!"

Or again:

"What a pretty bonnet you have on! New, isn't it? It's a real relief to my mind that you have finally bought one, for we were all so tired of that you have been wearing all winter!"

And again:

"Your new dress is wonderfully stylish. And it is an untold comfort to me to see you have on a decent pullback at last!"

The fact that the pill has a slight sugar coating scarcely suffices to disguise its innate unpalatableness.

Yet many of those—they are generally women—who make these and similar speeches have no idea that they have said anything calculated to leave a bad taste in the mouth. They are usually of the class of well-meaning people who would not wittingly wound the feelings of others. Only they do not think how they would feel were such remarks addressed to them. Still, the stab is none the less keen because it is dealt in carelessness. The ball is as fatal when fired from the "unloaded pistol" that is responsible for many accidental deaths as when the weapon has been charged with malice prepense.

But when there is deliberation in the blow or shot it adds poison to the wound. There is food for thought in the speculation as to what must be the state of mind that moves one human being intentionally and uselessly to inflict pain upon a fellow. Life is so short and at its best holds so many pangs that it is incomprehensible that one's study should not be to diminish rather than to increase them, were it never so slightly. True, the philosophically disposed may declare these are only pin pricks, but even an insignificant affliction may be enough to destroy present comfort and peace of mind. The perpetrators of these unkindnesses would often be tempted to hesitate did they know how they themselves become identified with the sufferings they cause, so that the mention of the one calls up the memory of the other.

"I have an aunt-in-law—I never wish to see her again," said a young matron. "She had been very good to my husband in his boyhood and youth and I was prepared to love her dearly. I visited her before my marriage and nothing could exceed her friendliness. I anticipated a visit from her with unmixed pleasure. But she had not been in the house half a day before I was struck by a change in her manner. She had evidently come prepared to criticize, and to my dismay presented an entirely new phase of character. She was in what might be described as a perpetual state of lifted eyebrows over my deficiencies as a wife and a housekeeper. She did not hesitate to comment upon my extravagance, not stopping to attribute any lavishness of preparation to its true cause, my desire to do her honor. She directed my servants, corrected my shortcomings and finally wound up her visit by a lecture upon my delinquencies toward my husband and his relatives. There I stopped her, by telling her quietly that my treatment of my husband was a matter between ourselves, in which I would permit no interference. We did not quarrel, for we were both ladies, and matters were smoothed over between us for the sake of appearances, but I can never think of her and her lecture without a feeling of strong aversion."

It is the habit of these professors of frankness to stigmatize the efforts made by more considerate people to keep matters smooth as hypocrisy. Truckling and servile acquiescence to every fact or statement are not to be commended; but one can hardly view, except with gratitude, the desire to spare pain or mortification to others. If this be hypocrisy, human comfort would have a decided gain were it more commonly practised. One wonders what sort of a world this would be if every one were to devote the same energy to averting humiliation that many now, thoughtlessly perhaps, spend in causing it. In small matters, even more than in great, true consideration and Christian forbearance may be shown. No higher praise could be bestowed upon any one in human relations than Lowell gives in his poem on "My Love," where he adds the climax to his enumeration of her charms by mention of her care for the minor happiness of others:

She doeth little kindnesses
Which most leave undone or despise;
For naught that sets one heart at ease
And giveth happiness or peace
Is low-esteemed in her eyes.

—The Brooklyn Times.

Golden-Rod.

IN mocking bloom it waves above
New England's hardy soil,
In irony of the scant returns
Of stern and constant toil.

A fitter flower for lands that hold
Rich rifts of gold-veined ore,
For tropic plains or western slopes
Than this it wanders o'er.

Yet all along the roads that wind
O'er many a grating ledge,—
That follow where the rivers run
By cliff, or field, or sedge,—

And on the sterile pasture hills
Where browsing cattle are,
And by the meadow-paths, we see
The golden-rod afar.

What is the truth it hints to us
To whom its bloom is dear,
Who watch the pleasant summer wane
Until its gleam appear?

We do not clutch in grasping hands
The wealth most dear and sure,
Nor with our reckoning compute
The riches that endure.

Beside the homeliest tasks the best
Of life's best joys may bloom,
And what we deem but barren ways,
For them have sheltering room.

The strengthening balm of Nature comes,
Her inspirations throng,
And many a flower of gladness grows
Home-toils and cares among.

Manhood and womanhood have wealth
Coined in no city marts,
Silver nor gold may buy nor weigh
The love of loving hearts.

So still abroad, O golden-rod!
Autumnal signals fling;
Remind us, 'mong our cares, of all
The joys all seasons bring.

—Olive E. Dana, in The Christian Mirror.

A True Story.

FROM the ever suggestive columns of Babyhood we cull an article bearing the above caption. The sorrowful frequency of accidents by fire among the children of the poor, who are obliged to go to their daily work, leaving their little ones to take care of themselves, is only too familiar. But fire has a fascination for young eyes and hands, and many a time the small tenant of a luxurious nursery needs warning and punishment because of his desire to tamper with matches or poke sticks into the leaping blaze. There is a timely hint about old-fashioned obedience in the beginning of Babyhood's article. Indeed, Babyhood, from the first to the last page, is always so good, that we cannot but congratulate the young mothers of the period on the friendly helping hand which it extends to them. What would some of us, thirty years ago, not have given for just such practical advice when we were bewildered and anxious over our first baby, and the puzzle he was to our inexperienced hearts and hands.

Now for Babyhood's twin incidents.

When but a baby myself my mother left me in the nursery in the care of my sister, two years my senior, with explicit directions not to cross a certain row of carpet-figures distant, perhaps, six feet from a roaring wood-fire. Being old-fashioned and babies, we had no thought of disobedience. Although we had never heard of the "dead line," we comprehended that on the hither side of that boundary was safety, on the thither danger, if only from the displeasure of her one of whose mottoes was, "It is not the severity but the certainty of punishment that insures obedience."

While we nursed our dolls in our lawful territory a little daughter of an invalid visitor entered. We—midgets of four and six—wore crimson merino frocks. She had on a pretty French print and a muslin apron. After playing with us for awhile, she said that she was cold and went toward the fire. I recollect her merry laugh as my sister, who was no older than she, told her, magisterially, that it was "naughty to stand on the rug with her back to the fire. Mother said so." A moment later she screamed wildly and ran past us, her frock aflame, her arms waving over her head in a column of fire and smoke.

My mother, hearing the outcry while sitting in her guest's chamber, slipped out quickly and quietly, and ran to her own in time to see the blazing figure stagger down the staircase. Tearing a blanket from her bed—and casting, you may be sure, a glance at the corner where her terrified babies huddled against the wall, not knowing until then who the victim was—she overtook the burning child, wrapped her in the thick woollen covering, and extinguished the flames. The poor creature died that night; her mother four days later from the nervous shock.

Thirty years afterward a dear little girl, just six years old, who had a way of forgetting everything else in the book she happened to be holding, sat near the fire one winter night reading so intently that she did not hear the snap of the chestnut log as it tossed a coal into her lap. Her full white apron, tied at the waist and on the shoulders, was in a blaze before she suspected danger. Without cry or pause she threw herself, face downward, on the carpet, put her hands over her mouth and nose, and kicked violently on the floor for help. The sitting-room was directly below, and her father came running up to see what the unusual noise might mean. The smouldering fire was soon put out; nothing remained of the apron but the strings and shoulder-straps; the front breadth of the worsted frock was scorched. Beyond the fright and a few slight burns on her arms the small heroine was not harmed.

"Mamma has told me ever so many times," she said when questioned, "to lie down on the blaze if my clothes took fire, and to be very, very careful not to swallow it. So, of course, I remembered it at once!"

Bomb-Throwing at Reputation.

NOTHING is easier than to set in motion a false report concerning the character of a man or woman, especially if the victim chances to be a "shining mark." It needs but an artfully spoken word, dropped into a too-willing ear, and the cruel tale will spread like the germs of a foul disease, until the whole community is infected by it. We hardly realize, unless we sit down calmly to consider the matter, how common this form of evil doing is, how constantly the sly insinuation or more open assertion, derogatory to some one's good name, is encountered in the ordinary intercourse of daily life. Not always malicious, to be sure, often quite unintentional, but all the same heedless of the wrong committed, these "backbitings"—how suggestive the term!—belong one and all to the same detestable category. A bomb in the hands of an anarchist is a terrible weapon, but the tongue of a scandal-monger is an instrument of more tremendous power. An inspired apostle declares it is "set on fire of hell."

Is it a small matter to awaken suspicion with regard to the character or motives of another? He who, amid the thunders of Sinai, gave forth the mandate, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor," evidently does not so regard it. It may be a little thing that is said. A bomb is a little thing—until it explodes. But how often it happens that in entertaining even a slight suspicion of one with whom we have dealings, our whole estimate of his character and our bearing toward him are affected by it. Surely this is anything but a slight matter when looked at from the Christian point of view. And when we come to those baser forms of detraction which scorch and blast like a sirocco, the sin and shame of it no words can express. The crime of the anarchist is venial compared with an offence so base.

The Christian attitude with respect to this matter is surely plain enough. Don't listen to scandal, don't countenance assassins of reputation, shut the ears against the mean whispers of suspicion. Above all, do not become a co-conspirator with the heedless or malicious bomb-thrower by aiding to spread abroad insinuations affecting the character of any one.—The Examiner.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

All the Good We Can.

IF the sunshine never crept
Into hovels dark and sad,
If its glories never shone
Save where everything was glad,
If it scattered not its beams
Over hearts by sorrow chilled,
Would the sunshine do His will?
Would its mission be fulfilled?

If the roses never bloomed
Save for gladsome eyes alone,
If their beauty and their grace
For the weary never shone,
If they never brought a smile
To the wayside passer-by,
Would the roses do their task
While the hours of summer fly?

If the birdies sang their songs
Far from every listening ear,
If they poured them not abroad
All the earth to glad and cheer,
Would the birdies' work be done
Ere the autumn breezes call,
Ere the gold and crimson leaves
O'er the grave of summer fall?

If the sunshine of our smiles
We have scattered not afar,
If our roses—kindly deeds—
Bloom not where the lowly are,
If our words of hope and joy
Never fall to bless and cheer,
Have we done our Maker's will?
Have we wrought our mission here?

—George Cooper, in Golden Days.

Some Tiny Spinners.

ONE summer afternoon when Harry and myself were taking a walk we sat down to rest before a gate-way—the entrance to a small enclosure. The gate itself had, for some reason, been removed, but stretching from side to side, and fastened to a slight frame-work above, was to be seen a beautiful curtain. It was made not of lace, nor of cotton or wool, but of the finest silk. It was woven in pattern of good design, and was quite regularly made.

Perhaps you may guess what was my first exclamation: "See what a pretty spider's web!"

"Isn't it?" Harry responded with emphasis, then, very naturally, for boys, you know, are apt to think of things that do not occur to grown people, he added: "I wonder if it will stretch."

He suited, too, the action to the word. Putting out one small finger he laid it on the lower strand which fastened the web to the gate-way, somewhat as a house on the top of a high mountain may be fastened with cables to the rocks. The thread stretched considerably without breaking.

"What a good spinner the spider is!" thought I. "It makes for itself a beautiful dwelling of thread so fine that the best lace-maker might envy its skill, and yet, considering its size, this thread is very strong—strong enough to make the spider's lodge secure, though quite a high wind should blow. The mighty God, our loving Father, who cares for the smallest of His creatures, gave the tiny spinner its wisdom, teaching it how to weave for itself an abode fit, beautiful, and comparatively strong."

Yet if Harry had pressed a little harder the graceful web, hanging so airily in the gate-way, might have been easily torn apart. Or, had a violent storm arisen, the spider would soon have been compelled to find some retreat in which to hide from its fury.

Thinking of this reminded me of a verse in the Book of Job, which says that the trust of the hypocrite is a spider's web. That is, one who deceives himself and others by pretensions to goodness which he does not have, will some day find that his hope of safety is as frail a thing as the gossamer curtain which the spider weaves.

It would seem as though some spiders know how very destructible their slight nets are, for do not all the weather prophets tell us that when we see spider-webs stretched over the grass we may be sure of a fine day? Our wise spinners will not create their gauze-like dwellings when these are in danger of destruction by a coming rain.

We all know, too, how persevering some of the tiny weavers are. A certain spider that came under my observation spun a web on each of several successive nights in a particular spot in a room of a house. The web made at night was brushed away every morning by the hand of a careful housekeeper, who got the best of the intruder in the end. Solomon, you know, mentions four sorts of beings which he says are wise—ants, conies, locusts and spiders. He gives a reason in each case for calling them so, and the proof of wisdom which he attributes to the spider is that she "taketh hold with her hands and is in king's palaces." The house I spoke of is not exactly a palace, but the special spider I noticed showed wisdom in selecting a pleasant, airy room for its abode.

Mr. Froude, the historian, in his book called "Oceana; or, England and Her Colonies," tells us about some very useful spiders that he saw at Melbourne, Australia. These are there kept in the Astronomical Observatory. For what purpose do you suppose? I am sure that the brightest "Little Head" will find trouble in guessing.

It appears that in making certain observations, "where the period at which a star passes this point or that must be noted to the fraction of a second, the inner surface of the glasses used is crossed by minute lines, dividing it into squares, to assist in measuring the precise rate of movement across the field. For these lines no thread is fine enough which man can manufacture. Spider web is used, and not even this as the spider leaves it, for the spider makes a rope, and it is the strands of the rope, when untwisted, which alone will answer. The common spider's thread, such as we see him stretch from point to point on a bush, is a rope of eight strands, the untwisting of which to human fingers is a difficult operation. But a variety has been found at Melbourne whose thread has only three strands, and the precious creatures are among the observatory's rarest treasures."

So we learn that even spiders may be useful. Certainly, then, no child may say that he is too small or weak to do anything for the good of human-kind.

COUSIN LOIS.

A Little Boy's Sermon.

LITTLE Bertie Blynn had just finished his dinner. He was in the cozy library, keeping still for a few minutes after eating, according to his mother's rule. She got it from the family doctor, and a good rule it is. Bertie was sitting in his own rocking-chair before the pleasant grate fire. He had in his hand two fine apples, a rich red and a green. His father sat at a window reading a newspaper. Presently he heard the child say: "Thank you, little master."

Dropping his paper he said: "I thought you were alone, Bertie. Who was here just now?"

"Nobody, papa, only you and I."

"Didn't you say just now 'Thank you, little master?'"

The child did not answer at first, but laughed a shy laugh. Soon he said: "I'm afraid you'll laugh at me if I tell you, papa."

"Well, you have just laughed, and why mayn't I?"

"But I mean you'll make fun of me."

"No, I won't make fun of you, but perhaps I'll have fun with you. That will help us digest our roast beef."

"I'll tell you about it, papa. I had eaten my red apple, and wanted to eat the green one, too. Just then I remembered something I learned in school about eating, and I thought one big apple was enough. My stomach will be glad if I don't give it the green one to grind. It seemed for a minute just as if it said to me, 'Thank you, little master;' but I know I said it myself."

"Bertie, what is it Miss McLaren has been teaching about eating?"

"She told us to be careful not to give our stomachs too much food to grind. If we do she says it will make bad blood, that will run into our brains and make them dull and stupid, so that we can't get our lessons well and perhaps give us headaches, too. If we give our stomachs just enough work to do they will give us pure, lively blood that will make us feel bright and cheerful in school. Miss McLaren says that sometimes, when she eats too much of something that she likes very much, it seems almost as if her stomach moaned and complained; but when she denies herself and doesn't eat too much it seems as if it were thankful and glad."

"That is as good preaching as the minister's, Bertie. What more did Miss McLaren tell you about this matter?"

"She taught us a verse one day about keeping the soul on top. That wasn't just the word, but it's what it meant."

At this papa's paper went suddenly right up before his face. When, in a minute, it dropped down, there wasn't any laugh on his face as he said: "Were not these the words, 'I keep my body under?'"

"Oh, yes! that was it, but it means just the same. If I keep my body under, of course my soul is on top."

"Of course it is, my boy. Keep your soul on top, and you'll belong to the grandest style of man that walks the earth."—Selected.

Little Heads Together.

CAN YOU FIND THEM?

Where in the Old Testament do we find these words? Ferryboat, Plumb-line, Letter, Ring, Inventions, Honeycomb, Arguments, Island, Landmarks.

"ITTALIE" AND "JOHNNY."

ENIGMA.

I am composed of 30 letters and am a proverb.
My 15, 30, 26, 7, is an animal
My 20, 17, 26, 15. 1, is used in making bread.
My 14, 5, 13, 24, 2, is a small bone attached to the jaw.
My 19, 23, 27, 3, is a slender cord.
My 19, 10, 6, 7, is a fish.
My 25, 26, 28, 16, 29, 15, is a prickly plant.
My 2, 26, 19, 4, is to stop.
My 7, 8, 9, 11, 22, is a visitor.
My 21, 9, 19, is a fish resembling a snake.
My 28, 13, 12, 18, is the fruit of certain evergreen trees.

DAISY LEFFERTS.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

PI.

Mrsmeu, eunge fo asnoses utoh,
Suivlaner, druno hyt rbwo,
Cnormha, nocwr fo sorse ehitn.
Kgamni lgad het atsher fo snsdaes
Reyve ribd dan wfolre ni sagdsnle
Vslree ni yht gleain mite.

N. L.

Answers to Puzzles of September 1st.

Half Square.—
A R A R A T
R A M A H
A M O N
R A N
A H
T

Lesson in Geography.—1. Humboldt. 2. Corinne. 3. Mussel Shell. 4. Diamond Peak. 5. Cape Hancock. 6. Crescent City. 7. Eureka. Florence.

Crossword.—September.

Correct answers from Frank Drury, Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh.

Catechetical Instruction—Brown's Catechism.

BY REV. V. B. CARROLL.

THE relation of the ministry of the Reformed Church to the matter of the catechetical instruction of children and youth is clearly defined in the Constitution. Apart from the duty of explaining the Heidelberg Catechism from the pulpit, the pastor is enjoined by the terms of his call "to edify especially the youth by catechetical instruction." In accordance with this his duties are defined as "preaching, catechising, and visiting his flock" (Art. II., Sec. 12, Constitution), and he is required each spring to answer, among others, these three questions: "1. Are the doctrines of the Gospel preached in your congregation in their purity, agreeably to the Word of God" (that imperative standard is designedly put first), "the Confession of Faith, and the catechisms of our Church? 2. Is the Heidelberg catechism regularly explained agreeably, etc.? 3. Are the catechizing of the children and the instruction of the youth faithfully attended to?" By his ordination vows the minister is further pledged "diligently to teach and faithfully to defend" the standards of his church, and also "to refute and contradict all errors that militate against this doctrine" (Art. II., Sec. 10).

It is evident from the above, that the Constitution knows of no catechist but the pastor. If he is conscientiously satisfied, however, to commit this matter to some competent assistant under his own immediate supervision, the legal requirements are probably met. But no one can deprive the pastor of his constitutional position as sole catechist.

It is also evident that the Constitution knows of no catechisms which can be employed in instructing the children, except the "catechisms of our Church," viz., the Compendium and the Heidelberg. It is not possible to refute successfully the statement of one of the best ecclesiastical lawyers in our denomination: "Our church leaves but little to the discretion of the ministry or eldership in respect to matters that are considered non-essential; and in relation to doctrine, pointing to her recognized standards she virtually says: 'This or Nothing.' This is the law. I know it is not observed." "The silence of the Constitution respecting the permissible use of any standards except our own not only does not give consent, but is a virtual prohibition." This final statement is illustrated by the action of our Church in the matter of hymnology. The Constitution positively excludes all hymns that the Church has not formally endorsed (Art. X., Sec. 5) in General Synod. It gives General Synod no authority over the matter and the manner of doctrinal instruction Is this because doctrinal instruction is of less importance than hymnology? No; but because the Constitution clearly indicates the manner of doctrinal instruction; and as to the matter or substance, finds it exclusively in "the Word of God, the Confession of Faith, and the Catechisms of our Church." Synod has never endorsed any catechism (in reference to Westminster, see the non-verifiable action of Synod, Vol. XI., 159, 236). We raise the question whether it is expedient to create an article in the Constitution (Art. X., Sec. 6), giving Synod an authority in the matter of catechisms similar to that which it now has in the matter of hymnology (Art. X., Sec. 5)? But until the Constitution has been thus amended, even the endorsement of General Synod cannot make constitutional the use of any catechisms not of our own Church.

Once more, the protests of parents are to be heeded, and their rights guarded in this matter of catechetical instruction. What doctrine shall the child be taught? The ultimate court of appeal is not the Sunday-school teacher, or even pastor. It is the parent. He cannot, even if he would, surrender this right exclusively into another's hands. When parents present their children for baptism in our Church, they solemnly "promise to have these children instructed and brought up in the doctrine" of the Reformed Church. They have valid ground for complaint, therefore, when, on claiming the aid of the Church in indoctrinating their children, the Church proceeds to instruct said children in the standards of another Church than their own.

But if on constitutional and personal grounds these objections hold against all catechisms outside of our Church, objections additional, and stronger still, hold against such catechisms as are not in doctrinal agreement with the standards of our Church. These the pastor is in duty bound "to refute and contradict." Among such the writer unhesitatingly includes "Brown's Short Catechism for Young Children." It is adapted to young children only because it is short, and thus easily memorized. On any other grounds, it is, perhaps, the least adapted to the childish mind of any catechism now taught. To defend it on doctrinal grounds one must conceive of the human race as it might be entirely, irrespective of the historical fact of the incarnation and atonement of Christ, and in a purely natural state. Brown entirely overlooks the fact that we are living under the dispensation not of nature but of grace. Hence the whole atmosphere of the book is speculative, rather than practical; more than one question raises unnecessary mental difficulties, and suggests confusing conditions which do not exist, and cannot exist. An argument for the truth of a doctrine founded on a purely ideal condition, one which has no existence and cannot be realized, is an argument in support of the veriest lie that can be imagined.

Hence, for example, its speculative question concerning the damnatory character of original sin states either a "purely hypothetical case," as an eminent theologian of our Church asserts, or it lands us inevitably in the doctrine of Infant Damnation. In accord with this is the bearing of the question, addressed to all children, which requires the answer, "I am an enemy to God, a child of Satan, and an heir of hell." Our standards teach, in direct contradiction to this statement, that the children of Christian parents "are to be baptized as heirs of the kingdom of God, and of His Covenant, and "as members of His Church." (See Form for Infant Baptism.) Equally an idle speculation, a useless and confusing question, is the inquiry, "Can you pray with your heart before it is renewed by the Spirit of God?" particularly when this question is collated with the other question which it renders nugatory, "Hath God promised you a new heart, pardon of sin, with every other blessing and commanded you to ask them of Him by prayer?" Again, if in respect of our own standards a vehement discussion, indicative of the mind of the Church, has arisen concerning the phrase "wholly incapable of any good" and reference has been made, in explanation, to other portions of these very standards which read "Incapable of any saving good" (Canon's 3: 3, 4), and which explain the nature of good or "good works" (H. C., 91), then certainly, in the words of an orthodox doctor in our Church, "The General Synod, in this, most assuredly, condemned the catechism (Brown's) which teaches, 'I do nothing but sin.'"

But not only the doctrines taught, but the language employed in this catechism, is repulsive and misleading. The joys of the redeemed in heaven, one might infer, are largely due to the torments of the damned in hell; while the description of hell, as a place where the wicked "forever roar, curse and blaspheme God," is a picture of a pandemonium, the eternal existence of which in its rebellious attitude is, to say the least, an insult to our idea of the Divine Omnipotence. Then what a conception of the character of God do children obtain from this catechism, and what an erroneous idea of the meaning and the value of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ! That Gospel is presented as a sort of magic charm against the wrath of God; faith is a means of escaping hell and winning heaven; and an interest in Christ is to be sought only "That I may live always in readiness for death," and because, "I may die the next moment" and "go to hell with the wicked." Is this a correct presentation of the Gospel, and one especially adapted to young children?

The writer, a graduate of a seven years' course in New Brunswick, a pastor of fifteen years' experience in the Reformed Church, affirms his confidence in the doctrines of that Church; and, as a loyal son of the Dutch Church, earnestly protests concerning the need of such declarations as he has made. He knows, however, that he speaks the sentiments of more than one trammelled pastor, of whom one, much esteemed, writes, "I shall probably achieve the gradual elimination of Brown's Catechism from our school, and should endorse any Synodical action looking to its exclusion from all the schools of the Reformed Church."

A Good Man Gone to Rest.

THERE died in this city on the 10th of September, in his 78th year, one to whose departure more than a simple announcement should be given.

Abram Beekman was born in New Jersey. He came to this city in his youth. He thoroughly mastered every branch of the builder's trade, and built many houses in the eastern side of the city that are still standing. In 1835 he commenced for himself the business of dealer in foreign and domestic woods, both in sawing and selling. He continued the same business in the same spot for 30 years. In 1865 he retired with an ample competency.

Mr. Beekman was a man of unusual mental power. He showed it not only in his thorough business methods, but in his wide reading and general intelligence. His excellent judgment on all subjects of general interest, and especially of finance, made his counsel invaluable. Many will miss his wise advice. He was a director in the Pacific Insurance Company.

His integrity was never called in question. His honesty was of the old-fashioned kind that was scrupulously exact, to a cent. His word was as good as his bond. No one trusted him to be disappointed.

In 1860 he united with the Collegiate Church in this city. His place of worship was the Middle Church until he removed to Harlem. He served several times as deacon, and was a member of its Great Consistory. He was also for many years a teacher in the Sunday-school, and many members of his Bible-class became efficient workers for Christ and His Church. He was an earnest student of the Word of God. He loved the house of God, and was always in his place, when possible, at Sabbath services and at the communion table; a steadfast, faithful Christian man, whose especial interest in our Church and her work was kept fresh and vigorous by his careful reading of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, to which he had been a subscriber since 1849.

His last illness, which was about of a year's continuance, was the result of an injury received in adjusting the scuttle of his house. His sufferings were severe. But he endured patiently and unmurmuringly. His end was peace: "the death of the righteous." "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

His funeral services were rendered on the 14th inst., at his house, by Rev. G. H. Smyth and Rev. Giles H. Mandeville, D.D.

Not to praise him, but to honor the grace of Jesus that was given him, are these words written.

G. H. M.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Sept. 21st.

THE imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $9,285,449, the exports at $5,491,170. Since January 1st imports have amounted to $305,614,088, against $274 608 309 in the same portion of last year; exports to $222,020,827, against $234,065,265. Imports this year have increased 30 millions of dollars and exports diminished 12 millions. Foreign exchange, which just now is not regulated by the balance of trade, but by foreign purchases and sales of securities, and by the relative value of money here and on the other side of the Atlantic, sold yesterday at $4.81 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4 84 1 2 for demand for sterling. The Bremen steamer last week brought $200,000 in gold, bringing the recent imports up to about $6,955,000.

The Stock Market, which through the numerous adverse influences of some weeks past has maintained a remarkable degree of strength, has been fairly bouyant for a day or two. The Reading road affairs at last seem to be in a fair way to a reasonable adjustment. The railroads are managed more sensibly than they were, and better rates are maintained. As matters go nowadays, it is not to the interest of tradesmen to encourage the roads that cut rates. There is an army of possible purchasers of goods whose income and ability to buy is seriously reduced when nothing is received from railroad securities.

The Stock Market will have its undulations as heretofore. There will be sales to realize the advance and prices will decline, and then purchases in anticipation of another rise.

Wheat is down again. But it is still the fact that the world's supply is here, and before the next harvest there will be a demand for it. Wheat is cheaper than it ought to be. Present prices are a benefit to no one, and the world's financial depression will not be removed until the world's producers are better paid for the fruit of their toil. The visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada, east of the Rockies, increased last week 2,667,850 bushels of wheat, 135,456 of corn, and decreased 1,970 bushels of oats. The total of wheat was 47,539,880 bushels, against 46,436,337 at this time last year. Quotations for October delivery were yesterday: Wheat here 85 3-8, in Chicago 74 1-2; corn here 48 5-8, in Chicago 38 1-2; oats here 32, in Chicago 25 3-4. The quotations of cotton are higher than a week ago and were yesterday at the close: Sept. 9.22 24; Oct. 9.25-26; Nov. 9.27-28; Dec. 9.28-29; Jan. 9.35-36. Provisions sympathize with grain. The supply of hay and straw is sufficient, the demand good and prices about as they were a week ago.

The Associated Banks last week reduced loans $324,200, gained $932,800 in specie and $63,800 in deposits, and lost $868,800 in legal tenders. To the surplus reserve $48,050 were added, making it $7,682,125. The usual rate on call loans was 5 to 6 per cent. The rate yesterday was 5 1-2 to 6. Money on time on good security is to be had on the same terms. In fact, the owner of first rate securities who will not pay over 5 per cent will get what he wants at that rate.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

A letter has been sent to the Buffalo Express and signed by Engineer Brewer, laying all the blame for the railroad accident near Buffalo which took place a few days ago on the Nickel Plate Road, on the conductor. Brewer is still in concealment....A great deal of wreckage, cabin doors, bedding, spars and other debris has been driven ashore at the Strait of Belle Isle, showing the loss of a large steamship...." Dr. Andrew Jackson Grant" alias "Dr. Perri," the swindler, and his "sister," have been trying their luck among the lady boarders at Rye Beach, N. H A letter addressed to Rye Beach from Long Branch by Mrs. Gussie Britton, exposing the "Dr." and his "sister," saved Miss Riddell from falling in the same trap that the Cambridge lady fell into. The "Dr." engaged himself to Miss Riddell, who is worth $50,000, and was anxious to marry her immediately....Much property was destroyed and one man killed by a severe thunder storm in South Michigan....Mr. Gladstone is to speak in favor of Parnell's Land bill....Springs have broken out at Ceiba del Agua, Cuba, 30 miles Southwest of Havana, formed a large lake covering what were cultivated fields, and invading factories, ruining their works.

SATURDAY, 18.—Great indignation is felt in Ireland over the imprisonment of Father Fahey, who was mediating between landlord and tenants. Very serious trouble is anticipated. It is said again that Lord Churchill intends to introduce a Home Rule measure.. An attempt was made to kill M. Bratino, the Roumanian Prime Minister. The assassin was arrested....The Mexican bandit, Rodriquez, was captured yesterday. ....Emperor William is in a very feeble condition....The insurrection in Honduras has been quelled....The Legislature of Bulgaria has voted five hundred thousand dollars to purchase Prince Alexander's property....Forty Catholic families have embraced the Protestant faith at Nagy-Koros, in Hungary....The Memorial Arch of soldiers and sailors of the war at Hartford, Conn., was dedicated yesterday ..There is considerable trouble over Mr. Tilden's will. ....Considerable excitement was caused yesterday in the upper part of New York city by a wild steer....Julius Baum & Co., clothiers, of San Francisco, failed with liabilities estimated at one million of dollars. ....The Governors from the thirteen original States were nearly all present at Philadelphia yesterday to make preparations for the celebration on Sept. 17th, 1887, of the 100th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States....Another slight earthquake shock was felt last night at Charleston, S. C....Glanders is prevalent among horses in Brooklyn. Thirty horses suffering from the disease have been killed ...The Minister to China reports a number of outrages on Americans as instances of retaliation because of the outrages committed on Chinese in America ... Asher B. Durand, the oldest American painter and celebrated engraver, who engraved Trumbull's picture of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and long senior member of a firm of engravers in this city, died yesterday, aged 90 years, at his home in South Orange, N. J.

MONDAY, 20.—The Bulgarian throne is still vacant....The new Lord Lieutenant of Ireland entered Dublin with great demonstration... The Earl of Daltreth was accidentally killed by the discharge of his gun. ....There is considerable complaint in India about the heavy taxes imposed....Riots are reported from Belfast and Liverpool; powder and ball were freely used and several were killed and wounded....Mr. Gladstone has returned from his continental tour in time to speak on Mr. Parnell's bill and to place the responsibility of eviction where it belongs....The yacht race at Newport is undecided....It is rumored that Secretary Manning will resign the first of October....The U. S. troops sent to Arizona to capture Indians are being withdrawn.... Rumors of another earthquake come from Summerville, S. C....There was a bloody race riot between Italians and Irish at Four Mile Run, Penn....An insane man was carelessly scalded to death in a bathtub at Flatbush, L I....A woman thought to be insane killed her daughter and then herself in Brooklyn.

TUESDAY, 21.—Judge James R. Ludlow, son of the Rev. Dr. John Ludlow, died yesterday morning in Philadelphia....Tremors and detonations declining at Summerville, S. C. Charleston is more cheerful....The miners imprisoned by the fall of the roof of the mine near Scranton, Penn., certainly dead. Room reached and found full of deadly gas....Abandoned oil wells in Pennsylvania yield oil again....Large meeting of Socialists at Cooper Union, in this city, last evening, expressed sympathy with Chicago anarchists....Wm. E. Gould, Cashier of First National Bank of Portland, Me., a defaulter in $150,000 ...In Albany 3,000 masons, carpenters, etc., locked out by employers....A Spanish regiment revolted in Madrid on Sunday, proclaimed the Republic, were at once put to flight....Mr. Parnell advocated second reading of his Land bill in the Commons last evening....More riots in Belfast.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTEEN MILES OF ORGANS.—In numbering the organs of their manufacture, Mason & Hamlin have reached No. 160,000. Arranged in a line these would reach one hundred and thirteen miles, or would fence the railroad on one side from the Grand Central Station in New York, to within twenty miles of Springfield, Mass. Not only does this show the great popularity of American organs, but it illustrates what was declared by James Parton to be a general fact, that he who makes the best article in his line always has the greatest success.

We understand that the Mason & Hamlin Company's new Upright Piano is now commanding a large sale, and is, in every way, up to the standard of their unrivaled organs. We predict a large success for this piano, which is constructed on a new system, said to be a decided advance over the prevailing wrest-pin system.—Boston Journal.

Every mother should obtain and carefully read "Our Baby's First and Second Year," by Marion Harland. This valuable little book will be sent free to any address upon receipt of postal by Messrs. Reed & Carnrick, Mercantile Exchange Building, 2 and 4 Harrison street, New York city.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

Rheumatism and the Gout, cease their twinges, if the affected part is daily washed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap, which banishes pain and renders the joints and muscles supple and elastic. It is at the same time a very effective clarifier and beautifier of the skin.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

To eradicate the poisons which produce fever and ague, take Ayer's Ague Cure. It cures without leaving any injurious effect upon the system, and is the only medicine in existence which may be considered an absolute antidote for malaria.

The pain and misery suffered by those who are afflicted with dyspepsia are indescribable. The relief which is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla has caused thousands to be thankful for this great medicine. It dispels the causes of dyspepsia, and tones up the digestive organs.

Relief is immediate, and a sure cure. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. 50 cents.

MARRIAGES.

ELLSWORTH—VAN AKEN.—At Port Ewen, N. Y., Sept. 15, at the residence of the bride's father, James E. Van Aken, Esq., by Rev. J. Howard Van Doren, assisted by Rev. B. C. Lippincott, of Port Ewen, Millard F. Ellsworth, of Port Ewen, to Lizzie Van Aken.

KORTRIGHT—HARP.—At Gardiner, N. Y., June 23, by Rev. C. E. Lasher, Alfred D. Kortright, of Gardiner, N. Y., and Mrs. Jane Harp, of New Paltz, N. Y.

KRAEMER—WHITE.—By Rev. Giles H. Mandeville, D.D., Sept. 14, George J. Kraemer and Edith V. White, both of this city.

LEFEVRE—LEFEVRE.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Sept. 16, by Rev. C. E. Lasher, Mr. Peter E. LeFevre, of New Paltz, N. Y., and Miss Gertrude LeFevre, of Gardiner, N. Y., youngest daughter of Josiah LeFevre, Esq.

RIPPIER—WARDELL.—On Wednesday evening, Sept. 15, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. R. B. Hull, Alfred C. Rippier to Helen Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Wardell, all of Brooklyn.

RHINEHART—McELHONE.—At Mt. Valley, on Sept. 13, by Rev. E. O. Moffett, Mr. Alford T. Rhinehart, of Gardner, N. Y., to Miss Harriett W. McElhone, of Shawangunk, N. Y.

VAN ALEN—WEST.—At the residence of the bride's parents, on Wednesday, Sept. 15, by Rev. C. M. Perlee, Evert Van Alen, of Blooming Grove, N. Y., to Josephine, daughter of Samuel West, of Clarksville, N. Y.

VON KRUSENSTJERNA—EMBICK.—At the Reformed Church parsonage, South Bend, Ind., by Rev. N. D. Williamson, Mr. William Von Krusenstjerna and Miss Lizzie C. Embick.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

LOCKWOOD.—At Pleasant Plains parsonage, Dutchess Co., N. Y., Susie May, infant daughter of Rev. Louis J. and Mary A. Lockwood, aged 1 year, 5 months and 12 days.

Interment at New Brunswick, N. J., near the remains of her grandfather, the late Rev. Cornelius Wyckoff.

It is sad to think that we shall see our dear little Susie no more on earth, but it is a blessed thought to know that she is safe in the arms of Jesus.

We laid our baby in the grave,
And yet she is not there;
But in yon bright and happy land,
All beautiful and fair,
A starry crown upon her head,
Our Susie May will wear.

"Suffer the little children," Christ
Has said, "to come to me;"
No safer place than in His arms,
No safer e'er can be.
And yet! 'tis hard, my baby dear,
'Tis hard to part with thee.

o pain our little one will feel,
Or ever draw a sigh;
Sickness and sorrow are unknown
In the bright home on high.
And Jesus lovingly will be
Unto my darling nigh.

We leave our baby in the grave,
We leave and go away;
But blessed is the Christian's hope,
We'll meet again some day.
Then for awhile we say farewell
To darling Susie May.

VAN WIE.—At Coxsackie, N. Y., Aug. 10, David H. Van Wie, in the 74th year of his age.

The deceased began his Christian career in 1838, when he united with the Second Reformed Church of Coxsackie, during a revival season under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Cahoom. His connection with this church was unbroken till the day of his death. For nearly half a century he served her with wise and enthusiastic devotion in every department of her work. For twenty-five years he was the recognized leader of the choir, and for a greater number still he was a member of the consistory. His work in the Sunday-school began with his conversion, and continued to almost the close of his life. He was first teacher, then superintendent, then teacher again, and at last when strength was not sufficient for either teaching or superintending, he became a pupil. His place in the prayer-meeting was seldom vacant, and in all extra labors in times of financial trouble and spiritual coldness, he was conspicuous for his courage and zeal. He was greatly beloved in his home, in the church, and in the community. His presence was always welcome and inspiring. He was honored by his fellow citizens, who frequently confided to him the administration of public trusts. His faith in God and in His Son, Jesus Christ, was a settled habit of his soul. He was never tormented by doubts. He lived constantly under the influence of the powers of the world to come. His character was therefore above reproach, and his life was fruitful and blessed and happy. All who knew him felt that "he was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." And so when God called him he was ready, and gladly did he go to receive the treasures laid up for him in heaven.

COM.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

AUNT MARJORIE acknowledges the receipt of $5 for the Fresh Air Fund from "Two Babies." The money has been sent to the New York Tribune.

CHARLESTON RELIEF FUND.—From Church, Stuyvesant, N. Y., $15.15. Paid to Treasurer of N. Y. Chamber of Commerce.

THE BI-CENTENNIAL of the First Reformed Church of Hackensack, N. J., will be celebrated on Thursday, Sept. 23d, 1886. In the morning a Historical Address will be delivered by the pastor. In the afternoon a Dutch service, similar to that in vogue two hundred years ago, will be held. In the evening addresses will be delivered by several pastors, once connected with the church.

All former members are cordially invited to attend. Persons wishing entertainment will please address Garret Oldis, Esq., Chairman of Entertainment Committee, Hackensack, N. J.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA.—The regular fall meeting of the Classis of Cayuga will be held in the Reformed Church of Utica on Tuesday Oct. 5th, at 7.30 P.M. C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA will meet in stated fall session in the Reformed Church of Tyre, the first Tuesday (5th) of October, at 3 P.M. Vacant churches to report, and Classical dues to be paid in at this session.

The brethren will be met on the arrival of the A.M. trains at Seneca Falls and at Clyde, and conveyed to the place of meeting the day Classis convenes. J. WHITBECK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 5th, at 11 A M., in the Church of Rochester. Sermon by the retiring President, Rev. W. H. Vroom. Classical dues should be paid by the several churches.

DEWITT B. WYCKOFF, S. C.

NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND.—A special meeting of the North Classis of Long Island will be held in the Reformed Church of Manhassett on Tuesday, September 28th. Carriages will be at Great Neck depot at 1.52 P.M.

W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in fall session at Cuddebackville, Tuesday, October 19th, at 2 P.M. Carriages will meet delegates at Guyward at 11,25 A.M. Consistorial minutes must be presented and Classical dues paid. The subject for religious meeting in the evening, "Infant Baptism and the Religious Training of the Young." Revs. Schoonmaker and Darrach to open the discussion.

R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Boonton, on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial records should be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting. Rev. H. W. Teller, (D. V.,) will preach the Classical sermon. S. T. SEARLE, S, C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in stated session at Addisville, Pa., the third Tuesday in October, 19th, at 11.30 A.M. Conveyances will meet delegates at Somerton, on Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, at 10.17, and those leaving Philadelphia at 9.40 will be met at Churchville at 10.33.

S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Church of Cold Spring, on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial minutes to be presented and dues to be paid.

A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will hold its stated fall session in the Second Reformed church in Somerville, N. J., on the second Tuesday, the 12th of October, 1886, at 10.30 A M. Classical dues and bills of delegates are payable at this session.

JOHN F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN made the following appointments for the installation of the Rev. Curtis E. Long, at High Bridge, N. J., on Sept mber 23d, at 3.30 P.M.: Rev. Edward G. Read to preach the sermon, or Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff, his alternate; the Rev. J. F. Mesick, President of Classis, to preside and to read the Liturgy, containing the charges to pastor and people, and Rev. P. M. Doolittle, his alternate. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 5th, at 10.30 A.M., at Schodack Landing. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting. EDWARD A. COLLIER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Blue Mountain on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 11 A M. Rev. A. J. Sebring is Chairman of the Committee on Synodical Minutes. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

Carriages will be in readiness at Saugerties station on the arrival of the 7 o'clock train from Kingston to convey members of Classis to the church.

J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

CORRESPONDENTS please address Rev. B. C. Miller, Jr., at Bloomfield, N. J. (P. O. Box 276.)

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. J. W. Warnshuis at Passaic, N. J.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address Rev. J. Elmendorf, D.D., at 61 East 123d st., New York.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. G. D. Lydecker at Upper Red Hook, N. Y.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

For Toilet Use.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had, was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair. —Judson B. Chapel, Peabody, Mass.

HAIR that has become weak, gray, and faded, may have new life and color restored to it by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. My hair was thin, faded, and dry, and fell out in large quantities. Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary N. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

VIGOR, youth, and beauty, in the appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. A disease of the scalp caused my hair to become harsh and dry, and to fall out freely. Nothing I tried seemed to do any good until I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor. Three bottles of this preparation restored my hair to a healthy condition, and it is now soft and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it is also free from dandruff.—Mrs. E. R. Foss, Milwaukee, Wis.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

PERFECT SAFETY, prompt action, and wonderful curative properties, easily place Ayer's Pills at the head of the list of popular remedies for Sick and Nervous Headaches, Constipation, and all ailments originating in a disordered Liver.

I have been a great sufferer from Headache, and Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the only medicine that has ever given me relief. One dose of these Pills will quickly move my bowels, and free my head from pain.—William L. Page, Richmond Va.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicine.

The Church.

Three Words of Strength.

FROM THE GERMAN OF SCHILLER.

THERE are three lessons I would write—
Three words as with a burning pen,
In tracings of eternal light
Upon the hearts of men.

Have hope. Though clouds environ now
And gladness hides her face in scorn,
Put thou the shadow from thy brow—
No night but hath its morn.

Have faith. Where'er thy bark is driven—
The calm's disport, the tempest's mirth—
Know this—God rules the host of heaven,
Th' inhabitants of earth.

Have love. Not love alone for one;
But man, as man, thy brothers call,
And scatter, like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all.

Thus grave these lessons on thy soul—
Hope, Faith, and Love—and thou shalt find
Strength when life's surges rudest roll,
Light when thou else wert blind.

—The Lutheran Observer.

From the Netherlands.

THE welcome editorials of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, the Old Colony Papers, the religious news, with the items of foreign missions and of the Church at home, are indispensable to every good Dutchman, though on a vacation. They are no less than ever pertinent here.

If the principles which the INTELLIGENCER cherishes are not the essence of the Gospel, which is essential to the welfare of the world, we will ever fail elsewhere to find it, and if found in its columns continuously we need not seek further, but are bound heartily always to respond to it.

We have just heard the voice of the preacher in the Old Church here—the Groote Kerk,—the old cathedral, built in 1475, before Columbus discovered America. The sounding board, precentor and congregational singing, with the noted organ, are all there still. The audience was large and closely attentive; the minister earnest and in manner impressive. The massive architecture of the building, suited to the sentiment and ecclesiastical intent of pre-Reformation times, does not disturb the solemnity and sincerity of that worship which the use of pews later on seemed for convenience to favor. I could quite imagine Rev. Dr. Milledoler or your father, Chancellor Ferris, in the pulpit, the former of whom the "Predikant," (or preacher,) quite closely resembled in manner, figure and pleasing expression.

At Rotterdam, the Hague, and here, the faithful and earnest attendance at public worship and certain marked observances of the Sabbath are apparent. The Continental Sunday has not obliterated the Divine Rest Day as an institution coördinate with the weekly notation of time. May it never be of less note anywhere than its importance warrants, and its right use be everywhere as welcome as its regular return!

The Reformed Church in America, (it might as well be "the Dutch" if the spirit of history be understandly cherished,) may without regret keep perpetual sympathy with the atmosphere of Gospel truth and practice here. What of good has here been inherited and prized, during the struggles which have kept these noted shores not only as a breakwater against the sea to much of Europe, but for centuries, including the eighty years' war, has held fast as a moral and sacred buttress and fortress of civil and religious liberty for the world, while the mutations of nations were whirling around it and enemies of the truth were vainly seeking to absorb and expunge it, deserves our admiration and hearty fellowship. The issue proves that where truth dwells no ashes of its own are ever found. Its enemies may leave their bones unwillingly on the field of conflict, but the "eternal years" keep with truth's own and to be endless worshippers.

A stranger, being a mere casual observer, and unacquainted with the language, the history and the old ancestral customs and attachments here, might infer that religious veneration of the past was but an incident of historical remembrance, about which the facts were not in dispute, but that enthusiasm had vanished. Not so! Naturally, and, in fact, historically and consciously, well-grounded faith will consort with composure, and one trait of Holland character must always be remembered or every diagnosis of the situation, personal, political or religious, will be in vain. Calmness and gentleness, associated with enduring courage, distinguish Dutch character, as exhibited at the siege of Leyden, at the time of the assassination of its trusted chief, during the inundations at Dort or the overwhelming rush of waters which made the present Zuider Zee. And amid all lies a love for and firm adherence to Bible truth, with a spirit of devotion to the "vrouw" and "kinderen," which fires from the landward could not consume nor many waters of the sea quench.

These characteristics remain in New Netherlands, and much of the best elements of New Amsterdam, in solidity, principle and power, still keep old memories and mottoes good. New York and the Hudson, Long Island and New Jersey, will need to outlast time itself, to get beyond the stamp of first ethnological impressions received from ancestors of the Fatherland.

The same names still live here which, being found in early American history, are by Americans deemed ancient. Their possessors here sent not their entire kin to old Manhattan or the now old Fort Orange, simply to line the then attractive river Mauritius (the Hudson). Here for hundreds of years before the island of Manhattan was sold by the Indians to the Dutch for $24, names familiar to you in the venerable Dutch connections of New Amsterdam had been handed down from father to son in the same or neighboring localities since the crusades.

Shall we speak of coats-of-arms? What coat-of-arms is more precious to son or daughter than the knowledge that, for the purpose of honoring God, those who had houses and lands in abundance sold and pledged them, and even laid down their lives. Then when the scattered remnants returned from the conflict, calmly and persistently, generation after generation, held what had been maintained, against the sea, against internal foes and the rapacity of foreign invaders. The supreme force in this heroic and patient endurance has been the good old Dutch Bible, which, by printing types, Koster, of this city, (whose monument is here close by,) first here made a possible possession of the world. Let the Bible be the Dutchman's chosen coat-of-arms.

A. V. W. VAN VECHTEN.

HAARLEM, Holland, 8th Aug., 1886.

ORGANIC UNION.—One of our Church papers sets forth that if the Northern and Southern Presbyterian churches were united there would be a church extending to every part of the country, with 8,479 churches, 6,621 ministers, and 805,551 members—"a great host of Christian people whose activities in the service of Christ would surely be followed by large and permanent results." We should hope so; but we see no valid argument here for union. We take it that these churches are now active in the service of Christ as separate bodies, and that this activity is really "followed by large and permanent results." Indeed, it is quite doubtful if their union would increase the total of fruit bearing in the shape of Christian activity and benevolence—and that is the vital consideration. Mere bulk is not power; it rather tends to inertia.—The Evangelist.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 1. FOURTH QUARTER.

M. The Suffering Saviour.....Mark 14: 32-52.
T. Peter's Denial.....John 18: 15-27.
W. The Agonizing Prayer .....Matt. 26: 36-46.
T. Jesus Betrayed.....John 18: 1-14.
F. The Sleeping Disciples.....Luke 22: 39-46.
S. The Traitor's Fate.....Acts 1: 15-56.
S. "Lo, I Come."....Ps. 40: 1-17.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Oct. 3d.—Jesus Betrayed.—John 18: 1-14.

Golden Text.—"The Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners."—MARK 14: 41.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"The cup which My Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it."—JOHN 18: 11.

INTRODUCTION.

WE shall continue to study the writings of John throughout the remainder of the year. He will guide our thoughts to the progress of Christ's kingdom from the agony of Gethsemane to the heavenly glory of the triumphant king. The story of the garden scene is given differently by each of the evangelists. The account given by Matthew is fullest of detail concerning the agony, that by John is fullest in reference to the arrest. In treating of our lesson we will try to interweave the facts related by the other narrators.

THE LESSON.

I. THE SEARCH.—VS. 1-4.

V. 1.—"When Jesus had spoken these words, He went forth—over the brook Cedron." The "words" refer to all the preceding discourse, commenced at the table in the upper room, and probably continued during their walk through the streets of Jerusalem. The brook Cedron was more properly a ravine, through which at certain seasons a torrent of water rushed, but which at other times was dry. "Where was a garden into which He entered and His disciples." This garden was probably an enclosed space where privacy could be secured. It is quite possible that Jesus had spent some of the nights of that eventful week within this garden. Leaving the most of the disciples near the entrance, He went with the three favored ones into the interior, and then, leaving them, went still further into the lonely recesses of the place and poured out His soul in agony to His Father. In this final prayer He accepted the cup with all its bitterness for our sake.

2.—"Judas also, which betrayed Him, knew the place." It is evident that Jesus did not enter the garden for the purpose of hiding Himself. The spot was a well-known place of resort for this little company.

V. 3.—"Judas then, having received a band of men and officers." The preparations for the arrest of Jesus were very formidable. The impression seems to have been that the disciples would make a vigorous resistance in case of an attack upon Him. "Cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons." They were prepared to make search for a fugitive, and to overbear any resistance. They treated Him like a desperate ruffian.

V. 4.—"Jesus, therefore, knowing all things that were coming upon Him." He knew all the steps that had been taken looking toward His death, and all that would yet be taken; but with calmness advances toward His pursuers, with the question, "Whom seek ye." He was not arrested but He surrendered Himself.

II. THE CONFESSION.—VS. 5-11.

V. 5.—In answer to His question, the leaders of the band said, "Jesus of Nazareth." It was probably at this juncture that Judas made his unnecessary and deceitful show of affection by kissing the LORD. "Jesus saith unto Him, I am He." No attempt at parley or escape. The lights and weapons were as needless as the presence of the traitor. "Judas also, which betrayed Him, stood with them." He was to see how futile and uncalled for his treason was. He saw himself as of absolutely no value whatever to the officers in their work.

V. 6.—Jesus, while giving Himself up to His enemies, did not suffer Himself to be led away until He had proved to His captors that He went voluntarily. The entire band fell away from Him as by a common impulse, and fell upon the ground, showing that they were powerless before this defenceless man.

V. 7.—After they had recovered from the effect of this manifestation of Divine power, Jesus repeated the question, "Whom seek ye?" The answer was given from trembling lips, "Jesus of Nazareth."

V. 8.—Now the Saviour interposes in behalf of His disciples, who might have been arrested as His accomplices. "If, therefore, ye seek Me, let these go their way." Thus He interposed between those who trusted in Him and danger, and showed them the position He would always occupy as their defender.

V. 9.—"That the saying might be fulfilled, which He spake." John saw in this event a partial fulfilment of the words of Christ, "Of them which thou gavest Me have I lost none." This declaration, however, covered more than this one danger; it embraced their entire careers, and every emergency of all succeeding generations of His followers.

V. 10.—"Then Simon Peter, having a sword drew it, and smote the high priest's servant." It was thus that Peter thought to prove his loyalty. He found, like many another since his day, that physical courage is much simpler than true moral strength. Many a man who has faced a cannon's mouth has been conquered by a sneer.

V. 11.—Jesus did not approve of this show of force, which would have been a strong argument in favor of the rebelliousness charged upon Him if He had not repudiated the act and removed its effects. With a word of reproof to Peter, and the last miracle of healing for the sufferer, He gave to us the maxim, which we may wisely adopt, "The cup which My Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it?"

III. THE ARREST.—VS. 12-14.

V. 12.—"Then the band....took Jesus and bound him." It is likely that their instructions required them to take such precautions, although they must have felt that they were both unnecessary and futile.

V. 13.—"And led him away to Annas first." The office of high priest had become a political perquisite, so that there were frequent changes, caused by political necessities or the caprices of the governors. Annas was properly high priest according to law, but his son-in-law had superseded him, although he still exerted a powerful influence. It was probably felt by the conspirators that Annas ought to receive the honor of conducting the first examination.

V. 14.—"Now Caiaphas was he, which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people." This advice of Caiaphas was based on mere policy, and that of a very short-sighted nature, and had committed him to the condemnation of Jesus before the case was tried.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Prayer is the best preparation for trial.
2. Even the place of prayer is not free from Satan's presence.
3. Jesus gave Himself freely for you.
4. Will you give yourself as willingly to Him?

5. Jesus saved His disciples by surrendering Himself.

6. The power of the sword can neither help nor hinder Christ's cause.

7. Zeal without knowledge is dangerous.

8. The last miracle of Jesus was one of mercy to an enemy.

9. Take heed lest you betray the Master by unworthy living.

Her Picture.

"WHAT you looking at, gran'pa?"

"Her picture, lass."

"What makes you look at gran'ma's picture so much? Can't you 'member how she looked when she was 'live?"

"Yes, lass, but it fades away; fades so quickly my heart is unsatisfied. I can see her in the picture here and look at her a long time."

"What makes you want to so much, gran'pa? The face is old and wrinkled—"

"No, no, lass! You don't see! The face is fair and round, and the roses come and go in her cheeks like they always did when I looked at her long."

"Why, gran'pa! Her cheeks are wrinkled and sunk in and—"

"What's the matter with thee, lass! Don't I know her face? I can see it as plain as the day I kissed it first in the orchard path long, long ago. Them's dimples you see in her cheeks, lass. Roguish dimples that always laugh to gladden the heart that sees them. And that rose in her hair—"

"Where, gran'pa? Let me see."

"There on that side, lass, where the curls shine like gold."

"Why gran'pa, its all straight and gray—"

"No, no, lass. Don't I see them? They looked just that way when I first loved her, lass. They never changed. I saw them every day till she died; every day for fifty years, the same golden curls. When your mother was a wee babe she used to play with them, lass, and fill her little fingers with the golden rings. Pretty rings, lass; prettier rings them golden curls made than ever a princess wore—"

"Prettier than mine, grandpa?"

"Prettier than anybody's, lass. There never were any like hers before nor since, never, anywhere. And when she smiled as she does now—"

"Why, gran'pa, she ain't smiling! She's looking as straight—"

"There, there, lass, you don't see. I say when she was smiling as she is now, and the dimples danced and deepened and her eyes sparkled and she shook her queenly head, them golden curls would always fall like glittering rings, and she was beautiful as an angel—look at her now, lass."

"Why, gran'pa, she's just the same all the time. I'll go and ask mamma."

And she ran away to tell them, with great tears in her eyes, that grandpa said grandma's hair in the old picture was prettier than hers.

They left him alone with her. To him she was never old. He sees the face of the long ago, the fairest of all to him.

He holds the picture so that the sunbeams will fall among the golden curls, and gazes with all of a lover's pride upon the vision of beauty. Unconsciously his hand brushes the picture as if stroking back one of the straying curls his fancy sees. He kisses it again and again, murmuring the fond love names, and whispering words no other on earth must hear. His heart is thrilled with the passion spell. His soul is free from the thrall of years and lives in its own immortal youth. The form that he knows so well and the face that is fairest of all have never changed in all the years to love's sweet idolatry.

The angel that smiles from the golden curls and the spirit that worships in date less youth are joined in a heavenly mystery. —The Current.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

For Overworked Females.

Dr. J. P. COWAN, Ashland, O., says: "It proves satisfactory as a nerve tonic; also in dyspeptic conditions of the stomach, with general debility, such as we find in overworked females, with nervous headache and its accompaniments."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Combines, in a manner peculiar to itself, the best blood-purifying and strengthening remedies of the vegetable kingdom. You will find this wonderful remedy effective where other medicines have failed. Try it now. It will purify your blood, regulate the digestion, and give new life and vigor to the entire body.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me great good. I was tired out from overwork, and it toned me up." MRS. G. E. SIMMONS, Cohoes, N. Y.

"I suffered three years from blood poison. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and think I am cured." MRS. M. J. DAVIS, Brockport, N. Y.

Purifies the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mothe is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS for $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000,000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.

J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2[illegible]
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85

Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886. $5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Fund together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PEC Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the 1st day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0[illegible]
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	201,040 1[illegible]
Net Surplus	1,389,341 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,638 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,370 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9[illegible]2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	2[illegible]6,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886	10[illegible],394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR. } Ass't Sec's

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

15,267 BABIES

Died from starvation, cholera infantum, and other infantile disorders in New York City during 1885, while the entire mortality was only 35,682.

15,267 CHILDREN DIED UNDER 5 YEARS OF AGE.

12,307 BABIES DIED UNDER 2 YEARS OF AGE.

9,303 BABIES DIED UNDER 1 YEAR OF AGE.

Nearly all of these infants died from starvation, cholera infantum, or similar causes, produced in most instances from the want of proper food. The majority of these babies were fed upon cow's milk or some starchy food. This fearful mortality proves that neither of the above foods can be relied upon

DO NOT USE cow's milk BECAUSE the casein will form into curds in the child's stomach and produce CHOLERA INFANTUM.

DO NOT USE condensed milk BECAUSE nearly all of it contains about half cane sugar, and will cause acid fermentation and cholera infantum.

DO NOT USE prepared foods which contain starch or which must be mixed with milk, BECAUSE the child cannot digest raw starch, and none of these foods will thoroughly nourish it.

After careful investigation every intelligent person must admit that

CARNRICK'S SOLUBLE FOOD

Is the only Perfect Food for Infants and Children ever produced. Why?

BECAUSE it perfectly resembles a good quality of mother's milk, and will therefore thoroughly nourish the child without the addition of condensed or cow's milk.

BECAUSE it has been shown by Dr. Stutzer, one of the best known analysts in the world, to perfectly resemble a good quality of human milk in digestibility and composition. Removes necessity for a wet nurse.

BECAUSE if it is used it will prevent CHOLERA INFANTUM and SUMMER COMPLAINTS in children.

BECAUSE it is always ready for use, and requires no special care in preparation.

BECAUSE it will keep for any length of time.

BECAUSE it necessitates neither the addition of milk nor cream.

BECAUSE it is the only food for infants that will thoroughly nourish the child

BECAUSE it is the only food that digests as easily as human milk.

BECAUSE it is the only prepared food where the obeesey part of the milk is rendered as soluble as that in human milk, and cannot form into curds, and thereby produce CHOLERA INFANTUM.

BECAUSE it is the only food that contains the requisite quantity of lime to properly make and nourish the bones and teeth.

BECAUSE it is the only food that will agree with children almost universally.

No other food except human milk will answer these requirements. A single trial in comparison with any other food will convince you that these statements are true.

Dr. Stutzer, food analyst for Rhenish Prussia, in his analysis of ten of the leading principal children's foods used in this country and Europe, and published in the Pharmaceutische Central Halle, Berlin, says:

IN MY OPINION CARNRICK'S SOLUBLE FOOD IS MUCH BETTER FOR NOURISHING CHILDREN THAN ANY OTHER INFANTS' FOOD I HAVE EVER SEEN.

Send for copy of MARION HARLAND'S "Our Baby's First Year," sent post free on application.

A sample twenty-five cent can of Carnrick's Soluble Food will be sent gratis and post free to any one sending their address to

REED & CARNRICK,

Merchantile Exchange Building, 2, 4, and 6 Harrison St., New York.

Arnold, Constable & Co

CLOTH DEPARTMENT.

Now open, GENTLEMEN'S fall and winter Suitings, Trouserings and Overcoatings in the best makes and newest London styles.

Also, Ladies' plain and fancy "French," "English," "Scotch," and "Irish" DRESS CLOTHS in large variety.

Elegant FALL NOVELTIES now exhibiting in fancy striped and figured Silks, Satins, Plushes and Velvets. Also, an extensive stock of new and choice weaves in plain solid-colored Silks, Satins, &c. An early inspection respectfully requested.

Broadway & 19th st.
NEW YORK.

SILKS AND VELVETS.

JAMES M'CREERY & CO. HAVE COMPLETE REPRESENTATIVE ASSORTMENTS OF THEIR FALL IMPORTATIONS IN SILK AND VELVET NOVELTIES; WITH THE MOST APPROPRIATE TEXTURES FOR COMBINATIONS.

IN BLACK SILKS, THEY ARE SHOWING VERY LARGE STOCKS OF THE NEWEST AND MOST APPROVED WEAVES AT VERY MODERATE PRICES.

AN EXAMINATION IS INVITED.

Broadway and 11th Street,
New York.

MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by Mason & Hamlin, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Pianoforte construction.

Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

Side by side with the march of civilization comes the desire to adorn our homes as God colors and glorifies the landscape from spring's faint green to the deepest crimson of Autumn. Never has a dollar and thirty-five cents gone so far before to refine and beautify, as a gallon of our paint on the side of a house to harmonize it with the landscape. The F. J. NASH M'F'G. CO., Manufacturers of Ready Mixed Paints, Nyack, Rockland Co., New York. Interesting Circulars Free. If your dealer refuses you these goods apply to us direct.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

ORIENTAL DEPARTMENT.

W. & J. SLOANE

Have just opened their Fall stock of

Persian, India and TURKEY CARPETS

in choice designs and colorings. Among the latter will be found Oushak, Ghiordes, Bahndure, Kirman, Sivas, and the new quality known as Afghan, which possesses all the lustre and sheen of the Antique Carpet.

The attention of connoisseurs is especially called to a very fine assortment of small Antique Rugs.

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts
NEW YORK.

EQUITABLE
Mortgage Company,
SIX AND SEVEN PER CENT
FARM Mortgages & Municipal in Kansas, Missouri & Nebraska BONDS
PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST
GUARANTEED.
Capital, $600,000.00.

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years sent free on application.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK, 208 B'way, Evening Post Bl'dg.
Charles N. Fowler, V.
BOSTON, 23 Court Street.
H. H. Fitch, Manager.
PHILADELPHIA, 112 South Fourth Street.
Chas. Benj. Wilkinson, Manag
KANSAS CITY, Mo.
John Avery, General Manager.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.
ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.
LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.
LEGGAT BROTHERS,
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

RIDGE'S FOOD

is the most reliable substitute known for mother's milk. Its superiority rests on the test of 30 years' experience throughout Great Britain and the United States. A sustaining, strengthening diet for invalids. Nutritious, easily digested and acceptable to the most delicate stomach. Four sizes, 35c. up. Send stamp for "Healthful Hints," a valuable pamphlet, to WOOLRICH & CO., Palmer, Mass.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
Chimes and Peals for Churches, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Sole Agents for the United States for the Celebrated

Red Star Brand
OF
Wonderful Wearing
VELVETEEN,

Noted for Its Unequalled Color and Finish. This Fas Pile Dress and Mantle Velveteen was Awarded the Only Gold Medals at the International Exhibition at Vienna in 1873 Paris 1878, and Nice 1883.

To Prevent Imitations a Red Star will be Found Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

These Goods are of English Manufacture, 24 nches Wide, and in 39 Different Colors.

PRICE, 74c.

amples Mailed on Application and Mail Orders Promptly Filled.

R. H. MACY & CO.

QUICK AS A WINK!

We offer earnest men and women the greatest chance of their lives to make money rapidly with our new business of QUICK PHOTOGRAPHY. Easily learned, requires no experience and very small capital. Profits are 300 to 500 per cent, as what costs 50 cts sells for $4 to $6, and DAILY PROFITS WILL RUN from $5 to $25. Can be worked in connection with other business with immense success and run as a side issue with most anything. The apparatus is ALWAYS READY, light to carry, and by traveling about, visiting the farmer in the field, the mechanic in the shop, the housewife in sitting room, you will in nine times out of ten get an order to "take a picture" of them "just as they are," or of the baby, the horse, cow, or the favorite cat or dog, or a group of the whole family, or of the old homestead. You can do as good work as any artist and please your patrons. It is a steady, pleasant and honorable calling. In connection with the Photo business you can run at night a Magic Lantern entertainment with our ELECTRO RADIANT MAGIC LANTERN and views, advertising it during the day, and easily adding $10 to $75 a day to your income, as many are doing. This is easy to learn and very pleasant. We supply all that is needed, all kinds of views, lenses, lectures, etc. Students and teachers will find this very profitable. If you have an earnest desire to better yourself financially, see something of the world, acquire a good start in life, you can do it by taking our advice and sending for particulars. Address WORLD MFG. CO., 122 Nassau St., New York.

Any of our readers who will give a few hours time can easily get this splendid Photo Outfit and Magic Lantern FREE. Write at once to the World Manuf'g Co. for full particulars.

N. W. HARRIS & CO.,
115-117 Monroe St., CHICAGO.
BONDS Of Counties, Cities, &c. of high grade a specialty. Send for descriptive lists.

FOR CHOIRS

A Low Priced Collection of Music.

IDEAL ANTHEMS

BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.

The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.

"Ideal Anthems" contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.

Price, 35 cents each by mail, postpaid; $3.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid. SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.
PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O.
And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa FOR OIL.

WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free. STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

BEST & CO.,

Fall and Winter Styles

in Boys' Clothing, Shirt Waists, Hats and Caps, Neckwear, etc., Misses' and Girls' Cloaks and Dresses, Millinery and Infants' Wraps and Dresses, now ready.

Our Establishment is the LARGEST IN THE WORLD devoted to the outfitting of BOYS, GIRLS and BABIES, with everything, from Hats to Shoes. We send illustrations, samples and measure blanks free upon application, which enables out of town customers to order by mail with the same assurance of being thoroughly satisfied they would have in visiting our store in person.

Mail orders have careful and prompt attention.

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

EDUCATIONAL.

BRIGHTON HEIGHTS SEMINARY, For Young Ladies, New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y. GEO. W. COOK, Ph.D., Principal.

RAPID PREPARATION FOR COLLEGE OR BUSINESS BY PRIVATE INSTRUCTION.
J. Hasbrouck, A.M., New Brunswick, N.

The Misses Anable's
English, French and German Boarding and Day-School
WILL REOPEN SEPTEMBER 22D.
40 BAYARD ST., New Brunswick, N. J.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE, BOSTON UNIVERSITY, Opens Oct. 14, '86.

Fourteenth Year. Furnishes superior facilities for thorough scientific and practical instruction in three and four years' courses. Entrance examinations, Oct, 11, 12 and 13. Send for announcements to
I. T. TALBOT, M.D., Dean.

SIGLAR'S PREPARATORY SCHOOL,
NEWBURG-ON-HUDSON, N. Y.,
Gives the best preparation for the best colleges. Two Yale valedictorians in three years. Entrance examinations held at the school by member of Yale Faculty. Daily gymnastics under teacher compulsory. For circulars, etc., address
HENRY W. SIGLAR, M.A., (Yale) Prin.

Rutgers Female College,

58 West 55th street, commences 49th year September 22d. Rev. John Hall, D.D., President of the Board of Trustees. Boarding and Kindergarten Departments. Address the College.

ALEXANDER INSTITUTE
White Plains, N.Y.
23 miles from New York City by rail. Fits boys for College or business pursuits. 30 to 40 pupils 5 Teachers. Board and Tuition per annum $400. For circulars, apply to the Principal, O. R. WILLIS, Ph.D.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.
[Founded A.D. 1820.]
72 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.
Rev. HENRY B. CHAPIN, Ph.D., Principal.
English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 67th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

Riverview Academy,
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
Prepares for College and the Government Academies, for Business and social relations. Thorough Military Instruction. Springfield Cadet Rifles.
BISBEE & AMEN, Principals.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL.
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address
SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principal.

YOUNG LADIES SEMINARY.
43d YEAR Begins Sept. 22.
Address
F. CHANDLER, D. D., Pres. Freehold, N. J.

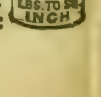
RYE SEMINARY, Rye, NEW YORK.
For particulars address Mrs. S. J. LIFE.

PEEKSKILL (N. Y.) MILITARY Academy.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

Is used by thousands of first class Manufacturers and Mechanics and is the best work. Received GOLD MEDAL, London Ex. Pronounced the strongest glue known. Send 1 cent of these Cards not to keep it, with five 2c stamps for SAMPLE CAN FREE. Russia Cement Co., Gloucester, Mass.



The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 39. WHOLE No. 2931. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

DR. COLE'S ARTICLE on the seventh page is important and significant. It deserves a careful examination and earnest consideration. The application of its results may properly be carried beyond our own boundaries as a denomination. Has there been such a revision of the rolls of membership in other denominations? If not, if it were made would it not conclude in a similar reduction of the number of actual communicants? The claim has been frequently published that the number of communicants in evangelical churches in this country has increased at the same rate with or at even a greater rate than the increase of population. We have doubted for years whether that claim has been well founded, because as we look upon society in the cities and in rural districts, it does not make upon us the impression that the proportion of the people going to church on the Sabbath is as large as it was twenty years ago or even ten years ago. The people of this city, in our judgment, during our boyhood and youth, attended the Christian churches much more generally than they do to-day, and in a number of the rural districts, which we visit now and then, the same fact seems to us to prevail. This is not said from a disposition to take a pessimistic view, but because, in our judgment, it is best for the Church to know just what it has to do, as it is best for a man always to know just where he stands and what lies before him.

THAT THE WORKINGMEN, as they call themselves, should be represented in the government, municipal, State and national, seems to us desirable, both for the sake of the workingmen themselves and for the sake of society at large. In a representative government all honorable occupations, all important interests, should be represented. It has always been considered proper that the law, commerce, agriculture and manufactures, should have representatives in legislative halls. We are of those who believe that railroads, in which about four thousand millions of money are invested in this country, should be represented in the law making assemblies, and have no sympathy with those who would exclude them. It is also just that the millions of mechanics and of men who work with their hands should send their delegates to take part in the making of laws. If the truth is to be told, they have hitherto in this vicinity habitually voted down the decency, intelligence, integrity and patriotism of the city, by habitually voting for those who would give them "jobs." That they are now entering on a new course is something to be thankful for. We hope they will elect some of their men. They will learn something,—learn that civilized society is a very complex organization, including a large variety of interests, that much of which it consists and much of the regulations under which it lives is the result of experience. The responsibility of power is an excellent school for men who are really patriotic, who are bent on finding out what is just and wise, and resolved on doing it. But it is certainly doubtful whether it is best to begin with electing a gentleman who is chiefly known as a theorist and interesting lecturer, but has given no proof of the possession of such administrative ability as the Mayoralty of a great city demands. A master-workman, accustomed to superintend some hundreds of men, would have been a better choice. Besides, it would be better to begin with the membership of the legislative bodies. It is proper to break up the rings, provided we put in men superior in character and equal in executive ability. A good man, of the best intentions, but without adequate administrative ability, is a dangerous man in an important office.

THE CONFERENCE. — Announcement was made in our issue of two weeks ago as to the time and place of meeting of the next General Missionary Conference. This is a matter of the first moment to our Church. No other gathering of the denomination last year, or for many years, equalled in spiritual tone and fervor the Fonda meeting. The privilege of attendance upon it was felt to be beyond price by all present. Its exceeding value to the cause is sufficiently attested by the results that have followed. The coming Conference should equal it; may be made to surpass it. God will be just as ready to manifest His blessed presence in the Twelfth Street Reformed Church of Brooklyn next month, as at Fonda one year ago. But, in order to this, there must be the same deep and widespread interest in the event among the churches. It is certain that fervent and believing prayer preëminently characterized the weeks immediately preceding the gathering of last year. Now, as then, this is the one secret of success. Here, too, is something which the humblest member of the Church can do. Let no soul throughout our communion fail to heed this call to special prayer, and feel his individual responsibility. We have begun the year well. The outlook is full of promise. Let every lover of the Reformed Church resolve that, with the Divine blessing, this shall be the crowning year of our history. God is gloriously carrying forward His work. Who does not feel the increasing momentum with which His kingdom is sweeping on toward the final victory? Let us beware of apathy and of selfishness. The Son of God tasted death for every man. If we lessen our zeal, or fail to realize our opportunity, He may be compelled to smite us, as He smote the infant Church in the martyrdom of Stephen. It was by this blow that He drove His followers out of Jerusalem and sent them with the Gospel all over Palestine. He had told His disciples to begin their work in Jerusalem; but they were over-doing the matter of beginning; they were staying there. If they would not voluntarily go forth, they must somehow be hurled thence. Their perishing countrymen in every part of the land must also hear these glad tidings. Has their more quiet and pleasant life in Jerusalem been rudely broken in upon? Has property perished; are homes in ashes; families sundered; friends scattered afar? What matter! This Gospel must be preached. And, brethren of the Reformed Church, we also must square our lives to this supreme decree of the Eternal. We must send this Gospel to the perishing nations; and to the perishing thousands of our own nation. God will somehow have it reach the ends of the earth, though it be with wreck of fortunes and of homes, of governments and of empires, with sacrifice of every comfort and enjoyment of the life that is so fair and beautiful about us; for this Gospel must be preached everywhere; and the ages of His glory cannot, it may be, much longer be deferred.

Important Facts in Relation to the Proportionate Increase of Races and of Trade.

FIRST ARTICLE.

"ESSAYS ON FINANCE," by Robert Giffen, abounding in carefully compiled statistics, published during the summer, and the volumes of the British Royal Commission on the Depression of Trade, also recently printed, containing a digest of reports from Consuls and national annual reports of exports, have commanded the attention and deeply impressed thoughtful citizens of Great Britain. The daily and weekly journals of the United Kingdom have made them the subject of serious discussion. The facts brought into notice have been a surprise even to well-informed men. They are important to the Church, and minister to the encouragement of those engaged in the evangelization of the world.

In four hundred years, from the beginning of the fourteenth to the end of the seventeenth century, the population of England increased only from two and a half millions to five millions. One hundred years ago the population of Great Britain was below 13 millions, but now, notwithstanding the great emigration, it is three times as numerous. In England and Scotland alone there are 25 millions of inhabitants.

Take a wider view of the white races. In 1788, the population of Europe was, in round numbers, 145 millions; in 1888, it will amount to 350 millions. Besides, in North and South America, South Africa and Australia, there are 70 millions more of European race, making a total of 420 millions, or more than a third of the human family. They possess more than half of the globe, and have attained a supremacy over the races of Asia, Africa and the Islands of the Seas, they are not likely to lose. They also control the wealth of the world. The capital of England, France and the United States has reached the enormous amount of 24,000 millions of pounds sterling, or $120,000,000,000. If the wealth of Germany, Austria, Russia, Holland, Belgium and Italy, be added to this vast sum, it is evident that the capital of the remainder of the races of the world becomes insignificant. And the increase of the world's wealth is among these peoples. In less than a century English capital has increased sevenfold. At present that of Germany is increasing in a large proportion.

In contrast with this the only population worthy of comparison is that of India. There are there 240 millions of people, or 170 persons to the square mile, increasing at the rate of one per cent a year. The Chinese emigrants, who go from but a limited portion of the empire, add very slowly to their numbers by natural increase, while at home, within China, it is believed that the growth of the population is almost stationary. The Semitic and Negro races are also almost stationary in every respect.

What is the prospect in the future? The white Aryans, as they are ethnologically called, are likely to become the predominant stock in numbers, energy, wealth and enterprise. The earth and its fulness is quite certain to become their possession. And the Teutonic branch will probably surpass all others in the advance in numbers and power. Relatively, during the past one hundred years, the so-called Latin races, the Iberian and Keltic, have greatly declined in numbers. Next to the Teutonic branch the Slavs have increased. In 1788, the population of Russia and Poland was 27 millions; in 1885, it was 98 millions; showing the marvellous increase of 260 per cent, or 60 per cent more than that of the population of Great Britain. These Slavs seem to be finding their outlet in Central Asia. Add to these facts that those who make the increase of races a special study estimate that at the end of the next century the population of the United States will have reached the prodigious total of 800 millions. This is perhaps an overestimate; but, if it be reduced by one fourth, the result, 600 millions, is an enormous figure.

At that time the Aryan races, the chief white races, will in all probability exceed 1,000 millions.

Will the present increase continue? What shall hinder it? The healing art has become a science, founded on the results educed by intelligence from experience, has cast off the bondage of superstition, and the average duration of life has been lengthened. The fertility of the Aryan family is limited only where it is crowded. It is impatient of limitations; is an emigrating, colonizing race. No other people have so strong an attachment to home, to no other are the words father and mother, son and daughter, brother and sister, so dear; yet the instinct of self-preservation, the impulse to growth and expansion, is so great that it breaks from these mighty attachments and seeks new homes and creates them in all the countries of the world, and more and more it regards the world as its home. In this emigration it recovers vigor, productiveness and endurance. The main Teutonic branch, the great German people, within a few years has formed a scheme of colonizing, has obtained possession of large territories in Africa and the South Sea Islands, and is preparing to send out colonies. German traders have preceded the emigrants, and are engaged successfully as merchants. The result of this movement is yet to be seen.

These growing white races have the Bible. Their God is the God of the Scriptures, their morality is that of Holy Writ, the future they hope for is a place prepared for them by our Lord Jesus Christ in the Father's house, eternal in the heavens. They are agitated by sceptical speculations; but, in days of trial and conflict, the old faith rises supreme and their trust is in the living and true God.

Of the relative growth of trade and what may result from it we hope to speak in a subsequent article.

PURITY.—The Critic recently remarked that the general public persists in misunderstanding Vernon Lee's novel of "Miss Brown," which is really a protest against the moral dangers of æstheticism. This is an error. There is no misunderstanding in the case. The general public, we are quite sure, admits what is claimed as the aim and character of the book in question. But a right thing can be done in a wrong way. Sensual evils must be handled very carefully and delicately, or more harm than good will be done by the exposure. The "fleshly school" cannot be properly rebuked by details of their proceedings. Every such attempt defeats its own end. It pollutes and poisons, and purity of motive is no excuse. Impure suggestions arise often enough of their own accord; let no books be written or published which make them familiar to the mind.

"Old Colony" Papers.

Notes from a Summer Journal.

II.

HOTEL TYPES....CLERICAL VACATIONISTS....FATHER M——, HIS PREACHING AND HIS PRACTICE....A SUGGESTIVE SCENE ON THE CARS.

ONE sees a deal of human nature, as well as of "nature" technically so called, in summer travel. The difference is that we are in search of the latter, while the former forces itself upon our notice. And we find ourselves wondering whether we are as closely scanned and as distinctly imaged by others as they are by us.

Most people are soon classed under their types, and generally commonplace ones. There are the "heavy fathers" who love to get together on the piazza and talk weighty wisdom, and the comfortable mothers whom it is so difficult to realize to have once been as sylph-like and sentimental as their daughters. There are the two or three bright creatures, about whom the young fellows swarm like bees in the honeysuckle vines. And there are the plainer and quieter girls whom the fellows, when moonlight and balcony days are over, will ask to make them "just the dearest little wives on earth." There are the students with their college colors and cheers and their "athletic" talk, and the professors,—by the way, an observing friend asked me this summer why professors of didactic and polemic theology nearly always had bushy eyebrows! There are the boys and girls, who in talk and manners and ideas are such abridged and painful reproductions of the young men and young women types. And there are the romping and noisy children, whom we love to see—at the other end of the hall! Being rather given to occupy my room at unusual hours, as well as to come suddenly upon groups out-doors in my solitary rambles, I sometimes wonder whether mothers know (or care) what the "discipline" of their white-capped, meek-eyed bonnes sometimes is. Well, I suppose that the maid is quite as often entitled to sympathy as the terrible infants to whom they are hand-cuffed night and day.

There are the amateur pedestrians who go forth in the morning arrayed like dancing bears, and return in the evening like professional tramps with large spoil of alpine, fish, and rattlesnake adventures. There is the travelling "reader," who seems to think that people leave the towns and flee to the woods and lakes for the purpose of enjoying "parlor entertainments." There is the inevitable pet dog, suggestive of hydrophobia, and making one marvel skeptically whether there is really so much surplus affection in the human breast that canine objects have to supplement a mother's or a wife's or a sister's love.

Every now and then we are pleasantly reminded of the Cheeryble Brothers. A quaint, be-wigged pair of these affectionate and cheery old boys crossed our path this summer, and left the world brighter for us. How tenderly, yet secretly, they watched each other! How charmingly each kept up the illusion that the other was a jolly young blade, clapping him on the shoulder and accosting him with "Well, young man!" How satisfied they seemed with each other's company. And what good feeders they were at table,—one could readily believe that when at home they said grace responsively: "For what we are about to receive, Brother Charles—," "The Lord make us truly thankful, Brother Ned!"

It does us a world of good to see the ministers on their well-earned vacation. Here is a venerable teacher of divinity, who knows how to keep his humanity vigorous by the elixir of life which distils from these woods and lakes and mountain heights,—an Episcopalian, who believes that the "successors of the Apostles" are all those who believe on their word. Here is an overworked pastor, who is working off his paleness and the droop of his shoulders by climbing and rowing in these fine fresh atmospheres. Here is the young "licentiate," filling the interval between hard study and hard work with hard play, bravely knitting alike the muscles of body and mind for the unknown toils and cares of a waiting pastorate. And here, too,—

But what shall we say to this type (let us hope it will always be a rare one)? He calls himself an Anglo-Catholic priest, and is known as Father M——. He is not an American product, but has come to our benighted country as a missionary—some say, an emissary of the Jesuit order. His name sounds French, his appearance is Irish, his speech is the English of Oxford University. His dark and wily eye, his smooth face and partial baldness, the singular mingling of meekness and assumption in his expression of countenance, and his invariable dress—a long gown with cord and tassels, and a bunch of keys at his waist—all give an impression of what a free-spoken friend of mine calls "the mark of the beast."

He is very handsome, and has a fascinating manner, a subdued yet saucy way of talking, and other mysterious charms which make him quite the darling of the young girls. I stumble on him in retired spots or sitting on the piazzas in the moonlight with a group of maidens, as pert and full of persiflage as the gayest. Or, at another time, I overhear him explaining to them his view of penance or confession or extreme unction, or some other "catholic" doctrine. He is especially fond of toying with their hands, telling fortunes from the palms, or playing the game of "hand over hand." In this latter interesting occupation he was discovered, late at night, on the Sunday evening in which he preached his astonishing sermon on priestly asceticism and lay laxity.

He took as his text 1 Corinthians 7: 17, "As God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called everyone, so let him walk." It was an ingenious attempt to show that the severer and more exacting demands of holy living, such as certain precepts of the Sermon on the Mount, were not designed for all Christians, but only for the few who felt themselves called to this advanced standard. There are two distinct classes, the "religious" and the ordinary believer. The former are bound by a special and voluntary vow of abnegation to abstain from marriage, meats, social gayeties, and the pursuit of riches, also from retaliation for insult and injury, and many other things. But those to whom this mode of life has not been "distributed" may indulge in these things,—he specified particularly balls and theatres, luxurious living, and a not turning their other cheek to the smiter—so long as they tried to do good with it all!

Here we have the very tap-root of the corruptions of the Church, such as a priesthood, supererrogation, sacramentalism, confession, purgatory, and prayers to the saints. Let there be priests and saints to do the holiness, and lay up a surplus merit which may be available for the weaker brethren who have not felt themselves "called" thereunto. These constitute, in fact, the Church proper (which they are said to "enter" by adopting these callings). The rest are of the world, and permitted to be so, if only they are loyal to the Church and pay for its privileges, and come now and then to the sacrament. The essence of the hierarchical idea, the existence of an ecclesiastical state and power on earth, is in maintaining a disciplined army who constitute, as I have said, the Church proper; and at the same time to allow the widest moral liberty to all others in the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. Whether this man is an emissary of the Society of Jesus or not, it is plain to see where such jesuitical teaching and casuistry must lead.

Father M—— carried his intoning of the Scripture lessons to such an extent that he reminded me of the monotonous sing-song of the country school-house of my childhood. I can understand the excuse for so intoning the prayers, on the theory that the personality of the reader should be utterly annihilated, so that it may not come between the worshipper and God. But even this absurd pretext cannot apply to the intelligible rendering of God's meaning in His words to us. And the whole thing becomes peculiarly offensive, if not blasphemous, when the same man takes the utmost pains to give due force, precision, and expression to the words of his own sermon.

As I came down from the hill country, there was a poor lunatic on the cars, whom they were taking to the Poughkeepsie Asylum. She was still what might be called a young woman, and her mania seemed to run in a musical direction. She would not sit down, but insisted on standing, while she incessantly ran her fingers over the top of the seat before her as if it were the keyboard of a piano, while she hummed as incessantly some lively air, and occasionally danced to it, appearing to be rapt with the music and unconscious of everything else about her. Poor thing, what blight had come over her young and dancing days!

At least, she furnished a startling and woful emblem to my tourist eyes of a world where most of those one meets are absorbed in their own dreams and fancied pleasures, and know not that their life is "— a tale

Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing."

F. N. Zabriskie.

Passover Wine.

ON August 25th, a paper on "Passover Wine," written by the Rev. J. M. Reimensnyder for the Lutheran Observer, appeared on this page. It has called out the following communications:

58 Reade St., New York, Sept. 9th, 1886.

Editor of the Christian Intelligencer—Dear Sir: I notice in your paper of the 25th ult. an article on "Passover Wine," which discredits the statement of Rabbi S. M. Isaacs, in relation to the kind of wine used at the Passover. Your correspondent is entirely mistaken as well as Dr. A. S. Isaacs, in this matter. I copy the following statement signed by Dr. S. M. Isaacs, January 7th, 1869, in the presence of Mr. Geo. E. Sickels, whose widow now has the original in her possession:

"The Jews do not use in their feasts for sacred purposes fermented drinks of any kind. The marriage feast is a sacrament with us."

(Signed) S. M. Isaacs.

I have seen this original document, and I heard Dr. Isaacs utter the same statement, and even stronger than this, in support of the unfermented wine theory, in public, many years ago. When any one says he never made any such statement they state what they know nothing about, and the truth is not advanced by such statements.

Yours, etc., J. N. STEARNS.

[The testimony of Secretary Stearns in conclusive. Many Gentiles and Jews will wonder, however, that Dr. S. M. Isaacs made such a statement, when testimony enough to fill volumes and in direct antagonism to that of Dr. S. M. Isaacs, can be obtained from Israelites. The Jews do use fermented wine at the Passover, have always used it so far as is known. The overwhelming weight of testimony is on that side.]

A minister argues as follows:

Fermented Wine.—Testimony of Missionaries.

BY REV. J. M. VAN BUREN.

The following is a statement signed by a number of missionaries in Syria and the Holy Land: "We have never seen or heard of an unfermented wine; nor have found among Jews, Christians or Mohammedans, any tradition of such a wine having ever existed in the country."

This, properly, can have no effect on the Bible argument. The people of these lands are different from the ancient inhabitants, have a different language, as well as customs and usages. The Bible is the only true authority, written through a long period,—all of it more than 2,000 years ago. This comes to us as God's Word, written by holy men. What men say or do now in that country can have no effect against the Bible. The wonder is, that these excellent men should have looked at this subject in that way.

Wines in the Bible are called by two different names, tirosh and yayin. Tirosh is repeatedly mentioned as one of God's providential blessings. It is associated with other foods, with corn (wheat), and oil (olive), as Deut. 7:13, "the fruit of thy land, thy corn, thy wine and thine oil." These triplets stand together as the three principal foods of the country. We notice the fact that tirosh, here called wine, is uniformly translated by oinos in the Septuagint version of the Old Testament. This was done by learned Jews 300 years before Christ. This work was a recognized authority by the Apostles and the early Christian Church.

This settles the question that tirosh was wine in Bible times. That it was the simple juice of the grape is evident. It was a natural product; "the fruit of thy land." There is not a particle of alcohol in any natural product. Tirosh stands here in its integrity and purity, unfermented and uncorrupted; on a perfect equality, in this respect, with wheat and oil, as one of the staple foods of the land. The analysis of grape juice reveals the fact that as a food, it is of the very highest order. Fermentation, if introduced, destroys the glutinous food which it contains. This causes a turbid fluid, which finally settles at the bottom as a rotten mass, called lees. Alcohol is a new substance, produced by the action of yeast germs on the sugar in the grape juice. These break up the sugar into its original atoms, oxygen, hydrogen and carbon. These atoms reform into two new substances, carbonic acid gas and alcohol. The bitartrate of potassa rises as soon as fermentation commences; it has no affinity with alcohol, and will not remain in contact with it.

Tirosh, wine, is a fluid food, and for all the purposes of nutrition ranks equal with wheat. The text we have quoted to show that tirosh, translated oinos in the Septuagint, was a fluid food, does not stand alone. The prominence that this unfermented wine occupies as one of the principal foods, causes it to be often mentioned, as in Gen. 27:28, "the fatness of the earth and plenty of corn and wine" (tirosh). Greek, sitou kai oinon; Gen. 27:37, "with corn and wine (tirosh) have I sustained him," sito kai oino. Deut. 14:23, "the tithe of thy corn and of thy wine (tirosh) and of thine oil;" and so Deut. 11:14. The frequent recurrence of such statements show conclusively there can be no mistake in the right understanding of this subject.

Other texts in another way show also that tirosh was unfermented: Prov. 3:9-10, "and thy presses shall burst out with new wine" (tirosh). In this condition it could not be fermented. This wine, tirosh, is represented as being eaten and drank as a food: Isaiah 62:8, "the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine (tirosh), for which thou hast labored; but they that have gathered it shall eat it and praise the Lord; and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness." Like milk, the place of which it occupies as a food, it was both eaten and drank. And so in Deut. 14:23, "and thou shalt eat before the Lord thy God, in the place He shall choose—the tithe of thy corn and thy wine" (tirosh). This concerns the provision for the priests and levites.

In so many ways every view of this subject, as presented in the Hebrew, and as recast by Jewish scholars into Greek, shows clearly that tirosh was wine in the fullest sense of oinos; and that this was accepted and maintained by the early Christian Church.

We mention also the fact that the English translators followed the example of the Jews in the Greek translation, by using the term wine to represent this unfermented juice of the grape. Because the word wine is used, many think it fermented and intoxicating; this don't follow; the meaning must come, as we have shown, from the Hebrew and the Greek, used by Christ, the Apostles, and the early Christian Church.

The signatures to the statement to which we have referred seem to have been obtained for a special purpose. This statement does not reach the point at issue. It proves nothing in regard to Bible wines. The two wine theory, as it is called, is sustained by the proof of an unfermented wine in the Old Testament. This is clear, beyond a cavil. This is in the hands of every scholar who will give attention to it. We do not need to ask the missionaries. What they are asked does not touch this subject. They say the truth, without doubt.

The question arises, "Is there any single case in which tirosh is represented as an intoxicating liquor, causing drunkenness?" Dr. —— tries to produce one, and quotes: Hosea 4:11, "Whoredom, wine (yayin), and new wine (tirosh) take away the heart," and affirms of both these wines, "they intoxicate." First, we notice, the translators were compelled to own, that tirosh here had its true meaning, and was unfermented, by translating it "new wine." If they had not done this, and both yayin and tirosh were translated wine, they would necessarily have the same character. This would be ridiculous; wine and wine would be a tautology, if they both meant the same thing, and contrary to the obvious intention of the author, to state three different subjects.

It is plain the eye of the prophet took a broader view, and included another general truth; that God's best gifts took away the heart, when they who used them did not recognize the Giver and thank Him. Paul refers to this when he says: "Not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance, but after thy hardness and impenitent heart, treasurest up to thyself wrath against the day of wrath, etc., Rom. 2:4. This appears to be the only text that can be produced, and is evidently a failure. Tirosh was a rich fluid food, one of the Divine benefactions. It stood in the front rank, as the representative of the foods of the land.

It appears from a careful inspection, that in the Hebrew language, tirosh was the special name for unfermented wine among the Jews; and that yayin in this language was the general or common name for both kinds; and that oinos in the Greek they also used, represented both kinds. Tirosh is the fruit of the land, is eaten, is drank, is wine in the press, is wine in the cluster; there is no drunkenness attributed to it; not a word to its discredit. The endeavor to make it grape fruit is upset by the fact that it is uniformly translated oinos by the Jews in the Septuagint. These are proofs on which we rely, that the Jews during their long history, and in the time of Christ, were familiar with unfermented wine.

[The exposition of our esteemed brother is a modern invention, and a very modern one, originated within a few years to serve a special purpose, namely, to prove that the Jews used unfermented wine in their sacred feasts and that the Scriptures authorize only the use of unfermented grape juice. The interpretation is contrary to nearly all the evidence coming to us from the past. The Seventy translated tirosh by oinos, the Greek generic term for fermented wine, for wine as it is known to everybody and always has been known.

That "new wine" was fermented as well as "wine," and was so regarded by the Jews, is evident by the language used in regard to the Apostles on the day of Pentecost—Acts 2: 13, "Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine." To which Peter answered, 15th verse: "For these are not drunken, as ye suppose." New wine, therefore, in Jewish estimation was able to produce intoxication.

The weight of scholarship is not in favor of an unfermented wine, represented by tirosh. On the contrary, it is almost entirely on the other side.

Again. The people of the East are what their fathers were. The customs of the remote past have been continued to this day. The fact is constantly used by travellers and expositors to illustrate and explain and support the words and descriptions of the Old Testament. Oriental men live to-day as their progenitors and predecessors did in Old Testament times. The evidence is so large and varied that it is idle to talk about "different customs and usages." While the world has been moving on, the people of Palestine and adjoining lands have been standing still.

Temperance is not advanced by arguments which will not bear examination, which are in direct antagonism to almost the entire mass of testimony.]

A Band of Bluebirds!

O H, happy band of bluebirds,
Brave prophets of the spring,
Amid the tall and tufted cane,
How blithesomely you sing!
What message haunts your music
'Mid Autumn's dusky realm?
You tell us Nature stores her seed
To give them back in grain!

Your throats are gleeful fountains,
Through which a song-tide flows;
Your voices greet me in the woods,
On every wind that blows!
I dream that heaven invites you
To bid the earth "good-by;"
For in your wings you seem to hold
A portion of the sky!

. . . . . .

Oh, happy band of bluebirds,
You could not long remain
To flit across the fading fields
And glorify the grain....
You leave melodious memories,
Whose sweetness thrills me through
Ah, if my songs were such as yours,
They'd almost touch the blue!

—Wm. H. Hayne, in Harper's Magazine for October.

The Bulwark of Our Nation.

IF told two decades ago that thirteen Sabbath theatres would open in Chicago, that five or six Sabbath papers would be printed regularly, that the trains would run as usual, and that lax notions about the first day of the week would modify the very Church, we would have been aghast, and have almost castigated the prophet of evil. The bulwark of our nation is the Church, and that Church protects only when she conserves her members, and through revivals calls multitudes of sinners to repentance. Men of public mark cry out about our national war danger, and urge coast defences. Such statesmen see not the real danger nor the real defence. Our best bulwark against foreign war is in constant immigration from threatening nations, but the danger is thereby only changed in form. These comers put a knife at the nation's throat when they attack God's Church through old habits of opposing the machine churches abroad, which there are allied to oppressive governments. We must receive these comers and teach them the difference between "a church for the people" here and a church that aids to devour the people there. Therefore do we look on all revival work as even better than stone coast forts and twenty-inch columbiads. American Christians must learn the secret of national permanence from devout church revival work, and not from Congress or Legislature.—Dr. Barrows.

Sanatory Woolen Garments.

ONE having experience in shopping will see at a glance, on entering the store on Broadway of the Sanitary Woolen System Company, that the shelves and counters are filled with goods strictly of the best grades. A brief examination satisfies a competent judge that the various articles are thoroughly well made, are in good taste and are likely to prove durable. A few moments are enough to settle these important points. Besides in the make-up of some of the articles there are peculiarities which commend themselves to the judgment.

But these undergarments and overgarments, these pillows and blankets and rugs, it is claimed, have special sanative qualities. They are guaranteed to be all wool. Being such, on the ground of health, they are certainly to be preferred to linen, cotton or silk. It is also urged that in point of color they are superior, because no injurious color has been used upon them. That is of more importance than many persons suppose. Again, these articles are more loosely woven than other goods and on a new principle. This is evident on comparison, and is a desirable quality. It is beyond doubt that a loosely woven fabric is the coolest in summer and warmest in winter, and carries off the secretions of the skin much more readily than that which is more compact. What is claimed for the electrical action of wool is also well-founded, and it is becoming more and more evident that health, growth and vigor are dependent in a large degree on electrical conditions. Some of the articles offered by the Company are of camel's wool. We are not qualified to give a judgment upon this material. What is said about it seems reasonable.

The articles are very soft and pleasant to the touch, are well made of good material, and what is asserted in regard to their beneficial influence appears to be well founded.

Our Church.

We are grateful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable

The Bicentennial at Hackensack, N. J.

THURSDAY of last week was a memorable day in the history of the First Reformed Church of Hackensack, N. J., for then the two hundredth anniversary of its birthday was grandly commemorated. Services were held in the morning, the afternoon and the evening. Thousands of visitors from far and near were present during the day. The interior of the church was becomingly decorated by the skilful hands of the ladies and gentlemen of the congregation, at no small outlay of time, and thought, and work. Early in the morning many visited the building to examine the designs at their leisure. The front of the galleries was banked with greens, the pillars were encircled with greens, ten festoons of green hung from the chandeliers to the galleries, the deep recesses of the windows were banked with coleus and flowers, along the face of one gallery in white letters were the words, "The Church Under the Cross," along that of the opposite in red letters appeared, "Middleburgh—Dordrecht." Across the centre of the wall over the pulpit extended a dark brown cornice with corner pieces of red and gold, above which hung an illuminated star, and depending from the cornice in graceful folds were the flags of the Netherlands and of the United States. At the rear of the pulpit alcove, painted in colors by Mr. Riedl, the coat-of-arms of William of Orange and of Holland was fastened to the wall,—the device which stands at the head of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER. It was of large size, being six feet in height by nearly five feet in width. The legends, "Nisi Dominus Frustra" and "Eendracht Maakt Macht," were conspicuous. The coloring was brilliant and was enhanced by a rich frame. On the west side of the pulpit was the date 1686 in flowers and a panel bearing the names and dates of the pastorates of the ministers of the first one hundred years, the names being in Gothic letters of gold on a blue background; on the east side was the date 1886 and a similar panel containing the names of the ministers of the past one hundred years and the date of the pastorates. A floral hour-glass, similar in form to that used to time the length of the sermon in former days, stood upon the pulpit. In front of the desk a large floral design was placed, on which appeared the figures 200 in white. Suspended from one of the chandeliers a large floral wedding bell attracted the eye. The flags of the United States and of the Netherlands adorned the windows, the gas jets, the organ, and various points where they could be used with effect. These decorations, the work of several days, won great admiration, and will be remembered for years.

Relics of the past, one hundred years old and older, were exhibited in the infant class room. There were Dutch Bibles, and pictures, and silverware, dresses and crockery, tea caddies, foot stoves, samplers, a long list of articles recalling the customs of former days, among them, especially valuable and interesting, being a communion cup and plate used at the communion services of the Garden Street Church, N. Y., one hundred years ago.

In the lecture room three long tables were spread, at which the ladies served a collation to visitors between the services.

A large congregation was present in the morning. The organist played Auld Lang Syne, with variations, and a Processional March. The quartette choir gave delightful renderings of Mendelssohn's Morning Prayer and of Haydn's Praise ye the Lord. An ode, composed by Mrs. John Van Bussum, was read by James A. Romeyn, Esq. The sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. Herman Van der Wart. It was an interesting and profitable historical discourse, founded upon 1 Kings 8: 57, "The Lord our God be with us as He was with our fathers; let Him not leave us, nor forsake us."

After briefly noticing the circumstances in which the text was spoken, and its application to the centennial celebration so happily begun, Mr. Van der Wart considered, Who were the fathers? What is their record? What are the lessons for us, their children? The fathers were men from the Netherlands. They did not come to this land to seek for freedom to worship God; simply because they did not need it. They had it already. "They came here to better their fortune. They left freemen; they landed freemen, carrying with them the patience and stubbornness, the hatred of tyranny and love of liberty into which their nation had been baptized with the blood of one hundred thousand martyrs. The Hollanders not only had liberty, but granted it willingly to others. The Dutch were the most tolerant people in Europe in those days. Even the Pilgrim Fathers found a temporary home in Leyden." Many modern American notions are only ideas borrowed of Holland. "The Pilgrims stayed long enough in Holland to fall in love with republican ideas, the common school and religious freedom. In the compact of the Union of Utrecht they found the model of the Union of the Federal States." "What is true of the Puritans is equally so of the Huguenots. The French Protestants, after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1598, came in swarms into the fertile lowlands of Holland. For how many have the dunes and dykes of sturdy little Holland provided shelter and food! Holland was destined by God to be the cup, chased by the sharp discipline of persecution, wherein were strained the best liquid of every nation in Europe. Our forefathers came here free." They brought their system of religious doctrine in the precious casket of freedom wrested from the hands of the Spaniards.

What was their record? In 1686 the Rev. Peter Tasschemacker organized the Church of Hackensack. There were 33 communicants. His charge was at New Amstel (New Castle) on the Delaware, whence he came over and administered the Lord's Supper as he had opportunity, until some time in 1689. His was the first Dutch ordination which occurred in America. He removed to the First Church of Schenectady and perished in the French-Indian massacre of 1690. No settled pastor ministered to the people until 1694, when Guilaum Bertholf, one of the early settlers, returned from Holland, with a certificate from the Classis of Middleburgh. He had been catechiser, voorleser, and schoolmaster in the settlement. The people had held faithfully together; one of their number reading the sermons from some Dutch divine on the Sabbath days. The Word of God was very precious to these people. The services were protracted. The sermon sometimes occupied two hours.

Captain John Berry gave the present site, with adjoining lands, making two and three quarter acres, for a house of worship. Now Bertholf was a licensed preacher, and became the first regularly installed pastor of a Reformed Church in New Jersey. A church was built by the Christians of Hackensack and Acquackanonk. It was a work of great self-denial. Domine Bertholf's ministry continued 30 years and 245 persons were added to the membership. He was noted for his piety. Some of his descendants remain with the church to this day.

Among the subsequent pastors were Domine Erickson, who also ministered to the Church of Schraalenberg, and Rev. Mr. Dubois, under whose preaching many souls were converted. Curtenius followed, with whom young Mr. Goetschius was associated. One was for the Coetus, the other for the Conferentie. This was in 1748. The church divided into two parties and the conflict became severe. Families were divided. There were two congregations at Hackensack and two at Schraalenberg. Dr. Curtenius died and was succeeded by Domine Kuypers, whose ministry was long and fruitful. Hardly had the church recovered from the conflict over Coetus and Conferentie, when it was again disturbed by the differences in regard to the War of the Revolution, but the Rev. Theodore Romeyn, an earnest patriot, carried the church safely through this crisis. He experienced great privations, was robbed of all his earthly possessions by the raids of British troops and their sympathizers. More than once his life was in jeopardy. He became afterward the pastor of the Church of Schenectady and founder of Union College.

The preacher gave a sketch of some of the pastors during the present century, dwelling especially upon the ministry of Rev. Dr. Froeligh, who at length seceded, forming what is called the "True Reformed Church," which at first consisted of four ministers and seven congregations. Rev. James Van Campen Romeyn, whose pastorate was one of the longest in the history of the church, was specially noticed, and the long pastorate of Rev. Alexander Warner, the recital concluding with a tribute to the late pastor, Rev. Dr. Theo. B. Romeyn, and a recognition of the services and liberality of the late Mr. Fair.

The lessons educed from this history were: "Hold fast the form of sound words," and live the truth you profess. The sermon received close and sustained attention.

The afternoon service was conducted exclusively in Dutch, by the pastor, assisted by Rev. Messrs. J. Huysoon, J. W. Warnshius and W. Veenschoten. The singing was led by a precentor with assistants. This service, novel to many, attracted a large audience and proved interesting. A collection was taken up for the Classical Academy at Orange City, Iowa.

In the evening after devotional exercises, a congratulatory address was delivered by the Rev. A. Johnson, pastor of the Second Church, and by Rev. Dr. W. V. V. Mabon and Rev. Dr. David Demarest of the Theological Seminary of New Brunswick, both presenting interesting reminiscences of the life of the church and speaking on special themes, the former on the Relation of the Hackensack Church to the Theological Seminary, and Dr. Demarest on the Relation of the Christian Church to Education. The closing address was from Rev. Dr. David Cole, of Yonkers, N. Y., and was an animated treatment of "A Back look and a Fore-look."

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met on Monday morning as usual. Rev. A. J. Hutton read an interesting paper on "The Golden Rule in Business." Next Monday Dr. E. G. Read is expected to read a paper on "The Liturgical Position of the Reformed Church." If he is absent Dr. Bishop will open the discussion.

Fulton Street Daily Noon Prayer-Meeting.

TWENTY-NINTH ANNIVERSARY.

WITH the return of the fall comes the return of the anniversary of the Fulton Street Prayer-Meeting. On Thursday of last week, September 23d, a large number of persons attended the exercises in connection with the twenty-ninth anniversary of the noon means of grace. At this fruitful season of the year, when the harvests of field and orchards are so abundant, it is appropriate that we should call to mind the fruits of grace and love with which God has deigned to bless His people in answer to their prayers These fruits of earnest, importunate supplication have not been few in the year just past.

Upon the anniversary occasion there were among the speakers representatives of various denominations. The Rev. Dr. John Hall represented the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. Ormiston the Reformed Church, in place of Dr. Kittredge, the new pastor of the Madison Avenue Church, who was unable to keep his engagement to come. The Rev. R. H. McKim, D D., represented the Episcopal Church, the Rev. W. C. Bitting the Baptist denomination, the Rev. Dr. J. N. Fitzgerald the Methodist Church, and the Rev. G. H. Virgin, D.D., the Congregational body. The missionary, the Rev. J. C. Lanphier, conducted the singing.

The Rev. Dr. Hall presided, and, after devotional exercises, stated that the purpose of the meeting was to recall the past and thank God for His goodness to this Fulton Street Prayer-meeting through so many years. The speaker made brief reference to the many hearts that had been encouraged to lay their needs before the Lord, and the many cases in which help had come. The valuable and important literature which had grown up in connection with the work was an abiding memorial to God's faithfulness in answering prayer.

The Rev. W. C. Bitting emphasized the fact that Jesus prayed. At His baptism; all night before going to the help of His toiling disciples; in the time of His greatest spiritual ecstasy on the Mount of Transfiguration; at the last supper; in the time of greatest spiritual depression in the Garden; and on the cross Jesus prayed, and now ever liveth to make intercession. From the fact that Jesus thus constantly prayed we might learn that the holiest life needs prayer. Prayer was not simply the going to God to ask for something, it was holding fellowship with God. That was poor friendship which goes only to its friends when something is wanted. The friends we truly love we often want to see just for the sake of seeing them.

Again, the busiest life could find opportunity for prayer if it wants to. There was in this day, when all are so busy getting money, much neglect of religious exercises. A man who would read his newspaper through every day could not find time to read his Bible. And yet the whole contents of the Gospel by St. Mark could be printed upon a page or a page and a quarter of the daily newspaper. The shortest life could spare time for prayer if it wanted to. The Lord Jesus, with only three years of ministerial life before Him in which to do the most wonderful work the world ever witnessed, found time to pray.

The programme announcing the anniversary meeting had set the Rev. Dr. J. N. Fitzgerald thinking. Reading certain statements on the programme and then recalling the history of the meeting, he felt that it was impossible not to exclaim, "What hath God wrought." During the first half hour of the meeting the missionary sat alone waiting for others to join him and for the blessing of God. Since then throngs had attended the place of prayer. The meeting was instituted for business men, but all classes had reaped the benefits of its influences. It was intended as a means of grace for those in the city and vicinity. It had proved a blessing to the remotest corners of our land and in all quarters of the globe. Dr. Fitzgerald referred briefly to the direct and the indirect fruits of the meeting, and in closing gathered these two lessons from the history of the meeting: First, that faith in the efficacy of prayer is still strong in the breasts of God's people; second, that this faith is not in vain, but is greatly honored of God.

The Rev. Dr. R. H. McKim related a number of incidents that occurred in connection with special mission services held in his church and in Philadelphia last fall and winter. Some of these were cases of spiritual enlightenment received in hours of darkness through resort to prayer. In another case a young man who had strayed from his mother's home and his mother's God, and been away for a year, was made a subject of most earnest prayer. In a brief while he returned to his mother, seeking her forgiveness and the forgiveness of God. The speaker said he instanced these cases in order by them to bear witness to the efficacy of prayer.

The Rev. S. H. Virgin, D.D., suggested that if the Fulton Street Noon Meeting were to be closed and a monument erected to record its history, the monument would need to be a massive one. But his audience would vote "no," were the suggestion made to erect a monument on the condition that the meeting should henceforth exist only in history. And this "no" would be the verdict because there were so many more hearts needing to be helped. Better than the erection of a monument it would be to consecrate ourselves afresh to continued, earnest praying and faithful toil. Prayer was the Christian worker's efficient tool. It reminded the speaker of the wonderful jack knife, the coveted treasure of every boy. It is a complex knife. By one pull a gimlet appears, pull again and a screw-driver is at hand. Still another pull brings to light a hook, and then there is the blade out of which a Yankee boy will whittle anything he wills. The illustration was carried out in detail, the blade suggesting the all comprehensive nature of prayer. The Saviour says, "Ye shall ask what ye will."

The Rev. Dr. Ormiston said that no sane man could doubt the power of prayer. It is the same power it ever was since the conditions are unchanged. Upon the one side is the living, loving and omnipotent God, and on the other we have needy, penitent, humble souls. Jacob at Peniel, Daniel pleading from the banks of the Ulai, Lydia at Philippi could come no nearer God than can we. Differently endowed as we all were, every man, woman and child has the privilege to pray. Prayer was our richest privilege and the mightiest power we could wield. We must remember that our God is a personal God. There was no grander sight on earth than a man upon his knees pouring out his soul into the ear of a living, loving, personal God. If in response to prayer we did not receive everything we asked, we received something better. Paul sought relief from the thorn that pierced him, but instead of relief from his affliction he received what was better, grace to bear it. It was better with Sampson to have strength to carry off the gates of Gaza than to call upon some one to open them and then crawl through them. Dr. Ormiston closed with a touching tribute to the earnest, faithful labors of the missionary, Mr. J. C. Lanphier. The origin and the maintenance of the meeting were due, under God, to this one man.

The services were brought to a conclusion with singing and the benediction. The influences of this interesting service cannot fail to yield permanent good.

Opening of Rutgers.

RUTGERS COLLEGE opened last week under encouraging circumstances. The chapel was well filled by the punctual presence of the old students and a large entering class. Forty-six new students in all departments have been admitted; of which number twenty three are Freshmen in the classical section, seventeen are Freshmen of the scientific section, and the others are special students in Chemistry, with the exception of one, coming from another college into the Junior Class.

The Faculty has been enlarged by the addition of Prof. A. A. Titsworth, who was elected last June to the Chair of Graphics and Mathematics. Mr. Titsworth was an excellent student in the Class of '77, with which he was graduated from the College, and, besides some recent experience as a successful teacher in the Academy of Alfred Centre, he has enjoyed for many years the best kind of practical training in mathematics under Dr. Bowser on the Geodetic Survey of New Jersey. Mr. Titsworth is in the prime of manhood, is vigorous, and assumes his duties with the prestige of success in everything he has undertaken. His appointment is regarded here as an admirable one, and it will doubtless afford gratification to the Alumni and friends of Rutgers generally.

President Gates, though detained a week by a disabled vessel, arrived on Thursday, only one day after the College opened, looking much improved in health and strength from his European travels during the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Gates gave an informal reception at the presidential mansion on Monday evening of this week to the students, for the sake especially of affording an opportunity to the new comers to become acquainted with the older students, with one another, and with the members of the Faculty and their families. The attendance was large and the occasion delightful.

A GRADUATE.

A Legacy.

COL. EGBERT SILVERNAIL, who died on August 25th, at Gallatin, Columbia Co., N. Y., by his will, which was admitted to probate by the Surrogate on September 13th, makes the General Synod his residuary legatee, the amount realized to be devoted to the support of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick. The executor is to hold the farm five years for improvement before selling it. These are the bequests: To Daniel Williams, of Copake, who formerly lived with the Colonel; to Robert Gray, of Jackson Corner, and to John P. Silvernail, of Brooklyn, $1,000 each; to John P. Lasher, of Iowa, a former employee of deceased, $800; to Jacob Burger, of Gallatin, who a few years ago worked one of the farms of deceased, $500; to the Home of the Aged, in Hudson, $500; to Belle Gray, daughter of John Gray, deceased, a $400 mortgage; to Loretta E. Bathrick, who lived with testator, tenant house and about twenty-five acres of land; to Cornelia Gray, wife of Robert Gray, the silverware; to John P. Silvernail, Belle Gray and the children of Robert Gray, the household furniture The residue of the estate is bequeathed to the General Synod of the Reformed Church in America

A minister who was for ten years his pastor, writes of Col. Silvernail as follows: "He was of Scotch ancestry, of dignified yet affable manner; a man who read much and reflected on what he read. He was eighty years of age, and had never married." In the vicinity his property is regarded as large.

A Thankful Acknowledgment.

OF one friend I have received $20, of another $10 for the Second Reformed Church of Kalamazoo. The hope is expressed that "soon five hundred other friends will respond to the earnest appeal." Both have withheld their signatures. May your "Father which seeth in secret, himself reward you openly." A. VENNEMA.

....TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNION REFORMED CHURCH OF SIXTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.—Beloved: We avail ourselves of the INTELLIGENCER to communicate most speedily with many of you, who live out of town, at various points along the Hudson and in New Jersey. It is our desire to assemble all our communicants at the next Lord's Supper, which occurs in the morning of the second Sabbath of October (prox.). Our church roll lacks only fifteen of being as large as at any time in the whole history of the church. We are deeply anxious to come together as solid as possible; look one another in the face; take one another by the hand, and inquire together if we cannot rebuild the broken walls of the old church under the Cross! Will you not make the endeavor to meet with us? Your personal presence will greatly strengthen us. E. S. FAIRCHILD, Pastor.

....WANTED.—Minutes of the General Synod of the following sessions to complete a set for the archives of the Synod: Oct. and Nov., 1813; June, 1814, 1815, 1816, 1817; Sept., 1825; June, 1826, 1827, 1830. Will give in exchange other copies, or pay a fair price for them. W. H. TEN EYCK.
NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

...THE INSTALLATION of the Rev. Dr. J. Elmendorf as pastor of the Harlem Reformed Church, at 121st street and 3d avenue, called together a large gathering last Wednesday evening. Around the pulpit a profusion of flowers and plants, arranged in tasteful order, found place as the graceful tribute of welcome from the congregation, who on the preceding Sabbath had availed themselves of the opportunity offered them to proffer their greetings to their new pastor on the occasion of his first sermon.

Following a preliminary service of invocation and praise, the installation sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Wm. Ormiston, from Rom. 15: 28, which was listened to throughout with marked attention. The office of installation as prescribed by our Church in its liturgy, was read by the Rev. G. T. Goebel, President of Classis. Rev. Dr. Roberick Terry conveyed the salutation of Classis to the new pastor, and in his charge as a theme for united congratulation dwelt on that feature of conservatism in our Church which has preserved its pulpit from the quackery and sensationalism so often heard from that of some other denominations. He also reminded the new pastor of the necessity of guarding against this tendency so rife in the preaching of the day.

In the delivery of the charge to the people the Rev. G. H. Smyth counselled the cultivation of harmonious relations between the two Harlem churches, and deprecated any spirit of rivalry finding place among them in their work for Christ and His kingdom. He further outlined the happy results that must accrue from such a line of action in the populous Harlem district, at present inadequately provided with church accommodation

A soprano solo by a member of the choir of the church was satisfactorily interpreted. The services were brought to a close by the singing of the doxology, and the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Elmendorf.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—Rev. G. Niemeyer, of Vriesland, has been called by the Church of Cleveland, O....The First Church of Pella, Iowa, received last week twelve members on confession; among them was an aged lady of 82 years....Rev. A. Buursma, of Orange City, Iowa, has been called for the second time by the Sixth Church of Paterson, N. J., and Rev. L. Dykstra, of Newkirk, Iowa, for the third time by the Holland Church of Albany, N. Y....Hope College, at the opening of the fall term, received 31 students in the college department and two into the theological seminary, making 98 students in the college and 9 in the seminary.

....PERSONALS.—The Rev. Wm. H. Ballagh, of Asbury Park, N. J., has accepted a call to the Church of Lodi, N. Y., and expects to enter upon his duties there the second Sabbath in October....Rev. J. L Stillwell was very pleasantly surprised on Monday evening, Sept. 20th, by the people of the Church of Athenia, N. J., presenting him with a well-filled purse, expressive of their high esteem for him. Many regrets were expressed at his leaving them for another field of labor ...Rev. R. A. Pearse, pastor of the Church of Minaville, N. Y., has been unfortunate of late. Last spring his parsonage was struck by lightning and considerably damaged, and a few weeks ago two little children playing with matches set his barn on fire; which, with the parsonage and another dwelling, were burned to the ground. The furniture was rescued.

....THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY held its regular fall session in the Church of Niskayuna, N. Y. There was a full representation from all the churches. The sermon was preached by the retiring President, Rev. P. E. Kipp, from Eph. 2: 12, "Without God in the world." Rev. Dr. Chamberlain, of India, made an address on the work of Foreign Missions which was exceedingly interesting and instructive. The following Missionary Agents were appointed for the year: Rev. P E Kipp for Foreign Missions, and Rev. L. Vanderveer for Domestic Missions. Revs. Robert Doig and B. A. Bartholf, and Elder Livingstone Ellwood, M D., were appointed delegates to the Missionary Convention at Brooklyn. S. C.

....The funeral of Rev. Abraham Thompson was held in the Readington Church, N. J., on the 21st. The large building was filled. We have no space for a further notice this week.

....A score of items of news from the churches are held for next week of necessity.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 22.—Mr. Parnell's Land bill was rejected by the House of Commons last evening by a vote of 297 to 202. ....The Committee appointed to examine into Bulgarian affairs pronounces the Russian representatives criminally responsible for Alexander's removal....Mr. Gladstone publishes a letter denying the report that he is about to become a Romanist....The Italian Government is greatly annoyed at the Pope's restoring the Jesuits to their former privileges, and has decided to expel the order from their territory....Rioting was again resumed in Belfast....All the officers implicated in the recent revolt in Spain have been condemned to die....Nine thousand cotton spinners in Burnley, England, are on a strike....Three shocks of earthquake were felt last night at Charleston, S. C. No damage done, but the people badly scared ..The Knight Templars were prevented from parading in St. Louis on account of the rain....The Newport yacht race or drift was won by the "Mayflower." ....Letters disclosing the political schemes of Aaron Burr have been discovered at Kingston, N. Y... The President has begun his trip back to Washington....G. W. Foster, an extensive swindler, has been arrested ... Bartley Campbell, the actor, is believed to be hopelessly insane....Relief is sought for hundred of families in Northwestern Texas who are said to be in a starving condition....A tornado swept through the western part of New York and Pennsylvania, causing much damage....The bodies of six of the entombed miners at Scranton have been found.

THURSDAY, 23.—The speech of Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons was quite a disappointment to all parties ...The rejection of Parnell's bill is said to endanger the continuance of the Land League....The Marquis of Salisbury accuses Mr. Gladstone of purposely making false quotations ... Russia has sent an ultimatum to the Bulgarian government....A syndicate of Paris and Berlin bankers has subscribed 600,000,000 francs to carry out a railway scheme to connect the Black Sea with the Persian Gulf... 300 houses have been destroyed by fire at Kalusz, in Austrian Galicia....Geo. M. Bartholomew, the President of the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn , confessed to a shortage in his accounts of $105,000. A receivership has been appointed for the company and he has fled.. The situation in Charleston is greatly improving....A very severe hailstorm swept over the southern part of Indiana, causing a great amount of damage....A cattle plague is threatened near and in Chicago; it is thought to be pleuro-pneumonia. ....The coroner's jury as to the cause of the Nickle Plate disaster were unable to agree; the engineer and conductor are held for manslaughter....A discrimination against American commerce in Spanish West Indian ports is causing much dissatisfaction among United States shippers.

FRIDAY, 24.—Professor Darwin, of Cambridge University, England, writes a letter showing that no faith is to be placed in Wiggins' prophecy for the 29th....Two Americans of German birth have been ordered to leave Germany....The King of Uganda, Central Africa, has foully murdered all the English and French converts, and the missionaries are in great danger....A new street of tombs have been discovered at Pompeii....The American schooner "Moro Castle" was ordered stripped by the Canadian Collector of Customs and her crew was shipped to Boston....The leader of the Spanish insurrection which took place last Sunday was arrested; seventy-three of the insurgents are under arrest....The investigation of Bartholomew's debts increases his defalcations; the full extent is not yet known. ....The prison frauds of Ohio prove worse than was first supposed....It has been decided to kill the diseased cattle at Chicago. ....Henry George has been nominated by the workingmen for Mayor of New York city.... A severe thunder storm swept over Lima, Ohio, five oil wells were struck by lightning, much property and one life were los

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Miss Huldah's Triumph.

BY KATE SUMNER GATES.

MISS HULDAH closed her Bible with an unusually grave expression on her face, and then knelt down by the old arm chair just as she had done every morning and evening at family prayers for years; though, alas! for poor Miss Huldah, she was a family unto herself. There was no one to bow with her at the throne of grace.

Somehow, almost unconsciously, she had fallen into certain forms of expression and stereotyped phrases in her prayers; but this morning she forgot them all, and up from the very depths of her heart came only a few broken words:

"Dear Lord, I am a poor, miserable, sinful woman, but do Thou create in me a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within me, that I may grow more like Thee in all that I say and do, for Christ's sake. Amen."

Then Miss Huldah rose from her knees and went about her work. There were the dishes to be done, the house to put in order, the chickens to feed and the flowers to water; then Miss Huldah would be ready for the business of the day.

"I don't know," she soliloquized, as she went about the dishes, "I don't know. I don't think there are many real out and out, through and through Christians in the world. There's Deacon Potter, he makes nice, long prayers and exhorts sinners in a very edifying way; but I'm tremendous thankful I'm not one of his women folks at home. May be he feels real pious himself all the time; but I don't believe they do,—not unless they're uncommon saintly. Mr. Owen, everybody says, is a pillar in the church; but you want to be sure and have your eyes open when you're trading with him, for all that, or you'll get the worst of the bargain. Miss Dorset, she's chief cook and bottle washer, so to speak, President and First Directress of all the missionary societies there are going, and her family have to trust in Providence and take care of themselves; and the dear knows, she's made more trouble in town gossiping about this one and that, and spreading every evil report she can lay her hands on far and wide. So it goes; there's a hitch somewhere with most everybody, there's a nook or corner in most every heart that's given over to wickedness. Most of your pillars won't bear looking at in too many directions. I don't wonder the world's people stumble and fall over us, we're nothing but dark lanterns a good share of the time.

"I don't suppose it is possible to be perfect in this world, but I'm going to try for it from all points of the compass. And to begin with, as long as I haven't anything special on hand, I guess I'd better slip down and see how Mis' Tucker is. I'll take a loaf of bread along, and I presume likely I'll see something I can do for her. I haven't much patience with 'em; if they had been any ways fore-handed they never would have got in the fix they are in now, but law, she's that shiftless that if she ate one square meal a week she'd be clear tuckered out. However, I don't suppose that is any excuse for letting her suffer; but I do hope that little jack-a-knapes of a Bob won't be home, he just sets my teeth on edge."

Miss Huldah groaned in spirit as she crossed the Tucker threshold, and took it all in at a glance; then she took off her sun bonnet and rolled up her sleeves. "I reckon I'm needed here more'n I am anywhere else just now, and may be it will be accepted for a cup of cold water. I'm free to confess, though, that it isn't one I particularly hanker to handle." But not being one of the kind that, once having put her hand to the plow, wasted time in looking back, Miss Huldah went to work with a will.

Mrs. Tucker sighed weakly, as befitted an invalid. "If I was strong I'd like proper well to keep things in shape, but I'm all broke up and can't seem to do nothin'."

"Yes," said Miss Huldah laconically, by way of reply, secretly thinking that she would do something if her house were in such a condition, if it killed her. But Miss Huldah was an energetic, thrifty, go-ahead woman, and Mrs. Tucker was—not; which made the difference. The little Tuckers,—and Miss Huldah thought their name was legion,—stared at her in undisguised astonishment. They followed her every step she took, they nearly drove her frantic with their incessant chattering, besides rousing her ire times without number by the jokes they played upon her.

"I don't wonder you're sick with nervous prostration," she said grimly to Mrs. Tucker, "it's a pity some of the rest of the family ain't afflicted in the same way."

"I say, Miss Huldy," said Bob,—she thoroughly hated to be called Huldy, and Bob knew it,—"I say, Miss Huldy, won't you make us some ginger snaps like that you gave me one day up to your house?"

"May be, if you will be good and take the children out doors and look after them."

"All right, it's a bargain. Come on, children;" and in a twinkling Miss Huldah was left rejoicing in sole possession of the little kitchen.

But less than half an hour after Bob's frowsy head appeared at the door. "I say, you'll stick to yer bargain, won't yer!"

"I never broke my word yet, and I don't think I'll begin on you," was the grim response. "You see to it you keep yours."

And away Bob would go, but never very far, and Miss Huldah's blood fairly ran cold as she caught sight of Peggy swinging from the bough of an apple tree, or Bob turning summersaults on the shed roof.

There was never any half-way work with her about her cups of cold water, they were brim full, and this was no exception. She believed in doing with her might what her hand found to do, and there was plenty to be found in this house. It was nearly two o'clock before she could see her way clear to fulfil her promise to Bob. She was tired, and the little kitchen was like an oven. She was sorely tempted to let them go; but a promise was sacred in her eyes, and presently there stood on the pantry shelf, a pan of crisp, spicy cookies, such as had never graced that pantry before.

"I'll take Mis' Tucker a cup of tea and slice of toast, and then I must be slipping home."

Everything was quiet, and not a child to be seen. It was probably an hour after, when Miss Huldah came out from the sick room into the kitchen and just stepped into the pantry before leaving for home to see that everything was all right. The fresh bread was rolled in the bread cloth on the shelf, a new pie stood near it, and a bowl of custard for the invalid was in the window; but there was not the least vestige of a cookie to be seen high or low, though Miss Huldah peered up on the top shelf, and went down on her knees to see into the farthest corner of the lower shelf. Not a single cookie was to be seen anywhere.

"It's that miserable, good for nothing little Bob; and I a making those cookies with the sweat a rolling off from me, just because I promised him I would. 'Twas nothing more nor less than casting pearls before swine to do it. He hasn't left a single, identical one, the good for nothing little scamp. I'll teach him one lesson as sure as my name is Huldah Perkins, so I will."

And so, breathing out threatenings with every breath, Miss Huldah sallied forth, not in the direction of home, but in search of the miscreant Bob. The more she thought about it, the more exasperated she grew, and the more anxious to visit her righteous indignation upon the luckless offender to the fullest extent.

It began to seem, however, as if both Bob and the cookies had vanished from sight, for not a trace of them could she find anywhere about the premises. At last, however, just as she was about to give it up, she caught sight of him, under the old apple tree down in the lot, sound asleep. Close beside him stood the pan, with just half a dozen cookies left in it. Miss Huldah counted them over three separate times to be sure that she made no mistake, and her eyes fairly blazed.

"A whole pan full of ginger snaps!" she ejaculated. "That little scamp has eaten a panful; he'll die, and I don't much care if he does. To think of my making them for him to eat in that fashion."

Miss Huldah took one more step forward, and stood beside her victim; but something stayed her hand at the last minute; like a flash came the memory of her thoughts and resolutions of the morning. What sort of an opinion would Bob have of her as a Christian if she visited her wrath upon him, as she felt so sorely tempted to do.

"He isn't anything but a child, and a poor specimen at that, in my opinion; but he is one point of the compass I suppose, and anyway, the Lord sees me, and I guess He would be ashamed of me if I can't have a little patience with this child after all the patience He has had with me. And I don't really suppose after all, that it would do any special good, though it would be a dreadful relief to me, that's a fact. Oh! dear me, Huldah Perkins you'd better hurry home as fast as you know how, and pray for a [illegible]pirit. And I wouldn't have anything more to say about the faults and inconsistencies of others if I was in your place; you're got your hands full with your own."

Just at this point in Miss Huldah's meditations, Bob opened his eyes. He was not much given to betraying any consciousness of guilt; but he grew fairly crimson as he looked from Miss Huldah to the almost empty pan at his side, and wondered what she would do to him.

"I'm very sorry, Bob, very sorry," she said quietly after a moment's pause, which if she had but known it, seemed hours to the miserable culprit at her feet. "I was tired and it was rather hot work making them; it seems a little hard to have had you eat them all up like this."

Then Miss Huldah turned and went slowly up through the orchard out of the gate and up the street toward her own house. Bob stared in astonishment and fear. "She's goin' to have me 'rested," he gasped. "I wish I hadn't touched 'em."

But no, she went straight to her own home and directly into the house. Bob drew a sigh of relief. "She's—a brick; she never licked me a bit nor scolded me neither. I most wish she had, though, for I do feel meaner than pusley now, and I'm just agoing to tell her so too."

. . . . . .

It was years after that Bob, then the Rev. Robert Tucker, D.D., stood by Miss Huldah's open casket.

"She was the most thorough Christian I ever knew," he said, while the tears coursed down his cheeks. "She tried more than any one I ever met to acknowledge and glorify Christ in all her ways. She tried to be like Christ, her Master, every moment of her life, and I owe all that I am to that purpose of hers and her blessed influence."

"Not in Word but in Power."

BY REV. C. P. DITMARS.

DR. CHALMERS was one of the greatest preachers of Scotland. It is said that when he first entered the ministry, while his sermons were beautifully written and eloquently delivered, they were so cold and polished that they took very little effect on the hearts of men. He had very few converts in those first years. He delighted more in mathematics and philosophy than in the study and application of Scriptural truth. At last, while preparing an article upon Christianity for the Edinburgh Encyclopedia, he began to realize Christianity's importance. He seemed converted for the first time. A new power seized upon him, and from that hour he consecrated himself to the ministry of saving souls. His own heart was set on fire, and using all his culture and eloquence to make the saving truth of Christ of saving power, he set many other hearts on fire. By the grace of God he led hundreds to Jesus.

What a clear example is this of the truth which Paul wrote to the Corinthians, "The kingdom of God is not in word but in power." First of all it is in the power of the Holy Ghost. But when the Holy Ghost takes possession of a man, there is a new power in his heart that always evolves itself out through his life. Hence the kingdom of God, which is within the Christian man, is also in the power of an earnest, consecrated life of faith. There is more in this than in a thousand sermons. We are sure that the thousand sermons, unless they have the power of heart and life behind them, will fall short of the mark. Spiritual heart and life power is the highest attainment in the kingdom of God. In these days when thousands from our cities run to cheap excursions, shows and concerts on the Sabbath day, while only hundreds are found in the house of God, the Church and the Christian greatly needs more of such power as this. The heart that cleaves in faith and obedience unto the Gospel needs a closer communion with Christ, and a deeper work of grace.

Indeed, it does seem that the fruitfulness of a Christian's life, and the glory he can give to Christ, and his influence on others, depends more to day upon the vitality and power of his daily Christian living, than in any other age of the Church. To the secret-place, then, O follower of the Lord! Upon your knees pray, that by the Holy Ghost, the power of salvation and the proofs of salvation may manifest themselves in your life. Pleading at the cross, you will find Christ's power. By His power you shall have life, and through life glory.

"So shall your walk be close with God,
Calm and serene your frame;
So purer light shall mark the road,
That leads you to the Lamb."

NISKAYUNA, N. Y.

Progress of the "Reformed Church in America," Real and Reported, Since 1855, Including its Foreign Classis of Arcot.

NOTE.—The statistical table of 1855, the last given before returns from the Classis of Arcot began to come in, reported the membership at 38,927.

	Received by		Lost by			Totals.		Net gain, annual and total.	Progress of the Church.
	Confession.	Certificate.	Dismission	Suspension.	Deaths.	Received	Lost.		Real.	As represented in the Synod's Tables.
In 1855									38,927	38,927
1856	2,551	1,483	1,307	65	643	4,034	2,015	2,019	40,946	40,413
1857	2,666	1,769	1,487	56	718	4,435	2,261	2,174	43,120	44,443
1858	4,099	1,788	1,629	56	772	5,887	2,457	3,430	46,550	46,197
1859	5,165	1,744	1,449	113	845	6,909	2,407	4,502	51,052	50,304
1860	2,479	1,794	1,781	76	852	4,273	2,709	1,564	52,616	50,427
1861	2,519	1,632	1,325	78	729	4,151	2,132	2,019	54,635	50,295
1862	2,034	1,590	1,253	42	858	3,624	2,153	1,471	56,106	51,528
1863	2,190	1,353	1,390	84	958	3,543	2,432	1,111	57,217	53,007
1864	2,565	1,489	1,212	92	757	4,054	2,061	1,993	59,210	53,883
1865	2,385	1,650	1,605	75	923	4,035	2,603	1,432	60,642	54,286
1866	3,120	1,885	1,582	67	842	5,005	2,491	2,514	63,156	55,917
1867	4,284	2,347	1,935	104	827	6,631	2,866	3,765	66,921	57,846
1868	3,804	2,294	2,006	178	840	6,098	3,024	3,074	69,995	49,508
1869	3,190	2,040	1,844	97	951	5,230	2,892	2,338	72,333	58,796
1870	3,628	2,294	2,042	102	958	5,922	3,102	2,820	75,153	61,444
1871	3,863	2,223	1,840	108	1,023	6,086	2,966	3,120	78,273	63,483
1872	4,111	2,255	1,825	124	976	6,366	2,925	3,441	81,714	64,214
1873	3,331	2,038	1,730	126	1,052	5,369	2,908	2,461	84,175	67,123
1874	4,237	2,450	1,964	85	1,065	6,687	3,114	3,573	87,748	69,149
1875	4,423	2,116	1,661	99	1,090	6,539	2,850	3,689	91,437	70,628
1876	5,993	1,973	1,932	126	1,013	7,966	3,071	4,895	96,332	74,600
1877	6,408	2,102	2,074	158	1,114	8,510	3,346	5,164	101,496	78,597
1878	3,943	1,966	1,929	112	1,149	5,909	3,190	2,719	104,215	78,666
1879	3,548	1,737	2,023	133	1,261	5,285	3,417	1,868	106,083	80,228
1880	3,272	1,747	1,802	130	1,231	5,019	3,163	1,856	107,939	80,208
1881	2,731	1,973	1,912	117	1,296	4,704	3,325	1,379	109,318	80,591
1882	3,523	2,219	1,874	98	1,239	5,742	3,211	2,531	111,849	80,167
1883	3,868	2,307	2,392	95	1,343	6,175	3,830	2,345	114,194	80,156
1884	4,388	2,415	2,142	80	1,351	6,803	3,573	3,230	117,424	81,880
1885*	4,309	2,114	2,019	78	1,361	6,423	3,458	2,965	120,389	82,089
1886	4,719	2,556	2,484	122	1,275	7,275	3,886	3,389	123,778	83,037
Ag'egate returns since 1855	113,346	61,343	55,455	3,071	31,312	174,689	89,838	84,851	123,778	83,037

*In 1885 the Synod's summary included returns from Amoy and Japan. In the above table these returns are taken out.

General Synod's Committees on the State of Religion have been puzzled year after year over the statistical returns of the Classes, from which they have been called to make up their reports of the progress of the Church. I received my own first impression of this matter at Syracuse in 1885, when, as chairman of one of these committees, I was obliged to make the apparently self-contradicting statement that though the churches, without Amoy and Japan, had reported 6,423 members added and 3,458 lost, the real gain to the whole Church for the year had been but 209. (See Minutes of Synod for 1885, page 657.) My added remark, "The discrepancy has been brought about through the active revision of former church rolls which is now in progress," was true, but it did not satisfy my own mind after all.

In the last session of Synod at New Brunswick, the next chairman of this important committee, Rev. Dr. Suydam, encountering this same puzzle, came in with a report which, while it was true to the returns, as mine had been, so shocked the sense of the Synod by revealing a supposed actual decrease in the aggregate membership of the Church, that it referred the report back to the committee for correction of what it thought must have been an error. When it came in the second time it was a trifle more encouraging. The admissions for the year, it stated, had been 7,275, and the losses 3,690 (the latter number should have been 3,886), and yet, after all, the aggregate membership of the preceding year, without Amoy and Japan, having been represented at 82,089, and that of the last year being reported at 83,037, the net gain, it said, had been but 948. This, of course, included the Classis of Arcot.

Remembering my own feeling in 1885, noticing the general feeling of the brethren this year, and believing that the whole subject of our progress as a denomination, real and reported, is worthy of deeper study, I used a little of my vacation in preparing the table herewith furnished. What it means is sufficiently clear from its headings, general and special. I wish to speak a little of its strange revelations, for that they are strange and startling I am sure all will admit.

The table is made up, of course, from the annual returns of the Classes, just as they are given in the successive Minutes of Synod. These are admitted to be imperfect. Blanks running through all the years are very annoying. But probably if all blanks were filled, and if all wrong figures were corrected, the general summaries of aggregate membership would not vary to an average of 500 members per annum from what they now give.

The printed reports give the growth of our Church membership since 1855 as from 38,927 to 83,037; but my table shows that it has really grown from 38,927 to 123,778. Here is a loss of 40,741 members, wholly unaccounted for through the reports of dismissions, suspensions and deaths. We have received since 1855, 174,689 members, and have reports of but 89,838 lost. This ought to leave a net gain of 84,851, which, added to the 38,927 we had in 1855, gives a total of 123,778. What has become of the 40,741 of which no account has been given?

The statement regularly made by the churches is that they have been revising their rolls. But what is this startling process of revision that revises hundreds of members out of existence each year? Let me note its operation within the Classes individually during the last year alone, that I may bring home the responsibility of it to each Classis and lead it to deep thought about it. The churches had, by their own admission, in April, 1885, an aggregate of 82,089, without Amoy and Japan. One year later, in April, 1886, they admit that they received 3,389 within a year, and yet they have so revised their rolls that they all together give but 948 more members than they gave the year before. The difference between 3,389 and 948 is 2,441. What has become of these 2,441 members? They have all been revised out of being in one year, notwithstanding the fact that revision had already been doing its remorseless work year by year during all the years that had gone before. But let me give a tabular exhibit of the losses and gains of the Classes, one by one, between April, 1885 and April, 1886.

	Number of members in April, 1885.	Reported gain or loss since.	Report as it ought to be in April, 1886, simply on the basis of one year's gain	Report as actually made in April, 1886.	Lost or gained without accounting for by individual Classes.
Albany	2,941	165 gain	3,106	2,927	179 lost
Arcot	1,582	31 "	1,613	1,610	3 "
Bergen	2,372	195 "	2,567	2,591	24 gained
S. Bergen	2,280	207 "	2,487	2,435	52 lost
Cayuga	1,106	24 "	1,130	1,094	36 "
Geneva	1,826	125 "	1,951	1,890	61 "
Grand River	2,568	108 "	2,676	2,597	79 "
Greene	1,386	4 "	1,390	1,412	22 gained
Holland	1,635	105 "	1,740	1,838	98 "
Hudson	1,828	25 "	1,853	1,868	15 "
Illinois	1,136	31 "	1,167	836	331 lost
Iowa	1,207	274 "	1,481	1,889	408 gained
Kingston	2,172	143 "	2,315	2,250	65 lost
N. L. Island	3,913	48 "	3,961	3,882	79 "
S. L. Island	4,159	181 "	4,340	4,143	197 "
Michigan	866	32 "	898	862	36 "
Monmouth	1,413	4 loss	1,409	1,269	140 "
Montgomery	2,560	48 gain	2,608	2,544	64 "
Newark	3,193	129 "	3,322	3,258	64 "
New Brunswick	2,552	19 "	2,571	2,459	112 "
New York	6,849	365 "	7,214	7,021	193 "
Orange	3,324	136 "	3,460	3,353	107 "
Paramus	3,384	118 "	3,502	3,501	1 "
Passaic	2,293	66 "	2,359	2,228	131 "
Philadelphia	2,918	160 "	3,078	2,758	320 "
Poughkeepsie	2,107	103 "	2,210	2,188	22 "
Raritan	3,473	104 "	3,577	3,565	12 "
Rensselaer	1,995	19 "	2,014	1,935	79 "
Saratoga	1,868	69 "	1,937	1,548	389 "
Schenectady	2,452	48 "	2,500	2,461	39 "
Schoharie	1,256	32 "	1,288	1,224	64 "
Ulster	2,515	117 "	2,632	2,528	104 "
Westchester	2,000	32 "	2,032	2,046	14 gained
Wisconsin	2,960	130 "	3,090	3,027	63 lost
	82,089	3,389 gain over loss.	85,478	83,037	2,441 losses over gains.

This last table will help the Classes to fix responsibility for our large losses, and, by exercising more careful supervision in the future, to prevent this frightful disintegration of the Reformed Church. But, furthermore, I have tried to think where even the deeper responsibility for this revising of members out of being lies, and I have something to say in regard to this.

The only permanent dependence for keeping up the being and the rolls of the Church is, I am satisfied, the eldership. Pastors vary in their adaptation to this kind of work, and more than this, pastors, especially in our times, come and go quite rapidly. The condition of the churches, as to pastors, is very fluctuating; but the eldership never gives out. In 1882, (I cite an actual case,) a pastor reported 531 members. His successor, two years later, brought in a revised roll with 275 members. This case was typical of many experiences of our churches in passing through a change of pastors. It shows that the member-roll ought at least to be under the supervision of the elders who never give out. It is a painful fact that the elders of many churches do not in our day even know the number, much more the names, of the members solemnly committed to them as a care and trust. I will not attempt to apologize for incompetent or careless pastors, of whom I have no doubt we have some. No doubt many pastors, otherwise excellent, find themselves wholly unadapted to the care of statistics. But plainly the permanent responsibility for knowing the members of their churches and their whereabout rests upon the elders. Each Board of Elders ought to see that either its pastor or some one else really cares for and accurately keeps its church roll. That 2,441 members can be claimed one spring and revised out of being by the next, and this despite the fact that revising has been going on year after year for at least 30 years, as I have shown, is beyond all comprehension by one who is accustomed to care in the keeping of his own roll.

In conclusion, is it wonderful that such management of statistics results in a disheartening of our Reformed Church people? The reports for the eight years from 1879 to 1886 give this rate of membership growth—80 223, 80,208, 80,591, 80,167, 80,156, 81,880, 82,089, 83,037. They make us out to have lost every year but one for the first six of these years, and in the whole eight to have gained but 2,809 members. And this when our true figures for the eight years should have been, 106 033, 107,939, 109,318, 111,849, 114,194, 117,424, 120,389, 123,778, indicating a gain in the eight years of 17,695 members, or 2,212 per year over all reported loses.

I have now brought the evil of this mismanagement of statistics so clearly before the notice of our Classes that they will have no difficulty in studying and remedying it. Of course I have no idea that the 40,741 members we have revised out of our tables during the last 30 years, or even the 2,441 we have revised away within the last single year, are now all living. Nor do I forget that there are other ways by which some of them may have been really, as well as nominally, lost to us. It may be that some churches would have been glad to avail themselves of added columns in our statistical tables for non-residents, residences unknown, etc., through which they could have kept perfect balances of their rolls from year to year. But as things are, we are left to infer from our tables that the Reformed Church is almost at a standstill, that, in fact, quite recently it went steadily backward year after year for six years in succession. Let us have the facts, and we shall see that in proportion to the dimensions of our denomination, we are, to say the least, winning as many new converts from the world and enjoying as much of the confidence and sympathy of God's people in our land as any other Church. During the last year our Church won 4,719 new converts to the Lord Jesus Christ, as my table shows. Was that nothing done? Did that represent no progress in our Reformed Church?

DAVID COLE.

YONKERS, Sept. 10th, 1886.

....The Society of Christian Endeavor, which was organized by Rev. Mr. Clark, then of Williston Church, Portland, a few years ago, held its Maine State anniversary in Portland last week. From one society organized in Portland about five years since, it has grown to one thousand societies, with a membership of over 60,000, extending to every State and Territory in the country.

....Mr. Moody received at his recent Northfield Conference contributions for his school ranging from between $45,000 and $50,000. One contribution was $25 000 for a new dormitory for girls, and another $20,000 for a library.

....In ten years more than 30,000 people embraced Christianity in the Samoan Islands. It is thought there are not more than twenty houses in the whole group where there is not a Bible and family worship.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....Last week one volume suitable as a holiday gift was mentioned; we now call attention to others. "MARY AND MARTHA, THE MOTHER AND THE WIFE OF GEORGE WASHINGTON," by Benson J. Lossing, LL.D., is a very handsome book, generously illustrated with engravings of permanent value, and dedicated "To My Young Countrywomen," many of whom would be thankful to own it and would value it highly, while they would receive great profit from reading it. It stands almost alone as a record of the lives of these venerated ladies, entirely alone, as a complete and satisfactory biography. Mr. Lossing during twelve years was frequently a guest at Arlington House, and enjoyed many conversations with Mr. George Washington Parke Custis, who remembered his grandmother, Martha Washington, and had a vivid recollection of his visits at Mount Vernon. Of these conversations notes were made. The mansion also abounded in mementoes of the Washington family, and besides, a large number of letters, documents, manuscripts and communications continued through a series of years to the National Intelligencer, were placed in the possession of Mr. Lossing. From these materials he has constructed an exceedingly engaging narrative and added an important chapter to our national history. Characteristic incidents in the lives of many persons conspicuous in our early history are narrated, and the social customs of the time are agreeably described. It is doubtful whether the season will yield another book which will give so much true enjoyment to American ladies, young and old, or which will be read with greater pleasure by those interested in the history of the formative days of the Republic. A cordial reception for the volume on the other side of the Atlantic may also be confidently anticipated. (Harper & Brothers.)

....A multitude of readers admire and enjoy Mr. Frank R. Stockton's amazing inventions. Even India has been brought under the spell of "The Lady, or the Tiger," and natives of that country are enquiring of their American friends, "Which came out of the opened door,—the lady, or the tiger?" These compositions, which have for so many driven "dull care away," have been now collected in two volumes which are all one can desire in type, paper and binding. "STOCKTON'S STORIES," as the title is, will form a very acceptable present for the holidays or a birthday. The First Series, or volume, include the stories brought together in one book two years ago, being The Lady, or the Tiger, The Transferred Ghost, Mr. Tolman, A Piece of Red Calico, and half dozen others. The Second Series is a new selection and contains The Christmas Wreck, A Story of Assisted Fate, The Wreck of the "Thomas Hyke," A Borrowed Month, and three or four other remarkable achievements. It would be difficult to find two volumes containing as much genuine humor and so free from every objectionable element. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....A book intelligent boys will take pleasure in is "THE LIFE OF ROBERT FULTON AND A HISTORY OF STEAM NAVIGATION," by Thomas W. Knox By his "Boy Travellers" and other works the author has established his reputation as an entertaining writer. But this last production is not only a book for boys, men as well will read it not only with enjoyment but with surprise—surprise at the fertility of Fulton in useful inventions and at the extent to which he anticipated the inventions of recent years and the extent of our indebtedness to him for the place he filled in a number of important enterprises. Mr. Knox has gleaned his facts from various publications and records, and combined them in an entertaining and useful recital. The volume contains a portrait of Fulton and engravings exhibiting the progress in the construction of steam vessels. A great deal of information in regard to navigation by steam is to be obtained from the volume. This also is commended as a gift book. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

....Among the writers for children of the last twenty-five or thirty years no one has held a higher place than the late Mrs. Juliana Horatia Ewing. As memory serves us just now, our impression is that less than two years have passed since her death. Our appreciation of her books has been so great that, after purchasing those which could be obtained from the booksellers of this city, we ordered from London the remaining volumes necessary to complete the series. They have won unstinted praise from such critical periodicals as The Athenæum, Academy and Spectator. Their moral and religious tone is such that they have been published in London by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and the editions of a number of them have run up into thousands of copies. We have just opened the edition of "Brothers of Pity" of 1884, and find on the title page that it is the "Eighth Thousand." The young folks to whom we have given or loaned these books have frequently expressed the pleasure with which they have read them. There is no "baby talk" in the volumes, no "goody goodishness," no attempt to write down to a supposed level with childish appreciation, but they are sensible, elevated in tone and style, very interesting, abound in touches of humor and are often genuinely pathetic. One of them the London Academy, two years ago,—an independent and able critic—honored as "the book of the season."

We have recently received the American reprint of "A FLAT IRON FOR A FARTHING; or, Some Passages in the Life of an Only Son." By Juliana Horatia Ewing. The same publishers have reprinted four or five, perhaps more, of Mrs. Ewing's books. No better books for Christmas presents to young folks can be found, and if the fathers and mothers fail to read them we will be surprised. (Roberts Brothers.)

...."THE MAKING OF NEW ENGLAND, 1580–1643." By Samuel Adams Drake. With copious illustrations we have here a "brief, compact and handy" manual of the beginning of the settlement of New England. The periods are divided into six sections, reaching down to the Confederacy of the Northern English Colonies in 1643. The style is very simple and the work is evidently intended for young readers. The maps and pictures are exceedingly well done and are a special feature of the work. Teachers of American history will find, undoubtedly, in these pages a text book which will be fully appreciated by their scholars. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

...."LIVES OF GIRLS WHO BECAME FAMOUS," by Sarah K. Bolton, is a book in every way attractive. It contains sketches of nineteen eminent women whose names are familiar to all intelligent readers, and whose history is worthy of attention. Among them are Helen Hunt Jackson, the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Mary A. Livermore. These and others are described in a most entertaining fashion by a lady who is a well-trained and accomplished writer. A portrait accompanies each sketch, and the book is printed in clear type, on good paper, and neatly bound. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

....Mr. John B. Alden has issued specimen volumes of proposed new editions of the works of Emerson and Prescott, in a new form and style, called the "Ideal Edition." "NATURE, AND OTHER ADDRESSES" is the volume chosen to represent Emerson, and Prescott's "BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL MISCELLANIES," the latter author. They are gotten up in good style and a peculiar form, long and narrow, handy and not unpleasing to the eye, and at a low price.

...."THE MAN WHO WAS GUILTY." By Flora Haines Longhead. (Riverside Paper Series.) Thoughtful readers will be interested in this story chiefly because it deals with a question which is deserving of more consideration than it has hitherto received—namely, the attitude of the community toward released convicts who desire to regain the position they forfeited by crime. The author exhibits fully and fairly the obstacles which must be met, and very strongly depicts the embarrassments which arise from prejudice, suspicion, and misrepresentation. The difficulties in the way of restoration to an honorable social position are shown to be very great—often, indeed, thoroughly disheartening—but not always insurmountable. These impediments are also shown to be largely due to the unfair attitude commonly assumed by the community. The hero of the story manfully and successfully meets all opposition and ultimately wins back an assured position in the esteem of the public. In many respects he must be regarded as an exceptional character, but the experiences through which he passed are no doubt typical of those which are common to the reformed lawbreaker who strives to atone for the past.

Of course the story does not pretend to give a solution of the grave problem with which it deals, but is rather a contribution of facts and suggestion subsidiary to such a solution. It ought to be added that the narrative is deserving of notice for its own sake, as a well told, animated tale, full of striking incidents, strong in character painting, and pleasing in style. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Atlantic for October keeps its high position among the monthlies. The three serial stories bring us to catastrophes showing that they are nearing their end. Henry James in his "Princess Casamassima" gives us a tragedy in low life which, by his study of London scenes and of Nihilism, is very effective. The articles on "A Mad Monarch" and "A Literary Athlete" present Louis of Bavaria and "Kit North" in very striking contrast. Miss Tincker furnishes a somewhat amusing story of modern Roman tastes and customs, while "The Rise of Arabian Learning," by Edward Hungerford, is a scholarly and exhaustive sketch of the rise of Saracenic literature. As usual, the negro has some place in the magazine, as "Race Prejudices" are discussed by N. S. Shaler. The critical notices and the "Contributors' Club" are very attractive, especially the question of ethics presented as a problem on the last page.

....The great feature of Harper's Magazine for October is "The Story of Tanis," by "Amelia B. Edwards, Ph.D., LL.D." It is every way worthy of the author's high standing as an orientalist, and is made as fascinating by its style and illustrations as it is valuable for its learning. "Autumn in England" is a delightful article, also illustrated. "Ole 'Stracted" is one of Thomas Nelson Page's notable stories of negro dialect. "The Brahman's Son" is a long and interesting poem by Stoddard. "Their Pilgrimage" visits Niagara, Richfield Springs, etc. There is a freshet of poetry this month, and rather above the average. Mr. Howells descants on "the decadence of poetry," and Mr. Curtis on the Albany Centennial. In fact, this is the best number of our good old Harper which has appeared for many a day.

....In Outing for the month Captain R. F. Coffin, eminently capable to handle the topic, continues his History of American Yachting. Around the World on a Bicycle, by Thomas Stevens, relates his experience in riding through the Sivas Vilayet into Armenia. Captain Kemeys adds to his engaging story of Rocky Mountain Adventure. Rev. Mr. Stall describes The Clerical Wheelmen's Canadian Tour of last summer. The Monthly Record is carefully maintained.

....Hugh Thomson extends his illustrations of Sir Roger de Coverly in the English Illustrated Magazine. The engravings adorning the record of a Day in the Valley of the Arno are excellent. Fashions in Hair receive elaborate treatment from Alma Tadema and are amply illustrated. The number completes a volume.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Robert Carter & Bros.: Jack Who Persevered: Bert the Enterprising Boy. By the author of the "Win and Wear Series." 2 vols of The Gillettes. 16mo, pp. 196 and 230. 75 cents each; also,

My Sermon Notes: A Selection from Outlines of Discourses delivered at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. By C. H. Spurgeon. 8vo, pp. 381. $1.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.: Stories from Life. By Sarah K. Bolton. 12mo, pp. 361. $1.25.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: The Story of Carthage. By Alfred J. Church, with the Collaboration of Arthur Gilman. (The Story of the Nations Series.) Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 309. $1.50.

Cassell & Co.: Kean and Booth, and their Contemporaries. (Actors and Actresses of Great Britain and the United States, Vol. 3.) Edited by Brander Matthews and Lawrence Hutton. 12mo, pp. 313. $1.50; also,

The Influence of Clothing on Health. By Frederick Treves, F.R.C.S. With Illustrations. 12mo, pp. 112. 75 cents.

Ticknor & Co.: Genius in Sunshine and Shadow. By Maturin M. Ballou. 12mo, pp. 309. $1.50; also,

The Peterkin Papers. By Lucretia P. Hale. With Illustrations. Square 4to, pp. 219. $1.50.

S. W. Straub, Chicago: The Singing Teacher's Helper, Containing General Directions and Suggestions to Teachers and Model Lessons Referring to Illustrations and Exercises; also Instructions in Conducting. 16mo, pp. 45. 50 cents; also,

Happy Moments: For Public Schools, Seminaries, Normal Schools and Juvenile Classes. Containing the Author's Improved Plan for Teaching Sight Reading, and a Rare Collection of Secular and Sacred Songs for the School Room, Concerts, etc. By S. W. Straub. Pp. 176. 50 cents, or $5 per dozen; also, Ever New! Containing the Author's Improved Plan of Teaching Sight Reading, etc. By S. W. Straub and W. F. Werschkul. Pp. 176. 50 cents.

Lee & Shepard: Simplicity and Fascination. By Anne Beale. 12mo, pp. 499. $1; also,

The Book of Eloquence: A Collection of Extracts in Prose and Verse, from the Most Famous Orators and Poets. Intended as Exercises for Declamation in Colleges and Schools. By Charles Dudley Warner. 12mo, pp. 452. $1.50; also,

Study of the English Classics. A Practical Handbook for Teachers. By Albert F. Blaisdell, A.M. Fourth Edition, Revised. 12mo, pp. 300. $1; also,

The Little Master. By J. T. Trowbridge. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 230. $1.25; also,

Grammar for Common Schools. By B. F. Tweed, A.M. 12mo, pp. 113. 30 cents; also, Educational Psychology. A Treatise for Parents and Educators. By Louisa Parsons Hopkins. 16mo, pp. 96. 50 cents.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Luther Statue at the National Capital, History—Unveiling—Addresses. Edited by J. G. Butler, D.D. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 44. 25 cents. Lutheran Publishing House, Philadelphia.

Forty-Eighth Annual Report of the Board of Publication of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

Comediettas and Farces. By John Maddison Morton. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 95.) 16mo, pp. 171. 25 cents.

Both in the Wrong. A Novel. By Mrs. John Kent Spender. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 544.) 4to, pp. 60. 20 cents.

The Sorrows of Werter. From the German of Goethe. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. 1, No. 35.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

September.—The American Antiquarian and Oriental Journal.

October.—Harper's Monthly Magazine, American Agriculturist, The Popular Science Monthly, St. Nicholas, The Domestic Monthly, The Forum, The Art Journal, Outing, The Pansy.

Colgate & Co's CASHMERE BOUQUET PERFUME

For the Handkerchief

THIS EXQUISITE PERFUME CLINGS WITH REMARKABLE TENACITY TO ALL WOVEN FABRICS"

GOOD AUTUMN BOOKS.

A scholarly book by Prof. FRANK BYRON JEVONS, of the University of Durham, which will give the general reader and the student a comprehensive view of the literature of Greece from the earliest period to the death of Demosthenes. It is complete without being over-elaborate. 1 vol, 8vo....$2.50

A HISTORY OF GREEK LITERATURE.

The cheap edition of Commander W. S. SCHLEY'S and Prof. J. R. SOLEY'S book forms an admirable supplementary volume to Lieut. GREELY'S own work, "Three Years of Arctic Service." "The book is singularly well done," says the New York Times. 1 vol, 12mo.....$2.00

THE RESCUE OF GREELY.

Illustrated from the Photographs and Maps of the Relief Expedition.

Mr. SAMUEL ADAMS DRAKE'S volume supplies the place left vacant between the greater and the lesser histories. Everything which concerns the homes and the daily life of the early New Englanders finds ample treatment. It may indeed be called a history of the people of New England from 1580 to 1643. 1 vol., 12mo.....$1.50

THE MAKING OF NEW ENGLAND, 1580-1643.

150 illustrations and maps.

Such a book as Mr. PARK BENJAMIN'S was imperatively demanded; it is the only one now published which gives a popular and most accurate account of the advancement in practical electrical science from the earliest to the present time. 1 vol., 12mo.....$2.00

THE AGE OF ELECTRICITY.

From Ambersoul to Telephone. Illustrated by diagrams and four fine page pictures by J. Steeple Davis.

A periodical published on the first day of each month, giving a succinct account of the literature of the day. Not only are all the American books reviewed, but the London correspondence keeps readers abreast with new English publications. Fully illustrated. Portraits of well-known authors published regularly. Sample copy sent to any address. Annual subscription.....$1.00

THE BOOK BUYER.

An Illustrated Monthly Summary of American and Foreign Literature.

A new volume of STOCKTON'S STORIES, containing many of his most famous tales. 1 vol., 12mo..$1 25

THE CHRISTMAS WRECK.

Contents: The Christmas Wreck, A Story of Assisted Fate, An Unhistoric Page, A Tale of Negative Gravity, The Cloverfields' Carriage, The Remarkable Wreck of the "Thomas Hyke," My Bull-Calf, The Discourager of Hesitancy (sequel to "The Lady, or The Tiger?") and A Borrowed Month (East and West)

The most talked of novel published for several years. "Frank R. Stockton's books are inimitable." 1 vol., 12mo.....$1.50

THE LATE MRS. NULL.

Mr. Brander Matthews's collection of bright and ingenious stories, published at once in paper and cloth editions. Paper, 50 cents; cloth.....$1.00

A SECRET OF THE SEA, AND OTHER STORIES.

Few books have warmer friends than Mr. H. C. Bunner's novelette. It is a story which is making and broadening its audience every day. 1 vol., 1mo.....$1.00

THE MIDGE.

Mr. Stevenson's story has reached its twenty-seventh thousand. Paper, 25 cents; cloth.....$1.00

STRANGE CASE OF DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE.

 These books are for sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by*

Charles Scribner's Sons,

43--745 Broadway, New York.

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.

NEW BOOKS!

That Quisset House. By Jennie M. Drinkwater Conklin. 12mo....$1.50

UNIFORM WITH AND BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

Electa.	$1.50	Tessa Wadsworth	$1.50
Fifteen.	1.50	Pek's First Corner	1.50
Miss Prudence	1.50	Story of Hannah	1.50
Rue's Helps.	1.50	Not Bread Alone.	1.25
Only Ned.	1.25	Fred and Jeanie.	1.25

Bible Warnings. By the Rev. Richard Newton, D.D. 6 illustrations. 12mo..... 1.25

My Pearl. A Story by Alida W. Graves 12mo..... 1.25

The Gillettes. By the Author of "Win and Wear." 16mo.

1 Dick the Captain ...75c. 3 Jack, who Persevered.....75c.
2 Nan, the Missionary.75c. 4 Bert the Enterprising.....75c.

The Slave Girl of Pompeii. Holt..... .60

Madge Hardwicke. Giberne... 1.00

Storm Signals. New sermons. Spurgeon..... 1.00

My Sermon Notes. III. Matthew to Acts. By Spurgeon..... 1.00

All of Grace. By Spurgeon..... .50

Hodge on Romans. 8vo. New edition..... 3.00

Dr. Hanna's Life of Christ. New edition 3 vols..... 3.00

Fraser's Synoptical Lectures on the Books of the Bible. 3 vols..... 4.50

* Any of the above sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF

STEPPING HEAVENWARD.

BY MRS. E. PRENTISS.

12mo, 432 Pages. Cloth, $1. By mail, $1.10

Originally published in 1869, this book at once attracted wide attention. It has been translated into the French, German, Norwegian and Swedish Languages. More than have been sold in the United States, while the sales in England and the Colonies have been very large, no less than five English publishers having reprinted it. In this country there is still a large, constant demand for it. The present edition, complete in every respect, is issued in response to many inquiries for a cheaper edition.

75,000 COPIES

ALSO A NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION OF

The Life and Letters of Mrs. Prentiss

Crown 8vo, 575 pages, with steel portrait and five illustrations. Cloth, $1.50; by mail, $1.65.

The demand for a cheaper edition of this remarkable Memoir, of which have already been sold in the United States and Great Britain, has led to the present issue. Complete in every respect.

20,000 COPIES

The two books will be sent by mail on the receipt of $2.50, or singly at the above-named price.

ANSON D. F. RANDOLPH & COMPANY,
38 West Twenty-third St., New York.

Local Agents wanted to sell these and other popular books. For terms and territory apply to the publishers.

HAVE YOU READ THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF

REV. CHARLES G. FINNEY?

If not, send for a copy. "Every student of divinity, every man and woman that would be a practical Christian, should read that book." Price $1.75. Published by

A. S. BARNES & CO., 111 William St., N.Y.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

Arnold, Constable & Co

Upholstery Department.

NOW OPEN, OUR

FALL IMPORTATION

of choice novelties in

Upholstery Fabrics,

Furniture Coverings,

Portierres, Window Draperies, etc

An Early Inspection Solicited.

RETAIL EXPOSITION

Of Elegant Fall Novelties

in FINE DRESS GOODS, viz.: Rich Fancy Silk and Wool Plushes, Beaded Effects, etc., adapted for Combination Suits. Also, an extensive assortment of New Plain Fabrics in the latest colorings.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

Issued September 1st.

A NEW EDITION OF

GOSPEL HYMNS

CONSOLIDATED.

With Words and Music.

☞ By the use of smaller type, the 426 Songs have been condensed into 304 pages, but the same order is preserved as in the original issue.

4 Cents in Tinted Paper Covers.
45 Cents in Boards.
50 Cents in Limp Cloth.

Add 5 cents each if ordered by mail.

The price of this favorite work is now so low that it can be adopted everywhere.

Former editions still published at old prices.

BIGLOW & MAIN, NEW YORK. | The John Church Co. CINCINNATI, O.

"OUR BABY'S First and Second Year."

By MARION HARLAND,

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,

REED & CARNRICK,
MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

Useful for Everybody.

MANY MISTAKES MENDED

IN READING, WRITING and SPEAKING.

12mo. 320 pages. $1 by mail.

N. TIBBALS & SONS, New York

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞ Distance no hindrance a we five Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

Upholstery Goods

RETAIL DEPARTMENT.

W. & J. SLOANE

Are now prepared to offer their new Importations in

Upholstery Goods

Suitable for CURTAINS, PORTIERES, and WALL HANGINGS.

They would also call attention to their assortment of fine

BROCATELLES,

which for beauty of design and richness of coloring cannot be excelled.

Special designs and estimates furnished if desired.

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

NEW YORK.

James M'Creery & Co.

display this week a special shipment of rich Plush and Wool Fabrics for the Fall and Winter Season.

A very large stock of Black Silks in the newest and most approved weaves are now on exhibition.

Special notice is given of a great sale in their Linen Department. Fine Bleached Table Damasks will be offered at 50 cts., 65 cts., 75 cts., 85 cts., and $1 per yard, also a great variety of fine Table-cloths, Napkins, Towels, etc., at a large discount from regular prices.

Mail orders receive prompt attention.

Broadway and 11th Street, New York.

RECENT ISSUES

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NEW EDITION OF

WHAT IS PRESBYTERIAN LAW?

(REVISED AND ENLARGED.)

Containing the Decisions of the General Assembly to 1885, inclusive.

By Rev. J. ASPINWALL HODGE, D.D.
12mo. Price, $1.75.

AMONG THE TREES AT ELMRIDGE

A sprightly book for boys and girls, about our forest and fruit trees.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.

CHERIE'S ANSWERED PRAYER.

Carries the reader to a village in France, and opening to him a form of life new and instructive.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

WALTER HARMSEN.

A thrilling story of Reformation days in the Netherlands.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

Glittering Gold Quartz

Just as taken from the Mines in the Rocky Mountains, made into beautiful Scarf pins. To quickly introduce, price only 33c., post paid. Address, H. H. TAMMEN, Mineralogist, DENVER, COLO.
Send Stamp for large illust'd. catalogue of Mineral Cabinets, Agate Novelties, Indian Relics, etc. Trade Supplied.

BARIUM INDIGO BLUE.

Its merits as a WASH BLUE have been fully tested and endorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask him for it. A. S. WALTER & CO., Prop's., 29 N. Second St., Phil., Pa.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

A Believer's Prayer.

MORE of the Spirit's upholding,
More trust that He guides His own.
More of His deeply-wrought moulding
Of each thought and act and tone.

More of the strenuous willing
To place our treasures above.
More of the patient fulfilling
Of the royal law of love.

More of the conscious compelling
Of the lost sheep to come in.
More of the Spirit's indwelling
In the power that conquers sin.

More of the tenderer bearing
"A dying Christ on the heart;"
So more of the Christ-like sharing
Of the weaker brother's part.

More of the Spirit's unfolding
Of the wondrous words of grace.
More of the blissful beholding
Of the risen Saviour's face.

MARY C. GATES.

The Love of Christ Constraineth Us.

WHAT is the strongest personal motive power on earth? Not fear, not conscience, not ambition, not resentment against injustice, although each in its degree exerts a powerful influence over our actions and sways our moods. Love is always the strongest incentive, the most absorbing emotion, the all-conquering victor.

"Love took up the harp of life and smote on all the chords with might, Smote the chord of self, which trembling, passed in music out of sight."

Whether love, as a motive force, shall be potential for good or for evil, depends largely upon its object. Love for one who is unworthy insensibly lowers the whole tone of the lover. But when love expends itself on one who is altogether good, whose example is flawless, and with whom association is educational in the noblest directions, the character is elevated and the life grows daily richer and fuller. So, when the love of Christ constraineth us, the Master Himself so much our companion that we are apart from Him in no waking hour, that we refer to Him our perplexities and carry to Him our burdens, when it is our prayer to be ever more assimilated in every way with Him, we are made strong for the conflict and fearless for the result. Then we do not stop to think of consequences, but if the Lord shows us a duty, we take hold of it; if we see a friend in peril, we speak to Him; if we can sow the good seed, it is our delight to do so, looking forward to the day when

"We shall come rejoicing, bringing in the sheaves."

Ah! friends, satisfied so easily with poor sterile lives, are we not wrong in that we do not pray for a larger measure of the constraining love of Christ?

CRYSTAL.

That Seat in the Horse-Car.

IT was a "new experience," as the instinctive utterance of the younger woman indicated, and, were it not for the unimpeachable character of the ladies concerned, the statement of such an unheard of affair might be received with some degree of allowance. "The lady made a mistake in yielding the seat; he had no right to it," responds a gentleman who had been reading the article.

It is a matter of common observation by strangers, that in the cars of New York city there is a great lack of deference to women. This may be partly owing to the fact that in this crowded metropolis the cars are frequently filled to overflowing by wearied and busy men and women who represent all classes, and true gentlemanly courtesy does not always receive its proper acknowledgment. The temptation to indifference must be very great even on the part of the most courtly of his sex. Indeed, we are not quite sure that the ideal personage esteemed as the gentleman of the old school, could stand the test sometimes put forth by those whom nature has classed as the gentler sex. We are, however, slow to believe that the noble specimen of humanity whom we reverence intuitively, does not experience some inward perturbation, as seated comfortably he endeavors to hide behind the big newspaper, while the woman on the other side of the improvised screen struggles to maintain a poise. If her face betrays a loss of patience, his studied manner shows as well a loss of perfect satisfaction with himself. This is at least encouraging.

The conduct of the gentleman in question is as suggestive as it is novel, it is a thing that runs deeper than the surface. Is there not a tendency on the part of some of our sex to expect a little more than a rightful share? With advantages afforded for education of a higher order than was considered necessary in the days of our grandmothers, and with opportunities for competition in many directions equalized between men and women, while we forget not the old we ask for that degree of deference, and more besides. If our sphere in life is the same as that accorded men, if it is our place to conduct large public meetings and stand side by side with men in addressing mixed assemblies, if women continue to claim certain rights that some do claim, then we must be content to receive from men in public places such treatment as men are apt to yield one to another, and the old ideal of womanhood must necessarily be changed.

In our Southern cities, where this development is not so marked, the mutual deference of the sexes in public is more conspicuous. In Baltimore a lady is never allowed to remain standing in a car unless the seats happen to be crowded with those of her own sex, while her fare is very likely to be deposited for her by some hand perhaps not spotless, but possessed by one who beneath a rough exterior cherishes a high regard for woman.

Charity for this very peculiar individual leads us to the conclusion that he has been carefully considering matters, and has determined to place himself among the foremost to have things readjusted. If so, we thank him for the heroic venture, and offer him the endorsement of some who still claim to be old fashioned women.

IRENE.

Cultivated All Round.

A PARAGRAPH in a late issue of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER gave me a notion that you might be glad to hear of some girls who have not allowed mathematics, Latin, Greek, physics, or metaphysics, to interfere with the cultivation of domestic graces and accomplishments.

Last June a girl of eighteen graduated with every honor. She was valedictorian of her class and the pride of family and friends. The other day her pastor and his wife received an invitation to supper. Everything on the table,—bread, coffee, chicken, preserves, cake,—was cooked by this young graduate. "It was a splendid supper," the minister told me. "It was quite simple," added his wife; "the charm was in the perfect cooking. Everything was de licious."

A bright young lady, afterward employed on the editorial staff of a prominent magazine, in reply to the question, "What is your favorite occupation?" said, with a laugh, "Making cake." A very good cake it is said to be.

Perhaps it is because these occasional paragraphs ordinarily emanate from a male editor that greater stress is laid upon cookery than upon the equally important art of sewing. Somebody has said that the masculine prescription for all feminine puzzles and woes is, "Learn to cook." Yet, while for many of us the necessity to exercise our culinary skill is only occasional, the ready needle must fly in and out for many hours of the week.

I have in my drawer a delicate, transparent handkerchief, lace-trimmed, and adorned with much fine hem-stitching, wrought by the same skilful hand which has painted daisies and bright sprays on my neck ribbon. And why not?

Have we not heard also of Mary Clemmer's parlor curtains, representing more than one hundred yards of careful hand-sewing? To be sure, "Avis" hated sewing, and some may not be aware that this feeling is common to young girls, with few exceptions. "Sewing, the girl's aversion, the woman's consolation," I think Miss Mulock said. Some of us were mightily pleased when Mrs. Prentiss' "Flower of the Family" confessed that she was proud of her sewing, because she disliked the work, yet had learned to do it well. When such a distaste has existed, a beautiful, regular buttonhole, or a neat hem, held by invisible stitches, is a real triumph.

AGNES L. CARTER.

A New Departure.

MATRONS will be interested in this novel proposition of a Massachusetts housekeeper, who has recently petitioned Congress to allow her to relieve herself from her domestic perplexities in her own way. Her memorial, duly presented in her behalf by Senator Hoar, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES:

I address you this petition as an American citizen with no little mortification, as I keenly realize that in no other country in the world, monarchial, republican or pagan, would such a petition be necessary. Under the pressure of my necessity I beg to state the following facts:

I am physically unable to perform my household work. During a long residence in China as the wife of a missionary, I have been accustomed to Chinese servants. I know the peace and comfort possible with them. One cook served us during the entire twenty years we lived in China. I have made many efforts to secure good and needed service from the help found in this land. I have given four years' patient trial to those of every nationality, not excepting our own. I have paid the highest usual wages, have planned my work with a view to my servants' comfort, have treated them with courtesy and kindness, keeping in mind the Golden Rule, have paid them promptly, and in return have only asked that they do properly the work they have agreed to perform. But all in vain! not one has seemed to feel under the slightest obligation to give any fair return for wages received, or to have the slightest regard to my interests. Untidiness, badly cooked food, waste, breakage, impertinence and disobedience have exhausted my purse and my patience, and imperilled the comfort and health of myself and my family.

Notwithstanding the fact that in China our servants loved us and left our employ reluctantly, I might still think that in some way I am unwittingly to blame for this unhappy state of affairs had I not found in a very extended acquaintance in this country that my experience is simply that of the large majority of the housekeepers of this land. So I can see no prospect of improvement.

Therefore, in view of the above facts, which I most unwillingly lay before your honorable body, I earnestly petition that you will make an exception to the Anti Chinese law in my favor and allow me to import a Chinese servant. It is the only solution of the problem of housekeeping in this country now.

I herewith promise your honorable body that I will import neither a pauper, criminal or idle person, nor one who will ever become such or fall upon the public for support or burial. I promise that he will be a person who will obey our laws in every particular and will not degrade white labor by accepting low wages, for I propose to pay him the highest price given in my neighborhood.

MRS. S. L. BALDWIN.

NO. 85 LEXINGTON ST., East Boston, Mass.

Diet Kitchen in New York.

FROM Lend-a-Hand, the new magazine which is devoted to practical philanthropy, and of which Edward Everett Hale is editor, we quote some interesting particulars about a very practical charity, viz., the diet dispensary:

"It was from experience of the too common starvation of the sick poor, on the unfit food which alone their homes afforded, that a few kindly women set about the organization of diet kitchens in the city of New York, which should be adjuncts to the dispensaries and administer that most potent of medicines, palatable and nourishing food.

"The pioneer kitchen was opened in East Twenty-third street, a poor quarter of the city, in the early spring of 1873. This was prepared to furnish, on the written requisition of the dispensary physicians attending the sick poor, supplies of brandy, beef tea, milk, soup, rice, farina, eggs, milk-punch, oat meal, hominy and barley. During the first year of the existence of the society, 225 patients applied for relief and nearly 1,600 requisitions were issued, each patient being entitled to food for several days. During its tenth year of service the society relieved over 6,300 patients and filled nearly 45,000 requisitions.

"In 1874 a second kitchen was opened in connection with the northwestern dispensary on the west side of the city. Two years after, the centennial year was fitly celebrated by the opening of a third kitchen in Centre street, on the border of a miserably poor and degraded quarter. An appeal from the German Society of New York to alleviate the suffering of the great German settlement on the east side, was met in 1884 by the establishment of a fourth kitchen in connection with the German dispensary.

"Free soup kitchens for the poor, established by philanthropic people in times of special need, had been found to breed pauperism and crime, and it was at first feared that imposture would be stimulated by the gifts of the diet kitchens. But the matrons selected to manage them were clear-headed, energetic and tireless. They made personal visits to the homes of the beneficiaries, discovered and dismissed imposters and encouraged the worthy. Moreover, they brought to the notice of the society cases of special need and of want of work or other involuntary helplessness.

"District visitors sent by the society went from house to house among the sick, showing the listless inmates how to keep order and cleanliness even in their "hived-up" quarters, how to make beds, how to control ventilation and even how properly to boil the kettle.

"Nobody who once saw the line of pallid women and children who came with their battered pails and broken pitchers, to ask food for their sick during the first winter of the first diet kitchen, will ever forget the vision of want and woe evoked by these shabby figures. But it was soon noticeable that this way of giving did not lower the self-respect of the receiver. Before long it was perceived that the applicants were a little cleaner in appearance, a little better-mannered, and, if their rags had a melancholy perplexity of sameness, they seemed to be worn with a difference.

"In the twelve years of its work this society has come to be recognized by the guild of physicians as its best ally. One of the most distinguished of them declared, before the Academy of Medicine, that if half the drug stores and all the liquor stores could be turned into diet kitchens, the health of the city would be assured. The society has seen the death rate of the city steadily decrease in consequence of its labors. It has lowered the misery rate incalculably. It has roused the instinct of self-help in helpless men and women. It has found work for willing and idle hands. It has set happy and fortunate girls and women, in sheltered homes and in quiet country places, to thinking and planning to relieve those who will never even hear the names of their benefactors."

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

No.

SOMEBODY asked me to take a drink.
What did I tell him? What do you think?
I told him—No!

Somebody asked me one day to play
A game of cards; and what did I say?
I told him—No!

Somebody laughs that I will not swear
And lie and steal! but I did not care.
I told him—No!

Somebody asked me to take a sail
On the Sabbath day; 'twas of no avail.
I told him—No!

"If sinners entice thee, consent thou not,"
My Bible said, and so on the spot
I told him—No! —Morning Light.

The Chimpanzee.

Once in three years came the navy of Tarshish, bringing gold and silver, ivory and apes and peacocks.—1 KINGS 10:22.

A FEW days ago I stood with a friend near the terrace in Central Park. We had been admiring the beautiful lotus and the other lilies in the fountain, and were considering what objects of interest we should next visit. A very courteous policeman came to our aid; "Go and see the chimpanzee," said he, "and some other monkeys which have lately come." He also kindly directed us to the monkey house, and informed us that the distance thither was not great. We would have a pleasant six minutes' walk. After leaving the Mall—on reaching a bridge at our left and passing under—the animals would soon come into view. We thanked him, and said we would follow his advice and directions.

We found the Zoological Gardens without difficulty, but they were not so near as we had hoped. Our pedometer had been left at home, and we had not thought of looking at our watch—as we started from the terrace neither did it occur to us that this friendly policeman probably measured other people's steps by his own. After a time we inquired of a passer-by how far away were the animals. "About six minutes' walk," he pleasantly replied.

We kept on, but at length sat down to rest near several patient donkeys—saddled and standing ready for children to mount and ride. They received our petting as if they were accustomed to no other treatment. We praised them, saying, however, to each other, that in our opinion they were not as fine looking as our Esau and Jacob at home. We think there are no donkeys in the world superior to ours. It is natural we should think so, for we are very much attached to them. They have each very distinctly marked crosses extending down their backs, in shape like the one on which our dear Lord was crucified. I never look at these crosses without thinking of that day when He rode on an animal like one of these into the city of Jerusalem, while the people cried, "Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest."

An Israelitish ruler rode one of these animals in times of peace, instead of a horse, which was employed in war. Jesus, you know, is the Prince of Peace. He says to all His people who acknowledge Him as their ruler: "My peace I give unto you. It is a 'peace which passeth all understanding.'"

The poet William Wordsworth has written a story in verse of a wicked man named Peter Bell, who was very cruel to his good donkey. He became one day exceedingly sorry for all the evil he had done; so Wordsworth adds, addressing the donkey:

"'Tis said, meek Beast, that through heaven's grace,
He not unmoved did notice now
The cross upon thy shoulder scored,
For lasting impress, by the Lord
To whom all human-kind shall bow—

"Memorial of His touch—that day
When Jesus humbly deigned to ride,
Entering the proud Jerusalem
By an immeasurable stream
Of shouting people deified."

But this is only a pretty legend; the donkeys carried crosses on their backs before that day, of course.

I could easily fill all the columns of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, talking of the animals and birds I saw in the Zoological Gardens when we reached there, though I must not mention one of them, except the chimpanzee.

You will not be surprised to hear that the monkey house was crowded with men, women and children. The chimpanzee was entertaining them, greatly to their enjoyment, and seemingly its own. It was a black ape, with eyes wide open, ears standing out prominently on each side of its head, flattened nostrils, and lips which could be pushed out, drawn in and extended, to express the owner's various emotions of pain or pleasure. When its hands rested on the floor of its cage, its knuckles were used instead of the palms to assist it in walking; the arms were very long in proportion to the body, and very strong. The ape was very agile in its movements, swinging itself from side to side of the cage by means of the ropes hanging from the roof. Its voice sounded loud and shrill. Like all other apes it had no tail. It must have been young, for had it been nine or ten years old it would have been four or five feet tall. It was much shorter.

The home of the chimpanzee is in Western Africa, on the banks of the Gambia, and in Congo. Naturalists give it a Greek name, Troglodytes, a diver into caverns, because it chooses a cave or rock for its abode. Ancient naturalists, Aristotle, Plato and others, gave this name to a very low species of the human race, perhaps the little Bushman who lives in the same country as the chimpanzee; but

"With us a common nature owns
An upright form and heavenward face."

The chimpanzee is called a Quadrumana or four-handed animal, though the hands are really paws. It travels about on all fours. Only man has two hands. Only man has two feet for walking. Only man has what you and I call a nose. There are foolish people living to-day, who would have us believe that the resemblance between a chimpanzee and the lowest barbarian is so real that they must be related to each other; indeed, they say their own ancestors were only apes. Well, if they choose to claim such ancestry for themselves, let them do so; but you and I will believe the Bible, which tells us that we were created in God's own image, and when we think of the poor Bushman or Hottentot, we will say:

"Have we not all one Father? Yea.
Hath not one God created us?
How are we better then than he,
Barbarian, not favored thus?

"His coarser appetites may crave
Coarse food on which his body feeds,
But he, too, has a soul to save
With similar immortal needs.

"Despise not him for whom Christ died,
However low, despise him not.
Dear, doubtless, to the Crucified
Is the benighted Hottentot."

King Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived, would have looked upon modern philosophers as being the most foolish of mankind, if they had told him the apes which his ships were bringing from Tarshish every three years were distant relations of himself and of them. He was certainly a very learned naturalist, and was better acquainted with the monkey tribe than these evolutionists, so called, of our day. True, there were no monkeys, baboons and apes in Palestine, except such as were brought there as curiosities from foreign lands; but King Solomon was so wealthy he could send his fleets to distant countries, and pay high prices to men who would capture for him all the specimens that he desired.

The Hebrew word Kophim, translated apes in our Bibles, it is thought was applied to any species of monkey, with a tail or without one. Of course, if it only meant apes, the chimpanzee of Africa and the orang-outan of Sumatra and the gibbons and even the gorilla, the largest of apes, might be among them.

That delightful writer on natural history, Rev. J. G. Wood, tells us that he believes the "Tarshish" country here mentioned was Ceylon, and that the ships also visited India. In both places gold, silver, and elephants with ivory tusks, and peacocks and monkeys were plentiful. If the monkeys living in Ceylon and India were chosen for the king, he tells us that two of these were probably the Rhesus and the Entellus, monkeys reverenced by the Hindoos; the latter being worshipped in some parts of India, as monkeys were worshipped in the days of the ancient Egyptians. It is a yellow monkey with a black face, somewhat pretty, and plays amusing tricks.

Another monkey, the Wanderoo, sometimes called the lion tailed baboon, because it has a huge mane and a tail also resembling a lion's, a very sedate fellow, honored for its fancied wisdom, as the Athenians honored the owl, must certainly be included as among King Solomon's monkeys. The bonnet monkeys, whose hair is so arranged that it forms a sort of bonnet or cap, were probably among them also.

I do think the chimpanzee would have interested King Solomon and amused him, also, as much as any of these. It becomes very gentle and docile when domesticated. It enjoys being handsomely clothed, and although living upon fruits and vegetables in its native land will, it is said, eat and drink whatever we do. It can be trained to do wonders.

If you are as fond of natural history as I am, and want to know more about the chimpanzee, you will find a great deal to interest you in a book for boys and girls, published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York, written by Olive Thorne Miller, and named "Queer Pets." E. S. C.

AN EMINENT NATURALIST lives at Reading, Pa. He is a stonecutter, a day laborer, but known all over the world as an authority on butterflies. His scientific labors, it is said, are done at night after his day's work is over, and on Sundays. He makes his own drawings on stone, writes his own descriptive matter, and does the printing himself. He has the largest collection of butterflies in the world. Two years ago he published a catalogue of North American species of butterflies, which is the most complete ever issued. He has collectors in every known land. In his collection are hundreds of specimens which no other museum possesses.

"I WON'T."—A man, looking up from sawing his wood, saw his little son turning two boys out of the yard. "See here! what are you about, George?" asked the man. "I'm turning two swearers out of the yard, father," said George. "I said I would not play with swearers, and I won't." That is the right time and place to say "I won't." We wish every boy would take the same stand—No play with swearers. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain."

How Is It?

ARE there ten thousand childen,
Filled with a zeal intense,
Ready for Christ to offer
Their labors, their prayers, their pence?

For the gifts and the prayers of the children,
Gathered in one strong band,
Could conquer the world for Jesus,
And make it a holy land!

Little Heads Together.

ZIGZAG.

1. An apostle. 2. A mountain of Moab. 3. A dwelling. 4. A small insect spoken of in the Gospel of Matthew. 5. A patriarch. 6. A Canaanite at whose threshing-floor a solemn mourning was held over the remains of Jacob. 7. A place where John baptized. 8. An evangelist. 9. A word mentioned in Exodus 33:11. 10. The first son of Adam. Zigzag.—The first five books of the Bible. "ITTALIE."

SQUARE WORD.

1. Something that you eat. 2. A prominent member of the vegetable kingdom. 3. Inhabitants of muddy water. 4. A point of the compass. V.

PI.

Moes fo ruoy trsuh uyo vahe rcude,
Nda hte pharsste uyo llist vhae, rsuvveid
Tub thaw mortnets fo feirg yuo dendeur
Rmof vslie hhicw vreen rarvdie!

Answers to Puzzles of September 8th.

Charade.—Wind-ward.

Diamond.—

P
B U D
B E Z E L
P U Z Z L E S
D E L V E
L E E
S

Crossword.—Washington.

Original puzzles for this department are solicited. Address Cousin LOIS, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Sept. 28th.

THE Associated Banks increased loans last week $178,100, gained in specie $2 550 600 and in deposits $1,323,400, and reduced legal tenders $822,000. The surplus of reserve was increased $1 397,750, making it $9 079,875. Money on call 5 to 6 per cent....Imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $7 512 259, and exports at $7,600,142 The imports of gold amounted to $318,522, of silver to $4 998; the export of gold to $10,600, of silver to $153,222. Foreign exchange was dull through the week, but the rates were increased to $4.83 for 60 day bills and $4.86 for demand for sterling. Rates yesterday were $4.82 and $4 85 ....The Stock Market continues strong and active. Under sales to realize profits, prices drop, and again recover. Railroad earnings continue satisfactory. ....Western farmers continue to market their grain. The visible supply shows an increase for the week of 2,056,551 bushels of wheat, 186,470 of corn and 244 161 of oats. Quotations yesterday were for October cereals: Wheat here 84 1-8, in Chicago 73; corn here 46 5-8, in Chicago 36 7-8; oats here 31 5-8, in Chicago 25 3-8. Cotton closed: Oct. 9 25-26; Nov. 9 30-31. Hay and straw steady....The Treasury calls $15,00.0000 3 per cents, to be redeemed Nov. 1st.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

SATURDAY, 25.—A party of moonlighters were arrested by the police in Kerry County, Ireland ...A member of Parliament declares that there will be no end of evictions and cruel coersions in Ireland....A strong endeavor is being made by the Bulgarian government to check Russian plots.... Prince Alexander was received with popular ovations at Frankfort, Germany ...Sir William White, the distinguished diplomat, is to be the British Ambassador at Constantinople....An explosion of fire-damp in a coal-pit near Schalke, Germany, killed forty-five persons and wounded sixteen. ...Two schooners collided near Newfoundland. One schooner was lost and five persons drowned....Three thousand of the diseased cattle in Chicago are to be killed. ....The report of an alleged treaty between Canada and the United States is denied by the authorities....Rioting was again resumed in Peabody, Mass., by the strikers last night. Several officers were injured. ....The price of coal is to be advanced the first of October... A young wife in Baltimore killed herself on account of her fear of insanity....Cowles, who was tried for the murder of a hackman in New York, was convicted of manslaughter in the third degree....A gang of rough men broke in one liquor store and attacked the proprietor of another on the west side of New York.... Falling rock in the iron mine at Jayesville, N. Y., killed two men and badly injured another....Two Knight Templars during the recent conclave in St. Louis were killed. ....Bartholomew's defalcation grows larger.

MONDAY, 27.—Mr. Parnell has addressed a letter to Mr. Fitzgerald, President of the Irish National Land League in America, advising him of the imminence of a crisis and of a peril which have seldom been equalled even in the troubled history of Ireland....Russia and Germany are working to remove the Sultan from Constantinople to Cairo ...Another riot in Belfast. Many arrests were made and one young man shot....It has been announced that Fenians intend to burn Hull in twenty different places....Earthquake shocks were felt in Turkey yesterday. Slight damage done.... New disclosures of Democratic official misconduct in Ohio. ..The Charleston people returned to their churches yesterday for worship. They show little fear of Wiggins' storm which he has predicted for the 29th of September....Jesse Philips, one of the richest men in Sharp County, Ark., and his son, have been arrested on the charge of poisoning eleven persons by throwing "Rough on Rats" in a well and the people drinking of the water....Great damage by rain has been done to the cotton crop in Texas....The condition of the people in the northwestern part of Texas is alarming. Half a million people in different counties are on the verge of starvation and many have died. It is desired to obtain 100,000 bushels of seed wheat for this fall's sowing. Special collections will be taken up next Sunday in some of the New York churches in behalf of the Texas people....Hotels and cottages destroyed by fire at Rockaway Beach. Loss $80,000, with little or no insurance

TUESDAY, 28.—Bulgarian affairs still disturb Europe....Rumors of increased power to be given the Jesuits by the Papacy.... French Romanists assailed in China ... Earthquake shock yesterday afternoon in Charleston, and in Savannah and Augusta, ... Cattle men try to evade the quarantine at Chicago. Authorities vigilant.... John Esten Cooke, the author, died yesterday of typhoid fever, at Boyce, Va....General Arthur returns to his home in this city; is still feeble.. .Political cauldron boiling.

Mr. C. P. Huntington, the well-known financier, is erecting a memorial chapel at West Chester, N. Y. Messrs. J. & R. Lamb, the church decorators, of New York, have the contract for the entire glass work, the three windows back of the pulpit comprising the most important part of this. The central window contains the figure of the Good Shepherd, holding a lamb in His arms. In the upper part is the Cross encircled by the Gloria, and in the lower part the Chi-Rho set against a back ground of the Passion Flower. The side panels display figures of angels, kneeling in an attitude of adoration. In the lower part are seen the symbols of the Alpha and Omega. These windows are to be carried out in Opalescent, Venetian and Antique glass, and to be treated in a very rich and brilliant scheme of coloring. The remainder of the glass is to be comparatively simple in treatment; geometric designs from carefully selected shades of Venetian with bits of Antique, the general scheme of color to be in golden and amber.

We take pleasure in recommending to our readers an article which has in the last five years done more than anything we recall at present, to relieve the hardest of woman's work of much of its toil and drudgery. We refer to James Pyle's Pearline Washing Compound. The immense consumption of this article is sufficient proof of its utility, and experience has taught us that it is far superior to soap. We are not given to enthusiasm over many of these new ideas, but a fair trial will convince the most skeptical of the merits of Pearline.

FOR DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Publisher's Department.

Rheumatism and the Gout, cease their twinges, if the affected part is daily washed with Glenn's Sulphur Soap, which banishes pain and renders the joints and muscles supple and elastic. It is at the same time a very effective clarifier and beautifier of the skin.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

That feeling of extreme debility is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla. "I was tired all over, but Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me new life and strength," says a Pawtucket, R. I., lady. Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5.

Ayer's Hair Vigor promotes the growth and improves the beauty of the hair. This preparation stimulates the roots of the hair, cleanses the scalp, prevents the accumulation of dandruff, and restores to faded and gray hair its original color.

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

MARRIAGES.

CARPENTER—DRAKE.—At Cuddebackville, N. Y., Sept. 15, by Rev. H. Hageman, Samuel Carpenter, of Nongaup, to Danetta Drake, of Forestburgh.

DEWITT—DURDICK.—At Huguenot N. Y., Sept. 22, by Rev. H. Hageman, Cornelius Dewitt, of Robertsonville, N. Y., to Mary Burdick, of Port Jervis, N. Y.

VAN DE LUISTER—EIZENBURG.—On Sept. 18, by Rev. A. Vennema, John Van de Luister and Minnie Eizenburg, all of Kalamazoo, Mich.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

VAN RENSSELAER.—The following resolutions have been adopted by the Consistory of the Third Reformed Church of Albany.

Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God to remove from this life Mrs. C. G. Van Rensselaer, who was for many years a faithful worshipper and a consistent communicant in the Third Reformed Church of Albany; be it therefore

Resolved, That we, the officers of the Third Reformed Church of Albany, do hereby express our appreciation of her many estimable and beautiful graces of character; and also, that we hereby give expression to our sorrow for the loss of one who was devoted to the interests of our church, and who earnestly labored and prayed for her welfare. Be it also

Resolved, That we extend our sincere sympathy to the afflicted family, and tenderly commend them to the God of all grace, who has comfort and sympathy for bereaved hearts. Be it also

Resolved, That we assemble at the Third Reformed Church on Wednesday afternoon, and attend the funeral services in a body.

Resolved, That this action of Consistory be published in a morning and an evening paper of the city of Albany, and also in the New York CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER; and also, that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

JOS. PAIGE DAVIS, President.

Also signed by the Consistory.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THE Hudson River Ministerial Association will meet in the Reformed Church of Schodack Landing, Monday, October 4th, at 3 P M. Monday, 3.30 P.M., exegesis by Rev. C. Van Santvoord, D.D., of 1 Tim. 3:16. Monday, 7.30 P.M., sermon by Rev. W. H. Vroom. Tuesday, 10 30 A.M., essay by Rev. T. S. Brown Topic, "Relation of the Church and Young Men's Christian Associations." Members expecting to attend will please send postal to Rev. H. A. Hendrickson, Schodack Landing, N. Y.

J. B. DRURY, Sec.

THE CLASSIS OF CAYUGA.—The regular fall meeting of the Classis of Cayuga will be held in the Reformed Church of Utica on Tuesday Oct. 5th, at 7.30 P.M. C. O. THATCHER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GENEVA will meet in stated fall session in the Reformed Church of Tyre, the first Tuesday (5th) of October, at 3 P.M. Vacant churches to report, and Classical dues to be paid in at this session.

The brethren will be met on the arrival of the A.M. trains at Seneca Falls and at Clyde, and conveyed to the place of meeting the day Classis convenes J. WHITBECK. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 5th, at 11 A.M., in the Church of Rochester. Sermon by the retiring President, Rev. W. H. Vroom. Classical dues should be paid by the several churches.

DEWITT B. WYCKOFF, S. C.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Williamsburgh, (Rev. Dr. Terhune's), on the third Tuesday of October, (19th), at 10 o'clock A.M.

W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular fall session at East New York, L. I., on the third Tuesday of October, (19th), at 10 o'clock A.M. Classical assessment to be paid at this meeting. R. G. STRONG, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK will meet in stated session in the North Reformed Church of Newark, on Tuesday, October 12th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial records are to be presented and Classical dues paid. HENRY VEHSLAGE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 19th, in the Suydam Street Church, (Rev. Dr. Campbell's), in the city of New Brunswick, at 9.30 A.M. Rev. James LeFevre will preach the sermon.

E. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in regular session on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10 o'clock A.M., in the lecture-room of the church, 5th avenue and 29th street. All applications for Classical aid must be sent to the undersigned, corner of Lexington avenue and East 81st street, at least ten days before the date of meeting.

OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in fall session at Cuddebackville, Tuesday, October 19th, at 2 P.M. Carriages will meet delegates at Guyward at 11.25 A.M. Consistorial minutes must be presented and Classical dues paid. The subject for religious meeting in the evening, "Infant Baptism and the Religious Training of the Young." Revs. Schoonmaker and Darrach to open the discussion.

R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE Rev. J. W. Warnshuis will be installed (D.V.) as pastor of the Holland Church of Passaic, on Sunday, October 3d, at 2 P.M. The Rev. John Gaston, primarius, and the Rev. J. H. Whitehead, secundus, to preside and read the form; the Rev. J. Huyssoon, primarius, and the Rev. L. Jongeeneel, secundus, to preach the sermon.

....At the adjourned meeting of Classis of Paramus to be held at West New Hempstead, N. Y., on October 5th, at 2.30 P.M., for the ordination and installation of Mr. John Laubenheimer, the Rev. D. M. Talmage will preside and read the form; the Rev. N. H. Van Arsdale will preach the sermon, and the Rev. John C. Van Deventer will conduct the devotional exercises.

....An adjourned meeting of the Classis of Paramus will be held in the Church of West New Hempstead on Tuesday, October 5th, at 2.30 P.M. Delegates who expect to arrive by train will please notify Aaron Blauvelt, Esq., Monsey, N. Y., and will be met at Suffern on the arrival of the train leaving New York at 10.15 A.M.

JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PASSAIC will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Boonton, on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial records should be presented and Classical dues paid at this meeting. Rev. B. W. Tellier, (D. V.,) will preach the Classical sermon. S. T. SEARLE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in stated session at Addisville, Pa., the third Tuesday in October, 19th, at 11.30 A.M. Conveyances will meet delegates at Somerton, on Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, at 10.17, and those leaving Philadelphia at 9.40 will be met at Churchville at 10.23.

S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Church of Cold Spring, on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10 30 A.M. Consistorial minutes to be presented and dues to be paid.

A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will hold its stated fall session in the Second Reformed church in Somerville, N. J., on the second Tuesday, the 12th of October, 1886, at 10.30 A.M. Classical dues and bills of delegates are payable at this session.

JOHN F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 5th, at 10.30 A.M., at Schodack Landing. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting. EDWARD A. COLLIER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Blue Mountain on Tuesday, Oct. 5th, at 11 A.M. Rev. A. J. Sebring is Chairman of the Committee on Synodical Minutes. Classical dues are to be paid at this meeting.

Carriages will be in readiness at Saugerties station on the arrival of the 7 o'clock train from Kingston to convey members of Classis to the church.

J. N. VOORHIS, S. C.

CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER.—A regular meeting of the Classis of Westchester will be held in the Church of Fordham, N. Y city, on Tuesday, the 19th day of October, at 10 o'clock A.M. Rev. William E. Turner will preach the sermon.

C. K. CLEARWATER, S. C.

CORRESPONDENTS please address Rev B. C. Miller, Jr., at Bloomfield, N. J. (P. O. Box 276.)

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. J. W. Warnshuis at Passaic, N. J.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address Rev. J. Elmendorf, D.D, at 61 East 123d st., New York.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. G. D. Lydecker at Upper Red Hook, N. Y.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gage, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, three bottles of this medicine, have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendal T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

By Taking

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored, and she can now look steadily at a brilliant light without pain. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

FOR SALE.

A splendid 18-stop church organ, with two banks o keys and pedals. A great bargain. Also, several smaller organs. Send for a description to REUBEN NICHOLS, Builder. Warerooms, 32 and 33 Richmond St., Philadelphia Pa

JAMES PYLE'S

O K TRADE MARK

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.

Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS

and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.

No family, rich or poor, should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Pianoforte construction.

Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

A # MILLION

BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

Church Decoration.

Church Furnishing.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

J. & R. LAMB,

59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

HOW PRINTING PAYS

"The Proof of the Pudding," &c.

How richly it pays to own a Model Press is shown in a handsome little book, containing several hundred "proofs," from the 15,000 people who have Model Presses. Business men, Clergymen, Teachers, Boys, Girls, persons out of work,—everybody interested. A Press and Outfit complete, from $5.00 to $10.00 and up. Book mailed free. Address,

MODEL IMPROVED. The Model Press Co., Limited, 913 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

---

POPULAR LECTURES.

SUBJECTS

1.—The Romance of the Revolution.
2.—An Evening with Longfellow
3.—The Tudors
4.—Monologue—National Poems and Events

Address MRS. E. T. BARRETT,

SING SING, N. Y

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years will be sent free on application to the

Equitable Mortgage Co., 208 B'way, N.Y.

Faint but pure are nature's tones; deep but pure others. Our colors are natural in their purity of tone, natural in their power to last and like nature's colors they are ready mixed. $1.35 per gall. Cheap and good. The F. J. NASH M'F'G. CO., Nyack, Rockland Co., New York. Interesting Circulars Free. If your dealer refuses you these goods apply to us direct.

EDUCATIONAL.

BEST TEACHERS AMERICAN and FOREIGN, promptly provided for Families, Schools, Colleges Skilled Teachers supplied with Positions. Circulars of Good Schools free to Parents. School Property rented and sold. School and Kindergarten Material, etc.

J. W. SCHERMERHORN & CO.,

AMERICAN SCHOOL INSTITUTE, 7 East 14th St., N. Y

In answering this advertisement please mention the Christian Intelligencer.

BRIGHTON HEIGHTS SEMINARY, For Young Ladies, New Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y. GEO. W. COOK, Ph.D., Principal.

RAPID PREPARATION FOR COLLEGE OR BUSINESS BY PRIVATE INSTRUCTION.

J. Hasbrouck, A.M, New Brunswick, N.

The Misses Anable's

English, French and German Boarding and Day-School

WILL REOPEN SEPTEMBER 22D.

40 BAYARD ST., New Brunswick, N. J.

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE, BOSTON UNIVERSITY, Opens Oct. 14, '86.

Fourteenth Year. Furnishes superior facilities for thorough scientific and practical instruction in three and four years' courses. Entrance examinations, Oct. 11, 12 and 13. Send for announcements to

I. T. TALBOT, M.D, Dean.

Rutgers Female College,

58 West 55th street, commences 49th year September 22d. Rev. John Hall, D.D., President of the Board of Trustees. Boarding and Kindergarten Departments. Address the College.

ALEXANDER INSTITUTE White Plains, N.Y.

23 miles from New York City by rail. Fits boys for College or business pursuits. 30 to 40 pupils 5 Teachers. Board and Tuition per annum $400. For circulars, apply to the Principal, O. R. WILLIS, Ph.D.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

[Founded A.D. 1820.]

721 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.

REV. HENRY B. CHAPIN, PH.D., PRINCIPAL.

English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 67th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

HEMPSTEAD INSTITUTE.

Hempstead, Long Island, N. Y.

A Thorough English Boarding School for Boys. Primary, Intermediate, Higher English and Commercial Courses. Twenty-seventh year begins September 15. Catalogues sent on Application.

Riverview Academy,

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Prepares for College and the Government Academies, for Business and Social relations. Thorough Military Instruction. Springfield Cadet Rifles.

BISBEE & AMEN, Principals.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL, POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address

SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principal.

BAQUET INSTITUTE For Young Ladies and Children, Mount Holly, N. J. A thorough French and English Home School. Twelfth year begins September 15.

MISS HARRIET STUART BAQUET, PRINCIPAL.

YOUNG LADIES SEMINARY.

43d YEAR Begins Sept. 22.

Address F. CHANDLER, D. D., Prest. Freehold, N. J.

PEEKSKILL (N. Y.) MILITARY Academy.

CLASSIC COLLECTIONS OF PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

The following elegant and correct editions of celebrated musical works are in constant demand by good players.

BEETHOVEN'S SONATAS, LEBERT and VON BULOW EDITION. In paper, 2 vols. each,	$3.00
The same in Cloth, embossed, 2 vols. each,	$6.00
CHOPIN'S MAZURKAS. In paper,	$1.00
CHOPIN'S NOCTURNES. Cloth, $1.50, paper,	60 cts.
CHOPIN'S WALTZES. Cloth, $1.25, paper,	50 cts.
SCHUMANN'S ALBUM, Op. 68 and 15. paper,	$1.00
SONATINEN ALBUM, Fingered by Kohler. Cloth, $1.50, paper,	75 cts.
CLEMENTI'S SONATINAS. Op. 36, 37 & 38. paper,	50 cts.
KOHLER'S KINDER (Childrens') ALBUM. paper,	75 cts.
MENDELSSOHN'S SONGS without words. Cloth, $1.50, Paper,	$1.00

The above books, with the exception of Beethoven's Sonatas, are reprints of Peters' celebrated editions of the same works, and are extra good and correct editions, and faithful copies of the originals.

Piano Classics, recently published, is a book filled with unusually good piano pieces of medium difficulty, by modern composers.

Price, Cloth, $1.50, Boards, $1.00.

Any Book Mailed for the Retail Price.

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET

NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Sole Agents for the United States for the Celebrated

Red Star Brand

OF

Wonderful Wearing Velveteen,

Noted for Its Unequalled Color and Finish. Thi Fas Pile Dress and Mantle Velveteen was Awarded the Only Gold Medals at the International Exhibition at Vienna in 1873 Paris 1878, and Nice 1883.

To Prevent Imitations a Red Star will be Found Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

These Goods are of English Manufacture, 24 nches Wide, and in 39 Different Colors.

PRICE, 74c.

amples Mailed on Application and Mail Orders Promptly Filled.

R. H. MACY & CO.

WASTE

EMBROIDERY SILK.

Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,

469 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

FOR CHOIRS

A Low Priced Collection of Music.

IDEAL ANTHEMS

BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.

The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.

"IDEAL ANTHEMS" contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.

Price, 85 cents each by mail, postpaid; $8.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid.

☞SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O.

And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

FOR GAS.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

FOR OIL.

See this "NOTES ON DECORATIVE ART," free for 4 cents postage, covering information on Tapestry, Lustra, Kensington, Oil and Mineral Painting. Regular lessons by mail. Painted and chromo designs to rent. Orders executed.

Art Agency, H. A. JOHNSON, 42 W. 22d St., N. Y.

RIDLEYS'

Fashion Magazine.

FALL NUMBER

CONTAINS 146 PAGES devoted to Literature and Fashion, together with a Complete Catalogue and Price List of their entire stock as contained in their

52 DEPARTMENTS,

WHICH REPRESENT EVERYTHING NEEDED FOR WEAR,

ORNAMENTATION,

HOUSE FURNISHING,

For either Wife, Husband, or Child.

LARGELY ILLUSTRATED.

The pages of this Magazine are largely illustrated by Woodcuts photographed and cut from original Garment or Article.

THIS IS THE BEST

Fashion Magazine and Price List published without question.

Residents and non-residents will find it a valuable book and guide to have in their homes.

Subscription Price,

50c. per Annum, published Quarterly on the finest Tinted Paper

SINGLE COPIES, 15c.

. All subscriptions returned if the magazine fails to substantiate our claim as to its being the best Fashion Magazine published.

Orders by Mail Accurately Attended To.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,

309, 311, 313 to 321 Grand St.,

56, 58, 60 to 70 ALLEN ST.,

59, 61, 63, 65 ORCHARD ST., NEW YORK.

ALL FOR 24 CENTS.

We must reduce our stock in the next three months, and for 60 DAYS offer all the following for only 24 cents: 10 Pieces Choice New and Popular Music, full size, finely printed, 200 Elegant Designs in Outlines for Stamping and Embroidery, 100 Late and Popular Songs, including all the gems from the MIKADO, as well as "DREAM FACES" "LOVE, LOVE, LOVE," "SAILING," etc., etc., a large collection of New Riddles and Conundrums, over 250, just the thing for picnic and social parties. 250 Motto Verses, just sidesplitters, 77 Tricks in Magic, 100 Puzzles, all kinds, 26 Popular Games, a Secret Alphabet, 200 Amusing, interesting and Mysterious Pictures, the Great Game of Fortunes Told, etc., etc. We will send all of the above in one package to any address, prepaid for 24 cts. in postage stamps; 3 packages 50 cts; 7 for $1.00. WORLD MFG. CO., Address all orders to 122 Nassau St., New York.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, or Webster's Dictionary. For full particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

N. W. HARRIS & CO.,

115-117 Monroe St., CHICAGO.

BONDS Of Counties, Cities, &c. of high grade a specialty Send for descriptive lists.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

16 years perfect success, 12,531 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating $8,369,200

All the Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity to amount of 5,135,820

We have decided to place ourselves on a plane above every competitor. Hereafter every mortgage that we negotiate will bear our full legal

UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE OF BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST,

Interest 6 per cent. payable as in the past, by half yearly coupons, at the

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

Assets to the value of nearly a MILLION DOLLARS are pledged by our guarantee.

SEND FOR PAMPHLET CONTAINING FACTS AND FIGURES, FORMS, AND 450 TESTIMONIALS.

Our Law Department will collect Bonds and other securities in all the Western States for individuals and corporations.

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,

Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

The Church.

A Return.

THE charm of the golden trees,
The glow of the autumn day,
And the garden walks with their murm'ring bees,
Soothe all my cares away.

My soul is sick of the strife
Where pulses never are stilled:
But here, in the rest of a simple life,
God's promise is fulfilled.

When the bramble bears its fruit,
And mists creep over the lea,
And soft as the sound of a distant flute
The sheep-bells chime to me.

When the bracken turns to gold,
And down in the wir ding lane
A little bird sings me the songs of old
Till youth comes back again;

Then trouble and pain depart,
And comfort and peace draw near,
And all the foes of a timorous heart
Like phantoms disappear.

And the autumn lands grow fair
With a light that seems divine;
And the treasures I left in childhood there,
Once more are wholly mine.

—Sarah Doudney, in The Quiver for October.

Testimony of Literature to the Value of the Bible.

SELECTED BY A BIBLE-STUDENT.

TO give a man a full knowledge of true morality, I should need to send him to no other book than the New Testament.—John Locke.

The answer to the Shasters is India; the answer to Confucianism is China; the answer to the Koran is Turkey; the answer to the Bible is the Christian civilization of Protestant Europe and America.—Wendell Phillips.

From the time that, at my mother's feet or on my father's knee, I first learned to lisp verses from the sacred writings, they have been my daily study and vigilant contemplation. If there be anything in my life or style of thought to be commended, the credit is due to my kind parents in instilling into my mind an early love of the Scriptures.—Daniel Webster.

The Bible contains more true sublimity, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history and finer strains of poetry and eloquence than can be collected from all other books in what ever age or language they have been written.—Sir William Jones.

I have read the Bible through many times. It is a book of all others for lawyers, as well as divines, and I pity the man who cannot find in it a rich supply of thought and noble conduct.—Daniel Webster.

There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion, no orations equal to those of the Prophets, and no politics like those which the Scriptures teach.—Milton.

The Hebrew Scriptures stand so happily combined together, that, even out of the most diverse elements, the feeling of a whole still rises before us. They are complete enough to satisfy, fragmentary enough to excite, barbarous enough to arouse, tender enough to appease.—Goethe.

We search the wor truth we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful
From graven stone and written scroll,
From the old flower-fields of the soul;
And, weary seekers for the best,
We come back laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said
Is in the Book our mothers read. —Whittier.

The Book without a rival.—Frederic R. Marvin.

Name the lands of the Bible, and you name the lands of constitutional freedom. Switzerland, Scotland, England, Holland, America, received their liberties from God's Word. France, largely destitute of the Bible for so many long years, has had fifteen different governments, all directly or indirectly of a revolutionary origin, in eighty-three years. Prussia at her side, though beneath a government harsh and with features of severity, has known how to avoid the desperate remedy of constant and bloody revolutions. She has advanced her liberties by calmer methods, and has maintained herself stable, prosperous, and strong. Mexico has cast out the Bible, and Mexico has had fifty six revolutions since 1821.—Rev. Arthur Mitchell.

Coleridge finely said, "The Bible without the Spirit is a sun-dial by moonlight."

The Bible is the only universal classic of all mankind, of every age and country, of time and eternity. —Grimke.

FULL-GROWN MEN.—Paul says that Christ has given apostles and prophets and pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints, "till we all come unto a perfect man." In the New Version this last clause is rendered, "unto a full grown man." The need of the world and the Church to-day is full-grown men.

. . . . . .

A full-grown man is useful. Children are a charge rather than a help in the serious business of life. If a broken bone is to be set or an eye operated on we want no child to undertake it. The child cannot rule nor vote, nor make contracts, nor enter into partnerships. He may be heir to great wealth, but he is not allowed to take possession of it and administer it as his own. He is under tutors and governors. Not so the full-grown man. In the kingdom of God there are serious enterprises calling for men. There are harvests to reap, and battles to fight, and bruised and sick and wounded to restore. The hosts of sin are marching on to war. The Captain of our salvation lifts up the standard and calls for men to follow Him. The powers of intemperance and infidelity and political and social and business corruption and worldliness are not to be overcome by children. Men of mature wisdom and knowledge and skill and courage and endurance are needed now. There are dwarfs and pigmies and weaklings enough. The need is full grown men.—The Christian Advocate.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 2. FOURTH QUARTER.

M. Jesus Before Pilate.....John 18: 28-40.
T. Jesus Before Herod.....Luke 23: 4-12.
W. Pharasaic Hypocrisy.....Matt. 23: 13-36.
T. Crucifixion Foretold.....Matt. 20: 17-28.
F. King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.....1 Tim. 6: 11-16.
S. An Everlasting Kingdom.....Ps. 72: 1-20.
S. The King Enthroned.....Heb. 1: 1-14.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Oct. 10th.—Jesus Before Pilate.—John 18: 28-40

Golden Text.—"I find in him no fault at all."—JOHN 18: 38.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"He is despised and rejected of men."—ISA. 53: 3.

INTRODUCTION.

AT the close of our last lesson Jesus was being led to Annas. After a brief examination by him, He was taken before Caiaphas who, with some members of the council, held an informal trial, at which His death was virtually decided upon. It was during this examination in the palace of the high priest that Peter was guilty of his three-fold denial. Finally a formal assembly of the Sanhedrin was held, and Jesus was judged worthy of death. A difficulty, however, stood in the way of carrying out this sentence. The Romans had taken away the right to execute capital punishment, and it would be necessary to secure a civil as well as ecclesiastical condemnation. Jesus had been condemned to death for alleged blasphemy, but the Roman governor would not take cognizance of such a charge, so we pass now to a different scene in which Pilate is the judge, and Jesus is accused before him of treason to the emperor, in seeking to set up a rival kingdom. The governor ordinarily resided at Cesarea, but on the occasion of the feasts he was accustomed to stay at Jerusalem in order the more easily to quell any seditious or riotous proceedings.

THE LESSON.

I. WHAT ACCUSATION BRING YE?—VS. 28-32.

V. 28.—"Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment." This hall may have been in the castle Antonia, which overlooked the courts of the temple, and therefore was not far from the council-room of the Sanhedrin. "It was early," probably just about sunrise. This fact shows how hurried had been all the proceedings that had already been taken. "They themselves went not into the judgment hall." It was one of the traditions of the elders that the very dwelling of a Gentile was contaminating, and so we find these men, bent upon judicial murder, yet fastidious about ceremonial defilement. "That they might eat the passover." This has been interpreted to indicate that the paschal lamb had not yet been eaten, and, therefore, that Jesus had anticipated the proper time for that ceremony; other authorities say that the expression may refer to any of the festivities of the occasion.

V. 29.—"What accusation bring ye against this man?" The rulers knew Pilate to be an unprincipled man, and thought that he would ratify their sentence without any unpleasant questioning, but he proposed to hold an enquiry himself.

V. 30.—"If he were not a malefactor we would not have delivered him up unto thee." They were disconcerted by Pilate's demand for formal charges, and attempted to get out of their dilemma by assuming a bold position. They wished him to take for granted the regularity and justice of their proceedings, and to sign a death warrant upon their demand.

V. 31.—"Take ye him and judge him according to your law." If they had no charge which Roman law would take cognizance of, then they had no business at his court. If they were going to be independent he would be no less so. "It is not lawful for us to put any man to death." This answer shows the animus of their prosecution. It was not justice that they sought, but to get rid of this man. The Jewish form of capital punishment was by stoning, while the Romans employed the Cross.

V. 32.—"That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake signifying what death he should die." When Jesus first began to speak of the Cross there was no human probability that such a death awaited Him, because the Jews only charged Him with blasphemy and Sabbath breaking, and only crimes against the Roman law could be punished by the Cross. This fact indicates that Jesus saw the future with more than human foresight.

II. ART THOU A KING, THEN?—VS. 33-38.

V. 33.—The Jews, finding that they could not secure the death of Jesus on the charge upon which they had tried Him, began to insinuate that He had claimed royal authority, and so had been guilty of treason. Upon hearing this new charge Pilate returned to the judgment hall to enquire of Jesus concerning the facts of the case. He asks Him the direct question, "Art thou the King of the Jews?"

V. 34.—"Sayest thou this of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?" Jesus evidently asked this question, because the title "King of the Jews" had two meanings, one of which was the expression of treason, while the other was entirely innocent. If Pilate asked this question in the Roman sense, that is of himself, then Jesus could declare that He was not a king as opposed to Cæsar; but if he asked it in the Jewish sense, and according to the declarations of Scripture, then he would not deny the charge.

V. 35.—This questioning on the part of Jesus provoked Pilate and he answered with unspeakable scorn of feeling, "Am I a Jew?" What interest have I in such nice distinctions? You have been condemned by your own countrymen, now tell me, "What hast thou done?"

V. 36.—"My kingdom is not of this world." Jesus would not deny His royal right, but He would have that right placed on its proper basis. There was certainly nothing in all His course which could be construed into an assertion of kingly authority in an earthly sense. He had persistently discouraged and resisted all attempts on the part of His very accusers to force such a position on Him. Their opposition to Him was largely due to the fact that He would proclaim Himself king and lead a revolution whereby they might regain their liberty.

V. 37.—Every moment was adding to the perplexity of Pilate. He asks again, this time as simply as possible, "Art thou a king, then?" Is there any sense in which you claim royal prerogatives? Jesus answered, "Thou sayest that I am a king." This was a common form of acknowledging the truth of what had just been affirmed or asked. "To this end was I born....that I should bear witness unto the truth." Jesus would have His judge recognize the fact that His dominion was spiritual, that He relied upon truth instead of force for the maintaining of His kingdom. "Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice" This appears like a gentle invitation to Pilate to yield his prejudices and become a disciple of the truth.

V. 38.—"What is truth?" This question was a waiving of all spiritual interests, and a rejection of the overtures of Jesus. Still he found that the charge of sedition was utterly baseless, and so, "he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find no fault in him at all" He had refused to condemn Him on their declaration of His guilt, and now he declares that their charges have not been substantiated; surely there was no course open to him now but to dismiss the case and release the prisoner; but Pilate was a demagogue, and sought to move upon the passions of these people to his own advantage.

III. NOT THIS MAN, BUT BARABBAS.—VS. 39, 40.

V. 39.—"Will ye that I release unto you the king of the Jews?" Most of those held in Roman custody had been guilty of sedition, and were regarded as martyrs to their country by the Jews, hence the release of a prisoner at the feast was a mark of judicial favor which pleased the people. Pilate sought in this way to release Jesus, while securing for himself the good-will of the people.

V. 40.—"Not this man, but Barabbas." Barabbas had been imprisoned, probably justly, for the very crime which they had charged against Jesus, and by demanding the execution of Him who had been falsely charged with crime, while they asked the release of one who had been justly condemned, they proved the insincerity of the loyal pretences.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Zeal for ceremonies cannot cover up sinful conduct.

2. Those who act unjustly dislike enquiry into their proceedings.

3. The fear of man destroys the fear of God.

4. He who will not listen to his conscience is sure to fall into sin.

5. The enemies of Christ are willing to destroy themselves if they can silence His claims.

6. "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

7. Be careful lest you repeat the cry, "Not this man, but Barabbas."

The Soul.

IN a sermon the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, of New York, quotes the words which Abdallah, in the Persian story, is supposed to address from beyond death to the friends who were preparing his body for burial:

"Faithful friends, it lies, I know,
Pale and white, and cold as snow;
And ye say, 'Abdallah's dead'—
Weeping at the feet and head.
I can see your falling tears;
I can hear your sighs and prayers;
Yet I smile and whisper this:
'I am not the thing you kiss!
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine—it is not I.'

"Sweet friends, what the women lave
For the last sleep of the grave
Is a hut which I am quitting,
Is a garment no more fitting,
Is a cage from which at last,
Like a bird my soul has passed.
Love the inmate, not the room;
The wearer, not the garb—the plume
Of the eagle, not the bars
That keep him from the splendid stars.

"Loving friend, O, rise and dry
Straightway every weeping eye;
What ye lift upon the bier
Is not worth one single tear.
'Tis an empty sea-shell—one
Out of which the pearl is gone.
The shell is broken, it lies there:
The pearl, the all, the soul is here."

"Faithful."

IT was a dreary day in late winter. There were wearisome gray clouds overhead, and dull brown, half-melted ridges of snow and ice under foot. In the great iron foundry at M—— the men strode to and fro before their forges, bared their swarthy arms to the work, thrust huge glowing bars of metal into the panting fires, and swung their ponderous hammers—clang! clang! clang! The noise of the blows and of the ponderous machinery was so great that talking was impossible. A hoarse direction shouted now and then by the overseer, with gestures of the hand that the workers understood, was all.

At an anvil a little removed from the central uproar stood a solitary man, fashioning a piece of iron into a shape not unlike that of the rubber bands sold by stationers for small parcels; only it was over a foot long, and almost as thick as your wrist. The iron was held tight by a pair of tongs, and was glowing red, the sparks flying in a constant shower as the skilful blows fell, swiftly and surely. The workman himself was a quiet looking man, with tightly set lips; almost sullen, you would have said.

"Well, well," he muttered to himself, turning the hot iron, and commencing upon the other side, "it's the same old story. Pound, pound, from morning till night—no rest, no change, no hope. I'm of no importance in the world—it makes no difference whether I live or die—ah!"—

He stopped suddenly, and bent closely over the article he was shaping. You and I would have noticed nothing particular, but this man was evidently puzzled. He struck the iron two or three sharp blows, listening intently to the sound it gave back. Then he frowned, and poised it a moment on the end of his tongs.

The other men were accustomed to laugh at him because he was so particular about his workmanship in little things. Two or three of them glanced at him now as he stood that instant, undecided.

"Let it go, John," called one of them over his shoulder. "One out of a thousand won't make any difference."

But John had decided. "It's a flaw," he said. "I won't risk it." And, flinging away the iron loop on a heap of refuse metal, he patiently began his work over again, this time completing it, as he had hundreds of others, successfully.

. . . . . .

Three years passed away. It was winter again, and the northeast wind, roaring through the sky from the far off forests of Labrador, rolling huge, foaming waves from mid-ocean against the rocky coasts of New England, unroofing houses, uprooting trees, sweeping over lonely lakes; and, joining its cry with the howl of the wolf and the cracking of ice-floes, turned the night into a tumult of darkness and doleful uproar dreadful to hear. On the western tracks of the A. M. & S. Railroad, the late express was running at full speed. It had been delayed by the high wind, and the engineer was making up time. Twenty, thirty, thirty-five miles an hour, into the black night, with only a glow from the headlight on the steel rails, a few hundred feet in advance of the locomotive, as it plunged forward faster than ever. The fireman plied his furnace with coal, shovelful after shovelful. Now a few lights, dotting the darkness, from comfortable firesides in some small country village. The engine slacks its pace slightly, shrieks at the station master with his waving lantern, and dashes on at thirty eight miles an hour. The engineer, with one hand on the polished bar before him, glances alternately at the steam-gauge and the track ahead. The wind is blowing more fiercely than ever, but he knows nothing of that; he thinks only of the hot, bounding, roaring creature on whose back he rides on into the night at forty miles an hour.

The passengers in the train are most of them asleep. There is a baggage and mail car, in which a few men are at work; but in the Pullman cars behind are over a hundred souls, trustfully awaiting the end of their journey. There are fathers hurrying home to their children; boys and girls with heads upon the rocking pillow, dreaming of fir-trees and lights and bright gifts, for it is just after Christmas.

One of the passengers has a little girl nestling close beside him; her mother left them for Christ's country last week, and now she alone is left to him. As the rails rattle beneath the flying wheels of the train, the man becomes uneasy and holds the little girl more tightly. Then he takes out his watch and calculates the speed.

"I wonder"—he says slowly, "I wonder"—

Crash—h—h!

Darkness, wild cries, the car dashing furiously over timbers and wreck of rail and platform like a ship upon the rocks; screams, prayers, groans; a terrible sideways lurch and a prolonged creaking of strained iron and wood, above the shrill cries of men, women and children. Then dead, awful stillness.

One by one, the terrified, half-dressed, trembling passengers make their way over the slanting floor of the car, and out through broken doors and windows into the cold night air.

As lights began to flash upon the scene, the bravest hid their faces and turned pale. In the valley, far below, as if they were looking down from a lofty church belfry, lay the monster of steam and iron which a few moments before was bounding homeward with them in apparent safety and with sure speed. Beside it were heaped the ruins of the mail car. And on the verge of the embankment, leaning dizzily over those awful depths, rested the forward Pullman. What held it back?

The locomotive left the rails and plunged over the embankment, seventy-five feet down to the bottom, turning completely over in its course and dragging the mail car after it. Only one man was killed, though the train was crowded; the forward Pullman would have gone over, after the mail car, had it not been held back by the link which coupled it to the next car.

So the report flew over the wires the next morning, and so you can read it in the newspapers, if you like.

And what of the obscure iron-worker who would not let that iron link pass his hands until it was perfect—a true and honest piece of work? No one knows his name. He never will know in this world how that faithful half-hour saved sixscore human lives. But there is One who knows, and who does not forget the humblest, every day duty-doing of His children. He who said, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"—Willis Boyd Allen, in The Congregationalist.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

As an Appetizer.

Dr. MORRIS GIBBS, Howard City, Mich., says: "I am greatly pleased with it as a tonic; it is an agreeable and a good appetizer."

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,

The Care and Feeding of Infants

Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as a safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS for $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY

FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000 000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6%, 7%, 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST

Through the Sound and Reliable

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 187 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

A BIG OFFER. To introduce them, we will Give Away 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 23 Dey St., N. Y.

WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free. STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2[illegible]
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Fund together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0[illegible]
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	301,040 1[illegible]
Net Surplus	1,389,341 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,608 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,300 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9[illegible] 2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	2[illegible]6,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886.	10[illegible],394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR. } Ass't Sec's

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

CURE FOR THE DEAF

PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper.

DR. JAEGER'S SANITARY WOOLEN SYSTEM COMPANY,

827 & 829 BROADWAY, ABOVE 12th STREET, NEW YORK.

L. C. HOPKINS, MANAGER,

Have opened the premises named with a full stock of which are offered to the public at wholesale and retail.

SANATORY WOOLEN GARMENTS,

These goods are manufactured from the purest Wool or Camel's Hair, under instructions from DR. GUSTAV JAEGER, whose years of special study, verified by actual and exhaustive experiments, have established the fact that most bodily derangements may be prevented or cured by the adoption of his SANATORY WOOLEN UNDERWEAR, CLOTHING AND BEDDING. These afford to the body the greatest protection from Cold, Heat and Dampness, with the least obstruction to the body's exhalations. DR. JAEGER reasons as follows: If this action of the skin be imperfect or repressed from any cause, fat and water accumulate in the tissues, the functional powers of which are lowered and weakened; and the flesh, which should feel elastic, firm and hard to the touch, becomes soft and flabby, resulting at last in a general derangement of the physical organization; and the evil effect on the body is experienced in the form of many disorders which are erroneously considered to be more or less inevitable and ineradicable, such as corpulence, asthma, pulmonary complaints, diseases of the digestive organs, gout, rheumatism, &c.

All fabrics manufactured from, or adulterated with, vegetable fiber (linen and cotton) or silk is impervious to the body's exhalations, which are arrested and turned to water on the skin, by cotton or linen garments. Linen and cotton are, moreover, rapid conductors of heat, and thus, especially when damp, readily cause a chill. Further, dead vegetable fiber has the same property as living plants of absorbing evil odors, but cannot, like the plant, assimilate them, and therefore gives them off again under the influence of warmth or damp. Therefore, DR. JAEGER unreservedly condemns the use in clothing, and in bedding, of all fabrics made of, or mixed with, vegetable fiber (cotton or linen) or silk as an obstacle to absorption, and evaporation, and selects Animal wool as the proper substance for his "Sanatory Clothing." The advantages of this material are obvious, as when woven into tissues, Wool possesses above all textile fabrics—

1. A peculiar power of absorption and transmission.
2. The properties of a non-conductor of heat, so essential in preserving an equable temperature of the body.
3. The property of promoting the elimination from the tissues of all excess of fat and water, thus making the flesh firm, and hardening and toughening the muscles.

As hitherto woven, woolen fabrics irritate the skin, and induce a feeling of intense discomfort from the fact that they afford no proper escape for the exhalations of the body, and, as a rule, they are so heavy as to render them intolerable for Summer wear. But sanatorily woven wool is free from these defects, is suited to all seasons, protecting against oppressive heat in Summer and maintaining a proper degree of warmth in Winter.

Hence, Dr. Jaeger has found it necessary to materially modify the usual process of weaving woolen fabrics, and to adopt a method which produces a much less closely-woven texture than the ordinary flannel; and all underwear for ladies, gentlemen, and children is made of "Stockinet," undyed or natural gray, very porous, agreeable and durable.

The Sanitary Advantages of Pure Animal Wool.

I. Wool has that healthfully stimulating effect on the skin which is wanting to linen and cotton, and consequently promotes its proper action.

II. Wool, relatively to linen and cotton, is a non-conductor of heat, and thus preserves the normal temperature of the body.

III. Wool, by virtue of its superior permeability to moisture, thus transmitting the perspiration, lowers, by evaporation, the abnormal temperature of the body, and this is the reason why the body, even when freely perspiring, remains dry in woolen clothing, while in linen or cotton it becomes wet, a fact of common experience with all who engage in athletic exercises.

IV. It is thus seen how Nature regulates the temperature of the body by its exhalations. As a good conductor of moisture, wool conveys away the excessive heat; as a non-conductor of heat it preserves the normal measure of warmth. Hence it is that it is a better protection against excess of either heat or cold than linen or cotton.

V. Wool is electrical, while linen and cotton are not; i. e., wool generates electricity, but does not conduct it. It follows, therefore, that a body clothed in wool loses less of its animal electricity, while fresh electricity is produced on the surface.

DR. JAEGER'S Sanitary Woolen Clothing and Bedding System is therefore salutary for those whose bodies are deficient in animal heat, gives a healthful stimulus to the skin of those engaged in sedentary pursuits and prevents the accumulation of water and fat, apt to ensue upon insufficient exercise.

The system is salutary in cases of catarrh, accumulations of phlegm, fluxious and gouty affections, disorders of the digestive organs, &c., or for nervous, hypochondriacal and hysterical persons, whose health is especially dependent on the unimpeded action of the skin. It is salutary during and after all serious illnesses, tending to alleviate the severity of the attack, and to prevent relapses; and is very beneficial to persons sensitive to changes of temperature. In a word, there can be no better protection against heat, cold, wet, electric and other atmospheric influences. It is, therefore, indispensable to a people living in climates or conditions subject to sudden changes.

THE SANITARY WOOLEN SYSTEM does not pretend to promise perfect health under all circumstances, any more than it promises to perpetuate existence. But wide experience has shown that by its adoption, disturbances of health are less frequent, and when they do occur, sooner pass away, and seldom result in chronic disease.

The relief afforded to even the healthy body by its release from the confinement of the ordinary unsanatory clothing is evinced by a previously unknown sense of health, vigor and energy

Dr. Jaeger's Sanitary Woolen System Includes All Articles Worn by Men, Women and Children, and quite appropriately introduces to the American public many articles new and foreign to our use, but entirely practicable and essential to perfect comfort and health.

Dr. Jaeger's Sanatory Woolen Underwear.

DR. JAEGER'S Sanatory Woolen Under Clothing (manufactured from "Stockinet") is made in Shirts, Night-Dresses, Chemises, Drawers, or in Combination Garments of Shirts or Chemises and Drawers (in one piece) for both sexes. In appearance and feel these fabrics are very similar to spun silk, and it may be confidently asserted that no garments hitherto made are so agreeable to the wearer. They are perfectly soft, made of finest wool, and will not irritate the most delicate skin, while the folds adapt themselves to the body in the most graceful manner. The shirts, &c., are not open in front, but are of double thickness over the chest, and button on the shoulder. They may be worn through the heat of Summer with comfort, and in colder weather they maintain as much warmth as the heavier flannel clothing. The Stockinet material is also for sale by the yard.

In the SANATORY WOOLEN HATS the gummy, sticky sweat-leather of the common hat is replaced by a Sanatory, woolen lining that exhales the perspiration, and thus keeps the forehead dry and cool.

Dr. Jaeger's Sanatory Boots and Shoes.

The Sanatory Woolen Boots and Shoes, for ladies and gentlemen, are made from pure woolen materials inside, with and without leather protection.

Dr. Jaeger's Sanatory Woolen Bedding.

The Mattresses and Camel's-Hair Pillows are filled with pure, natural, camel's hair and sheep's wool, and are covered with a thick, soft, woven material of the same. The Sheets and Pillow Cases are made of very fine, durable, white cashmere, and will not shrink in washing. The Blankets and Bed Coverings are made of the finest quality of undyed, natural brown, camel's hair or sheep's wool. DR. JAEGER states:—

"The advantage of the natural-brown blankets of sheep's wool consists in their freedom from artificial dye; this I personally guarantee. They, therefore, attract less dirt and fewer evil odors, and secure a more undisturbed sleep. The blankets and pillows of camel-hair wool retain the peculiar odor characteristic of the camel, and which is a potent agency (long known in the East) for soothing the nerves; consequently the sleep which these articles induce is still more quiet and refreshing than in the case of the blankets of sheep's wool." Camel-hair wool blankets may be considered indispensable to all who adopt the Sanitary Woolen System of Dr. G. Jaeger, and are especially to be recommended to nervous persons and sufferers from sleeplessness.

The Miscellaneous Articles

COMPRISE:

Dr. Jaeger's Sanatory Woolen Stockings and Socks, with and without divisions for toes; Ladies Dressing Gowns, Men's Smoking Jackets, Knitted Garments, Vests without Sleeves, Cardigans, Jersey Jackets, Boy's Knitted Suits, Ladies' Dressing Jackets, lace trimmed; Lawn Tennis Shirts, Corset Covers, Sleeping Wrappers, Children's Stockinet Night-Dresses, Ladies' Petticoats, crocheted, kilted, Under-Petticoats, in camel's hair, scolloped; Belt Bandages, Tyrolese Belts, White Woolen Handkerchiefs, Woolen Towels, Pure Camel's-hair Wadding, Cyclists' Stockings, with and without toes.

Dr. Jaeger's Sanatory Woolen Clothing

Has achieved marked success in Germany and England, and other foreign countries (where leading members of the medical profession have testified to its value), and its introduction into this country, characterized by a climate so liable to sudden and extreme changes of temperature, will be hailed as a public benefaction. The System needs only to be tried, to ensure its general adoption. All articles are manufactured of the finest and purest sheep's or camel's-hair wool, WITHOUT ANY ADMIXTURE OF VEGETABLE FIBER, OR TRACE OF NOXIOUS DYES. The great prevalence of cotton-mixed, poison-dyed woolen fabrics gives special emphasis to this important truth. To healthy persons the timely adoption of DR. JAEGER'S SANATORY WOOLEN CLOTHING will prove an excellent defence against bodily disorders from climatic and other influences; while it will be signally beneficial to those of slender constitutions and impaired health—especially to sufferers from asthma and other pulmonary complaints, affections of the chest, gout, rheumatism, disorders of the digestive organs, &c.

REFERENCES BY PERMISSION:—Messrs. H. B. Claflin & Co., New York; Bank of the Metropolis, New York; Messrs. S. V. White & Co., Bankers, No. 7 Wall Street; Messrs. Kessler & Co., Bankers, No. 68 Wall Street.

Special Attention Paid to Mail Orders. Illustrated Catalogues Sent by Mail.

The Christian Intelligencer

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 40. WHOLE No. 2932. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1886. | $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE COMMITTEE of the Board of Superintendents, when they met a fortnight ago, were most agreeably surprised by the number of applicants for admission to the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick. At the meeting of the General Synod in June only two young men were known to have set their faces toward our school of theology. But, to the gratification of the Committee, ten men appeared before them and met the requirements for admission. They are mature, earnest and devoted men. Three graduated this year at Hope College. Besides, evidence was brought forward that the prospects of the Seminary for the next and following years are very encouraging.

THE NEW SECOND CHURCH OF HARLEM, dedicated last Thursday evening, is the third addition within a few years to the number of Reformed churches in this city. The church at Bloomingdale we count as one addition, for it had been for years hardly doing more than holding on to an organization and a site, when a year or two ago it was revived and led forward to vigorous life and importance. Grace Church, which had been a mission of the Collegiate Church, was made a separate organization not long ago, and is reckoned as the second addition. This enlargement in numbers and influence is encouraging and should inspirit us and incite to earnest and united endeavors toward a steady growth in the future. If all these churches shall combine their ability on promising localities and on missionary efforts, there is no reason why the increase of the number of churches should not go steadily forward. In other Eastern cities the condition of our churches has become more hopeful, and in the West a large and promising field invites us to enter in and take possession. Let us do cheerfully, vigorously, with self-denial if need be, that which God is giving and encouraging us to do.

BROOKLYN also adds a new Reformed Church. The corner-stone of the Ocean Hill Church was laid on Saturday. The large amount of news from the churches compels a postponement of the account of the ceremony kindly furnished the INTELLIGENCER. The new church is growing under a favoring sky.

THAT WAS a strange meeting, held in Chickering Hall last Friday evening, to advocate the election of Henry George, the workingmen's candidate for Mayor. Strange in that the gentlemen who made the speeches gave no indication of the purposes for which Mr. George is nominated. The Rev. Messrs. John W. Kramer, D.D., and Heber Newton, D.D., Professors Thomas Davidson, Daniel De Leon and David B. Scott, and Father Edward McGlynn, D.D., with Mr. Charles F. Wingate, made the speeches, but said only in the most general terms that Mr. George was pledged to nobody, was independent, intelligent, honest and fearless, and, therefore, ought to be elected. But Mr. George must do as his constituents desire, as must every man elected to office. He is the nominee of the Labor Unions and must serve them or be without support; and the man who undertakes to administer the affairs of this city needs strong and steadfast support. The Mayor of New York has a large appointing power. What do the Unions hope to do through Mr. George? From whom do they expect him to make appointments? But some of the speakers did make, without discrimination, an attack upon the owners of property. Is that what is to be expected if Mr. George is elected? All sensible men must have read the report of the meeting with a feeling of disappointment. No indication was afforded of how the dissension between labor and capital is to be allayed, none of how the condition of workingmen is to be improved.

MISSIONS AND PROBATION.—It is generally supposed that the American Board will be called to decide at its annual meeting this month whether it will or will not send into the field men who adopt the new theology and hold that there is a probation after death for all who have not heard of the historic Christ. The friends of the cause in every evangelical body of Christians have reason to pray that God would direct the counsels of this venerable and venerated society, that He would fill its members with the wisdom that cometh from above and is first pure, then peaceable, that He would render them firm and inflexible in maintaining the old paths, and that as He has guided the Board through many a painful and perilous crisis in the past, so He would now lead them by His own hand in the way that is good in His sight. Whatever may be appearances, the right course is always the expedient one.

SUNDAY.—We observe by the Newport News (Va.) Caret, a journal issued by the colored people, that a vigorous remonstrance is made against the Sunday labor carried on in that port. We trust that it will be successful. 'Tis a shame that the weak and ignorant should be imposed upon. In this great mart, except in sudden emergencies, toil ceases on Sunday and the weary can rest; and if this can be done here without injury, surely it can anywhere else.

CONCESSIONS.—A contemporary speaking of the volume containing the Proceedings of the so-called Congress of Churches at Cleveland, O., remarks: "As we turn over the pages, a smile is created by the speech of J. H. Hopkins, D.D., (P. E.), of Pennsylvania. In his exordium, he professes his willingness 'for the sake of Christian Union to give up everything that is peculiar to the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America.' He is willing to give up the name, 'The Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America.' But when you come to 'Apostolic Succession,' he is not willing to give that up, 'because that belongs to the great body of Christendom.' And so of Confirmation; 'that is in the New Testament;' that cannot be given up. So that the residuum which he is willing to give up would amount to this: he is willing to cease calling his denomination 'The Protestant Episcopal Church,' and would, no doubt, be willing that it be called 'The Church,' retaining everything else as now."

WANTS AND NEEDS.—Dr. Ormiston is reported as having said at the recent anniversary of the Fulton Street Prayer-Meeting, "I would rather have what my Maker knows I need than what I think I want." It is a distinction well stated. The wants of people are many, their needs are few; and because they have not their wants, as they conceive of them, they conclude that they are unblessed, and manifest signs of impatience and discontent. What they think they want might not be what they need, and were the want realized it might prove in the end to be anything but a blessing.

How much more patient and thankful and happy people would be if they were to think less of their wants and more of their needs, and were to take more pains from day to day to observe how God opens His hand and supplies their needs. He knows what we require better than we do, and they that trust in Him—in His complete knowledge of us, His unerring wisdom and merciful providence—shall be satisfied.

Important Facts in Relation to the Proportionate Increase of Races and of Trade.

SECOND ARTICLE.

STILL more surprising than the relative increase of the races of men is the fact that Germany is conducting, the world over, a successful competition with British manufacturers. The facts are gathered from Consular reports. The quotations we copy from English journals are from such reports. England has had a large trade with Austria, but the Consul writes, "Velvets used to be extensively imported, but have greatly decreased on account of their manufacture here, and owing to Germany's successful competition with England." The import of textiles and iron and steel goods and machinery from England has decreased, "owing to the development of industry in Germany able to compete in point of quality with that of England." The wholesale dealers in Hungary are in direct communication with Austrian and German merchants, and they control the trade. English exports to Italy have increased within a few years 16 per cent, while those of Germany have advanced 102 per cent, and those of Belgium 150 per cent. German competition is most serious "in crockery, glass, cutlery, hardware, chemicals, surgical instruments, earthenware, and fancy goods generally." In Greece a transfer of trade has been gradually taking place, during the last few years, from Great Britain to other countries. "Woollen cloths, soft goods, iron, hardware, machinery, glassware, and pottery, come now almost exclusively from Germany, Belgium, and France," and chiefly from Germany. In Holland German trade has increased more rapidly than that with England, especially in machinery. British trade with Portugal has been at a standstill for fifteen years, that of Germany has increased fourfold. From Roumania, Servia, Spain, Switzerland, and Turkey, there is "the same tale of growing German imports, while those of England stand still or decline." Even in Egypt, which is virtually under English rule, British import trade has fallen off in "woollen articles and hardware by transfer to Germany."

If we turn to Central and South America the same tendency is found to prevail. The steamers which carry the mails and the freight are British, but trade does not follow the flag. A Consul writes, "Foreign traders here, as in every portion of Central and South America, of which I have experience, have, by superior intelligence and business capacity, supplanted the British merchant;" and these foreign traders are Belgians and Germans, especially the latter.

From China, the information English merchants receive is, "Our great competitors are the Germans;" "it must be admitted that the German merchants show more enterprise than our own in importing new articles, and suiting their wares to the tastes and requirements of the Chinese." The trade of Germany and Belgium with China has risen from 15 per cent in 1877, to 33 per cent in 1884, or it now furnishes one third of the imports into the Celestial Empire. British imports in Japan have declined a half a million of pounds sterling, in four years, and the comment of Englishmen is, "here, again, it is the inevitable German, and, to a lesser extent, the Belgian, who has beaten us." Even in the iron trade Germany is reducing the English proportion, in a ring which has been formed, and increasing her own.

The story is so uniform that it becomes monotonous. The competition, an English writer says, "will become more and more formidable. Our great competitors are the Germans, and it must be owned that they bring an amount of energy and earnestness to bear on their business which is generally wanting in the English merchants. The Germans commence their business in life vastly better furnished in the way of practical education than Englishmen, and the consciousness of having their battles still to win stimulates them to increased exertion." The Germans, it is acknowledged, receive a better technical education, adapt themselves and their goods to the people with whom they trade, acquire languages as other men do not, and, which is altogether unexpected, have abandoned leisurely processes and slow going ways, so that an English journal, after twice carefully reviewing the situation, concludes, "The German trade victories are like the German military victories,—they are due to pluck, perseverance, dash, and go, and above all to brains. The English manufacturer must, in fact, display more intelligence, more adaptiveness, more energy, more sympathy, if he is to hold his own against the increasing rivalry of the highly educated, active, and expanding German."

Such facts are astonishing. They change the face of the world and set us to reckoning what the results are likely to be. They have an intellectual and religious bearing. Germany has been the chief centre of literary and religious speculation and has contributed a full share to conjectural scientific theories. Not commercial heretofore, not in contact with the world as some other peoples have been, not practical by the influence of trade, the Germans have cultivated the region of conjecture and speculation. Not occupied with practical work on the solid earth, they have been flying kites in the air. They have been eminently sceptical. Nothing has been sacred. Attempts to prove pretty much everything unreal and false that was so unfortunate as to be old and generally accepted, have abounded. Many German scholars have been narrow, because they have been specialists. Specialities have been divided and subdivided. Men have devoted themselves to a microscopic scrutiny of excessively limited themes, neglecting their relations to the great body of truth, and have built pyramids innumerable on their points—enormous structures on the narrowest foundations. They have been guilty of innumerable inconsistencies and of glaring injustice and dishonesty, perhaps not intentionally, but from a tendency to speculation, from a lack of practicality, from their exaggeration of the value of results obtained from the study of a sub division of a specialty. And it has been for some time an open question whether German scholarship has been a blessing or a curse to the world. How recklessly and often dishonestly the Bible has been criticized by these men is known by everybody. How they have asserted wild speculations and unfounded conjectures as truths ascertained by legitimate induction, is known to thousands.

Contact with the world, the influence of trade to produce practicality; the broadening of the horizon by relations to colonies, by an extension of intimate commercial relations; the tests to which active competition subjects opinions, will tend to correct and restrain speculative mental habits, will bring the people down from aerial flights to a steady march on the solid ground. Is there not evidence that such a change has already begun? Has there not in recent years been a gradual diminution in the production of German speculations, which deserve to be called metaphysical, philosophical and religious heresies? We shall observe with a great deal of interest the influence of growing commercial enterprise upon German character and scholarship and opinions.

FALSE CHARGES.—We have recently met in a German periodical an account of one of the scandals which a certain class of people delight to recount to the discredit of missions to the heathen. It is contained in the Parisian bi-monthly entitled Revue Geographique Internationale, for August–September, 1885. A certain Dr. Nèis, speaking of his journey in Farther India, says, "We found here—in Laos—an American mission, the leading member of which, now absent, devotes himself to the slave trade in this region. The other members of the company knew that I was aware of this fact and consequently, through fear that this might come to the knowledge of others, gave me a very cool reception." It is not necessary to refute to Christian people such a preposterous charge. But as it appeared in a foreign periodical of repute, and not everybody knows exactly of what material the men sent out by the churches are made, it is worth while to show that the charge is not only baseless, but the exact opposite of the truth, and to show this by a competent and impartial witness. The Norwegian traveller, K. Bock, in his work, "Temples and Elephants: The Narrative of a Journey through Upper Siam and Laos," (London, 1884,) speaks in detail of the blessed influence of the mission upon the natives, and especially of the laborious and successful efforts of the missionaries to aid the slaves in Loskauf to obtain freedom. The cool reception of which Dr. Nèis complains was doubtless due to the fact that the brethren recognized in him a political agent of the French government, seeking to extend the sway of France in the East. Such efforts, judging by past experience, are anything but attractive to those who desire a fair field for publishing the Gospel. But there was no excuse for Dr. Nèis's bold fabrication.

"Old Colony" Papers.

THE HACKENSACK BI-CENTENNIAL.

A Pious Pilgrimage.

DEAR old Hackensack! As I write these words it is not the large and prosperous suburb of to-day which I have in mind, with its railroads and villas and interlacing streets, but the little Dutch hamlet which slept in the sunshine of forty-five years ago along the banks of the winding river. It was old Hackensack then, and most of its houses were mossy and lichenous with time, but it is so old now that the real Hackensack is almost buried out of sight. As I walked its streets last week, how little did most of those who met me conceive of what I saw with my inner vision. My memory brushed all this new, wooden, upstart aspect from the palimpsest, and looked at the underlying picture of my early days I felt like another Rip Van Winkle, as I missed the old landmarks or painfully strove to unearth them, or in a few instances recognized something which had been spared by the "march of improvement."

And yet there was enough remaining, more or less unaltered, to make my pilgrimage one of those hours of life which are akin to these golden and pensive autumn days. The places in which one has spent his childhood from six to thirteen will have a peculiar vividness of memory and a spell of sentiment and imagination, and there can be few means of grace more likely to reach through the indurating and benumbing effect of years than to revisit those scenes alone and in leisurely meditation. The tender associations, the simple pleasures and the childish cares, the sins of youth, the young ideals and aspirations, all come rushing back in a flood, and cannot fail to leave the dry river-bed of our life more fresh and fertile.

The old Church on the Green is not appreciably changed in its exterior or its environment. There has been enlargement in the building and in the graveyard, rather than alteration. Almost every stone in the wall was as familiar as the faces of the old inhabitants would have been, and the time-stained tablets and crowded mounds were exactly as when I used to stumble among them or brush the dew from the grass with my idle feet. The interior of the building, however, was so completely transformed and modernized, that I strove in vain to find any connection between it and the smaller, high galleried, high-pulpited, high-pewed, and green-blinded place in which I used to sit and hear good old "Aurie" Bogert lead the nasal choir, and Domine Warner divide the text or catechize us children in the front seats.

I had gone up to join in celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of this venerable church of my fathers and of my boyhood. I shall not undertake a report of the proceedings. Are they not written in the New York Times, the Hackensack Republican, and The Christian Intelligencer? But it is "Old Colony's" privilege and mission to think aloud what interests and impresses him, and to let his too indulgent readers know where he has been from time to time.

The keynote was happily struck by the organist in the prelude of the morning. The air of "Auld Lang Syne" mingled as harmoniously with our thoughts as with the accompanying variations, and was evidently grateful and inspiring to many besides myself. The whole music of the day was appropriate and well rendered. The decorations of the church were tasteful and significant, indicating an unsparing toil and painstaking without being overdone or obtrusive. The symbols of the mother Church of the Netherlands, and its martyr history; the flag of our country, which blossomed into being when this church was already a hundred years old; the evergreens, which symbolized the vigorous and verdurous life of the old church; the floral emblems; the emblazoned roll of the pastor's names; the sparkling cross of light over the pulpit arch, full of exhaustless suggestions; the great floral bell over our heads, whose ringing, unheard of human ears, seemed to summon about me the vast phantom congregation of the past, while it rang out the old and rang in the new centuries,—were among the fit and beautiful devices. Thoughtful and kindly hands, too, had covered the graves of former pastors with flowers.

An admirable feature of the occasion was the loan collection of antique relics in the chapel. These included old Bibles and books, portraits, china, furniture, silverware, dresses, toys, articles of vertù and curiosities, some of them as old as the two-centuried church itself. It is interesting to see how such occasions develope the treasures of our old garrets and chests, and the increasing preciousness which these once rejected and despised relics have acquired in our American eyes. It was a becoming pride, which led the descendants of the first families of Hackensack to produce these time honored memorials of their forefathers. I wonder if the celebrants of two hundred years hence will find the souvenirs of to-day as quaint and curious?

The sermon and addresses were all admirably to the point, and full of interest and information, and when published in book-form will be a valuable addition to the historical record of our denomination.

The course of the Hackensack Church lay through the very central forces of the stormiest epochs in our Church's history,—notably, the Cœtus and Conferentie contest, and the secession movement under Solomon Froeligh. Froeligh was, in fact, the pastor here at the time of the half-theological and half-political agitation which resulted in the now almost extinct "True Reformed Church." James V. C. Romeyn, the leader on the other side, was his colleague. The fact is, that the Hackensack history is far from being a witness in favor of colleagueships in the pastorate. The Cœtus controversy (the question of Americanizing the Dutch Church) ranged itself under the opposing banners of Domines Curtenius and Goetschius, also colleagues. The divisions incidental to the Revolutionary war crystallized about the colleagues of the time. There seems to have been no time between 1748 to 1823 in which there were not two pastors, and hardly a year in which there were not rival camps.

And yet, notwithstanding all these overlappings and unsettling influences, we find that there have been, up to the present year, only thirteen pastorates (including the first minister, who was really a stated supply). And of these there have been one of thirty-four years, two of thirty, and one each of twenty-eight, twenty-seven, twenty-six, and twenty-five, or seven pastorates covering one hundred and seventy years. There is no inference to be drawn from this either for or against long pastorates, for that is one of those questions which—depend!

The most striking feature in the roll of pastors, as it hung conspicuously before our eyes in the church, was the recurrence of the name "Romeyn" no less than four times, comprising nearly a third in number and considerably more than a quarter of the time up to the present year. Of these, three were in direct lineal descent, and the other was an uncle of the first of those three. The case is undoubtedly unique in this country, and very rarely if ever paralleled even in countries where church livings are in the gift of particular families. The Romeyn family was represented on the platform by the son of the late pastor, belonging to the fifth generation from Theodorick Romeyn, and who read with fine effect an ode prepared for the occasion by a lady of the congregation.

An interesting and appropriate incident was the appearance of a delegation from the old Church of Schenectady, whose history has been singularly linked with the Church of Hackensack. The first minister of the latter, Domine Taschemaker, was the first pastor at Schenectady, where he was murdered by the savages at his parsonage door in the French-Indian massacre of 1690. Theodoric ("Dirck") Romeyn, Hackensack's ninth minister, was also captured by the Church of Schenectady, where he made an enduring mark in a pastorate of twenty years, among other things founding Union College.

Another exceptional, as well as commendable, thing may be said of the Hackensack Church. It has never gone outside of its own denomination to find a pastor! In its earlier history it far more than repaid the debt by the number of ministers which it furnished. Professor Mabon, in his address, aptly styled Hackensack in the olden days "the Athens of New Jersey," having at one time no less than three classical schools, which drew thither young men by the hundred. Two of these schools were famous,—those of Dr. Peter Wilson, and of the Rev. John S. Mabon. It was also for a time the principal seat of theological instruction in our Church. Six theological professors have gone out from the Hackensack Church, and thirty-four distinguished men were enumerated who lived there and studied theology, among them the three Frelinghuysens, and Drs. Dewitt, Cannon, William Hague, and John B. and "Dirck" Romeyn. And yet Hackensack has not to-day a single classical school, nor has the church furnished a minister from among its sons for thirty years!

It is worth adding, as a striking illustration of professional heredity, that Dr. Mabon could reckon up no less than thirteen ministers now living who are directly descended from James V. C. Romeyn, beside the many who have died, and those who have been allied to direct descendants by marriage. The undersigned has a pardonable pride in being one of this levitical and well descended stock.

F. N. Zabriskie.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 27th, 1886.

When the Stars Come Out.

After the heat and noise of day,
Upon the fragrant grass I lay,
Gazing toward heaven's immensity
With upturned face, till in the sky
The stars came out.

The day departed silently;
The blue grew paler, and the eye
Caught here and there a point that shone,
With gathering light, as one by one
The stars came out.

Is it not true, O soul of mine!
That all day long the stars still shine?
Yet day must perish, ere unfurled
Before our gaze the glorious world
Of stars shines out.

Then answered back a soundless voice:
"O soul, look upward, and rejoice!
For as the lights of earth all flee,
Thy lifted eye shall surely see
God's stars come out!"

—Marion Harper, in The Sunday-School Times.

After the Earthquake.

Among the public edifices that were ruined by the great earthquake at Charleston, S. C., is the historical old Huguenot Church, of which the Rev. Dr. Charles S. Vedder is the pastor. In a letter just received he writes thus of the disaster:

"Our dear Huguenot Church here is terribly shattered and broken. A portion of the walls has been condemned as dangerous and must come down. We are worshipping in the open air by the seaside. My congregation are among the most hopeless sufferers by the earthquake. We have not the means of making the church even habitable. The memorial character of the church and its retention of the primitive Huguenot liturgy isolates it, technically, from other denominations. It can, therefore, only turn for assistance to individual Huguenots in all other communions. Our nearest affinity is with the Reformed (Dutch) Church. There are more Huguenots in hat grand old Church than in any other. My people propose to send me North immediately to make such appeal as the circumstances justify. We need several thousand dollars."

Dr. Vedder himself is a son of our own Church, born and brought up at Schenectady, and is well known as a member of the Huguenot Society of New York, and as an eloquent and successful minister of Christ. We bespeak for him a cordial reception and liberal contributions for his suffering church in their time of need.

Coffee Taverns in London.

The Coffee Tavern movement bids fair to take a new start in London. Mr. Morley and other philanthropists spent a good deal of money and time several years ago in starting coffee taverns, hoping thus to win the laboring classes from their cups, and withal to greatly advance habits of temperance and needful economy among them. "Taverns" were opened in the right neighborhoods, as was supposed, and with all needful appliances. They were advertised and abundantly commended, but after all, the parties to be benefited were not reached, and the scheme was an utter failure. As is now at length quite obvious, the reform needed a preliminary work such, perhaps, as that carried on by Messrs. Moody and Sankey and since by the churches, whereby all classes have felt the uplifting influences of the Gospel. The movement needed to spring forth from among those to be benefited, rather than to be tendered them by those reckoned above them in the social scale.

And just this has occurred. One John Pearce, now a worthy member of Mr. Spurgeon's Tabernacle, began life at the bottom of the ladder, and has gone on and up in the course of removals and enlargements, from his first street coffee-stall to the sole proprietorship of a very prosperous Coffee Tavern. The place (opposite the Memorial Hall in Farrington street) is said to be a real sight at the noon hour, and until two or three o'clock in the afternoon. Four or five thousand customers, all from the laboring classes, there find refreshment, and without any of the temptations of the ordinary tavern.

A key is given to the spirit of the proprietor and his great success, in the statement that he is not above tucking up his sleeves and helping serve his numerous customers; and that he is mindful of the horses while their drivers are refreshing themselves, providing a waterman for the teams, and this latter functionary, catching the spirit of his master, is not averse to mingling a little oat-meal in his proffered draughts. After succeeding finely for about two years, Mr. Pearce has recently taken a lease of the upper part of the premises, and fitted them handsomely for respectable men who require temporary accommodation, and yet are not well able to pay full hotel charges; and this venture, which is rightly named "The Shaftesbury Temperance Hotel," is also proving very popular.

Mr. Pearce's methods have very naturally attracted attention, and he is now offered capital and solicited to repeat them in several parts of London. In fact, a company with £20,000 capital in £1 shares has been formed of which he is to be the managing director. He may be able to demonstrate, after all, that coffee can beat beer in a fair fight, even in London town. We hope so.—The Evangelist.

Socialists and Americans.

Such is the heading under which the Commercial Advertiser of this city discoursed with excellent sense and justice upon the meeting held in Cooper Union Institute on the evening of September 20th, to welcome Dr. and Mrs. Aveling and Wilhelm Liefknecht, distinguished expounders of European socialism, who had arrived a few days before from Europe to begin a missionary tour in this country in the interest of their opinions. The president of the meeting began his introductory speech in English, but found it necessary, after a few sentences, to change to German. Very few Americans were present.

This is what the Commercial said the next afternoon about the affair:

The meeting of socialists in this city last night brought forth a very large audience, estimated at seven thousand men. These persons are discontented. They desire that the present order, under which men exist and labor and live as individuals, each seeking as best he can to secure happiness for himself and those dear to him, shall be set aside, and a new social system established in its place. They desire the overthrow of existing institutions and the creation of a new State, after a pattern of their own devising, wherein the individual and the family shall no longer be the units, but shall be merged in a larger community, devoted to picnics and the liberal supply of beer. Their desire is to be freed from the cares of life and excused from the responsibility of self-support.

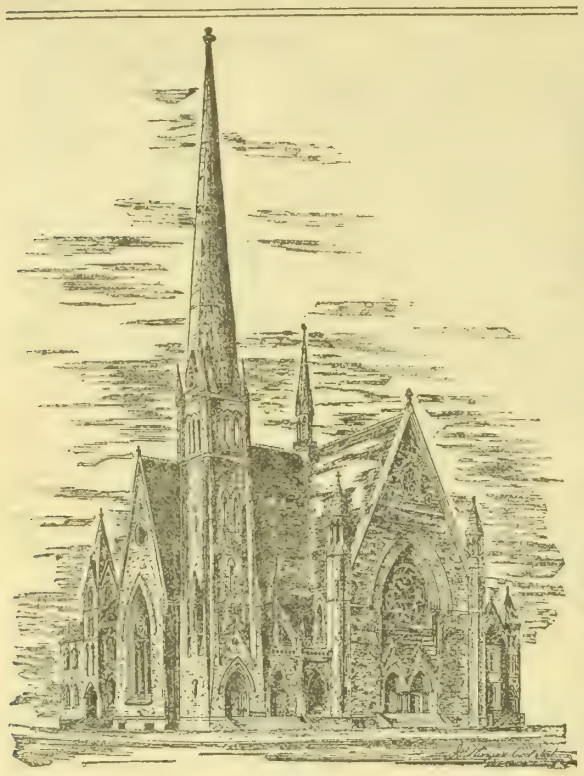
We Americans, native and adopted, believe in individual effort as best for men. We enjoy struggle and rejoice in achieving success in spite of difficulties, the overcoming of which marks our ability, our courage and our industry. We are a home-loving people, too, to whom the family is the only imaginable foundation of society. We do not greatly care for miscellaneous picnics, and we like to choose the companions with whom to drink beer when we drink it at all. We have no desire to be cared for by the State so far as our personal and domestic affairs are concerned, and we love liberty too well to sacrifice it to mere ease, as socialism proposes. We have established a system of self-government which rests upon individualism and has the family for its foundation; we have found it good, and we are not disposed to surrender the personal freedom it secures and the opportunities it offers for personal improvement and advancement, for the sake of that freedom from personal responsibility which socialism professes to offer. Socialism does not sprout from any seed in our soil or flourish in the atmosphere of our institutions.

It will be observed that the seven thousand socialists who assembled last night were all foreigners who have not yet learned our language. They come from misgoverned lands, from whose misgovernment they have learned to regard with distrust the very foundation of social order. They have come hither under an invitation more generous than was ever given by any people under the sun to the oppressed of all nations; but in coming they have not made themselves Americans, as those other foreigners have done whose help we have had in building up our great free country. They have not learned our language, or imbibed our principles, or understood our institutions, or acquired the least affection for the country of their adoption. They have simply transported themselves with their theories to our shores, and they now seek, without inquiring what the merits of our system may be, to set up another in its stead and impose upon us a mode of life ideally happy to them, but utterly intolerable to men who believe in themselves and desire personal freedom of action with a chance to know the joy of achievement. This country has no need of instruction from such persons, and is not likely to listen to their teachings, whether these take the mild form of State socialism with free beer or the virulent form of anarchism and dynamite bombs. We have ropes and prisons for men of the latter type, and free schools for the correction of the others.

More may be said truthfully and from no unkind feeling, no censorious disposition, in regard to the socialists who are swarming here from European hives. They are ignorant and worse than ignorant of the character of American institutions, and so full of conceit that it is a most difficult task to enlighten them. They believe American society to be constituted as European society is, in which the influence of an aristocracy and of wealth is almost insurmountable. Whereas, here, there is hardly another influence which is so constantly brushed aside and overpowered as that of what is called, Society. And nothing is more common than the rejection of a measure simply because it is advocated by rich men. Besides, the rich men, with very few exceptions, have risen from the ranks—not a few began life as workingmen. Furthermore, these foreign socialists believe the Church to be such as the State churches of Europe are,—a chief organ of the Crown and aristocracy, maintained from vested funds and annuities from the public treasury, and, therefore, largely independent of the people. Whereas there is nothing in the world more dependent on popular favor than the American Christian Church, nothing so entirely sustained by the voluntary action of the people. Tell the socialist from the Continent that these things are so, and in his abounding self-conceit, the man who has been a few months on these shores, asserts that he knows better and intends to overturn Church and State and society. We hold up both hands in favor of closing the gates of this land against this destructive ignorance and prejudice.

At the Unitarian Convention, held a few days ago at Saratoga, the following incident occurred: A pleasant thing on Thursday morning was the plea of the Rev. Mr. Hugenhaltz, "leader of the Liberal Holland Congregation at Grand Rapids, Michigan," for money to complete a modest church. He announced himself as a pupil of Dr. Abram Kuenen of Leyden, and spoke of his teacher in terms of the warmest admiration. Kuenen has rapidly commended himself to the Unitarians, but the enthusiasm with which Mr. Hugenhaltz's plea was heard and answered on the spot with more than he had asked for was more on account of his own happy ingenuity than his great master's influence and fame. The last I saw of him he was making for the telegraph office as fast as his long legs could carry him to telegraph to Grand Rapids the news of his success.

Our Church.



The Second Reformed Church of Harlem, N. Y. City.

NEITHER the old Log Chapel which stood at the foot of 125th street nor its immediate successor, the stone building located on the same site, would have recognized a near relative in the magnificent Gothic structure which stands at the corner of 123d street and 6th avenue, and which was dedicated last Thursday evening. The two edifices referred to gave place to two others, one of which still stands at the corner of 121st street and 3d avenue, and is the home of the organization which was formed in the 17th century and which grew out of a mission of the "Church at the Fort," (the Battery). This church grew and declined until about five years ago, when the Rev. G. Hutchinson Smyth, its eighth regular pastor, was called. In three years the congregation increased from about 125 attendants to one which filled the building. Steps were then taken toward the formation of the "Second Reformed Church of Harlem," and the result is the beautiful edifice, a cut of which heads this column. The church, chapel, and parsonage cover six city lots, and are built of stone from the Berea quarries of Ohio. The style is Gothic, the tower standing at the corner, and a pointed arch rising upon each street. The main audience room is nearly rectangular, with a gallery on two sides. In the rear of the body of the church are the Sabbath-school room, with a Bible class and infant class room opening out of it at either end. Over the former of these is the parlor, and over the latter another Bible class room, both of which open into the Sabbath-school room, and can be used as galleries. The woodwork throughout is of cherry with a mahogany finish. The basement contains all the appliances usually found in a modern kitchen.

Long before the hour of service the building was crowded, and at a quarter before eight o'clock Mr. Frank Taft regaled the large audience with selections played in exquisite style upon the great organ, which is one of Roosevelt's best. The service proper was opened with an anthem sung by the choir, which is composed of a quartette and a chorus of twenty five voices, and led by Prof. Rutenberg. The Rev. Dr. Ormiston offered the invocation and pronounced the salutation, after which Rev. Dr. Elmendorf led in the responsive reading of the One Hundred and Thirty Second Psalm. The hymn, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," was read by the Rev. Mr. Goebel, and sung heartily by the whole congregation. The pastor, Rev. G. Hutchinson Smyth, then spoke substantially as follows: "This new church enterprise was inaugurated about two years ago, when a committee was appointed to select a site. The ground having been procured, six or eight of the best architects drew plans for the new house of worship, and J. R. Thomas was the successful candidate. Lizt and Lennon were the builders, and we think the work has been done with credit to them and profit to us. I laid down this rule at the beginning, and my brethren of the Consistory sustained me in it; we will have nothing to do with any workmen, no matter how cheap their work, unless they are persons of known integrity and ability in their respective departments. Four points were strongly impressed upon the mind of the architect—ventilation, acoustics, light and heat. Of the acoustics and ventilation and artificial lighting you can judge, but the heating capacity is yet to be tested. You perceive there is nothing gaudy about the place, but it is just such a building as becomes good, sober Dutch people. There have been applications for pews three months ago, but none have yet been assigned, so that all may have an equal chance for securing the best. Some have said, 'Well, the Dutch folks are going to have a very aristocratic church, and we cannot rent a pew there,' but no person who desires to hear the Gospel in this place will be denied because of the pew rent. This will range from five to twenty five dollars a sitting. We are glad to welcome, and we cordially invite, those who are not in connection with other churches to come in and join us in doing God's work here."

The form of dedication was then read, the congregation joining in the recital of the Apostle's Creed, and the dedicatory prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Elmendorf. Rev. Mr. Baker, of St. James' Church, then read the hymn, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory." The sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Ormiston from the text, Isaiah 2:3, "And many people shall go and say, Come ye and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob." A synopsis of the sermon is here given: "Many mountains about Jerusalem excelled this in height, but none in glory. For upon this little hill stood the temple, the dwelling place of God, the gathering place of the tribes. Let us suppose Isaiah peering into the future with tearful eyes. He saw the magnificent building in ruins. He looked again and saw the temple rise from its ashes; less grand in appearance, but exceeding it in glory; and he beheld the Lord coming to that temple as the Messiah, and the nations of the earth flowing into it. But laying aside the topic suggested by the text, the world's conversion, let us consider why we worship at His holy hill. Although the temple is abolished, its sacred things polluted, the very people scattered, the nation almost obliterated, yet God, God's people, His worship and sacrifice, still remain. The privilege, the promise—aye, and the presence, too, are ours. We will add the place, the sanctuary, the house of God. That man is sorely to be pitied who has never felt the power of place upon his own soul. Is there no spot, dear brother, sacred to you and hallowed because of the deep emotion, the holy joy, the heavenly peace which were there enkindled, or because baptized by tears of honest contrition? But why shall we go up to the house of the Lord? There are many reasons why, as men and patriots, we should rejoice in the erection, the existence and sustentation of Christian churches; such as the influence they have upon the mind and morals, upon the social, domestic and civil life of our people, upon our literature and laws and institutions. In a city with magnificent mansions, beautiful museums, crowded warehouses and busy factories,—without a church, you might write Ichabod upon the corner of every street. But the worshipper of God sees more in the Church than all of these. He goes up to the house of the Lord because of the blissful communion he there enjoys. The very essence of the Fall, was lost communion with God. Is it not wonderful that we, tenants of clay, weak and perishing, can hold communion with our Life and Light and Wisdom and Power? It is the privilege of every soul, the lowliest as well as the loftiest, the youngest as well as the oldest, the neediest as well as the most affluent. Second, We desire to come to the Lord's house to worship because of the Divine instruction we there receive. We go to listen to the exposition of God's Word and to engage in the observance of His ordinances. We go not to hear the news of the day or to have scientific truth expounded; not to listen to philosophical speculations or poetic fancies. It is the special, peculiar function of the pulpit to lead men from the present world to the next; to a higher and grander life, to be with God. Finally, we come to the mountain of the Lord's house to engage in the exercises of devotion; to worship, which is our highest privilege and greatest honor. Ever enter this house with solemn reverence and holy awe, for the place whereon thou standest is holy. The church is a place of prayer, a magazine of truth. It points up to the throne of God. It is a warning to the wicked and a welcome to the godly. Ever enter this place with intense earnestness and longing desire, and finally with profound gratitude and holy joy for all the blessings of Providence and grace. This congregation should feel this preëminently, gathered here in this beautiful place erected for the worship of God. With your pastors before you, with every facility and convenience for the performance of your work, what a place of privilege this is! Oh, may God bless your pastors abundantly and make this a birthplace of many, many souls, so that in that day it may be said that this and that man were born there."

The choir then sung, "Heaven and the Earth Display," and the Rev. Carlos Martyn delivered an address, in which he said: "I suppose you have asked me to speak a word to-night because having so recently passed through a similar experience, my words of greeting would be especially warm. In the name of my own people I bring you warmest congratulations. We rejoice with you as you enter your new and beautiful house of worship. I congratulate you as well in the name of the venerable body to which you belong, and I congratulate the Dutch Church upon these increasing evidences of our enlarging usefulness and of our continuing vigor. Now go on and make this church what a Church of Jesus Christ ought to be. Fill your church with life. In this city of ours we have no sympathy with deadness. Men who stand still get run over. Be alive, active, earnest. You remember the story of the boy who was asked by an evangelist if his father was a Christian. 'Oh, yes,' said he, 'but he don't work at it much.' There are a great many Christians of that kind in our churches; they don't work at it much. Old Father Taylor, pastor of the Seaman's Bethel in Boston, who used to preach in a kind of Noah's Ark that was anchored in the bay, was once asked, 'Is your church high or low church?' 'Well,' said he, 'that depends upon the tide; at high tide it is high church, and at low tide it is low church.' Make your church low church, so that in the words of Wordsworth, you may 'hear the still sad music of humanity,' so that you may get hold of the people. Make it high church so that it may lift men up before the throne of God and keep them there. Put your utmost earnestness, your blood red devotion into the work God calls you to do here. Remember the stirring words of Bishop Cox, 'We are living, dwelling in a grand and awful time, in an age on ages telling, to be living is sublime . . . . . strike! let every nerve and sinew tell on the ages—tell for God.'"

After singing the doxology, the Rev. Halsey Moore pronounced the benediction.

The Pastoral Letter.

THE General Synod at its last session adopted a pastoral letter, and directed that it should be read in all our churches on the second Sabbath of October, and instructed the ministers to preach on the subject of young men for the ministry; see Minutes, pages 207–210.

Will it be thought a thing unadvisable for me to call special attention to this matter, and to say that the Master has been better than our fears, and given us a Junior Class of ten in the Seminary at New Brunswick and of two in the Western Seminary at Holland, while the applications to the Board of Education exceed those of several previous years?

Brethren, pray and watch for laborers in the vineyard. Giles H. Mandeville, C. S.

....The Pastors' Association met on Monday at 34 Vesey street, and every chair in the room was occupied; this being the largest meeting of the season thus far. Rev. Dr. Bishop, in the absence of Dr. Read, read a suggestive paper on the liturgical question. It is expected that Dr. Read will be present next week. In case of his absence Dr. Chambers kindly consented to read a paper on the Classification of the Parables. Rev. Dr. Junkin, of South Carolina, is expected to be present also, to speak for a few minutes in regard to the Charleston earthquake sufferers.

....South Bend, Ind.—This city was visited by a very destructive hailstorm from the North, Sept. 22d, which demolished all exposed windows, and perforated the felt, tin, and iron roofs. The hailstones measured five or six inches in circumference, many of them more. The church and mission chapel of our Reformed Church, which face the east, came in for a full share of the devastation. The north windows of the church, of stained glass, were all riddled, and some of the front windows broken. The north windows of the chapel were broken in pieces. The skylights and tin roof of the lecture room, which is on the south side of the church, were wrecked, and the unprecedented rains that followed poured their floods from the church roof into the unprotected lecture room like a mill race. The closed shutters and steep roof protected the parsonage, but the roof of the wood shed looked as though beaten all over with the head of an axe. It was by far the heaviest storm of the kind ever known in South Bend.

N. D. W.

... The Classis of Hudson met at Upper Red Hook, Tuesday, September 21st. Rev. G. D. Lydecker was installed pastor of the church at that place. The sermon was preached by Rev. Geo. LeFevre from Rom. 1: 16. The charges to pastor and people were given by Revs. Wm. Veenschoten and John M. Reiner.

The Rev. John G. Gebhard was appointed Missionary Agent of the Classis. Revs T. S. Dusinberre and Wm. Veenschoten, together with Elders Chas. Macy and Thomas Elmendorf, were made delegates to the General Missionary Convention to be held in Brooklyn, the 26th and 27th of October.

The resignation of R. B. Shepard, the faithful and efficient Treasurer of Classis for twenty years, was accepted, and his son, R. M. Shepard, was elected his successor.

Rev. Geo. LeFevre, having accepted a call to the Presbyterian Church at Ancram Lead Mines, was dismissed to the Presbytery of Columbia. The meeting throughout was as pleasant as the day and the place

S. C.

....The Classis of Michigan met in Holland, Sept. 21st. Every church was represented excepting South Bend. Porter is only a name at present. The delegation was never better at the fall session. Rev. Isaac Collyer was received from the Classis of Philadelphia. Rev. C. S. Dutton had his relations with the Church of Macon dissolved, and henceforth will minister to De Spelder and South Macon. Rev. J. H. Kershow was declared Emeritus on account of disability already of years' continuance. He now resides at Centreville with the church which became self-sustaining by his efforts and sacrifices, and where he received his first installation and the church its first pastor.

The business of the session was of unusual interest, and was finished on Wednesday noon. Dr. Scott was constantly in attendance, and contributed as largely as usual to the success of the meeting. Rev. N. D. Williamson, the other veteran of the Classis, failed to be present with his customary oversight and valuable experience. Rev. P. Moerdyke, just returned from the Netherlands, was present on Tuesday.

The new church of Kalamazoo was well represented. This enterprise must be made a success, or future organizations of Americanized Hollanders will scarcely be attempted.

A committee was appointed to visit the churches of Macon and De Spelder. Hope Church is thriving under the acceptable ministrations of its pastor. The College is in a capital condition, with a most acceptable faculty and a large list of new students. The President's new house is enclosed and attractive in appearance. Another $3,000 to finish and furnish it would be as appropriate as the gift which memorialized the visit of General Synod. If the Dutch would take Holland they must pay the bills. S. C.

....The Classis of Paramus met in the Church of West New Hempstead, Tuesday, September 21st. The Rev. J. W. Warnshuis was received from the Classis of Iowa, and the licentiate, John Laubenheimer, from the South Classis of Bergen. The pastoral relation between the Church of Centreville, N. J, and the Rev. J. L. Stillwell was dissolved, and he was dismissed to the Classis of Orange. A call from the Holland Church of Passaic upon the Rev. J. W. Warnshuis was approved; also from the Church of West New Hempstead upon the licentiate John Laubenheimer.

The following overture to General Synod was adopted: "In view of the uncertain results of Synodical legislation, as especially manifest in recent years with regard to Liturgical amendments, the Classis of Paramus respectfully suggests to the General Synod the possibility of taking some measures to give greater permanency to its constituency. With this end in view, the Classis would hereby petition General Synod to appoint at its next meeting a special committee to report at the same session some plan which shall be recommended to the Classes as an amendment to the Constitution in the matter of their nomination of delegates. They would raise the inquiry whether the present method of an annual change in the consistory of separate churches (Const., Art IV., Sec. 6 and 7,) might not furnish a working basis for the preparation of such plan."

Classis adjourned to meet in the Church of West New Hempstead on October 5th, at 2.30 P.M., for the purpose of ordaining and installing the candidate, John Laubenheimer, as pastor of that church. S. C.

... The Classis of Bergen met at Schraalenburgh and enjoyed a pleasant and profitable session. The address by the Rev. Eugene Booth, in place of the usual sermon, was heaatily endorsed by the members of Classis, and the needs of the Ferris Seminary in Japan will be remembered in the contributions of the churches.

A committee consisting of Revs. Van Buskirk and Seibert and Elder I. D. Bogert was appointed to proceed to organize a Reformed church at Westwood, N. J., and said committee will meet upon the ground at an early date for that purpose. This church will occupy one of the most promising sites for a new enterprise that could possibly be had. A church building will be put up as soon as possible, possibly on the identical spot where the chapel stood that was utterly wrecked and destroyed by the cyclone of 1885, or if not there in close proximity to it. S. C.

...Classis of Schoharie.—The fall session was held at Gallupville, N. Y., Sept. 21st. The churches of the Classis were well represented. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. G. Fagg, of Cobleskill, from Phil. 3:13, 14.

Revs. J. G. Fagg and J. G. Smart and Elder Wm. Potts were appointed a committee to arrange for Classical missionary conventions during the fall and winter. Classis approved of the apportionment made by the Board of Domestic Missions, and resolved to do all in its power to raise it. S. C.

....The Classis of Montgomery met in ordinary session at Manheim, Sept. 20th, at 7 P.M. The evening was given to the discussion of the following topics: Family Devotions, by Revs. J. A. DeBaun, D.D., and A. J. Hageman; Power of Song in Worship, by Revs. A. D. Minor and J. H. Brandow; Indifference to Religion, by Rev. T. A. Beekman.

The usual business was attended to in order. Rev. W. W. Whitney, of the M. E. Church, was received as a member of Classis, and arrangements made for his installation over the Church of Ephratah, on Tuesday, October 12th, at 11 A.M.

A committee of Classis was appointed to consider the subject of organizing a Reformed church at Little Falls, with power to carry out the end proposed. S. C.

....The Classis of Greene met in the Church of Kiskatom, Sept. 21st, 1886. All the churches except one (Second Athens) were represented.

Besides the usual routine, the following items were transacted: Wm. B. Hill, a licentiate from the Presbytery of Baltimore, was received. A call from the First Church of Athens upon Mr. Hill was examined and approved. After which, he was examined on all the branches required, and the Classis unanimously sustained the examination.

It was resolved that hereafter the necessary expenses of delegates shall be paid by the Classis.

The following delegates were appointed to attend the Missionary Conference in Brooklyn: Rev. Messrs. G. J. Van Neste, E. N. Sebring and J. H. Salisbury.

A committee was appointed to enquire into the validity and authority of a marriage ceremony performed by a licentiate.

S. C.

First Church, Philadelphia.—The lecture and Sunday school rooms were reopened last Sunday (October 3d), after being thoroughly renovated and refurnished at an expense of $1,300. The pews have been removed and replaced by chairs, the walls have been frescoed, and the floors carpeted. The primary department room has been enlarged. Rev. Dr. Clark and Superintendent Van Tine, of the Second Church, participated in the opening exercises.

...Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Wm. H. Ford is prepared to deliver a series of lectures, illustrated by stereopticon views, descriptive of places visited by him, during a recent tour in Europe. The subjects are Ireland, Glasgow and the Clyde, Edinburgh, Cathedrals and Abbeys of Great Britain, London, and Mary, Queen of Scots. The course cannot fail to be highly interesting. The lectures are given for the benefit of the church. The church has adopted the system of free seats for the evening service. Mr. Ford's address is 330 Clinton street, Brooklyn. Each lecture is complete in itself, and those desiring Mr. Ford's services can engage him for such lectures as they prefer.

....Rev. Abraham Thompson.—Besides the people of Readington, a considerable number of ministers and a large delegation from the Knox Memorial Chapel of New York, attended the funeral of Mr Thompson in the Reformed Church of Readington on September 21st. The Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff, the pastor, conducted the service, read the Scripture selections and delivered the closing address, in which he related the impressions he had received from Mr. Thompson in various interviews Prof. Cooper, of Rutgers College, offered prayer. The Rev. James LeFevre spoke with much tenderness of his personal intimacy with Mr. Thompson, continued through many years, making upon him the impression of a noble and beautiful character, which was commended as an example to the young persons present. An address was made by the Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers, who said that his acquaintance with Mr. Thompson had been chiefly during the last ten years, when he was in charge of the Knox Memorial Mission Chapel in New York. The work here was particularly delicate and difficult, but Mr. Thompson performed it to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. In preaching, in visiting the sick, in interesting the young, in gaining the confidence of the parents, he displayed great diligence and tact, and his labors bore constant fruit. But, while thus active, he was also and always a student, continually storing his mind with the best literature. Not only did he retain the Greek and Hebrew acquired in his Seminary course, but he also became familiar with French and German, and especially with the Dutch language, which he spoke with fluency and correctness, so much so that more than once during the disability of the pastor of the Holland Church he supplied his place with great acceptance. In view of this fact his death is a very great loss to our denomination. The same thing may be said of his usefulness as a member of the Classis. He was the Stated Clerk of the body, and succeeded the speaker in that office, and exhibited superior excellence in the discharge of its duties. It was a dark dispensation which removed such a man in the prime of life from a position in which he could so ill be spared.

In the graveyard of the Readington Church, as the pastor said in his address, the Rev. Mr. Van Artsdalen was buried in 1786, exactly one hundred years ago; Studdiford in 1826, sixty years ago; Van Liew in 1869, and now the body of another faithful minister in this consecrated ground awaits the resurrection.

...Western Items.—The First Reformed Church of Grand Haven, Mich., made vacant by the resignation of Rev. Henry Dosker, who accepted the Lectorship of the Western Theological Seminary at Holland, Mich., has called Rev. J. P. De Jonge, of North Holland....Prof. Kleinheksel, of Hope College, is very sick with typo-malaria, with symptoms of brain fever. ....The Church of Rotterdam, Kan., Rev. J. Hoekje pastor, is building a new house of worship, which they expect to complete in a few weeks ...The family of Oltmans, of Grand Rapids, Mich., have received a telegram of Rev. A. Oltmans, missionary to Japan, announcing his safe arrival at Yokohama....Last Friday was the eleventh anniversary of the Third Church of Grand Rapids, Rev. A. Kriekaard pastor. The occasion was celebrated by the dedication of a new pipe organ just put into the church. ...Rev. A. Buursma, of Orange City, Iowa, has declined the call to the Sixth Church of Paterson, N. J....The Church of Marion, Wayne Co., N. Y., has called Rev. H. E. Nies, of Paterson, N. J.

(Continued on page twelve.)

News of the Week.

Wednesday, Sept 29.—The acquittal of the Guesdists, who were prosecuted by the Government for threatening to send to prison and to confiscate the property of the Rothchilds and other capitalists, has made a great impression on the socialists of Great Britain....An appeal for funds is being made in Ireland to resist evictions and coercion....There was a radical riot in France yesterday at the unveiling of a statue of Armand Barbes, colleague of Blanqui ...A paper was read at the Scientists' Congress at Berlin, showing that vagrancy promotes lunacy....Bulgaria refuses to liberate the persons imprisoned for abducting Prince Alexander, on which Russia insists....A socialistic riot occurred at Leipsic....The steamer "Saratoga," of the Troy line, ran aground last night a little below Tivoli, on the Hudson....Another shock of earthquake has been felt in South Carolina ...The anarchists of Chicago are eagerly demanding a new trial....A gentleman at nine o'clock last evening was attacked by ruffians at Fifth avenue and Seventy-second street and severely injured

Thursday, 30.—The American Legation and British Foreign Office both declare the alleged fishery and commercial treaty a fabrication....The Lord Mayor of Dublin says he expects a great increase of agrarian troubles in Ireland....An editor and a captain in the French army fight a duel, and the captain was severely injured....Bulgaria is very much excited over a violent circular sent out by Gen. Kaulbars, representing the Russian Government....Another riot is reported at Belfast, Ireland....The revolution in Mexico is ended....The volcano at Colima, Mexico, is active....The Chicago herdsmen are very reluctant about killing their cattle which are thought to have pleuro-pneumonia....Wiggins is now entirely discredited as a weather prophet, though the people of the South were greatly frightened....Two childish lovers, aged 14 and 17 years, committed suicide because of parental objections to their marriage.

Friday, Oct. 1.—There was much excitement in the Royal Stock Exchange at London on the receipt of the Anti Russian speech of the Premier of the Austrian Parliament, who declared that Austria would not allow any power to invade Bulgaria....The Bulgarians are in a trying position, not daring to obey or to resist Russian demands....Several sheriffs who were distraining on property at County Clare, Ireland, were seized by the women and imprisoned while the men drove the cattle away....The cowboys in the Northwest massacred a number of Blood Indians at the border of the Montana district ...General Andrew Jackson's body servant died at Brantford, Canada, at the age of 125 years. ....A severe dynamite explosion took place on the Harlem river near Bay Chester station, killing instantly four men; the cause of the disaster is unknown ...Jefferson Davis has written a letter severely denouncing General Sherman....The report of General Miles on the Arizona campaign is handed in, and dissatisfaction is expressed as the surrender was not unconditional.... The "Mayflower" and "Galatea" race has been declared off....A. S. Gage & Co., of Chicago, dealers in millinery and fancy goods, failed yesterday; assest estimated at $650 000, liabilities $750,000 ...Charleston quiet and cheerful.

Saturday, 2.—General Kaulbar, the Russian authority in Bulgaria, has moderated his demands on Bulgaria. Russian trade is said to be very much injured by the Bulgarian crisis, and war would be welcomed at Moscow....There is said to be great encouragement to the Home Rule movement both in Scotland and Ireland.... The will of the late Duke d'Aumale bequeaths his great estates at Chantilly, with all their purtenances, works of art, books and revenues, to the French Institute.... The volcanic peak, Pabloff Mountain, on the Alaska Peninsula, is in a state of eruption....The Chicago anarchists are seeking a new trial....Fears of a lock-out in Chicago among the workingmen in the packing houses.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Our Trip Up Pike's Peak.

THERE were seven in our party, including the guide, which class of men we never met in the East. He was tall, angular and wiry, accustomed to climbing the mountain, and apparently never feeling fatigue or cold. He wore cowboy's leather pants, with deep fringe down the sides, and his boots were adorned with spurs. He rode his horse easily and carelessly, and thought nothing of jumping on and off every five minutes, even when the animal was in motion.

We started Monday morning, August 30th, about half after nine o'clock from the village of Manitou, all in high good spirits, and ready to take all things as part of the fun. We were mounted on animals which were called horses, but I fear if I should attempt to ride up Fifth avenue on one of that variety, I would be the laughing stock of all beholders. We had determined not to go to the summit of the peak that day, fearing it would be too fatiguing for the ladies of the party. Our plan was to spend the night at a place called Seven Lakes, which is on the opposite side of the peak from Manitou, and at an elevation of more than eleven thousand feet.

We were in a snowstorm about an hour during the middle of the day,—a decided change from the warm climate which prevails in the lower portions of Colorado. The scenery was picturesque and grand as we wound our way slowly upward on the side of the mountain; and it was very, very wild, for not a building of any description was to be seen for miles. We reached the Seven Lakes' House about three o'clock, tired and hungry, and we ate so heartily I think the proprietor decided that there was not much profit to be made out of our party. It was so cold we had to bundle up pretty warmly on going out of the house, but the greatest novelty was the difficulty in breathing, caused by the rarity of the atmosphere. The lakes are several miles apart and are really nothing more than ponds; but sheets of water are rare in Colorado, and are made the most of. We retired early, partly to keep warm and partly because we knew that we had an early start before us the next morning.

We were wakened at half after five, and before six were in our saddles, shivering in the crisp frosty air. Our teeth chattered and our hands and feet became numb, and then the encouraging guide would remark, "If you call this cold, I don't know what you will say when you reach the summit." He would keep tendering us his coat, which he knew of course we would not have taken from him, or perhaps he would not have offered it so freely.

Pike's Peak is 14,147 feet above sea-level, and we fully appreciated that fact before we reached the summit. It snowed hard, and the sleet and hail cut our faces unmercifully, and we felt as though we had suddenly been plunged into the depth of winter. Fortunately none of our party were sick, for many are attacked with violent bleedings of the ears and nose, and seasickness. We reached the summit at nine o'clock and remained there three hours. The United States has a signal station there, and we were most thankful to take refuge under the friendly roof of Uncle Sam, and cluster around his blazing fire. I have seldom been more glad to see a good roaring fire, for we were "chilled to the bone." The difficulty in breathing had increased as we ascended, and now it was work even to walk across the room. We had no view unfortunately, but comparatively few do who ascend, and the snowstorm was more novel, perhaps.

The mountain is far above timber-line, and as the guide said, "the vegetation is composed chiefly of stones." Great masses are piled one upon the other, and in the storm all that was to be seen was rock, rock, rock, as far as the eye could reach.

It must be a very forlorn kind of life for the men in the signal service, but perhaps they do not deserve our pity, for they do not seem to mind it as much as one would suppose. In fact, I think they enjoy the novelty of their hermit lives. It is impossible to keep up telegraph wires because of the great amount of electricity in the atmosphere, so in winter the officers are in reality cut off from the rest of the world. Donkeys carry up the supplies in the fall to last until spring, an important item being forty cords of wood. During the summer and in winter when practicable, the men only stay on the summit two weeks at a time. They then change with two men stationed at Colorado Springs, for if they remained too long in such a high altitude, their vitality would be reduced very rapidly.

We started down the mountain a little after twelve and were five hours descending to the village of Manitou, a distance of eleven miles from the summit. Many people think that coming down a mountain is much easier than going up, but, however that may be, we were very glad when we came in sight of the friendly hotel.

It had been a hard ride of twenty-two miles, but one never to be forgotten, and it seemed a fitting end to our summer among the Rocky Mountains.

E. P. Van Norden.

Mr. Van t'Lindenhout's Visit to America.

ON the 11th of September, after a visit of six weeks in this country, Mr. Van t'Lindenhout, the founder and present director of the Orphanage of Neerbosch, Netherlands, returned to his native country. His principal object in coming here was to see if there was an opportunity for sending some of his orphans to the Western States, after they should have become thoroughly fitted for life. His second object was to meet the American friends who had for so long a time helped him in his labors by their prayers and gifts.

Both of these objects were attained, for not only did he find abundant opportunities for sending his charges to the West, but also he was able to meet his friends in thirty-four different churches. During this time he received over twenty-five hundred dollars for his asylum.

The impressions which he received of this country were very favorable. This was especially true of the West. The progress made in so short a time in these regions was a great surprise to one accustomed to the slow methods of Europe. But, while recognizing the points of superiority, he was not blind to the faults of our country, and his suggestions were often of great value.

Mr. Van t'Lindenhout was greatly pleased with the spiritual condition of the Reformed Church. In its purity of doctrine and adherence to the faith of the fathers, he found what he and others have striven to obtain in the old Church of the Fatherland. This, together with the great love manifested toward himself and his work, made him hope that soon a closer union might be effected between our own Church and the orthodox Christians of the Netherlands.

Being a man of the greatest influence in the churches, he is eminently fitted to bring this about, and will do all in his power to accomplish such a result. Through the efforts of this great man of faith we may look forward to a renewal of relations between the Churches of Holland and America.

Recognizing the needs of our Board, it will be his aim to turn the contributions of the Netherlands for foreign missions, which have for many years flowed into the coffers of the Moravian brethren, into those of our own Church, to which they are more closely related by a similarity of faith and doctrine.

The communities which he visited have been stirred up as scarcely ever before by his earnest preaching and the proofs which he gave from his own experience that God answers prayer. He is no longer in our midst, but the influence of his visit will be felt for a long time to come. J. A. Otte.

Dr. Otte, a graduate of the Medical College of the University of Michigan, has been appointed a medical missionary to Amoy, China, by our Board of Foreign Missions. He was Mr. Van t'Lindenhout's companion, guide and interpreter, in his visit during the past summer to the churches of Hollanders in the West. On the 25th Dr. Otte embarked on the Dutch steamer for the Netherlands, where he expects to spend a year, dividing his time between the hospital and cliniques of the Medical School and certain of the theological classes of the University at Utrecht. He expects also to represent our foreign missions before the churches of Holland and before social gatherings, as he may have opportunity. Mr. Van t'Lindenhout hopes that the Christians of the Netherlands will be disposed to assume a considerable part of the support of medical work, in connection with our mission at Amoy.

We add a description of Mr. Van t'Lindenhout's orphanage, prepared for circulation amongst our Western churches.

ORPHANAGE OF NEERBOSCH.

Custom is an old and tyrannical monarch, and its subjects, as a rule, are only too willing to bear its yoke. Perhaps its conservative power, its unwillingness to allow any change for good, is nowhere so evident as in the history of what has been done for centuries to help and educate the orphans of the poorer members of society. However bad their condition might be, scarcely anything new was ever tried, and this though, chiefly in the smaller places, the existing usages were of the most unchristian and even inhuman character; yes, more consistent with the cruelties of slavery than with the spirit of love inculcated by the love of a Saviour who bore our sins on the Cross.

A NEW ROAD TRIED.

This is the real character of what Mr. Van t'Lindenhout has done for Holland. Guided by his experience in this matter, the result of many years' travelling as an evangelist, he planned a thorough new road and, following the guidance of the Holy Spirit, has been successful beyond expectation. At the time, in fact, nobody thought better of his plans and endeavors than as a beautiful vision. In 1863 the world at large and even his best friends thought and spoke of him as an enthusiast, whose failure in what he expected to realize was beyond question.

Failure was the expected result, yet to-day the Orphanage of Neerbosch is a reality and is itself quite a village, close to the village of that name. To such an extent the first small house built in the field has grown that the place, with its houses, schools, workshops and farm, surrounded by gardens, wood, cornfields and pasture, is now not only a most lovely and attractive spot, but a really princely possession in the finest and healthiest part of our country. More than eight hundred orphans and Mr. Van t'Lindenhout's staff of teachers and helpers are a population more numerous than that of many a village. Seeing so many hundred children, all healthy looking, playing and freely looking about, it resembles a beehive full of life and enjoyment.

HISTORY OF THE GROWING AND PROSPEROUS WORK.

Mr. Van t'Lindenhout's work is an interesting history, parallel to none other. It shows the power of faith, realizing that the power of the Lord is made perfect in weakness. In the course of his travels as a preacher Mr. Van t'Lindenhout reflected that almost in every village the poorer orphans were neglected to such a degree that, as little pariahs, they could not become otherwise than a burden to society and a disgrace to the Church of Christ. Trusting in the Lord, and guided by the example of Francke and George Muller, he resolved upon rescuing as many as he possibly could. Happily he found a friend willing to help, and the first step taken was to purchase an old uninhabited and rather dilapidated house at Nijmegen, which the people called haunted. This house had the advantage of having twenty large rooms.

Thus started a work of faith; children and free gifts were prayerfully expected. The first prayer-meeting brought the first gifts, not exceeding three dollars. Admission for three orphans was asked, but as their friends heard that no capital of fixed annual contributions had been secured, they went back with the children, saying, in such a place their condition would even be worse than it had previously been.

At this event many expected the orphanage would not even have a beginning. Yet, after a few weeks, two other children came; not very young, and so ragged and neglected that their condition scarcely could become worse. These were a boy and a girl. Their education was a really arduous work, but love had its triumph, and Mr. and Mrs. Van t'Lindenhout having thus proved that they were real workers, orphans and gifts came in growing numbers, so that even the large house with its twenty rooms was inadequate to harbor so many.

At this instant it pleased the Lord to open the heart of a young farmer in Neerbosch and to make him willing to present part of his fields to the orphanage, to build on it a refuge; a healthy place, more suitable for the young and weak than the old dark house in the city. Mr. Van t'Lindenhout was given at his disposal two acres, with the promise from the God-fearing farmer that if more land was desired he would grant his wish instantly. In this way a new era began, and every following year the Lord opened to his faithful servant new paths, realizing the great work of love that from the beginning had been fostered in his heart.

The first house was built for girls only, the little ones being reared by a sister of Mrs. Van t'Lindenhout. Since that eventful day scarcely a house on the new place was finished before another had to be planned, as a refuge for the ever growing number of orphans, for whom a home and real paternal care was an urgent necessity. In the year 1872 a thorough change was made. The refuge in the fields was chosen to be the home of all, and the old house in the city was left to the printing presses of the institution and the band of boys that were educated to this branch of labor. The printing office, in which are published the papers and books of the institution, help to the upbuilding of the institution. The printing, even of music and engravings, and the binding were of such a superior kind that only part of the work could be done in town, and the buildings for printing and binding at Neerbosch have been enlarged or rebuilt on different occasions.

The growing household, without any fixed income, and resting only on God's providential care, has received its daily manna, and, as in the days of old, the gifts came in the most remarkable manner which were needed for the feeding, education and for the required extension of the place, and to make every branch of work a thorough school of labor.

Faith-and-Oil Cures.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

"DO you mean to say, Doctor, that you have done all you can to save my boy?'

"No, I have not; let us pray."

This doctor's view of the relation of prayer and medicine was entirely Scriptural. Prayer cannot be substituted for medicine, but should supplement it. God has given us no promise that He will do anything for us which we can do for ourselves. When a Chicago millionaire rose in a noonday prayer-meeting and wished his fellow Christians to pray that four hundred dollars might be sent for a much-needed work in City Missions, Mr. Moody, who was conducting the meeting and knew the circumstances of the speaker, replied promptly: "Brother, if I was you I wouldn't trouble the Lord with that; I'd do it myself."

"Man's extremity is God's opportunity." The sick man and his friends must do all that can be done toward recovery by medicine, and nursing, and ventilation, and plumbing, and will, and hope, and prayer, and then call on God to do only what cannot be done by human means.

This doctrine is concretely taught in the Bible in three representative incidents. The first is the story of King Hezekiah (2 Kings, 20), who, in the very noon of his prosperity was visited by sickness. The teachers of faith-healing do not sufficiently emphasize the fact that sickness is not of itself an evil, but always a teacher sent from God; sometimes sent to teach us what God's laws are and the danger of violating them; sometimes sent to teach humility, patience and sympathy, without which no character is complete. An all-wise, all loving God cannot answer a prayer for the taking away of this teacher, until he has taught his lessons. Supplication then, must be founded on submission,—the state of prayer in which the true Christian "prays without ceasing," and from which, like mountain peaks, each solitary act of prayer rises to God. God's wisdom and love have a veto-power over even man's faith and prayer.

The prophet Isaiah was selected for the delicate task of conveying to his royal friend God's decree, "Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die." This suggests yet another point which should be a part of a well-rounded system of teaching with regard to faith-healing, namely, that even if God gives restoration to health once and again, the prayer of faith cannot always be thus answered. God sends to every man the message, "Set thine house in order, for you must die within a few years, and you may die within a few hours."

When the prophet, by divine direction, informed the king that his disease was mortal, good as Hezekiah was, he did not receive the message as a piece of good tidings. The Bible gives no warrant for the popular idea that eagerness to die is a proof of superior piety in the sick. Rather does God teach us, in this story and elsewhere, that we ought to live as long as medicine and hope and will and prayer can make it possible. We are neither to rely on medicine without prayer, nor on prayer without medicine. Hezekiah, having been given up by the physicians, and having even received from God his death message, resorted at once to earnest prayer for recovery. Undoubtedly, he had prayed for recovery every day, if not every hour of his sickness, and prayed sincerely, but he must have prayed without sufficient earnestness, or he would have received a favorable answer, as the sequel shows, for the earnest prayer which he now offered brought almost at once a seeming change in God's decree from a sentence of death to a gift of fifteen years of added life.

However God's decree may look to the angels, who see things absolutely, to us, looking upon them relatively, this incident and others indicate that they may be changed by a change in our character. God's decree to Hezekiah in his weakness of will and prayer was immediate death, but God's decree to aroused and earnest Hezekiah was an assurance of added life; just as God's decree to Nineveh unrepentant was destruction, but to Nineveh repentant, a reprieve. Prayer produces a change in us and, therefore, a seeming change in God. He is always angry with the wicked, always loveth the righteous; but when the sinner goes from the lightning side of God's heart around to mercy's sunlight side, his own change seems to make a change in God. So when God's laws of nature cry to us, "Thou shalt die," a change in our habits or in our faith seems to change the decree to read, "Thou shalt live." What is especially to be emphasized is the fact that the prophet, by divine direction, in conveying to Hezekiah the assurance that God had heard his prayers, also poulticed his ulcer with figs, the approved remedy in the Orient then and now for such a sore. Of course, this alone could not have saved him, but the little benefit which such human means could impart God required should be thus imparted, and in His economy of miracle He would do supernaturally only what could not be done naturally. Hezekiah was healed by the prayer and poultice, and evidently could not have been healed by either without the other.

The story of Christ healing the blind man, whose eyes He first anointed with spittle, (John 9), the approved medicine at that time for sore eyes, which never had and never could heal one born blind, but could do some little good to the blind man's eyes, and so must be used as far as it went, is of the same import. The miracle came in only as a supplement to the medicine, not as a substitute for it.

These two passages afford the key for the interpretation of the much-abused passage in James, where Christians are bidden to pray for the sick and anoint them with oil (5: 14, 15). Olive oil was then in the Orient and is still the principal medicine, used both internally and externally, especially for anointing and rubbing the skin, with a view to increasing the strength. Just as a business man speaks of employing a hundred "hands," meaning a hundred men, or as a Christian speaks of the conversion of a hundred souls, meaning a hundred men; and just as Christ spoke of the "lilies" when He meant all flowers, so James evidently speaks of oil as representative of medicine in general. This passage teaches nothing different from the story of Hezekiah and the story of the blind man, but adds further emphasis to the Bible-teaching that, while we are to pray for the recovery of the sick, our prayer is not to take the place of medicine. No consistent Christian can fail to believe in faith-and-oil cures. To interpret the passage as fulfilled by prayer with a formal touch of oil on cheek or head is as absurd as the Indian's literalism who, on hearing a white ambassador to his tribe say, in proof of his influence with the President, "I have the ear of the Great Father," exclaimed incredulously, "Show it, show it."

There is a large element of truth, as every Christian must believe, in the doctrine of faith healing; but the system, to be well-balanced and complete, should classify not only the cures, but the opposite. We should know how many of the sick who have been prayed for by men of faith are healed permanently, how many are only seemingly healed, and how many receive no apparent benefit. The results of such a classification would doubtless teach us not only that the prayer of faith can save the sick, when the recovery is in accordance with the Divine Will, but also that prayers of equal faith from the same persons are at other times unable to bring recovery, for the evident reason that the Divine wisdom and love recognize that the benefits of sickness are greater to the sufferer or to others than would be the benefits of health.

The greatest peril of all is that a large and special emphasis upon faith-healing in one's thoughts or words will turn too much of his prayer energy, which should be directed chiefly against the sins that kill the soul, into fighting the diseases that only kill the body, and so encourage the mistaken notion that man is a body and has a soul, an error which is already strongly entrenched in the popular mind. What is most needed is not a special school of prophets to increase the amount of praying for selfish and physical blessings, but rather a school of prophets who shall teach the people to make temporal things as subordinate in their daily prayers as they are in the pattern prayer given by our Lord, in which there is but a single sentence that asks God to give us temporal things, while in every other clause of the prayer the heart seeks the glory of God and the health of souls.

Church Union Discussion.

BY REV J. A. DAVIS.

DOUBTLESS others besides the writer were glad to see the announcement that the columns of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER are "open to the statement of the desires and reasons of those who favor a union" with the German Reformed Church. While a heated partisan discussion is to be deprecated, a frank presentation of facts and arguments for and against union, if made in a worthy Christian spirit, cannot but result in good. There are many loyal sons of the Church, no doubt, who oppose union and do it with the best interest of the Church at heart. So there are many just as loyal and probably as wise, who heartily favor union. It is but fair to suppose that each side has facts and arguments that the other has not or has not fairly considered. What is needed is that those facts and arguments be presented, that they may be fairly and fully considered.

No one is so eager for union that he would rush into it in the face of great difficulty and trouble. We do not care to furnish for ourselves ground for ceaseless and hopeless repentance. We have as a Church enough food for bitter meditation without exchanging the sweets left for still more wormwood.

It is to be hoped that in our communion there is no one so unfaithful to Christ's cause that he would compel the Church to remain separate from others, when by a union the work of the Master would be far more greatly promoted. He who would, for his own sake, prevent union when the cause of Christ calls for such coming together is not a loyal son of our Church, he does not deserve the name of Dutchman, and much less of Christian. This is a matter in which desire and preference and prejudice have no place; it is not for self, but the kingdom of Christ, that the Church exists at all. He who would make our denomination a little Zion, in which he may be comfortable and honored, may find himself amazingly uncomfortable at last; so he who, to further his personal ends, would force us into union, will find at last that he has made a mistake that he can never get over.

That there is a tendency toward union throughout the Church of our Lord is evident; that our own part of the Church is feeling this force of gravitation is becoming apparent. Why this tendency? What have we to do with it? We may well ask ourselves these questions. They may be vital ones to our Church. It will not do for us to sit still with folded hands, waiting for the revelation as to duty to come to us. Prophets do not visit the earth now-a-days, nor do revelations come as of old. God teaches His working children through providential openings what He would have them do. Revelation gives the general principles; as Providence opens the way for us to apply them.

It will not do for us to say that, since union years ago was unwise, therefore it is unwise now. There are constant changes in others as well as in ourselves. It may be that while it might have been right years ago to oppose union it would be wrong now. The whole Church is making progress and is moving toward Christ, the centre toward whom each church radius points. How can we know, without considering the matter fairly and fully, that we have not reached the point in progress where we should unite with those nearest to us? If we have passed the circle within which union is to begin, then those who oppose may be found on the wrong side of the line. Worse than left, they are fighting not only Providence, but Him who stands behind.

Let the Church have the facts; some may be unpleasant, but let them be given. We need to be frank and fearless while kind and charitable. Our Church is too dear to us, too valuable to the work of the Lord to be sacrificed through sentiment, ignorance or prejudice. If the probabilities are that union would lessen our work for our Lord, then let us beware how we hasten into such union. If union would bring trouble and hindrance to the work of the Gospel, then let us keep the trouble and hindrance away. We are not compelled to union. When it becomes a matter of life or death to the Church, even then, rather than produce discord, trouble and weakness to the kingdom of Christ, let the Dutch Church be alone in her dying struggles. Let her go down with honor rather than live with disgrace.

On the other hand, if we are hindering or likely to hinder the cause of Christ by remaining separate, or if by uniting with another we might make that cause more prosperous, let us know the facts. What we wish to know is how best we can promote our Lord's kingdom by means of our beloved Zion. The Church that can take the initiative in union work on mission ground is not the Church to stand back in its own land when the Lord bids it go forward. It can, if need be, take the initiative here. A Church composed of the children of heroes and martyrs is not the one to refuse when the Lord calls for a sacrifice. We have a history well worthy our pride, and we shall not be ashamed of the added page if the Master bid us write it, that we gave ourselves to promote His cause.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

... "A History of Greek Literature from the Earliest Period to the Death of Demosthenes." By F. B. Jevons, M.A. This is an extremely convenient hand-book of a large and important theme. The author writes in a clear and simple style and from adequate knowledge. His volume is divided into two parts. The first treats of Epic Poetry, of Lyric, and of the Drama, bringing under critical review the chief writers in each. Part second takes up History, Oratory and Philosophy in the same way. The last mentioned is treated rather scantily, but the others receive full justice. The author has a very good statement of the Homeric question, setting forth the origin and growth of the doubts as to the personality of Homer, and citing in a modest and manly way the considerations which lead him to adhere to the early view. For its limits the discussion is as full as is to be desired. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

...."Biblical Theology of the Old Testament." Based on Oehler. By R. F. Weidner. The author is Professor of Theology in the Theological Seminary of the Scandinavian Evangelical Lutheran Augustana Synod at Rock Island, Ill., and his book is the second volume of a series of Theological Encyclopædia and Methodology. The first, which treats of Exegetical Theology, we have not seen. The present issue is a very creditable one. It contains a neat summary of the work of Oehler, which is universally admitted to be the standard treatise on the subject. Prof. Weidner does not always agree with the German writer, yet fairly states his view even when dissenting from it. The book will be found very useful by all who have not time for the fuller details of the original, and will thus secure Dr. Oehler a far wider circle of readers than he could otherwise command. (F. H. Revell.)

...."Commentary on the Gospel of John." By F. Godet. Translated and Edited by President Timothy Dwight. Vol. II. The first volume of this grand work has been noticed in these columns, and of this concluding volume it is only necessary to say that, "The end crowns the work." As the Apostle entered into close sympathy with his Divine Teacher, so Prof. Godet has caught the spirit of John, while President Dwight has proved himself a sympathetic translator, and by his additional notes has made what was of great value before still more useful. A brief but clear index to the entire work concludes this volume. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

...."The Wisdom of God, and Other Sermons." By Rev. Aurelian H. Post. These sermons are twelve in number, and well worth reading. Fascinating in style, fresh and stimulating in thought, and evangelical in doctrine, they are worthy of a larger audience than can be put in any building, and which they will reach in this printed and bound form. (C. Venton Patterson & Co., Rochester, N. Y.)

...."True Words for Brave Men" is the title of a selection from Charles Kingsley's sermons and addresses, made with a special view to circulation among soldiers and sailors. Kingsley's sermons are models for preaching to out-of-church congregations of every sort. Some of the topics of this collection are: "The Good Centurion;" "St. Peter, or True Courage;" "The Story of Joseph;" "David's Loyalty;" "Wonders of the Sea, or Daily Miracles;" "The Sailor's God;" "The Good Soldier of Jesus Christ." An interesting lecture is added, "The Story of Cortez, or Pluck in the Sixteenth Century." It was a good and useful thought to compile this little book. (Thomas Whittaker.)

...."The Peterkin Papers." By Lucretia P. Hale. This is a new illustrated edition of a book which found great acceptance, both when its papers originally appeared in Our Young Folks and in St. Nicholas, and when they were collected into a volume. As now enlarged in text and furnished with many new pictures, and beautifully printed, it may be recommended as an admirable holiday book for any circle. (Ticknor & Co.)

...."A White Heron." By Sarah Orne Jewett. Lovers of short stories will hail with pleasure this last collection by a favorite author. Nine of Miss Jewett's inimitable character sketches of New England life are found in this daintily printed and bound volume. "The Two Browns" is perhaps one of the best, though we dare not decide for others. The fireside circle in autumn and winter is always enriched when one of Miss Jewett's books is brought home. No one who ever tried the reading can be disappointed. We not only advise such a purchase and reading, but really envy the pleasure to those who try the author for the first time. A volume worthy of attention by those seeking holiday gifts. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

...."The Boys' Book of Sports and Out-Door Life," is a handsome octavo volume of three hundred and fifty-two pages, edited by Maurice Thompson. It contains, to begin with, a tale called "Marvin and His Boy Hunters," in which full directions are given for the careful and intelligent use of the shot-gun. Afterward follow chapters on boating, fishing, shooting with bow and arrow, building a boat, camping out, walking, riding, swimming, and other out door sports and exercises. Many of these papers have already appeared in St. Nicholas. Some are given for the first time in this volume. All are intended to promote a taste for healthful amusement in the open air and to help in the training of the sound mind in the sound body. The book is beautifully and generously illustrated, and cannot fail to be a treasure for boys. A good Christmas book. (The Century Company.)

....In a neat memoral volume entitled "Woodstock: An Historical Sketch," by Clarence Winthrop Bowen, Ph.D., our readers who have personal interest in that ancient town, will find the address read at the bicentennial celebration held September 7th, 1886. It presents a careful review of the annals of that historic Connecticut locality, with pleasing reminiscences of its people and events. Among these are some very interesting passages relating to the famous John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, and his labors among the Nipmuck tribe. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Publishers' Weekly, Fall Announcement Number, a double number of 170 pages, September 18 and 25, is valuable to those who have not much money to spend and who wish to lay out that little to the best advantage, because it contains a list of the publications of this autumn, actual and yet to come from the chief publishers, has also the fall advertisements of the publishers, and contains about thirty closely printed pages of trustworthy descriptions of the new books. The publication office is at 31 and 32 Park Row, New York.

....The Gospel in All Lands for October, now published under the auspices of the great Methodist Episcopal Church, devotes about thirty large octavo pages to illustrated articles on missionary work in Persia, China and Bulgaria. A variety of miscellaneous paragraphs and papers follow, including notices of the missionary societies of half a dozen denominations. The number is full of information. It is published at the Methodist Mission Rooms, 805 Broadway, at $2 a year.

....The Pulpit Treasury for October is well stored with matter suited to the needs of ministers and others. Its frontispiece is a portrait of Dr. R. F. Sample of Minneapolis, which, with a view of his church, form the illustrations. A sermon by Dr. Sample and a sketch of his life are given. Rev. J. L. Harris contributes an excellent Thanksgiving sermon. Dr. A. T. Pierson has another pungent article on The Christian in the World. Among other contributors to this number are Drs. R. R. Booth, R. Storrs, A. G. Gordon, H. M. Scudder and Theo. Cuyler. The brief editorials are on timely topics. It compares favorably with previous numbers.

....The New Englander for September contains two very excellent papers. One is the address of Dr. Timothy Dwight at his inauguration as President of Yale College, an address universally praised as most appropriate to the speaker, the audience, and the occasion. The other is a review of the Life of Longfellow, doing full justice to the work, and at the same time stating its chief results for those who have no leisure to read the book itself.

....The Expositor for September (Randolph & Co.) continues Dr. MacLaren's suggestive Exposition of Colossians, and Dr. M. Dods's Comment on Zechariah; has a learned and acute paper by Prof. Godet on the first indications of Gnosticism in Asia Minor; and furnishes notes on Assyrian and Egyptian Literature which, besides other useful hints, make some sharp criticisms on the younger Delitzsch's contributions to Assyriology.

....The Forum for October contains its usual interesting melange. Mr. Mallocks opens with a paper on the Convalescence of Faith, but we had not heard of faith's being sick. Bishop Coxe treats of Americanisms in England with vivacity, and Prof. Young speaks wise words on Athletic Sports in Colleges. President Kendrick tells how he was educated in a modest yet instructive fashion, and Prof. Newman Smyth furnishes substantial, moral and civic reasons Why Sunday Should be Preserved. The Confessions of a Unitarian is a queer article from one of the extreme left wing. A foot-note gives the astounding information that "all the early English and American Puritanism, whether Presbyterian, Independent, Baptist or any other, has either become, or is on the way to become, Unitarian in fact, if not in name." No Fifth Monarchy fanatic ever evolved a wilder dream from his disordered imagination.

....The Art Journal for September opens with a fine full-page etching, and the number for October with a line engraving of Johnson's picture, Gurth the Swineherd. The letter-press of both is entertaining. We notice particularly an article on Steam Yachting, and a collection of Ruskin's Notes on Bewick's Birds, which are eminently characteristic.

....The American Antiquarian for September is well filled with matter belonging to its peculiar field. The editorial notes are fresh and vigorous

....The Medical Missionary Record contains an interesting memoir, with portrait of Dr. W. Burns Thomson, F.R.S.E., the father of Home Medical Missions, and a striking testimony to the value of such missions by Dr. J. L. Maxwell, late of Formosa. The number also reproduces the graphic view of a Century's Progress in Missions, given in the British Quarterly for April last.

....The Church Review for September is justly severe upon the Hymnal, and rather favorable to the Book Annexed. Dr. Sterrett, strange to say, writes approvingly of Hegel's Philosophy of Religion. Dr. Nelson justly rejects the Pauline origin of the epistle to the Hebrews, but does it on wrong grounds when asserting doctrinal differences. It is very singular to see it asserted of Paul that "he is the strenuous champion of Gentile but not of Jewish liberty" (p. 253). If in Christ Jesus "there is neither Jew nor Greek, but all are one," how can there be a liberty allowed to one that is withheld from the other? So it is said (p. 253) of Peter's First Epistle and of the Hebrews that "they alone make emphatic mention of the blood of Christ," yet Paul to the Ephesians speaks in one chapter of "redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins," and in the next says the far-off "are made nigh by the blood of Christ" The essay makes a great show of scholarship, but is extremely crude in reasoning and careless in assertion. The notices of Contemporary Literature are full and clear. We observe that the Andover speculations, entitled Progressive Orthodoxy, are cordially welcomed as an "approach to the truly Catholic doctrines of the first three centuries."

BOOKS RECEIVED.

George H. Ellis: Vexed Questions in Theology. A Series of Essays. By James Freeman Clarke. 8vo, pp. 249; also,

Social Problems. By M. J. Savage. 8vo, pp. 189; also,

The Fourth Gospel: The Question of its Origin Stated and Discussed. By James Freeman Clarke. 16mo, pp. 70.

American Tract Society: Jottings from the Pacific. By W. Wyatt Gill. With Numerous Illustrations. 12mo, pp. 304. $1.10; also, Scenes in Southern India. By Mrs. Murray Mitchell. With Numerous Illustrations. 1 mo, pp. 372. $1 50.

Robert Carter & Bros.: That Quisset House. By Mrs. Nathaniel Conklin, (Jennie M. Drinkwater.) 12mo, pp. 518. $1.50; also, Bible Warnings. Sermons to Children. By the Rev. Richard Newton, D.D. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 314. $1.25.

Chautauqua Press: Readings from Milton. With an Introduction by Bishop Henry White Warren. (Chautauqua Library—Garnet Series.) 16mo, pp. 308. 75 cents.

Dodd, Mead & Co.: He Fell in Love With His Wife. By Edward P. Roe. 12mo, pp. 333. $1.50; also,

Nature's Serial Story. By Edward P. Roe. Illustrated by W. Hamilton Gibson and F. Dielman. 12mo. pp. 486. $1.50; also,

The Thorn in the Nest. By Martha Finley. 12mo, pp. 305. $1.50; also,

Elsie's Kith and Kin. By Martha Finley. 12mo, pp. 333. $1.50; also,

Two Thousand Years Ago; or, The Adventures of a Roman Boy. By Professor A. J. Church. With Twelve Full-Page Illustrations by Adrian Marie. 12mo, pp. 341. $1.50; also, Mildred's Boys and Girls. A Sequel to Mildred's Married Life. By Martha Finley. 16mo, pp. 346. $1.50.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: A Budget of Letters from Japan. Reminiscences of Work and Travel in Japan. By Arthur Collins Maclay, LL.B. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 391. $2.

Roberts Brothers: Jo's Boys, and How They Turned Out. A Sequel to "Little Men." By Louisa M. Alcott. With Portrait. 16mo, pp. 365. $1.50.

Cassell & Co.: Flowers and How To Paint Them. By Maud Naftel. Illustrated in Colors. Oblong 12mo, pp. 53. $2.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: Ancient Cities. From the Dawn to the Daylight. By William Burnet Wright. 12mo, pp. 291. $1.25; also, Poems of Religious Sorrow, Comfort, Counsel, and Aspiration. Selected by Francis James Child. 12mo, pp. 277. $1.25.

John B. Alden: History of the Conquest of Mexico. With a Preliminary View of the Ancient Mexican Civilization, and the Life of the Conqueror, Hernando Cortes. By William H. Prescott. In Two Vols. Vol. II. Small octavo, pp. 490. $2.25.

D. Lothrop & Co.: Foreign Facts and Fancies. By Annie Sawyer Downs, Charlotte S. Fursdon, and other popular authors. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 251. $1.25.

M. L. Holbrook & Co.: How to Strengthen the Memory: or, Natural and Scientific Methods of Never Forgetting. By M. L. Holbrook, M.D. 12mo, pp. 152. $1.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: The Story of Hungary. By Arminius Vambéry, with the Collaboration of Louis Heilprin. (The Story of the Nations.) Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 453. $1.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

Social Philosophy. A Ruskin Anthology. Compiled by Wm. Sloane Kennedy. (Elzevir Library. Vol. V. No. 228.) 12mo, pp. 322. 20 cents. John B. Alden.

Autobiography of Leigh Hunt. (No. 545, Harper's Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 71. 20 cents; also, Marcella Grace. An Irish Novel. By Rosa Mulholland. (No. 95, Harper's Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 188. 25 cents.

Lives of the English Poets. Butler, Denham, Dryden, Roscommon, Spratt, Dorset, Rochester, Otway. By Samuel Johnson, LL.D. (Cassell's National Library. Vol. I, No. 36.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

October.—Magazine of American History, Lippincott's Monthly Magazine, Wide Awake, The Pulpit Treasury, The Literary Magazine, Words and Weapons, Our Little Ones and The Nursery, The Century, The Gospel in All Lands, The Phrenological Journal.

Announcements.

....“Home Fairies and Heart Flowers” is the title of the holiday book for which Mrs. Sangster has written the poems. The illustrations are to consist of twenty portrait heads of beautiful children, engraved by Frank French, with borders of flowers. Harper & Brothers will publish it. The same firm announces a beautiful edition of Goldsmith's “She Stoops to Conquer,” illustrated by Abbey. Ten of the drawings are copied by the photogravure process.

....Macmillan & Co. have in preparation for Christmas “Days With Sir Roger de Coverly,” with the illustrations by Hugh Thomson, which have been admired in the English Illustrated Magazine for some months. They promise also as illustrated books “Greenland,” by Baron von Nordenskiold, and Irving's “Old Christmas” and “Bracebridge Hall,” with illustrations by the late Ralph Caldecott. For the young folks they announce Mrs. Molesworth's “Four Winds Farm,” with engravings from drawings by Walter Crane.

....George Routledge & Sons are bringing out a superb edition of Victor Hugo s “Les Miserable's,” with nearly 400 illustrations by eminent French artists.

....G. P. Putnam's Sons will soon publish of illustrated books “Chivalric Days and Youthful Deeds,” by E. S. Brooks, author of “Historic Boys;” “Uncle Sam s Medal of Honor.” by Gen. T. F. Rodenbough, a record of noble deeds in our history, and a life of Abraham Lincoln, by Noah Brooks, and of George Washington, by Edward Everett Hale, as a continuation of a series of which “Robert Fulton,” by Thomas W. Knox, is the first.

....Ticknor & Co. will puplish an edition of Scott's “Lay of the Last Minstrel,” with nearly 100 illustrations by American artists, prepared under the supervision of Mr. Anthony.

....T. Y. Crowell have put their choice list of “Red-Line Poets ' in new covers, with new and beautiful designs, and in new styles of leather binding, called the Bamboo Edition and Seal Russia Edition.

Spurgeon's Sermon Notes,

(With Anecdotes and Illustrations.)

First Series, Genesis to Proverbs. $1.00
Second Series, Eccles. to Malachi. 1.00
Third Series, Matt. to Acts..... 1.00

SPURGEON'S OTHER WORKS.

Storm Signals. New sermons. 12mo 1.00
All of Grace. 16mo..... .50
Healing, and Service. 12mo... 1.00
Hands Full of Honey, and other Sermons preached in 1883..... 1.00
Return, O Shulamite, and other Sermons preached in 1884..... 1.00
Sermons, 10 vols 10.00
(Any vol. sold separately at $1.00)
Present Truth..... 1.00
Feathers for Arrows..... 1.00
John Ploughman's Talk..... .75
“ “ Pictures.. .75
Talk and Pictures. In one vol.. 1.00
Types and Emblems. (Sermons). 1.00
Morning by Morning..... 1.00
Evening by Evening 1.00

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.,
530 Broadway, New York.

 Any of the above sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

“OUR BABY'S First and Second Year.”

By MARION HARLAND,

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,
REED & CARNRICK,
MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

TEXT-BOOKS AND WORKS OF REFERENCE FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

Lippincott's Biographical Dictionary. A New, Thoroughly Revised and Greatly Enlarged Edition. A Universal Pronouncing Dictionary of Biography and Mythology. Containing Complete and Concise Biographical Sketches of the Eminent Persons of All Ages and Countries. By J. Thomas, M D., LL.D. Imperial 8vo. 2,550 pages. Sheep. $12.

Worcester's Dictionaries.
Household Dictionary. Containing 50 000 Words, with Definitions. 489 pages. Crown 8vo. Cloth. $1 50.
Comprehensive Dictionary. Illustrated. 12mo. 608 pages. Half bound. $1.68
New School Dictionary. Illustrated. 390 pages. 16mo. Cloth. 96 cents.

Contanseau's Practical Dictionary of the French and English Languages. By Leon Contanseau. Crown 8vo. Cloth. $1.44.

Longman's Dictionary of the German and English Languages. By F. W. Longman. 18mo. Cloth. $1.29.

Groves's Greek and English Dictionary. Comprising all the Words in the Writings of the Most Popular Greek Authors. By Rev. John Groves. Revised Edition. 8vo. Sheep. $2.16.

Leverett's Latin and English Lexicon. Enlarged and Improved Edition. By E. P. Leverett. 8vo. Sheep. $3.36.

Pickering's Greek and English Lexicon. By John Pickering, LL.D. 8vo. Sheep. $3.36.

Lippincott's Gazetteer of the World. A Complete Geographical Dictionary. New Edition. Thoroughly Revised and Greatly Enlarged. Containing Supplementary Tables, with the most recent Census Returns. Royal 8vo. Sheep. $15.00.

Reader's Reference Library. Containing “The Reader's Handbook,” “Dictionary of Phrase and Fable,” “Dictionary of Miracles,” “Words, Facts and Phrases,” “Ancient and Modern Familiar Quotations,” “Worcester's Comprehensive Dictionary,” “Roget's Thesaurus,” and “Soule's English Synonymes.” 8 vols. Bound in Half morocco, gilt top. Per set, in pasteboard box, $20.00. Any volume sold separately.

Chambers's Encyclopædia. American Revised Edition The best in every way. A Dictionary of Universal Knowledge. Profusely Illustrated with Maps, Plates and Wood-Cuts. 10 vols. Royal 8vo. Several Editions, at various prices, from $15.00 to $30.00.

 For sale by all Booksellers, or will be sent, free of expense, on receipt of the price, by

J. B. Lippincott Company,
PUBLISHERS,
715 and 717 Market Street, Philadelphia.

NEW BOOKS BY THE Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NOW READY.

THE PRESBYTERIAN DIGEST OF 1886
Embracing, with the contents of the edition of 1873, the Acts of the Assembly, from 1874 to 1885 inclusive, and an addendum of the Acts of the Assembly of 1886.
By the REV. W. E. MOORE, D.D.
8vo. Sheep. Price, $5.00, net.

Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates
The False and the True Spiritualism.
By the REV. JOHN CHESTER, D.D.
16mo. Price, $1.15.

WOOD, HAY AND STUBBLE.
By KATE W. HAMILTON.
12mo. Price, $1.25.

THE CHESTER COTERIE.
By KATE LIVINGSTON HAMILTON.
16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

Address orders to
JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.,
Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

HAVE YOU READ THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF
REV. CHARLES G. FINNEY?
If not, send for a copy. “Every student of divinity, every man and woman that would be a practical Christian, should read that book.” Price $1.75. Published by
A. S. BARNES & CO., 111 William St., N.Y.

8 Per Cent. Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s NEW BOOKS.

Ancient Cities
From the Dawn to the Daylight. By Rev. William Burnet Wright. 16mo, $1.25.
Contents: Ur, the City of Saints; Nineveh, the City of Soldiers; Babylon, the City of Sensualists; Memphis, the City of the Dead; Alexandria, the City of Creed-Makers; Petra, the City of Shams; Damascus, the City of Substance; Tyre, the City of Merchants; Athens, the City of Culture; Rome, the City of the Law-Givers; Samaria, the City of Politicians; Susa, the City of the Satraps; Jerusalem, the City of the Pharisees; New Jerusalem, the City of God.

The Round Year.
By Edith M. Thomas, author of “A New Year's Masque.” 1 vol 16mo, $1.25.
Miss Thomas has a fine sense of Nature in all its aspects and varied life. To this she adds the faculty and habit of close observation, and the literary skill to describe clearly and effectively. Her book is one which readers of Thoreau and Burroughs will highly value.

The Cruise of the Mystery, and Other Poems.
By Celia Thaxter, author of “Drift-Weed,” “Among the Isles of Shoals,” etc. Parchment cover. $1.
This beautiful book sings of the mystery and beauty of human love, the experience of human life. The charm of the subject and the added charm of the song lend peculiar attractions to the lyrics in this dainty volume.

The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.
Translated by Edward Fitzgerald. Illustrated by Elihu Vedder. New, smaller edition, with designs reproduced in phototype. Quarto, tastefully bound, $12.50.
A beautiful and less expensive edition of Vedder's marvelous designs.

Poems of Religious Sorrow, Comfort, Counsel, and Aspiration.
Collected and edited by Francis J. Child, Professor in Harvard University. New Edition. 16mo, $1.25.

 For sale by all booksellers. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston,
11 East 17th St., New York.

FOR CHOIRS
A Low Priced Collection of Music.
IDEAL ANTHEMS
BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.
The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.
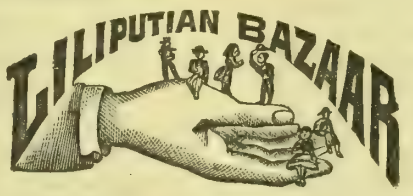
“Ideal Anthems” contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.
Price, 35 cents each by mail, postpaid; $3.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid.
☞SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.
PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O.
And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

ATTRACTIVE NOVELTIES For CHILDREN.

Very stylish garments for Boys and Girls manufactured by us for this Fall and Winter, from the latest novelties in Foreign and Domestic Goods, are now ready for inspection at the



Also a large and desirable line for School Wear—and the best assortment of everything from Hats to Shoes

At very low prices.

Mail orders have careful attention.

BEST & CO.,
60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

EDUCATIONAL.

Rutgers Female College,
58 West 57th street, commences 49th year September 22d. Rev. John Hall, D.D., President of the Board of Trustees. Boarding and Kindergarten Departments Address the College.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.
[Founded A.D. 1830.]
721 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.
Rev. Henry B. Chapin, Ph.D., Principal.
English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 57th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address
SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principal.

BAQUET INSTITUTE For Young Ladies and Children, Mount Holly, N. J. A thorough French and English Home School. Twelfth year begins September 15.
MISS HARRIET STUART BAQUET, PRINCIPAL.

1886 MUSIC TEACHERS 1887

Teachers of Piano; Teachers of Organ;
Teachers of Theory; Teachers of Choirs;
Teachers of Music in Schools;
Teachers of all Instruments;
Trainers of the Singing Voice;
Teachers of Classes;

Are all WELL AND FULLY provided for in the immense stock of Oliver Ditson & Co., which contains 500 books directly used in teaching, and 1500 other music books, all well compiled and useful. These are of their own publication, and they have, in addition, all the other noted books of the world. Also, pieces of Sheet Music almost without number.

Teachers of Music who cannot visit their stores in Boston, New York or Philadelphia, or that of Lyon & Healy in Chicago, their principal agents in the West, are cordially invited to call for and examine Ditson & Co.'s books in any reputable music store, or to correspond directly with Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston.

Lists and Catalogues cheerfully furnished to the profession, and all inquiries as to music and music books answered, and musical advice given by the army of employees, many of whom are well trained singers, players and composers. Send to, or call on

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

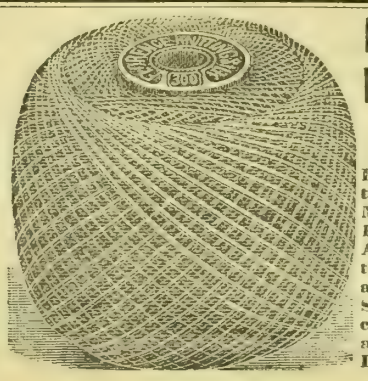
MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.
Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.
The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by Mason & Hamlin, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Pianoforte construction.
Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO
154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

Church Decoration.
Church Furnishing.
DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.
J. & R. LAMB,
59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.



FLORENCE KNITTING SILK

WHY IS IT SO POPULAR?
BECAUSE it is THE MOST DURABLE of any textile known. Because FULL WEIGHTS and MEASURES are always given. Because it is PURE SILK. Because NO POISONOUS DYES ARE USED for the purpose of obtaining an artificial lustre. Because it is “SOFT FINISH,” and easy to knit. Because it is UNIFORM IN SIZE, AND CORRECTLY NUMBERED. Because it is POSITIVELY THE ONLY SILK suitable for knitting which WILL BEAR WASHING WITHOUT INJURY to color or texture.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

Autumn Work.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

AT the mention of autumn work the matron's thought turns naturally to the pickling, preserving and canning which have more or less occupied her during the later summer, and which fill many a busy autumn day with care. Passing along the street, saluted by whiffs of delicious sweetness and spiciness, we remember that good housekeepers are "putting up" their appetizing catsups and aromatic cordials, and that no housewife who is wise in her generation fails thus to provide against the winter days while fruits and flavors may be had almost for the asking. There is a distinct sense of comfort in having a storeroom well supplied with lucent jars, where amber-hued or ruby fruits swim in transparent syrups, where the clearest of jellies hob nob with the crispest of pickles, and where, duly sealed and labelled, the tinctures of sunshine and spring are ready at a moment's notice to feast the family or regale the guest. Do you happen to recall that winter when you came home from a journey, too late to attend to this manifest duty, and had to go through the winter on stewed fruits and apples, cooking the latter in a dozen different ways, and ringing the changes on prunes, cherries and peaches, until the name of dried fruit became your despair? You resolved then, that let happen what might, you would ever after have in your pantry some due provision for emergencies, something in reserve, so that the plain meal could be set off with a dainty dessert on the busiest day, or a hasty luncheon improvised to refresh the unexpected visitor, the wearied friend within your gates. What a relief on washing day to know that neither pudding nor pie need be devised wherewith to finish the dinner, and what an ease of mind when the steamed pudding or the fresh pastry is under consideration to be reminded of the huckleberries, cherries and currants which shall furnish you with "filling" for either, as agreeably as on the day they were gathered.

The wise housekeeper will not so far improve upon her mother and her grandmother as to go without her store-closet of preserves, her long row of home-made pickles. If she can afford the outlay, let me tell her that she may buy these things at a greater cost than she will incur if she make them, but buy them of the very best, not by going hap-hazard to the nearest grocery, but by seeking some notable woman who has solved the problem of self-support by making a business of this very work. While there is often room for suspicion in tinned goods, and there is usually adulteration in the cheap jellies and preserves made by wholesale, one may confidently patronize her neighbor who makes her preserves after old-fashioned formulas. 'Ware cheapness as you would 'ware poison in this relation, else the health of the household may suffer.

But this is only one department of autumn work. The fall dressmaking looms up before many women in formidable proportions, especially when it does not imply the mere spending a day or two in shopping and the planning new gowns from new material,—delightful occupation,—but includes the letting out and letting down, the turning upside down and inside out, the seeing whether Amy's last year's brown velveteen will not, with a little added plush or satin, make Louisa's best suit this winter;—all the contriving, piecing and managing, in brief, which are familiar to women of small means and laudable ambition. Then there are moments of horror when it is discovered that the moths have invaded the woollen chest and positively burrowed under the camphor gum, finding the Persian powder a relish when they devoured your furs and cut tiny transverse apertures in your favorite flannels.

There are consultations over the new and old draperies, the furniture which must emigrate from parlor to chamber, or be banished to the third story back or the gloom of the attic. There are mattresses to be made over again, tickings to be renewed, the linen shelves to be overhauled and inventoried. There are the coal bins, which must be replenished, though you do without the new bonnet and mantle on which your heart is set, and there are the flues and the drains which must be carefully investigated. Shall we proceed? To what end?

Thus far we have touched only on the exterior aspects of the autumn work, thought only of the temporalities, the scaffolding which is necessary, but which is taken down when the building is completed. There is nobler home-work for these crystalline autumn days when the air exhilarates like wine, when the gay banners of the maples flaunt their scarlet against a golden sky, when the blue gentian lifts its fringed flower and the cardinal lights its spendid torch, when a silvery haze shimmers like a bridal veil over the close-reaped fields, and the last grapes hang sweet and purple on the vines.

All the children are to be thought of now, from the dear little man sturdily stepping out to school to the girl receiving the first adulation of her brother's friends, much to the bewilderment of her mother, who forgets that at Kate's age she was already "engaged," and watching at a certain hour for the fall of a beloved step, while decking herself for beloved eyes with the ribbon or the rose which she knew would please them.

Mother-hands must minister to all the brood, oblivious neither of the fledgelings who are longing to fly, nor of the babe who is rocked in the cradle. Part of the autumn foresight should include provision for the social needs of the elder children, for the reading of the growing boys, for the toddlers in the nursery.

Then, too, comes in the religious training, not peculiar to autumn, yet possibly a little interrupted during the summer languors and the flitting to and fro of the household. As obviously is it the maternal privilege to train the child in heart as in head knowledge of the Bible; as much an obligation to do this as to see that he or she is properly taught mathematics.

And church work? No household claim, however it may take precedence, can excuse every church member from a definite share in the work of the Church, which usually takes a fresh start in the autumn weather. From the fidelity of individuals the Church—your own—shall gain or lose this winter. Is it not incumbent on you to leave a margin in your life which shall be consecrated to the blessedness of service here?

"The Scripture Cannot Be Broken."

JOHN 10:35.

NO equal has the Word of God
To meet all human need;
Who leans on other staff or rod
Shall find a broken reed.

In words like these, when sight is dim,
What comfort may there be:
"In perfect peace Thou wilt keep him
Whose mind is stayed on Thee."

To him whose hope He would inspire
He says, "If ye believe,
What things soever ye desire,
Ask, and ye shall receive."

The man by sin or sorrow prest
May trust His loving word,
And "find from every burden rest
If cast upon the Lord."

It is not always sure release,
But strength is given in this:
"For weakness that disturbs thy peace
My grace sufficient is."

To think such words for me may be!
His tenderness to prove;
"The love with which I have loved thee
Is everlasting love."

"If called in dark, divided sea,
'Midst roaring waves to stand,
Thou'lt find the cloud that covers thee
The shadow of mine hand."

"The cup of trembling that was filled
With fiery dregs and pain,
Thou, weary one, the tempest stilled,
Shalt never drink again."

"The hungry, thirsty, anxious soul,
Fainting, distressed, astray,
Cries to the Lord, and finds the goal,
Led forth by the right way."

And thus it reads from page to page,
Gracious, and good, and pure.
What other word of any age
Shall "thro' all time endure?"

So precious is this fund of truth,
So filled with every good,
It meets all wants of sage or youth,
'Tis love, 'tis light, 'tis food.

V.

Other People's Rights.

AUNT MARJORIE'S sensible and timely remarks in a recent issue concerning the time lost because of unpunctual and thoughtless friends, suggest in a larger way the subject to which I fear we give too little thought or consideration—of other people's rights.

We have heard a great deal the past months of the rights of classes, and citizens, and nations; and it is true that each, even the humblest, has rights which the world in general should recognize and respect. But, at the same time, we should remember that there are other people in the world beside ourselves, with rights as inherent. And with the innate selfishness of human nature is there not often danger that in watching lest there be poaching on our manor, we are guilty of trespassing on somebody else, for "Evil is wrought for want of thought

As well as for want of heart."

And is it not a moral wrong not to think, where the welfare, the comfort and convenience, in short, the rights of others are concerned?

This subject covers larger ground than can be touched upon here; but the rights that are particularly offended against deserve especial attention; other people's time and other people's personal possessions.

For the visitor who, without imperative necessity, absorbs the minister's morning hour, appropriates what he has no more claim to than the minister's salary. The person who, unless unavoidably detained, kept others waiting an appointment, has taken time that may be precious time of another, and is guilty of moral if not material dishonesty.

Do you live in the city, your country friends send to you to match silks, send them samples, etc., each errand of which consumes doubtless half a day, when in the majority of cases they could have been as well served by addressing the firms directly. Do you live in the country, your city friends write that it is vacation, and they will come out with the children and make that promised visit, the midsummer vacation being the country housewife's busiest season, and your hands already full to overflowing with cares. Are you skilful with the needle, there is the friend whose demands for assistance with millinery and dress making form in the end no inconsiderable burden.

Indeed, there are very few of even the most generous natures that have not felt that there were many demands upon their patience, their sympathy and their time, at once unjustifiable and unjust. Inconsiderate, is the usual term we apply; one that covers a far greater number of transgressions than would the homelier one selfishness, for what but selfishness is a lack of thought for others?

As to the guest who takes possession of a house as though it belonged to her, keeps meals waiting, absorbs the whole time and attention of the hostess, and demands by implication, if not in words, that the whole house be ordered to suit her convenience, that is too gross an offence to need more than a mention. But if we have never sinned to that extent, does it not remain that we, as guests, as acquaintances, as friends, fail of a due regard for the time of others?

As regards the right of personal possessions, who does not recall the books they have lent (perhaps favorite volumes), that have been returned thumbed and soiled and ruined, or have not been returned at all? What business have we to injure and destroy the property of another? How many girl-friendships have been broken from the too common habit of borrowing trinkets or articles of wearing apparel, that have been lost or spoiled? What right have we because our friend has a more stylish wrap, or a prettier ring, to put either to our own use?

I trust all of us are mindful of the injunction, "from him who would borrow of thee, turn thou not away." And yet how often do we have to lay aside our sewing, or pause in the midst of work we can ill leave, to give time and take steps without number for the borrower, and often with the knowledge that the deficiency is wholly owing to forgetful carelessness, and with the secret consciousness that the butter returned will be very likely of an inferior quality, and the coffee of a different grade, (that is, if such trifles as a pat of butter, a cup of coffee, or sugar be not forgotten), that very likely the dish will be cracked, the pattern torn, and John, if he happens to want his new hammer and finds it gone, will be slightly ruffled in temper, and that, worst of all, you will very likely have to go after the articles lent when next you have occasion to use them. For in many cases the chronic borrower is so from the fact that he is careless, or wasteful, or destructive of his own belongings; and few, alas, are as careful of an article when it belongs to another as when it belongs to ourselves.

Not that all sin in these regards, or numberless others that might be instanced, but still the sinners are altogether too numerous. My friends, these things ought not to be. We should cultivate a fine consideration, a delicate regard for both the feelings and the rights of others; and the place for this to begin is with our own selves; and if we have been considerate, (as I trust we all have), to endeavor to be still more so in the future, and if we have failed in this respect, (as through inadvertance is possible), to immediately and earnestly set about correcting the fault. ELA THOMAS.

SEVERAL welcome communications are unavoidably held over, but they will duly appear, and we thank our friends for sending them. Address all letters for this page to Aunt Marjorie, CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, New York.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The White Daffodil.

WHEN Conscience, with her gloomy frown,
To chide me for past sins sits down,
I wonder why she always will
Repeat, and re-repeat to me,
The story of that daffodil!
'Twas, at the worst, a childish wrong;
And time, since then, has been so long!
And yet, she never will be still;
"You took that flower," she says; "for shame!
And let another bear the blame!"

My mother's aunt—I still can see
Her sharp, black eyes look straight at me!
Her small, uneasy guest was I,
Who thought her quiet house a cage,
And, like a wild-bird, longed to fly:
Outside the door I crept unseen;
There, star-like, shone among the green
May grass, already waving high,
One flower; the very soul of spring
Seemed breathing through the lovely thing!

White as the noon-time's silvery cloud,
Its sweet head seemed in worship bowed;
I hovered round it like a bee;
The air was incense where it grew;
I raised the bloom its heart to see—
The green stem snapped; alas! alas!
Down fell the blossom to the grass!
I looked; no eye was watching me;
Beneath a turf the flower I prest,
And hid the secret in my breast.

Next morning, at the breakfast board,
As she the fragrant mocha poured,
My great-aunt grimly shook her head;
"'Tis thankless work to help the poor;
They are deceivers all," she said;
"But yesterday, with thin, white face,
A child came here to sell some lace;
I pitying bought; I had her fed;
I gave her good advice, and still,
She stole my one white daffodil!"

The hot blood tingled in my cheek;
I was too cowardly to speak;
My silence was alone untrue;
'Twas surely but a trifling wrong;
I did as any child might do;
But, ever since, when Conscience tries
To trouble me with memories,
She always tells this tale anew,
And says, "You took that flower! for shame!
And let another bear the blame!"

—Marian Douglas, in Wide Awake.

A Happy Day.

"MISS LAWSON, do you think there ever was a child who always remembered to do right? I'm always forgetting."

It was a beautiful Sabbath afternoon, and Nettie Norris had been pondering over the lesson for some minutes in silence, remembering, in a grieved, sorrowful way, numberless shortcomings which had marred her record of the previous week.

"Yes, I think so," answered her teacher, smiling. "There was once a little boy who, I'm quite sure, never forgot."

"Did he never say cross, impatient words when his mother asked him to do things he much disliked to do?"

"He was always cheerful and obedient."

"I don't suppose he ever did such a thing as to call a schoolmate naughty names," faltered Nettie, with downcast eyes and crimson cheeks.

"He was too gentle and loving for such unkind conduct as that would have been," answered Miss Lawson; "and I hope that no Christian child would willingly hurt the feelings of another."

"She laughed when I missed three words in my spelling-lesson, and when I tore my new apron she said that she was glad," said Nettie, with tears in her eyes; "but I'm sorry that I called her names. I did want to be good, so that Jesus would love me; but it's very hard."

"If you are really sorry for your fault, you will ask her to forgive your unkind speech."

"Yes, I mean to," said Nettie, with a sigh. "I thought about it in Sunday school to-day, and I had already made up my mind to tell her just how sorry I am when I go to school to-morrow. But, Miss Lawson, I don't see how any little boy could always be good and remember. Maybe he didn't have little brothers to tease and bother him, though."

"Yes, he had. The Bible tells of his brothers and sisters, and they were all younger than himself. I think that he must have been familiar with all the trials and vexations that other children experience."

"Oh, you mean Jesus," said Nettie, in tones of evident relief. "We can't be as good as Jesus if we try. That is impossible, you know."

"And yet those long thirty three years were spent on earth for our good in so many ways," said Miss Lawson, softly. "They were years of self-denial and loving care for others, and we are told to accept Him as our guide, to follow the good example which His life has given us. I do not think our heavenly Father would ask or require an impossibility of His children. Perhaps you have forgotten to seek assistance and strength at the right place, Nettie."

"Yes, I have," confessed Nettie. "I thought I could remember if I only tried; but I forget every time. I shall ask God to help me this week. Here we are at your home, Miss Lawson. I love to walk home with you. The nice, long talk we have on our way helps me nearly as much as the lesson. Good-by," and the child held up her rosy lips for a kiss.

Nettie did not forget her conversation with her teacher, and with trusting faith, such as older Christians rarely possess, she sought divine assistance.

She arose early Monday morning, and having completed her toilet, hastened down to the kitchen in order to assist her mother with her morning duties. As she entered the room her mother looked up with pleased surprise.

"I'm so glad that you didn't wait to be called," she said, "your father is in a hurry for his breakfast."

"I'll set the table at once," said Nettie cheerfully.

All the morning she busied herself doing little helpful acts for her mother. When she reached school she hastened to repair the wrong she had allowed her hasty tongue to accomplish the week before. She asked her schoolmate's forgiveness for her unkind remark. This simple act dispelled the clouds at once, and they were both happier than they had been for days.

"Now I shall have a nice long time all to myself," said Nettie, as she reached home that afternoon. "It is a whole hour before tea time, and I am at liberty to spend it as I wish."

Just at that moment her two little brothers came to her with very soiled hands and doleful faces.

"Papa gave us a piece of ground for our very own garden," began Rob, "but somehow we can't make the beds look nice and straight. We've tried and tried, but it don't do any good."

"If somebody'd just get us started, we could do all the rest. I know we could," said Ray, searching Nettie's face with a wistful expression on his own.

She was just about to send them away with harsh, impatient words, for it seemed too bad for her to think of devoting this precious hour to the little brothers and their garden which, she was sure, would not amount to anything. A frown gathered on her brow, but it instantly cleared away, and reaching for her garden hat she said pleasantly:

"I'll get you started, and then we'll see how you'll manage afterward."

"You're the best kind of a sister," said Ray, giving her hand a little squeeze.

"The very best," echoed Rob.

"It has been a happy day after all," thought Nettie, as she stood looking out of her window into the moonlit garden before retiring for the night. "A very happy day without a single mistake in it. I thought it would be so hard to ask Fannie's forgiveness; but I've won a friend by doing it, and we might have gone on saying spiteful things, and disliking each other for a long time, if I had cherished my ill-will toward her. It is much easier to get up early and help mother in the morning than I thought it would be. I'm really ashamed of myself when I think how I've been in the habit of lying in bed until she has called me two or three times. And the little boys, why they are just overflowing with gratitude to me for fixing their garden beds. They are both anxious to do some errand for me in return.

"It seems strange, but when I consider only my own self, and try to make myself happy, I am the most miserable. To-day I tried to remember others, and to do little kindly acts for Jesus' sake, and it has been the happiest day I have known for a long time."

Nettie's experience is not an exceptional one. Those who forget self, ministering unto others for Jesus' sake, receive the blessing here and the reward hereafter.—Rose Hartwick Thorpe, in The Interior.

"Brightening All It Can."

THE day had been dark and gloomy, when suddenly, toward night, the clouds broke and the sun's bright rays streamed through, shedding a flood of golden light upon the country. A sweet voice at the window called out in joyful tones, "Look! oh, look, papa! the sun is brightening all it can."

"'Brightening all it can?' So it is," answered papa; "and you can be like the sun if you choose."

"How, papa? tell me how."

"By looking happy and smiling on us all day, and never letting any tearful rain come into the blue of those eyes; only be happy and good—that's all."

The next day the music of the child's voice filled our ears from sunrise to dark; the little heart seemed full of light and love, and when asked how she was so happy she replied laughingly, "Why, don't you see, papa, I'm the sun. I'm brightening all I can."

"And filling the house with sunshine and joy," answered papa.

Cannot little children be like the sun every day—brightening all they can? Try it, children!—Child at Home.

Better Whistle than Whine.

AS I was taking a walk, I noticed two little boys on their way to school. The small one stumbled and fell, and, though not very much hurt, he began to whine in a babyish way, not a regular, roaring boy cry, as though he were half killed, but a little cross whine.

The older boy took his hand in a kind, fatherly way, and said:

"Oh, never mind, Jimmy! don't whine; it is a great deal better to whistle."

And he began in the merriest way a cheerful boy-whistle.

Jimmy tried to join the whistle.

"I can't whistle as nice as you, Charlie," said he, "my lips won't pucker up good."

"Oh, that is because you have not got all the whine out yet," said Charlie; "but you try a minute, and the whistle will drive the whine away."

So he did; and the last I saw or heard of the little fellows they were whistling away as earnestly as though that was the chief end of life.—Early Dew.

Little Heads Together.

AUNT HELEN'S ARRIVAL, WHICH CONTAINS FOURTEEN BURIED CITIES.

Jane was out on an island in a little lake on grandpa's farm, where she was staying with her mother during the month of August. And now Aunt Helen and Uncle Jack had arrived. Jane could see the carriage drive in the gate, and she was most anxious to welcome her aunt and uncle, but unfortunately the boat had floated away and she had no means of reaching the mainland, which was such a short distance from the island.

Oh, yes! brother Bernard has thought of her at last. Though he will not get her to the house in time to be the first to greet the wanderers, she will not be very late. He ran down to the shore, and has rowed over to her. He tells her how part of the ship, some wheel, in going through the Straits of Gibraltar had broken, and the ship had been obliged to put back, which had delayed them very much on their journey. Their uncle and aunt had been spending the winter in Italy and Sicily, and a few weeks on the islands of Lipari. "O, Jane! I rowed as hard as I could, and here we are."

Jane ran quickly up to the house, just in time to hear Aunt Helen say to her sister, "Rebecca, I rose very early this morning, and I would like to rest a little before tea."

After Jane had been greeted in a most affectionate manner, grandpa, rising from his chair, said to his little granddaughter, Bab: "O, go take Aunt Helen to her room now, she is very tired."

"I think," mamma then said, "that I will send you up a cup of tea, for that will refresh you, and then we will have a little chat. I know grandpa will have a great deal to say to Uncle Jack, so now we will leave them to talk together."

Mamma went upstairs with Aunt Helen, and in a few minutes Jane brought up the tea.

"I am surprised," said Aunt Helen, "Jane has grown so tall."

"I made the tea, Aunt Helen," said Jane.

"Indeed, I think you must be a great help to your mother now, and Bab, too."

Long before the supper-time they were all gathered together out on the wide piazza, and all very thankful that the travellers had returned safely to the good old home.

"W. M."

Answers to Puzzles of September 15th.

What Is It?—Splash. Plash. Lash. Ash. Sh!

Square Word.—
C L I O
L U N A
I N N S
O A S T

Pi.—
I have a house in which to live,
Pleasant, and fair, and good;
Its hearth is crowned with warmth and light,
Its board with daintiest food.
And I, when tired with care or doubt,
Go in and shut my sorrows out.

Correct answers from "Anna," L. P. C., "Prague," Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh.

Original puzzles for the "Little Heads" may be sent to Cousin LOIS, at this office.

Our Church.

(Continued from page five.)

....Semi-Centennial.—The First Church of Hudson, N. Y., celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on Sunday and Monday, Sept. 26th and 27th. The church was suitably adorned with flowers; the figures "1836-1886" were arranged in green and scarlet colors on the wall either side of the pulpit. The music was elevating and in keeping with the occasion. On Sunday morning Professor D. D. Demarest, D D, for a number of years pastor of the church, preached an appropriate discourse from Matt. 5: 14, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid."

The pastor, Rev. W. H. Gleason, D.D., preached in the evening from 2 Timothy 2: 19, "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his. And, let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." The audiences were very large, and deep interest was taken in both services.

On Monday afternoon a large audience again assembled in the church to listen to the historical address by Mr. Stephen B. Miller. The opening and closing exercises were conducted by Rev. J. G. Gebhard, Rev. Denis Wortman, D.D., and Rev. Dr. John McC. Holmes, a former pastor. In the evening a delightful social re-union was held in the church parlors.

....The Classis of Albany met in the Church of Onesquethaw, N. Y., Sept. 21st. The Rev. W. E. Faulkner was dismissed from the Church of Westerlo, N. Y. Rev. J. W. Chapman and Rev. A. M. Arcularius were appointed Missionary Agents of the Classis for the ensuing year. Rev. J. P. Davis and Rev. J. L. Pearse were appointed delegates to the Missionary Convention at Brooklyn on the 26th and 27th of October.

Suitable notice was taken of the death of Rev. R. W. Clark, D.D. The following action was taken in aid of the new enterprise at Cobleskill, N. Y.: The committee beg leave to report the appeal of the Rev. John G. Fagg to the Classis of Albany on behalf of the Reformed Church of Cobleskill in the most favorable light, and hereby recommend that the collections for the Church Building Fund when taken by the churches of the Classis be appropriated specifically to aid this struggling enterprise.

J. Lansing Pearse, S. C.

Sun Spots and Prices of Food in India.

A FEW years ago an article appeared in the Nineteenth Century to prove that the famines in India were contemporaneous with the latter years of the minimum sun spot periods and that the years of sufficient rainfall and abundant crops were those of the maximum sun spot periods. Since then other tables have been made public confirming that deduction. It is also claimed that in all tropical countries the years of least spots on the sun are those of deficient rainfall, drought, and of harvests below the average, producing sometimes a famine. It is also claimed that as the minimum period of spots advances the production of food the world over diminishes. This theory, which has much to support it, deserves attention at the present time, for a minimum sun spot period is now in progress. It began in the fall of 1884, and will probably continue into the spring or summer of 1890.

Last June, Mr. Frederick Chambers, of Bombay, India, prepared for Nature a paper containing tables of prices of food in India, extending from 1783 to 1882, to show that the cost of food has always risen in that country during the periods of least sun spots, because they have been the years of deficient rainfall. He gives the number of pounds of food grain a rupee would buy at various periods. His tables show that during the years of the maximum of sun spots a rupee has bought from 120 to 126 pounds of food grain, while during the periods of the minimum of spots the rupee has bought only from 67 to 80 pounds of food grain. These are the extremes, in the years between them the purchasing power of the rupee gradually rises or falls.

He sums up in these paragraphs:

"Now these results reveal the remarkable fact that, amid all the apparently irregular fluctuations of the yearly prices, there is in every one of the ten districts a periodical rise and fall of prices once every eleven years, corresponding to the regular variation which takes place in the number of the sun spots during the same period. They also show that in seven out of the ten districts the range of the eleven-yearly variation of prices lies between 40 and 50 per cent of the average price, and that in the remaining three districts the range lies between 20 and 30 per cent. The ranges are greatest in those districts where scarcity and famine are most frequent, smallest in those which enjoy the greatest immunity in these respects. In Bijapur and the neighboring districts of Belgaum and Dharwar the highest prices occur in the year of minimum sun spots; in Madras, Poona, and Khandesh a year or two later; in Kanara, Kaira, and Bhavnagar two or three years later; and in Ahmedabad three years later. The lowest prices occur in all the districts from three to five years after the year of maximum sun spots, that is to say, three years after at the southern stations; four or five years after at the northern. Bijapur and Poona are the first to show a very decided rise of prices, and this rise takes place in the year preceding the year of minimum sun spots. At all the other stations a very decided rise takes place a year or two later.

"From what has been said it follows that the intervals of time between the year of minimum sun spots and the years of highest prices are less than the intervals between the year of maximum sun spots and the years of lowest prices. This shows that the eleven yearly price variations do not exactly correspond to the eleven-yearly sun spot variation. The reason may be that on the occurrence of scarcity prices rise very rapidly, while on the return of a season of plenty they fall much more slowly, because the reserve stocks of grain consumed during a period of scarcity cannot be fully replaced until good crops for several successive years have been secured. If it were possible to obtain data showing the actual out turn of the crops of each year, it would perhaps be found that the eleven-yearly variations calculated therefrom would correspond to the sun spot variation even more closely than the price variations correspond to it."

In Aid of Charleston, S. C.

THE following amounts have been received at this office and paid to Mr. John Crosby Brown, Treasurer of the Committee of the Chamber of Commerce: Church, Stuyvesant, N. Y., $15 15; Church, Berea, N. Y., $15; Young People's Social Union of the Sabbath-School of the Church of Harlem, N. Y. city, $25. Total $55.15.

THE REV. DR. W. F. JUNKIN, of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Charleston, S. C., has come to the North, by the request of his brethren of the stricken city, to seek help in repairing the damage done to the Presbyterian Church buildings by the earthquake.

The General Outlook.

....The Woman's Christian Temperance Union requests the churches of the United States to devote Sunday, Oct. 17th to temperance. The day is the Sabbath preceding the annual meeting of the Union. The request is made in compliance with the advice of twenty-one pastors and ministers of the chief denominations, who recommended the observance a year ago. The Union suggests special prayer for a Divine blessing on the endeavors to promote temperance, sermons on the evils of intemperance, and exercises in the Sabbath schools to enlist the children. The request is reasonable.

....Rev. Prof. Edward A. Park, D.D., and Mrs. Park celebrated their golden wedding on September 30 h in the familiar brick house on Andover Hill, where they began housekeeping in 1836 and which has been their home from that day to this. The invitations were limited of a necessity, for what house would hold all of their friends. Among the guests were Prof. Park's only surviving brother, Rev. C. E. Park, and a sister of Mrs. Park, who were the groomsman and bridesmaid fifty years ago. Many gifts of gold and silver and of other precious things were received.

....The receipts of the American Board for the year now closed are, from donations, $334 247, as against $387,013 the preceding year; from legacies $107,190, as against $121,478, being a total of $491,438 this year, $503,491 last year. It will be seen that of this $17,000 falling off, $14,000 is in the legacies, always an uncertain quantity. There is to be placed against the remaining $3,000, the fact that the donations of last year were swelled at the last moment by an extraordinary gift from Dr. Cheever of $19,000. From all which it appears the regular gifts from the churches are an increase on those of the preceding y.

....The Interior says that "of the eighteen or twenty members of the Chinese Young Men's Christian Association connected with the Chinese Mission of the Third Presbyterian Church, Chicago, nine are already engaged in studies preparatory to missionary work among their countrymen, and more are to follow."

....Mr. L. E. Jackson, who has studied the contributions of the forty-three churches of the New York Presbytery for the last year, including $103,791 for Home and $107,315 for Foreign Missions, finds the total to be $754,552.83, an average per church of $17,547, and per communicant of nearly $10.

....Chaplain M'Cabe says that the total increase of the missionary collections this year over last year is $107,685 from the Spring Conferences, and $22,000 from the Fall Conferences, with forty Fall Conferences yet to be heard from.

....A great grandson of William Carey, the pioneer Indian missionary, son of J. S. Carey, Esq., of Tiverton, England, has been appointed by the English Baptist Missionary Society to the charge of the Mission Station at Howrah, near Calcutta. He is the third William Carey who has devoted himself to Indian missions. "Instead of the fathers shall be the children."

Financial.

Tuesday, Oct. 5th.

The national debt, less cash in the Treasury, was reduced during September $10,627,013. The three per cent bonds were reduced $19,257,800. The net cash balance was reduced $8,631,240. The bonded debt on Sept. 30th was $1,181,757,312. The revenues of the Treasury exceed the expenditures. Of the 15 millions of bonds called for Nov. 1st about 13 millions are held by the banks as a basis of circulation. The redemption of bonds is steadily reducing the circulation of the national banks.

The banks of this city last week increased loans $2,710,000, lost in specie $2,559,900 and in legal tender $640,900, and gained in deposits $339,400. The surplus of reserve was reduced $3 115,950, making it $5,963,925. The average rate for money was about 6 per cent, on the best commercial paper 5 1-2 to 6. The rate on call yesterday was 6 per cent. The import of gold during the week was $1,299 816. The silver dollar is worth 73 1-3 cents as bullion.

Imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $9,149,012, and exports at $6 650,217. Foreign exchange sold yesterday at $4 82 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4 85 1-2 for demand, for sterling.

The Stock Market had its fluctuations, but remains strong. Manhattan, N. Y. and New England and Western Union stocks have been especially active. The first is up to 146 1-2.

Western farmers seem to be afflicted with a panic and to be selling their grain as rapidly as they can market it. The visible supply of wheat, reported yesterday, showed an increase for the week of 1,723,921 bushels, but a reduction of 530 761 bushels of corn. Exporters buy sparingly, of course, on a falling market; a rise would probably lead them to liberal purchases, for they know they will need a large amount before the next harvest is gathered. Quotations yesterday were: Wheat here 83 3-4, in Chicago 72; corn here 45 7-8, in Chicago 35; oats here 30 5-8, in Chicago 24 1-8. Cotton closed yesterday: Oct. 9.16–17, Nov. 9.18–19, Dec. 9 23-24. Prices of hay and straw are: Choice timothy 85 to 90 cents, No. 1 80 to 85, clover mixed 60 to 65; long rye straw 65 to 70, oat 30 to 40, wheat 25 to 35.

The bank clearances continue to show a considerable advance upon those of the corresponding weeks of last year.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

It is reported that the Pennsylvania Railroad proposes establishing an ocean line and has purchased the "Alaska," "Arizona," and "America," steamers for which it is stated they have paid $600,000. It is stated that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company will at an early day put on a steamship line to be operated upon the same principle....Slight earthquake shocks were felt at Charleston, S. C., last night. ....A heavy snowstorm prevailed for a short time yesterday at Sheboygan, Mich. Snow fell also at Wingham, Ont.... Pleuro-pneumonia has been discovered among the cattle at Verona, N. J....During the last few days there has been a good deal of excitement in the Reformed Church, Peekskill, N. Y., caused by faith-cure meetings. Among those particularly interested was a Mrs Hart, who had been troubled with heart disease for some time. While the Rev. Mr. Simpson was anointing her with oil she suddenly died.

MONDAY, 4.—An explosion occurred in Yorkshire on Saturday in a colliery. Seven men were found dead. Eight were rescued and seventeen missing....One thousand cotton spinners are on a strike at Nelson, Lancashire ...Rioting again in Belfast.... The situation in the East still continues threatening. Bulgaria accedes to several of the Czar's demands....Several shocks of earthquake were felt in Germany....Several of the rebels in Spain who caused the late insurrection have been condemned to die... The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland was cheered and hissed as he made his public appearance in Dublin....The Assembly of the Knights of Labor in Richmond has begun....Severe frosts are reported in parts of Virginia and Tennessee....Nearly twenty thousand dollars was embezzled in the Union Dime Savings Institution in New York city....There was riotous conduct on the part of some railroad employees in Philadelphia....An officer is charged with killing a man in New York city ...The residents in the neighborhood of Madison avenue and Forty-eighth street, New York city, strongly object to have the boilers of the Steam-heating Company placed in the vicinity....George Bancroft, the historian, received yesterday many congratulations on reaching his eighty-sixth birthday.

TUESDAY, 5.—A petition in favor of Home Rule, signed by 500,000 Irish women, was presented to Mr. Gladstone, at Hawarden yesterday, by the wife of the Mayor of Dublin and a deputation of Irish ladies.... Five thousand Bulgarians at a public meeting at Sofia on Sunday refused to General Kaulbars, the Russian envoy, and resolved to maintain the constitution....A hill at Chimapla, Mexico, has split in two within a few days....Riots continue at Belfast.... Knights of Labor welcomed by Governor Lee at Richmond yesterday. Nearly 1,100 delegates from the Assembly. Mr. Powderly made an impressive opening address.... Republican anti saloon meeting in Brooklyn last evening largely attended....Justin McCarthy pleaded the cause of Ireland before a large and enthusiastic audience in the Academy of Music in this city last evening. ..Distribution of one dollar silver certificates began yesterday.

Good News for the Ladies.

In this day, when so many adulterations flood the market, it is a matter of difficulty to find where good and pure teas can be purchased even with the assistance of all the advertisements that are made. The Great American Tea Company of this city under tand this fact, and as they deal only in the pure article, they not only keep the readers of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER informed of the place where they can obtain the best tea at the most reasonable prices, but they offer extraordinary inducements to frugal housewives to introduce their goods. After a trial of their teas, they offer any lady sending them a club order amounting to $25, a present of a good band China tea-set of forty-four pieces. This prize is not limited to any particular section or person, and can be secured with so little difficulty that it is to be hoped that few subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER will fail to secure this valuable present. Those wishing to try for it should write to the company, 31 and 33 Vesey street, for circulars and price-lists, or send a trial order.

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York
Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & CO., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, October 2, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 42,754 pks.; exports 6,588 pks.

The market is active and bouyant for all finest fresh makes, both State and Western. Finest creamery make in pails sold through the week at 29 a30c., and Friday and Saturday some fancies sold up to 31c. These outside sales are only possible for specially fine brands, regularly received fresh from the churn. This is also true of private dairies, which when well made and regularly sent through the whole season, obtain prices exceeding those that are irregularly sent. Fine fresh dairy make was in light supply and quick demand, and there was barely enough to go around. Some dairies of firkins arrived this week and sold at 19, 20, 21 and 22c. Northern Welsh comes irregular in quality, best sells at 20a23c., and off grades sell slowly at 14a18c. There were sales of good to fine Western creameries for export at 16a20c., and lines of low grades at 9a 12c. Market closes with quick sales for all fresh goods. We quote:

Fancy creamery	30	@31
do dairy (selections)	25	@26
Good to fine	20	@24
Poor to common	8	@16

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 62,705 boxes; exports 26,520 boxes.

There was less business at a slight advance in price. Fancy colored cheese was most enquired for and sold at 11¾a12c. White was more plentiful and freely offered at 11¼a11½c. for the finest. Night milk skims sold freely to home trade at 8a9½c., the latter extreme. Colored full skim cheese sold for Southern trade at 4a5a6c. Market closes firm and a large proportion of the week's receipts going over unsold. We quote:

Factory, colored, full cream, finest	11¾	@12
" white, " "	11¼	@11½
" good to fine "	10½	@11
" night milk skims	7	@ 9
" skims	3	@ 6

Publisher's Department.

MRS. CHARLOTTE LISLE, OF CHICAGO, well known to the Western press, ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me... but this remdey has removed it."

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Mr. T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers street, New York city, says that Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured him of a dry and scaly humor, from which he had suffered intolerably. He adds: "I have not now a blemish on my body, and my cure is wholly due to Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Best, easiest to use and cheapest. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. By druggists. 50c.

MARRIAGES.

BUTTS—CONNOLLY.—At Cairo, Greene Co., N. Y., Sept. 29, by the Rev. S. W. Roe, D.D., John F. Butts and Miss Mary E. Connolly, both of Cairo.

ELLSWORTH—LASHER.—At the parsonage, Upper Red Hook, Sept. 23, by the Rev. G. D Lydecker, Elmer Ellsworth, of Clermont, N. Y., and Helen Lasher, of Red Hook, N. Y.

SNOKE—FISHER.—At South Bend, Ind., Sept. 29, by Rev. N. D. Williamson, Mr. Charles A. Snoke and Miss Dora M. Fisher.

VANDERVEER—GROOT.—At the residence of the bride's parents, by the Rev. D. N. Vanderveer, D.D., G. Henry Vanderveer, of Glenville, to Fanny L. Groot, of Charlton, Schenectady, Co. N. Y.

WISSCHUSEN—RICEMAN.—At Belleville, N. J., on Tuesday evening, Sept. 28, by the Rev. Ralph W. Brokaw, Mr. John Frederick Wisschusen, Jr., and Miss Blanche Riceman, all of Belleville, N. J.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

HEES.—Mrs. Jacob Hees, of Fonda, Sept 23.

And so a wide vacant place is made in our community and in our Church. No one among us was more highly esteemed or more deeply loved. Her gentleness of disposition, her exemplary life, her unassuming piety, and at last her patient suffering endeared her to all who knew her, and made the universal anxiety as to the outcome of her disease almost more than could be borne through the weary days and weeks. But she herself, though suffering unutterably, uttered no word of murmuring or complaint, but possessed her soul in most marvellous patience and looked forward as calmly to the end which she clearly foresaw as if it were for a welcome journey. She trusted her Saviour as a little child trusts its mother; and while she willingly submitted to the means used for her recovery, she expected to go to be with her Lord, and was long ready and waiting.

And now she has answered the summons,—leaving sore, torn hearts behind her, but sweetest memories, too, and blessed assurance that it is only for a little while. D. B.

NEVIUS.—On the 29th day of September, at the parsonage of the Dutch Reformed Church in Stuyvesant, Col. Co., N. Y., in the 78th year of her age, Mrs. Maria L. Nevius, wife of the Rev. Elbert Nevius.

PILLING, James, died on Monday, Sept. 13, in the 75th year of his age, at his residence, Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn.

Brother Pilling was born in England, Jan. 16, 1812. In 1832 he came to America. At first he settled in the historic town of Hackensack, N. J. Before he finally settled on Long Island he travelled through the West, and had often entertained his friends with accounts of his experiences in the then wild regions of Michigan. By national affinities allied to the Episcopal Church, his heart seemed from the first to be with the simpler worship of our own Church. He occasionally attended services at the old Bushwick Church, but at length gave his heart and life to the Lord and joined the East New York Reformed Church by confession on May 23, 1845. Repeatedly has he served our Church in the capacity of deacon or elder; and last spring our suffrages placed him in the Elder's seat for the last time. There is no enterprise connected with our Church wherewith his name is not closely identified. To us remains the memory and the example of his life, of his quiet, unobstrusive, but genuine Christian character. His life was gentle, kindly, loving service of the Master. His death was peace; and now is the reward. "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

The following resolutions were passed at a recent meeting of the Consistory:

Whereas, It has pleased the heavenly Father to take unto the house of the many mansions, our beloved brother, Elder James Pilling, Esq.; therefore,

Resolved That we, the Consistory of the East New York Reformed Church, while hereby expressing our sincere and heartfelt sorrow at his departure from our midst, do humbly submit to this dispensation of Providence, rejoicing at the same time in the bright record of Christian faith and living which our brother has left behind him; and,

Resolved, That we recall with gratitude his faithful and self-sacrificing services rendered through many years of membership and office-bearing, and continued unto the very day of his death, when he was still in active service as one of the elders of the church; and,

Resolved, That we bear grateful witness to the distinguishing qualities of his Christian character; unity in benevolence in remembering the needs of our individual church, and of the church at large; constant charity in relieving all forms of distress; unvarying kindliness and gentleness in personal intercourse with men,—in all of which we recognize a beautiful illustration of the Master's Spirit; and, lastly,

Resolved, That these resolutions be read from the pulpit, spread upon our Minutes, and copies of them be sent to the family of Elder W. S. Davies, and to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER for publication.

D. V. P.

RAFF.—At South Bend, Ind., Sept. 27, Simon Raff, M.D., aged 82 years, 3 months and 4 days. He selected his pall-bearers and his funeral text, Psalm 33:21. He died while serving his third term as City Commissioner.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in the Lafayette Reformed Church on Tuesday, Oct. 9th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial minutes will be presented. WM. RANKIN DURYEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE appointed Oct. 19th, at 7 P.M., for the ordination of the candidate, Wm. B. Hill, the Rev. Mr. Vanderwart to preach the sermon and the Rev. B. B. Staats to read the form and offer the ordaining prayer. S. C.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Williamsburgh, (Rev. Dr. Terhune's), on the third Tuesday of October, (19th), at 10 o'clock A.M.
W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular fall session at East New York, L. I., on the third Tuesday of October, (19th), at 10 o'clock A.M. Classical assessment to be paid at this meeting. R. G. STRONG, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF MONTGOMERY has made the following arrangements for the installation of the Rev. W. W. Whitney at Ephratah, at 11 A.M., on Oct. 12th: The President to preside and read the form; Rev. J. A. De Baun, D.D., or Rev. J. R. Kyle, to preach the sermon; Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D D., or Rev. F. V. Van Vranken, to charge the pastor; Rev. F. S. Haines, or Rev. H. M. Cox, to charge the people.

THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK will meet in stated session in the North Reformed Church of Newark, on Tuesday, October 12th, at 10 o'clock A.M. Consistorial records are to be presented and Classical dues paid. HENRY VEHSLAGE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 19th, in the Suydam Street Church, (Rev. Dr. Campbell's), in the city of New Brunswick, at 9.30 A.M. Rev. James LeFevre will preach the sermon.
F. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in regular session on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10 o'clock A.M., in the lecture-room of the church, 5th avenue and 29th street. All applications for Classical aid must be sent to the undersigned, corner of Lexington avenue and East 81st street, at least ten days before the date of meeting.
OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in fall session at Cuddebackville, Tuesday, October 19th, at 2 P.M. Carriages will meet delegates at Guyward at 11.25 A.M. Consistorial minutes must be presented and Classical dues paid. The subject for religious meeting in the evening, "Infant Baptism and the Religious Training of the Young." Revs. Schoonmaker and Darrach to open the discussion.
R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in stated session at Addisville, Pa., the third Tuesday in October, 19th, at 11.30 A.M. Conveyances will meet delegates at Somerton, on Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, at 10.17, and those leaving Philadelphia at 9.40 will be met at Churchville at 10.23.
S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Church of Cold Spring, on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial minutes to be presented and dues to be paid.
A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RARITAN will hold its stated fall session in the Second Reformed church in Somerville, N. J., on the second Tuesday, the 12th of October, 1886, at 10.30 A.M. Classical dues and bills of delegates are payable at this session.
JOHN F. MESICK, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE appointed the following supplies for vacant churches: Gilboa and Prattsville, November, Rev. D. K. Van Doren; January, Rev. J. G. Smart; March, Rev. P. Phelps, D.D. Schoharie Mt. and Central Bridge, October, Rev. J. G. Fagg; Dec. Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. W. A. Wurts; Sharon, October, Rev. J. G. Smart; Dec., Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. J. G. Fagg.
D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER.—A regular meeting of the Classis of Westchester will be held in the Church of Fordham, N. Y. city, on Tuesday, the 19th day of October, at 10 o'clock A.M. Rev. William E. Turner will preach the sermon.
C. K. CLEARWATER, S. C.

AFTER October 10th the address of Rev. Wm. H. Ballagh will be Lodi, N. Y.

CORRESPONDENTS please address Rev. B. C. Miller, Jr., at Bloomfield, N. J. (P. O. Box 276.)

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. J. W. Warnshuis at Passaic, N. J.

CORRESPONDENTS are requested to address Rev. J. Elmendorf, D.D, at 61 East 123d st., New York.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. G. D. Lydecker at Upper Red Hook, N. Y.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

AYER'S PILLS. Sugar-Coated Cathartic

If the Liver becomes torpid, if the bowels are constipated, or if the stomach fails to perform its functions properly, use Ayer's Pills. They are invaluable.

For some years I was a victim to Liver Complaint, in consequence of which I suffered from General Debility and Indigestion. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills restored me to perfect health.—W. T. Brightney, Henderson, W. Va.

For years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than anything else, to my bowels. These Pills are mild in action, and do their work thoroughly. I have used them with good effect, in cases of Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, and Dyspepsia. —G. F. Miller, Attleborough, Mass.

Regulate

Ayer's Pills cured me of Stomach and Liver troubles, from which I had suffered for years. I consider them the best pills made, and would not be without them.—Morris Gates, Downsville, N. Y.

I was attacked with Bilious Fever, which was followed by Jaundice, and was so dangerously ill that my friends despaired of my recovery. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and soon regained my customary strength and vigor.—John C. Pattison, Lowell, Nebraska.

Last spring I suffered greatly from a troublesome humor on my side. In spite of every effort to cure this eruption, it increased until the flesh became entirely raw. I was troubled, at the same time, with Indigestion, and distressing pains in

The Bowels.

By the advice of a friend I began taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time I was free from pain, my food digested properly, the sores on my body commenced healing, and, in less than one month, I was cured. —Samuel D. White, Atlanta, Ga.

I have long used Ayer's Pills, in my family, and believe them to be the best pills made.—S. C. Darden, Darden, Miss.

My wife and little girl were taken with Dysentery a few days ago, and I at once began giving them small doses of Ayer's Pills, thinking I would call a doctor if the disease became any worse. In a short time the bloody discharges stopped, all pain went away, and health was restored. —Theodore Esling, Richmond, Va.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicine.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

FACE, HANDS, FEET,

and all their imperfections, including Facial Development, Superfluous Hair, Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, Moth, Freckles Red Nose, Acne, Blk Heads, Scars, Pitting and their treatment. Dr. John H. Woodbury, 37 N. Pearl St., ALBANY, N.Y. Est'd 1870, Send 10c. for book

WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free. STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

The Church.

Within the Veil.

THE SABBATH CHIME.

WHAT must it be to dwell above,
At God's right hand, where Jesus reigns?
Since the sweet earnest of His love
O'erwhelms us on these dreary plains!
No heart can think, no tongue explain,
What bliss it is with Christ to reign.

When sin no more obstructs our sight,
When sorrow pains our heart no more,
How shall we view the Prince of light,
And all His works of grace explore?
What height and depth of love Divine
Will there through endless ages shine!

Well, He has fixed the happy day
When the last tear shall fill our eyes,
And God shall wipe that tear away,
And fill us with Divine surprise
To hear His voice, to see His face,
And feel His infinite embrace!

This is the heaven I long to know;
For this, with patience I would wait,
Till, weaned from earth and all below,
I mount to my celestial seat,
And wave my palm and wear my crown,
And, with the elders, cast them down.

—Joseph Swain, 1793.

The Great Sin of Doing Nothing.

"But if ye will not do so, behold, ye have sinned against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out."—NUM. 32:23.

WHAT was this Sin? What is this sin about which the Spirit of God says by Moses, "Be sure your sin will find you out?" A learned divine has delivered a sermon upon the sin of murder from this text, another upon theft, another upon falsehood. Now they are very good sermons, but they have nothing to do with this text, if it be read as Moses uttered it. If you take the text as it stands, there is nothing in it about murder, or theft, or anything of the kind. In fact, it is not about what men do, but it is about what men do not do. The iniquity of doing nothing is a sin which is not so often spoken of as it should be. A sin of omission is clearly aimed at in this warning,—"If ye will not do so, be sure your sin will find you out."

The Nature of the Sin.—It was the sin of idleness and of self-indulgence. "We have cattle: here is a and that yields much pasture: let us have this for our cattle, and we will build folds for our sheep with the abundant stones that lie about, and we will repair these cities of the Amorites, and we will dwell in them. They are nearly ready for us, and there shall our little ones dwell in comfort. We do not care about fighting: we have seen enough of it already in the wars with Sihon and Og. Reuben would rather abide by the sheepfolds. Gad has more delight in the bleating of the sheep and in the folding of the lambs in his bosom than in going forth to battle." Alas, the tribe of Reuben is not dead, and the tribe of Gad has not passed away! Many who are of the household of faith are equally indisposed to exertion, equally fond of ease. Hear them say, "Thank God we are safe! We have passed from death unto life. We have named the name of Christ; we are washed in His precious blood, and therefore we are secure...." Not a hand's turn will they do. They gird on no armor, they grasp no sword, they wield no sling, they throw no stone. No, they have gotten their possession; they know they have, and they sit down in carnal security, satisfied to do nothing. They neither work for life, nor from life; they are arrant sluggards, as lazy as they are long. Nowhere are they at home except where they can enjoy themselves, and take things easy. They love their beds, but the Lord's fields they will neither plow nor reap. This is the sin pointed out in the text,—"If ye do not go forth to the battles of the Lord, and contend for the Lord God and for his people, ye do sin against the Lord: and be sure your sin will find you out." The sin of doing nothing is about the biggest of all sins, for it involves most of the others. The sin of sitting still while your brethren go forth to war breaks both tables of the law, and has in it a huge idolatry of self, which neither allows love to God or man. Horrible idleness! God save us from it!....

If there be any in the Church who have talent that they do not use for God, or money which they do not lay out for Christ, or time which they do not use for holy purposes, they are sinning, and their sin will find them out. Your buried talent, will it not rust; and rusting, will it not create within your spirits a most horrible disease, and be a peril to you? Must it not be so? Are they not guilty of an acted lie before high heaven who call themselves servants of God, and yet do not serve Him?—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon

Transgression Blotted Out.

ANOTHER incident from his ministerial experience was told by Mr. Rainsford in his peculiarly graphic and inimitable way. A lady lived near me, he said, who had an ungodly husband and who suffered from heart disease. The doctor had forbidden anyone to go near her, especially a clergyman, as any mental disturbance might be the death of her. I did not want to be the death of her, but it was laid on my heart to try and visit her, though how to accomplish it I knew not. But how wonderfully God opens the way for us when we have anything to do for Him. One beautiful evening I went to her house, wondering if there was any chance of getting in. As I approached I could see through the window that the lady was in the drawing room. The hall door was wide open. I knew I was forbidden the house, but I prayed the Lord to guide me in the matter. I knew they could not hang me for it, at any rate. I entered the hall door and went straight into the room where the lady was reclining on a couch. As if I did not see her, I walked right up to the window and looked out; what a lovely view it was. As I admired the prospect I began to repeat some words of Scripture to comfort myself, as it were. As God would have it, I read the words towards the close of Isa. 48:

This people have I formed for Myself; they shall shew forth My praise. But thou hast not called upon Me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of Me, O Israel. Thou hast not brought me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honored Me with thy sacrifices. I have not caused thee to serve with an offering, nor wearied thee with incense. Thou hast bought Me no sweet cane with money, neither hast thou filled Me with the fat of thy sacrifices: but thou hast made Me to serve with thy sins, thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities. I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins. Put Me in remembrance: let us plead together: declare thou, that thou mayest be justified.

When I had finished, I heard a voice behind me: "In the name of God, Mr. Rainsford, what am I to put Him in remembrance of?" I was almost afraid to turn round, so I read again: "Thou hast not brought Me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings; neither hast thou honored me with thy sacrifices," and so on. Then she said again: "In the name of God, what am I to put him in remembrance of?" I read it again. "You don't mean that I am to put the Almighty in remembrance of these things?" "Yes, that is what it says; but it says something else." "What is that?" "I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins." She clapped her hands and exclaimed, "That will do for me." I thought then I might turn round and talk to her face to face. For some weeks afterwards it was my privilege to visit her, and she never lost her joy. She used to call me her darling after that, poor soul. When she was dying she said to me, "Darling, give me my verse." So I repeated it to her, "Thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities. . . . I am He that blotteth out thy sins for Mine own sake. Put me in remembrance." Her poor lips moved, and she whispered, "I do, I do," and then she went home.—Report of August Conference at Northfield.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 3. FOURTH QUARTER.

M. Jesus Delivered to be Crucified.....John 19:1-16.
T. The People Persuaded..... Matt. 27:19-31.
W. A Robber Preferred.....Mark 15:1-20.
T. Christ Rejected..... .....Luke 23:13-25.
F. The Shepherd Smitten.....Zech. 13:1-9.
S. The Only Saviour..... .....Isa. 43:1-16.
S. A Just God and a Saviour.....Isa. 45:18-25.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Oct. 17th.—"Jesus Delivered to Be Crucified."—John 19:1-16.

Golden Text.—"Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified."—JOHN 19:16.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"He was wounded for our transgressions."—ISA. 53:5.

INTRODUCTION.

IN order to appreciate the motives which governed the conduct of Pilate we must understand the peculiarities of his position. The representative of a suspicious emperor, ruler over a turbulent province, with unlimited opportunities for abuse of power, he had incurred the ill-will of his subjects without being sure of the favor of his monarch. At the time of the trial of Jesus he was in danger of recall on complaint of the Jews, and he felt the necessity of obtaining, if possible, their good opinion. At the same time he was entirely out of sympathy with them in their persecution of Jesus, and was probably a thoroughgoing sceptic so far as personal belief in religion was concerned. In this lesson we see the pitiable failure of his attempts to do justice and be a demagogue at the same time.

THE LESSON.

I. THE SCOURGING.—VS. 1-7.

V. 1.—"Then Pilate therefore took Jesus and scourged him." This was after the people had refused to accept the release of Jesus as the governor's customary act of clemency at this time. Scourging was a regular preliminary to crucifixion, and the other evangelists appear to have regarded it in that light in connection with Jesus, but it seems probable that Pilate hoped that the Jews would be satisfied when they saw Jesus suffering under this cruel punishment. The Roman scourging was a most severe ordeal, and many died under the lash.

V. 2.—"And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns." These rude heathen caught the spirit of the people, and added insult to injury in their brutal sport. It is probable that they thought as much of deriding the Jewish nation as they did of mocking the prisoner, against whom they could have had no personal enmity. This thorn crown must have severely hurt the brow of the Saviour as hard hands pressed it upon him.

V. 3.—"And said Hail, King of the Jews." The Revision represents this mock homage as continuing for some time, as though the guard passed in procession before Him while pretending to offer Him homage. "They smote him with their hands" They felt perfectly safe in thus abusing a friendless and helpless prisoner, who had but a few hours to live, yet of them even more truly than of the Jews could it be said, "They know not what they do."

V. 4.—"Pilate therefore went forth again." Probably while the soldiers were maltreating Jesus. He wished to prepare the people for a favorable reception of his next proposition. "That ye may know that I find no fault in him." This being the case, the only course open to Pilate was to release the prisoner, but he treated the mob as a court of appeal and tamely submitted his finding to their revision.

V. 5.—"Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe" With these mock trappings of royalty upon Him, and with frame bowed by pain and anguish, Jesus stood before His countrymen an object of pity and compassion. Even the cold, hard heart of the heathen ruler was touched as He said, "Behold the man." He thus made one last appeal to their hearts for pity if not for justice.

V. 6.—"They cried out saying, Crucify him, crucify him." The rage of His enemies had been increased by what seemed to them the unnecessary delay. They were in haste to have done with this work in order that they might devote themselves to the solemnities and joys of the feast. Pilate, indignant at their persistent bloodthirstiness, replies, "Take ye him and crucify him; for I find no fault in him." They were acting as judges rather than accusers, yet were demanding that He should suffer the extreme penalty of the Roman law.

V. 7.—"We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God." The Romans had recognized and undertaken to execute the peculiar laws of the conquered provinces, so that the people were right in this, but their charge of blasphemy was really the first formal charge that had been brought against Jesus. The scourging had failed to satisfy the mob, while Pilate had transgressed the law by ordering a prisoner to be scourged before he had been condemned.

II. THE DECISION.—VS. 8-12.

V. 8.—"When Pilate heard that saying he was the more afraid." It may have been at this juncture that his wife sent her entreaty that he should have nothing to do with the case, because of her troubled dreams concerning Him. Omens and portents had great weight with the Romans, and these, coupled with this strange charge of blasphemy, caused the judge to pause.

V. 9.—"Saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou?" In the solitude of the judgment hall he sought to solve the mystery that shrouded this prisoner. But Jesus gave him no answer. He knew that Pilate had taken the first steps in a path of weak compliance that gave no opportunity for returning, and that all that He might say would be utterly useless.

V. 10.—The silence of Jesus angered Pilate and he began to try to terrify Him. His boast of power was a confession of moral weakness, for he did not have power to resist the demands of the Jews.

V. 11.—"Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above." Pilate feared the displeasure of his monarch, Jesus would have him recognize a still higher responsibility. "He that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin." This reference is probably to the High Priest who, recognizing his responsibility to God, had dared to pursue a course of vindictive vengeance. Much as Pilate sinned against conscience and judgment, the Jews were far more guilty, for they were despising the blessings of the covenant of which they boasted.

V. 12.—"From thenceforth Pilate sought to release him" The manner in which he sought to accomplish this is not related. His arguments and entreaties were all in vain, for the Jews had learned to know their man and were confident of their power over him. One sentence alone was necessary to bring the ruler to their feet. "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend." The charge of treason hanging over him caused all pity and justice to disappear, and he became the pliant tool of the enemies of our Lord.

III. THE CONDEMNATION.—VS. 13-16.

V. 13.—"When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth." Further parley was useless, the last step alone remained to be taken, and ascending the judgment seat Pilate proceeded to pronounce a most unjust sentence. He could not refrain, however, from taunting the people whom he feared and hated as he said, "Behold your king."

V. 14—Maddened by his repeated taunts, the Jews at last uttered the death sentence of their nation as they cried, "We have no king but Cæsar." In accomplishing the destruction of Jesus they disavowed their relations to Jehovah.

V. 16—"Then delivered he him, therefore, unto them to be crucified." After declaring the utter baselessness of the charges against Him, after vainly seeking to evade the responsibility of the sentence, after exposing the malice of His accusers, Pilate turned the innocent victim over to the hands of His enemies that He might be murdered under forms of law, and furnished the customary guard of four soldiers to act as executioners. In thus condemning Jesus, Pilate sealed his own death warrant.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. It is impossible to befriend Jesus and at the same time please His enemies.

2. We cannot defeat the world by compromising with it.

3. An uneasy conscience makes a man a coward.

4. Behold the man of sorrows suffering for you.

5. Behold the man of sorrows claiming your sympathy and love.

6. Behold your King. Will you obey or rebel?

7. Behold your King. He must rule or conquer your heart.

8. Only the blood of Christ can wash out the blood stains of Jesus.

The Home Letter.

A STRANGER in a strange, far land
Was Bertha, toiling day by day
For all she earned,
The while she yearned—
Wiping the lonely tears away—
For father, mother,
Sister, brother,
And the dear home long miles apart
From her and her sad, longing heart.

Coming across the fields one day,
With only "thought" for company,
Watching the skies
With tearful eyes,
Only the clouded parts to see,
Unmindful of the tender blue
Which gleamed beyond, all bright and true,
Unheeding the harvest landscape too
Which lay around all fair to view,
Sad Bertha chanced erelong to meet
The post-boy, who on lazy feet
Came up the road, his scant bag swinging
And keeping time to drowsy singing.
As Bertha raised her drooping head,
"You're Bertha Steinbacher?" he said.
She nodded "Yes."
"Well, then, I guess
I've got a letter for you here;
You look as though you needed cheer."

Then on he went, while Bertha's eyes
Sought once again the distant skies,
But, ah! the clouds, where had they flown!
She saw them not, she would not own
There had been clouds, for all so glad
Was that same heart, just now so sad.
Only the sunbeams light,
Only the blue sky bright,
Only the happiness that lay
Around her view on that glad day,
Did Bertha see with grateful eyes
As to her heart she pressed her prize.

That dear home letter, come at last
To fill her heart with joy so fast!
Only to read the loving lines
By mother's dear hand penned!
Only to know the love more true
Than lover or than friend!
Only to feel that day by day
For her the dear ones think and pray!
What rest supreme, what joy untold,
Do the dear letter's pages hold
For her who toils with willing hand
For home's sake in this stranger land!
And soon, when "patience has fulfilled
Its perfect work," we know
Back to the home where rest awaits
The wanderer she will go.

Dear Lord, thy pages let me read
To satisfy my heart's best need,
Thy letters to thy wandering child
To keep her spirit undefiled
And patient till the glad day come
When I at last go home! go home!

—Mary D. Brine, in The Illustrated Christian Weekly.

How One Man Found God.

NOT quite twenty years since three men, Baker, Strole, and White, were searching the river beds in Colorado for gold. The rivers in that part of the country tumble over precipices, and rush wildly through the darkness. They run deep down—hundreds, in some places thousands of feet down—and out of sight, between great walls of rock. One morning the three men named, having slept at the entrance of one of the slits, which are called cañons, were coming up the steep sides of the cañon to continue their search for gold. As they came near the surface, the wild war whoop of the Indians—the native people of Colorado—burst on their ear, and at the same time a shower of arrows and bullets fell on them. Baker was hit, and as it turned out, so sorely that he died. And as he was captain, he cried to the other two to escape for their lives. But they were loyal men, and stood by their dying captain, facing the cruel savages and beating them back, until the last quiver of his breast told them he was dead. Then they fled back into and down the cañon in the rocks where the river ran. And thither the Indians were afraid to follow. At a bend of the river they found some driftwood, plenty and strong enough to make a raft; and with ropes and horse harness they made a raft, and tying a bag of provisions to it, they launched into the unknown stream. Never raft sailed on that stream before. As they went on, the darkness became nearly as great as the darkness of a tunnel, only far up they could see a thin line of open sky, over which for one short hour in the day the sunlight passed. Then night came, and there was total darkness. Higher and higher rose the walls on either side as they sailed further on.

Meanwhile the little raft sped on, but on a terrible voyage. The turns in the river were frequent, and the falls and whirlpools terrible. The men clung to the raft for dear life, the one keeping it from bumping against the sides, the other speeding it with a pole. Only the night before their captain had told them that at the foot of the cañon, if it could be reached, was a village called Colville. And the hope of the two men was that they might arrive there before long. But four days passed, and Colville was not reached. On the fourth day, as the raft was caught by the rushing stream and dashed round a sharp bend in the cañon, it went to pieces, and Strole, trying to guide it with his pole, was tossed into the roaring whirl of waters, gave a loud shriek, and was seen no more. White was now alone, and with a broken raft. A feeling of despair and terror came over him. He wished he had fallen in the fight with the Indians as Baker did. He felt the temptation to throw himself into the seething waters and end his sorrow. But the good Lord had something better in store for him. He helped him put away such thoughts, and bind the raft together again. Meantime he tied himself to the raft. He was caught in a whirlpool, but amid the rushing waters the poor man found God. "I called from the depths of my soul," he said afterwards, "and the loving God heard my appeal." Six days later he came to Colville, where his troubles came to an end, for after the whirlpool was the smoothest current he had seen in the cañon. Our great troubles and dangers often are the surest means to lead us to find God, and learn what it is to trust Him.—Dr. W. A. Bell, in Survey for Southern Railroad to Pacific Ocean.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Incomparable in Sick Headache.
Dr. FRED HORNER, Jr., Salem, Va., says: "To relieve the indigestion and so-called sick headache, and mental depression incident to certain stages of rheumatism, it is incomparable."

Lactated Food
The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.
It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable, wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as safe substitute for mother's milk.
No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.
In CHOLERA INFANTUM,
This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.
FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.
Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach. In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant
150 MEALS for $1.00.
Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1. 0.
A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," free on application.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!
SECURED BY
FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.
TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000 000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address
E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CONSTIPATION,
What is it Good For? TARRANT'S Effervescent Seltzer APERIENT
Cures Constipation, Sick Headache and biliousness It promotes the Appetite, and invigorates the stomach, to which it imparts tone and vigor, and enables the digestive organs to perform their functions with ease and expedition. It is pleasant to the taste, portable in form, and gives immediate relief in all ordinary ailments arising from a disordered stomach or constipated habit. Take no substitute but demand the genuine Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient, which can be found in every well-regulated drug store.
Sick-Headache, AND DYSPEPSIA.

6%, 7%, 8%
The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.
Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

THE BEST POLISH FOR
Gold and Silverware.
PRODUCES greatest brilliancy.
REQUIRES least labor.
IS HARMLESS in every respect.
Sold everywhere, and sent, post-paid, on receipt of 15 cents in stamps.
SEE THAT FULL NAME ELECTRO-SILICON IS ON EACH BOX.
Send address, mention this paper, and receive
A TRIAL SAMPLE FREE.
THE ELECTRO SILICON CO., 72 John St., New York.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.
Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, or Webster's Dictionary. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

A BIG OFFER. To introduce them, we will Give Away 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 28 Bond St., N. Y.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 31 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.
Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.
The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.
J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.
Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 3[illegible]
Capital paid in cash	1,[illegible]00,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Fund together equal $1,200,000.
H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.
Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the 3r day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000
Reserve Premium Fund	2,038,020 0[illegible]
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	[illegible],040 1[illegible]
Net Surplus	1,3[illegible] 9[illegible]41 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

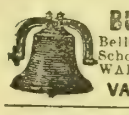
SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$136,6[illegible]8 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,3[illegible]0 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9[illegible] 2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	[illegible]6 0[illegible]0 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886.	10[illegible],994 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,[illegible]64,118 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR. } Ass't Sec's

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c.
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md.



BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK
Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.
The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX 853 Broadway, N.Y. Name this paper.

Arnold, Constable & Co

CARPETS.

FALL IMPORTATION NOW OPEN

OF

Rich High Class Carpets

In Axminster, Wilton and Brussels.

ORIENTAL

Whole Carpets and Rugs

in exclusive designs and novel colorings now on exhibition.

Arnold, Constable & Co

PARIS AND CITY MADE

GARMENTS.

We have now in stock a superb assortment of the latest Fall and Winter styles in COSTUMES, Suits, Cloaks, Opera and Street Wraps, Jackets, &c.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

CARPETS.

Our assortment of artistic novelties in English Royal Wiltons, (our own importation,) Aubusson Axminsters, Gobelin Moquettes, and all the Finer Grades, surpasses anything ever before exhibited.

PRICES EXCEEDINGLY ATTRACTIVE.

SPECIAL SALE.

3,000 different styles (a recent purchase) of Wiltons, Moquettes, Velvets, Brussels, and Extra Super Ingrains, Best Quality, this Season's Designs, we offer at a slight advance above the manufacturers' cost of production.

An Immense Variety of Reversible

SMYRNA RUGS AND MATS

Just Opened, at Less than Auction Prices.

UPHOLSTERY

For Furniture Coverings and Draperies in the Finest Imported Fabrics a Specialty.

500 P'rs Chenille Curtains at $12; worth $16.

1,000 P'rs Lace Curtains (Taped Edge) at $2; worth $3.

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,

Sixth Avenue and 13th Street, New York.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART.

• By John B. Gough. •

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears" it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. No Distance no hindrance as we pay Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

Upholstery Goods

RETAIL DEPARTMENT.

W. & J. SLOANE

Are now prepared to offer their new Importations in

Upholstery Goods

Suitable for CURTAINS, PORTIERES, and WALL HANGINGS.

They would also call attention to their assortment of fine

BROCATELLES,

which for beauty of design and richness of coloring cannot be excelled.

Special designs and estimates furnished if desired.

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

NEW YORK.

EQUITABLE

Mortgage Company,

SIX AND SEVEN PER CENT

FARM Mortgages & Municipal in Kansas, Missouri & Nebraska BONDS

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST

GUARANTEED.

Capital, $600,000.00.

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years sent free on application.

OFFICES:

NEW YORK, 208 B'way, Evening Post Bl'dg.
CHARLES N. FOWLER, V.
BOSTON, 23 Court Street.
H. H. FITCH, Manager.
PHILADELPHIA, 112 South Fourth Street,
CHAS. BENJ. WILKINSON, Manag
KANSAS CITY, Mo.
JOHN AVERY, General Manager.

Estey Organs Pianos

To those who are using the ESTEY ORGAN no word of praise or commendation is needed. The ESTEY PIANO is just as thoroughly made, and is guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has.

ESTEY ORGAN CO., Brattleboro, Vt.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET

NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

Sole Agents for the United States for the Celebrated

Red Star Brand

OF

Wonderful Wearing

Velveteen,

Noted for Its Unequalled Color and Finish. This Fas Pile Dress and Mantle Velveteen was Awarded the Only Gold Medals at the International Exhibition at Vienna in 1873 Paris 1878, and Nice 1883.

To Prevent Imitations a Red Star will be Found Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

These Goods are of English Manufacture, 24 nches Wide, and in 89 Different Colors.

PRICE, 74c.

amples Mailed on Application and Mail Orders Promptly Filled.

R. H. MACY & CO.

GOODS FOR INFANTS' WEAR.

Messrs. James McCreery & Co. have received from Paris a select importation of exceedingly choice Novelties for BABY'S WEAR.

Infants' Wardrobes furnished complete with our own designs in these goods at very reasonable prices.

Orders by mail promptly filled.

James M'Creery & Co.,

Broadway and Eleventh Street,

New York.

A MILLION

BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,

81 CHAMBERS STREET,

3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you. The Old School Painter weeps alone amid his poisonous fumes, while his paint chalks off in 18 months. The F. J. NASH M'F'G. CO., Manufacturers of Ready Mixed Paints at $1.25 per gall. that don't come off. Nyack, Rockland Co., New York. Interesting Circulars Free. If your dealer refuses you these goods apply to us direct.

RIDLEYS'

Grand St., New York,

NEW BUILDING

which has been in course of construction for the past three months, will be thrown open to the public

IN A FEW DAYS.

Although somewhat cramped for room, due to that which the New Building has deprived us of, still we are

DISPLAYING ALL THE

FALL NOVELTIES

IN

MILLINERY GOODS,

DRESS GOODS,

LADIES' SUITS,

VELVETS,

and at prices that will show a gratifying saving.

BOYS' CLOTHING

We have purchased for cash and will display on Monday $20,000 in Boys' Clothing, consisting of Suits and Overcoats, at prices which will be in accordance with our purchase price—that is, 65 cents on the dollar.

ALL THE BEST MADE, WELL TRIMMED, AND MOST FASHIONABLE CUT.

FOR AGES 2 1-2 TO 8 YEARS,

500 Overcoats $1.95.

500 NORFOLK BLOUSE SUITS.....

600 All-Wool Suits, ages 4 to 14 years, $1.95 and $2.95.

350 Plush-Trimmed Overcoats, ages 2½ to 6 years, $2.95.

150 All-Wool Overcoats, with Capes, 3 to 8 years, $3.95.

325 Suits for Boys, ages 4 to 14 years, $3.95.

150 3-Piece Suits, Short Pants, for ages 9 to 14 years.....

1,500 Suits, for 4 to 14 years, in Plaited and Blouse Suits .....

450 3-Piece Long Pants Suits for ages 12 to 17 years.....

$4.95 THE SUIT.

FINER GRADES IN ALL THE ABOVE.

These are very cheap goods, and all of this Season's manufacture.

Fashion Magazine.

FALL EDITION NOW READY.

Subscription Price,

50c. per Annum, published Quarterly on the finest Tinted Paper.

SINGLE COPIES, 15c.

Orders by Mail Accurately Attended To.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,

309, 311, 313 to 321 Grand St.,

56 to 70 ALLEN, 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST., N.Y.

ENTERPRISE MEAT CHOPPERS.

BEST IN THE WORLD.

GUARANTEED TO CHOP, NOT GRIND THE MEAT.

FOR CHOPPING SAUSAGE MEAT, MINCE MEAT, HAMBURG STEAK FOR DYSPEPTICS. BEEF TEA FOR INVALIDS, &c.

Farm and Fireside says: "It is the only Meat Chopper we ever saw that we would give house room. It has proven such a very useful machine that we want our readers to enjoy its benefits with us."

Send for Catalogue.

No. 10 Chops 1 pound per minute. Price, $3.00.
12 Chops 1 pound per minute. Price, $2.50.
22 Chops 2 pounds per minute Price, $4.00.
32 Chops 3 pounds per minute Price, $6.00.

American Agriculturist says: "We have given this Meat Chopper a thorough trial with most satisfactory results. They excel anything of the kind made in either hemisphere."

SOLD BY THE

No. 10 Family Size, Price, $3.00. Hardware Trade

ENTERPRISE M'F'G CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 41. WHOLE No. 2933.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1886.

$2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE AMERICAN BOARD.—This great and honored missionary society is not to depart from its historic, orthodox, and only rational position, to suit the advocates of the new theology. It will not send out missionaries in the future, as it has not in the past, to publish a "perhaps." The questions at issue were discussed, kindly but earnestly, for a whole day, and the action of the Prudential Committee in the acceptance or rejection of candidates endorsed by an overwhelming vote. The recommendation to refer the case of applicants of whose soundness in the faith there may be doubt to the decision of a council to be convened for the purpose was, perhaps, the best that could be done. It seems to be wise in so far that it tends to relieve the Board of responsibility before the churches. But in case candidates entertaining views similar to those which have received the approval of councils for ordination at home should be approved for missionary services, it might still be a question whether the Board would thereby be relieved of responsibility before God.

THE COMMITTEE ON PROGRAMME for the Missionary Conference have assigned forty-five minutes during the session of Wednesday morning to a "Question Drawer." It is designed to give an opportunity for the presentation of any question pertinent to missionary work. It is believed that this will give a practical character to the Conference that will be of great value. It is important that in the appointment of delegates by the Classes those shall be selected who can and will be present. The success of the Conference depends largely upon the personal interest and enthusiasm of those who compose it. The "signs of the times" indicate that these missionary gatherings are producing great results in the advancement of the kingdom of Christ throughout the world. The power of the Church is more felt and acknowledged over human society to-day than ever before. Grand as have been the conferences of the past, our great desire and purpose and prayer should be that this one shall exceed them all, and that its influence shall intensify the action of the forces which are to conquer the world for Christ.

DR. MUNGER'S CHURCH, the United Church of New Haven, Conn., has determined to postpone the collection for the American Board until the Board has decided whether it will send Rev. Dr. Hume back to India. Mr. Hume, at the alumni meeting at Andover Seminary, gave public notice that on his return to India, when the heathen should ask him what has been the fate of their ancestors, he would tell them that their ancestors had enjoyed or would enjoy an offer of the historic Christ in the intermediate state. The Prudential Committee necessarily considered this proclamation of a purpose, and concluded that it was not wise to enter upon an experiment of doubtful result and that the return of Mr. Hume to India should be postponed for the present. In this the committee is certainly right. No man can tell what would be the effect in India of the announcement, by the authority of the American Board, of probation after death. If the experiment is to be tried it should be tried independently, in a separate mission. Because the Board hesitates to enter upon so doubtful an experiment, the United Church of New Haven turns its back upon the noble work of the Board, a work upon which more depends than tongue can tell, a work undeniably Christian, necessary, efficient and blessed of God. To cripple this work is to inflict a most serious injury upon the highest interests of thousands of men. The New Haven Church does what it can to cripple and stop the work. Alas! So men shut their eyes upon the good a Church is doing, withdraw from and oppose it, because some one thing is done which they do not like. So men ignore the usefulness of a pastor, withdraw their support from him, drive him out from a parish, because he, in some point of policy, perhaps, does not agree with them. So men, if they find in it some one thing they do not like, discontinue the Church paper and do what they can to destroy it, although they agree with its course on a hundred points, and those the points of chief importance.

GREAT RELIEF was afforded by the news on Monday that the "Anchoria," with her precious freight of five hundred souls, was safe at St. Johns, N. B. A steady strain on thousands of hearts was removed, a strain that had been increasing day by day. Our life has in it contacts with heartless, self-seeking men and women, who trample ruthlessly on the rights and feelings of others when in the way of the attainment of their purposes, and we are called to oppose and overcome heartless plans, to restrict a greed of gain which is unaffected by the poverty, suffering and despair it inflicts; but there is more and more of genuine human sympathy, and an increasing proportion of the population of such a country as this hangs upon the daily telegrams relating to such events as a possible loss of the "Anchoria" and the sudden destruction of five hundred lives. Women and children and men talk about the news or no news and are heavy of heart until good news comes. There is great promise in such a disposition. It will right wrongs, remove oppressions, relieve suffering, and do these things wisely and well under the impulse of a genuine love of men, for true love is often wiser than cool reason. How is it that such a disposition exists? Some men answer, It is the result of evolution. But how is it that this disposition is not manifested in its power and beauty except where the Bible is? and that in its highest form it is not exhibited as the characteristic of a community except where there are many believing in Jesus Christ as their Saviour?

"I WAS SICK and in prison and ye visited me," our Lord assures us will be one of the tests of the final judgment, when the deeds done in the body shall decide an everlasting future. "Let the sighing of the prisoner come before thee" is the prayer of the Psalmist. Jehovah is said to "behold the earth; to hear the groaning of the prisoner." Laws were unjust 1,800 and 2,000 years ago; despotism imprisoned men because they simply hindered the prosecution of unrighteous designs; but is there not instruction for us and an application even for the present time in these words of Scripture? The words rise in our minds and speak to us as the call to prayer for the prisoners is heard. Three years ago "Prisoners' Sunday" was instituted, upon the recommendation of ministers and members of various denominations. Last year it was observed in nine States. For this year October 24th has been selected as the Sabbath for united prayer for the criminals in jails and prisons, and for sermons upon their condition and what may be done for them. Who knows how many conscience-smitten men and women, in the solitude of their cells, are lamenting the wrongdoing of their lives and longing for a way of escape from the toils of sin? There have been revivals in prisons. Hardened criminals have come out from confinement new men in Christ. The Lord's arm is not shortened. Self-interest also prompts to a wise and resolute and prayerful endeavor to improve the moral character of the inmates of the prisons, for they threaten our lives and property. Let us then observe "Prisoners' Sunday."

The Wage-Earners' Party.

THE political campaign in this city this Fall will be conducted with more serious thoughtfulness than any other of about twenty years. Thanks are due to the awakening of the wage-earners to the error of their ways and their turn to right-about-face in their political action—to their conversion to the side of honesty and decency, a side many of then for years have voted down. Let by-gones be by-gones, and let the addition to the ranks of honest citizens be cordially welcomed. But, however it has come about, the campaign is one of unusual seriousness.

It is also one of national importance. The labor unions all over the country are contributing to the expenses of their side in the wrestle. The case here is a test case. Victory here means a similar campaign in every American city, and victory here will affect Europe and have a mighty influence on the action of all political parties there. In other cities the wage-earners have made nominations, and in some the issue has been decided with significant results. The vote in Rutland, Vermont, about a fortnight ago, was: Workingmen, 1,645; Republican, 747; Democratic, 245. But the decisive, supreme effort, observed by all, is that going on in this city.

There are one or two facts in regard to the wage-earners that may properly be held in mind. The Northern States have been the field, since last March, of the most extensive strike of workingmen in the history of the contention between capital and labor. In its dimensions and duration it has never been equalled. Very few, if any strikes, even of those involving a much smaller number of men, have been attended by so few acts of violence and so limited an interference with the trade of the theatre of conflict. There have been violent deeds, destruction of property and life, and there has been here and there a decided check upon business, but there has been much less of these culpable incidents than have usually accompanied such uprisings. The workingmen of the country have been led more wisely than ever before in our history, and blatant demagogues have generally, and almost for the first time, been sent to the rear. These facts are important, and should be fairly taken into consideration in deciding upon our action in the present campaign.

Besides, a minister has presided and ministers have spoken, by invitation, of course, at the two public meetings in this city which the wage earners have held thus far. The religious creed of these ministers is more narrow than the consensus of the creeds held by evangelical Christians. They, at least some of them, probably a majority of them, reject articles of faith generally held by Protestant Christians. But they believe in God and His law, and in Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour. This movement, therefore, as it now presents itself, is not ungodly and unchristian. Ministers have not been prominent, we believe, in any political movement in this city since the Civil War, as they are now in this. It should also be noticed that Mr. George presents as the basis of his opposition to some of what he regards as evils, that they are contrary to the will of God. To ignore these facts will tend to drive the new party into scepticism and to antagonism to the Christian Church.

Citizens should also notice that this is a powerful movement. It has organized bodies behind it, and bodies that have learned how to act in subjection to parliamentary forms by the experience, the drill, they have had in the Unions. The selection printed in another column from John Swinton's Paper is sufficient evidence of this fact. This organized, drilled army has also learned the power of capital composed of the aggregation of numerous contributions. The stockholders, as they may be regarded, put, each man, into the treasury a small sum every week or every month, but the accumulated total is large enough to carry on a vigorous campaign, and one as decorous and respectable in its externals as that of any of the older parties. There are numbers, organization, experience in united action, money enough, in this new political movement.

These preliminary observations seem worthy of attention. It remains to examine hereafter the purposes expressed in the platform. Some of them, in our judgment, unless modified, ought to be defeated in the coming election.

MANY OBJECT to having the Scripture text printed in the Sabbath-school lesson leaves and helps, arguing that it supplants the use of the Bible. The late Presbyterian General Assembly at Minneapolis was overtured to direct the omission of the text from the helps and leaves published by the Presbyterian Board. We fail to see any sufficient reason for the omission. With the passage of Scripture on which the lesson is based printed on the leaf, it is evident that the lesson cannot be studied as it should be without quite an extensive use of the Bible. Take, for instance, "The Westminster Quarterly"—we select this because we are more familiar with it than with any other lesson help—the questions on the "Home Readings" cannot be answered without first reading the Scripture selections for each day in the week, all of which have an important bearing on the lesson. Likewise the "Questions for Further Study" sometimes require quite a thorough searching of the Scriptures for their answers. We speak from experience. For years it has been our habit to use the "Home Readings" each morning at family worship, and can testify that no lesson can be properly prepared for the class room without frequent reference to the Word of God. If the Bible is not read, and even searched, it is because the lesson is not studied and mastered. For the sake of convenience, especially in the class rooms, the Scripture text should appear on the lesson leaf, since it does not supersede the Bible. With the text there, thorough teachers and diligent pupils will find plenty of use for the Bible both in the home and in the school.

"Old Colony" Papers.

Current Notes.

THE POLITICAL STAGE OF THE LABOR MOVEMENT. ....THE HORRORS OF A STEAMSHIP FIREMAN'S LIFE....LESSONS OF THE LATE DEFALCATIONS.

THE transference of the Labor movement into politics is, in some of its aspects, an auspicious one. Politics are the safety-valve of a free country. So long as we keep that open, and allow the subterranean steam and heat to vent themselves in this direction, we need have little fear of earthquakes or volcanic outbursts. Party action, political conventions and mass meetings and processions are expenditures as well as generators of excitement, and serve to amuse people and divert them from the appetite for dynamite and shooting policemen. Moreover, as the editor of this paper suggested recently, political action is a great educator. The labor people will be led into the discussion of broad and underlying principles of government and of political and social economy. They will break up into subordinate "schools" and "halls" and shades of opinion and policy. They will find that the reconstruction of society is a much more complicated and difficult task than they imagined. They will learn by bitter experience what demagogue and trading leadership is, and will acquire a wholesome suspicion of managers and "master workmen." And their rally as a party will crystallize into opposition, just in proportion as they exhibit strength, the overwhelming forces of conservation in city and country.

This labor movement and the anti-saloon movement are the questions of the future. I see nothing in the other political issues of the day, financial or economical, to compare with them in urgency or vital importance. It is impossible to rouse popular enthusiasm about the tariff, or the silver question, and besides they do not seem to be at all identical with party lines, nor likely to lead to a reconstruction of parties. And even civil service reform has so entrenched itself in the public will and in the policy of both parties, that it may be regarded as substantially secured. The old organizations must make up their minds to grapple seriously with the saloon and the labor questions, or they will be ingloriously "left."

It is almost equally well for the rest of us, as for the labor party, to be forced into a reconsideration and discussion of fundamental principles. The ebullitions of brute force and blind revolt, and even even the lesson of strikes and boycotts, are calculated to arouse an equally unthinking resistance. But peaceful political debate and the arbitrament of the ballot box cannot fail to open our minds to the candid inquiry whether the present relations of employer and employed, and the respective opportunities of capital and labor, are all they might be. It will be worth while to inquire whether our experience of the advantages of committing public interests to the State—such as the mails, education, control of banking, regulation of commerce and travel, and the like—does not warrant the further extension of these powers for the public good and protection. It will be well to face the question whether there is not a basis of truth, and a show of reason, in the socialistic trend of the times, which it is simple wisdom to accept and madness to ignore. The candidacy of Mr. George cannot fail to cause a thorough sifting of the whole question of property in land. We do not yet feel in this country, with our vast territory, the crucial pressure of this problem. But it is well for us to provide in time against the evils which Europe and Southern America have inherited, from the unrestricted accumulation of real estate by the few and in the hands of privileged classes. This lies at the bottom of Ireland's misery, of the stagnancy of Mexico, of the degradation of the agricultural laborers in England, and of much of the "pauper labor" of the Continent. In nothing was the divine wisdom of the Mosaic Law more strikingly shown than in the seventh and seventieth year limitations of the sale of land, whereby it was made impossible for the soil to be monopolized by "families" and concentrated in idle and perhaps oppressive hands.

Of course, the theories of the socialist doctrinaires are wild and excessive, and the demands of their followers destructive. But their introduction into practical politics will have the double benefit of opening their own eyes to the impracticable nature of their notions, and of forcing us to search honestly for the real grievance and the right principle, so that some golden mean may be reached which will harmonize all fair-minded and peace-loving people.

There is not the slightest danger of the "labor party," succeeding in revolutionizing the government, or doing more than gain a hearing for itself and a representation in our legislative councils. But these, as the editor of the INTELLIGENCER has wisely said, are most desirable ends. The chief thing to be apprehended and deprecated in the movement is the probable attempt to introduce the despotic methods of the labor leagues into party drill, and thus to make it a great cast iron, unreasoning machine. But in the end such intimidating and slave-making methods would work their own cure among a liberty-loving people like our's, besides intensifying and concentrating the opposition of all other classes and parties.

While on the subject of labor, I am led to inquire whether anything practical has resulted from the recent agitation in behalf of the firemen on our ocean steamers. It has been shown (and so far as I have seen, no attempt has been made to deny it) that these men are confined in a sort of living tomb, sheathed with hot iron, in an atmosphere stifling with dust and ashes, and ranging from 130 to 175 degrees of heat. As a result the poor fellows are continually breaking down on the passage, and few live to be forty, and they are prematurely old long before that age. New men are obtained for the service only by being brought on board while drunk. Their treatment is, moreover, that of curs rather than human beings.

An utter indifference seems to have been shown to their condition by steamship owners, officers, and passengers, and no earnest attempt has been made to provide ventilation, or, better yet, to devise some mechanical contrivance for doing the severer and more injurious part of the work. The discovery that thousands of our fellowmen are subjected to this horrible and cruel existence makes it easier for us to believe that the present revolt of labor is grounded on substantial wrongs, and that the merits of the question are not all on one side. Have we not had enough of the "scientific" principles of a heartless political economy, and of "the survival of the fittest," in our dealing with social and industrial problems? And is it not time for Christians to try the experiment of Christianity?

What a recent outburst of defalcations and embezzlements (in plain words, of theft) on the part of men peculiarly trusted by the public, and prominent in the church! We may well ask ourselves whether, if so many cases of this kind come to light from the ill-success of these officials in their use of other people's money, there may not be a still great number who are successful in these transactions and able to replace the "borrowed" securities, or whose peculations are discovered and hushed up before they have gone too far to be compromised or kept quiet.

The lessons of such cases as Gould, Plunkett, Snelling, Spencer and Bartholomew, are: First, of course, the commonplace, but apparently unheeded one of the responsibility of directors to direct and not to leave the control of moneyed corporations in any one or two hands, to regard no human being as above suspicion, and to especially suspect any man who not only does not welcome, but who does not demand, the frequent investigation of his affairs. Second, the power of a good character. For it is only men who have succeeded in winning exceptional confidence for themselves, who are able to play the rôle of financial Judases.

And third, the need of reviving the old fashioned doctrine that the love of the world and the love of the Father cannot exist in the same heart. It is the fashion to preach an Epicurean Christianity, and such Pauline and primitive ideas as "crucifying oneself to the world" and "mortifying the flesh" are ridiculed as obsolete and cowardly. The Christian is told to go right into the midst of the world, and get as much of it into his hands as possible, and to take all the good of life he can. And the result is that he soon finds his spirituality clean gone, his habits of private devotion and self-discipline broken up or never formed, and his mind and heart swept away in the maelstrom of the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life. He hastes to be rich, he commits himself and his family to a scale of living which has to be kept up, and when the pressure of temptation comes he is as weak to resist as a straw in the whirlpool. We need the revival of a spiritual, a cross-bearing, a self mortifying,—if you please, what the world calls a gloomy, and the Christian of to-day calls an ascetic, religion, "Other-worldliness" is the best security for this world.

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

PRINCETON, N. J., October 1st, 1886.

October.

HOW time is flying! We October meet
Flinging around bright leaves of gold and red;
Pausing to make a crown of bitter-sweet
And immortelles, to place upon her head!
While nuts from opening burrs fall thick and fast,
As gay October brushes swiftly past!

The gardens still look splendid. Dahlias rear
Their stately heads around, while salvias spread
Their scarlet petals, and while often near
We mark the queenly cardinal's bright red.
All blossoms, now, look gorgeous in the sun,
Earth's "melancholy days" have not yet come!

The very skies are glowing! Cloud on cloud
Pile up, of silver, shot with rays of gold.
Then crimson veils fall o'er them, ve is de shroud
Scenes brighter far than earth-eyes could behold.
We look around, above, below, then sigh:
"Alas! October, too, must soon pass by."

—Sophie L. Schenck, in Brooklyn Magazine.

A Rabbi on Passover Wine.

EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER: Having read an article in your paper of September 29th about "Passover Wine," permit me to offer a few remarks in reply. The distinction between "Tirosh" and "Yayin" is a very proper one. According to all Hebrew writers, of all times, the first name is given to the product or juice of the grapes, intended to become wine, but before it has reached the stage of fermentation (generally lasting only three days), while after fermentation it was called yayin (wine). Tirosh was most likely not considered intoxicating. Whereas yayin could not be made unless it was first tirosh, it follows that the Jews, and even Noah, who made intoxicating wine (yayin), must have been acquainted with the unfermented wine. If they knew a process whereby wine could be kept for some time in the unfermented state, is not only very doubtful, but, from a number of writings and ordinances, it must be inferred that they did not.

In the universally recognized authoritative code of religious duties for the Hebrews, "Shulgan Aruch," it is enjoined upon them to sanctify every Sabbath at its commencement (Friday night), and every holiday, by reciting a blessing and short prayer over wine, and partaking thereof (at least a mouthful); the same to be done at the ceremony of a wedding, on Passover night, etc., etc. Now, in all these instances, in regard to all these precepts, the word "Tirosh" is never used, but always "Yayin." True, permission is given to use also freshly-made wine, but at the same time it is stated "that it is much better to use old wine." On Passover, in the first part of the ceremony, it is forbidden to drink more than two glasses of yayin, "for fear," it is said, "lest it produces intoxication." Again, one who has made a vow not to use any yayin, cannot recite the above mentioned sanctification. All of which must impress one with the idea that the use of fermented wine on the sacred feasts was, if not universal, at least the rule.

That all these rules, precepts and ordinances were unknown to Dr. S. M. Isaacs, is simply impossible. The statement he made (the existence of which we will not deny), must be differently understood, and perhaps then, may be very true. The strictly orthodox Jew does not use any wine not exclusively prepared according to certain rules. This article cannot always be procured, and, if so, only at a high price. Many Hebrews, therefore, make their own wine (from raisins), which, from their lack of knowledge or proper means, is not always fermented, and prefer that above a wine which they consider prohibited. The well-informed, pious Hebrew, who can afford it, prefers, however, on all religious occasions, real fermented wine.

It is but proper to add that intemperance was always condemned by the Jewish religion; so much so, that a son who was a confirmed drinker was, on the accusation of his parents, put to death by the authorities. (See Deut. 21: 18–21.) Again, immoderate use of intoxicating drinks, by many nations in vogue at their sacred feasts, was never a custom among the Hebrews.

In conclusion we would say, to prove that the Jewish religion enjoins total abstinence, is a failure; to prove that it advocates temperance, viz.: moderation in the use of intoxicating drinks, as well as in eating, is a very easy matter.

JB. L. CARDOZO, M.D.,
Formerly Hebrew Minister at Amsterdam, Holland.

NEW YORK, October 4th, 1886.

The New Political Party.

"JOHN SWINTON'S PAPER," of October 3d, says editorially:

"We attended the convention that nominated Henry George for Mayor of New York, and closely watched its proceedings from first to last. We feel bound to say that we never saw any political convention of more satisfactory demeanor. The managers of the old political 'machines' were all absent, from necessity; but they would have found cause of surprise if it had been possible for them to take in the scenes of the night. It comprised over four hundred delegates from labor organizations representing nearly every industry to be found in the city, and with a membership fully able to control the politics of the city. There was something beside mere 'enthusiasm' in it. Its business was conducted in the most orderly and intelligent manner. Not only the officers on the platform, but the delegates in the body of the hall, gave evidence that they possessed a very thorough knowledge of the methods of procedure and of parliamentary law,—all of which is doubtless the result of that valuable training and discipline which they obtain in their unions and assemblies, and in the Central Labor Union and the district organizations. We do not believe it would be possible to choose from among the mercantile classes of the city a body of men as well versed in such matters as were these representatives of the wage-working population. The speeches were apt and brief; every man in the convention seemed able to deliver his opinions in clear and direct language. An overwhelming majority of the delegates had come with their minds made up to vote for Mr. George; but the advocates of other candidates had a hearing and freedom of speech was maintained. Altogether, the business of the convention, which lasted beyond midnight, was done in a fashion which might have shown the professional hacks and wire-pullers that there will be no particular need of their services when the working people really take hold of politics."

The platform adopted by the convention, which seems to have been written by Mr. George, is as follows:

THE PLATFORM.

The delegates of the trade and labor organizations of the city of New York, in conference assembled, make this declaration:

Holding that the corruption of government and the impoverishment of labor result from neglect of the self-evident truths proclaimed by the founders of this Republic, that all men are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with unalienable rights, we aim at the abolition of the system which compels men to pay their fellow creatures for the use of God's gifts to all and permits monopolizers to deprive labor of natural opportunities for employment, thus filling the land with tramps and paupers and bringing about an unnatural competition which tends to reduce wages to starvation rates and to make the wealth producer the industrial slave of those who grow rich by his toil.

Holding, moreover, that the advantages arising from social growth and improvement belong to society at large, we aim at the abolition of the system which makes such beneficent inventions as the railroad and telegraph a means for the oppression of the people and the aggrandizement of an aristocracy of wealth and power. We declare the true purposes of government to be the maintenance of that sacred right of property which gives to every one opportunity to employ his labor, and security that he shall enjoy its fruits; to prevent the strong from oppressing the weak and the unscrupulous from robbing the honest; and to do, for the equal benefit of all, such things as can be better done by organized society than by individuals; and we aim at the abolition of all laws which give to any class of citizens advantages, either judicial, financial, industrial or political, that are not equally shared by all others.

We further declare that the people of New York city should have full control of their own local affairs, that the practice of drawing Grand Jurors from one class should cease, and the requirement of a property qualification for trial jurors should be abolished; that the procedure of our courts should be so simplified and reformed that the rich shall have no advantage over the poor; that the officious intermeddling of the police with peaceful assemblages should be stopped; that the laws for the safety and sanitary inspection of buildings should be enforced; that in public work the direct employment of labor should be preferred to the system which gives contractors opportunity to defraud the city while grinding their workmen, and that in public employments equal pay should be accorded to equal work, without distinction of sex.

We declare the crowding of so many of our people into narrow tenements at enormous rents, while half the area of the city is yet unbuilt upon, to be a scandalous evil, and that, to remedy this state of things, all taxes on buildings and improvements should be abolished, so that no fine shall be put upon the employment of labor in increasing living accommodations; and taxes should be levied on land irrespective of improvements, so that those who are now holding land vacant shall be compelled either to build on it themselves or to give up the land to those who will.

We declare, furthermore, that the enormous value which the presence of a million and a half of people gives to the land of this city belongs properly to the whole community; that it should not go to the enrichment of individuals or corporations, but should be taken in taxation and applied to the improvement and beautifying of the city, to the promotion of the health, comfort, education and recreation of its people, and to the providing of means of transit commensurate with the needs of a great metropolis. We also declare the existing means of transit should not be left in the hands of corporations, which, while gaining enormous profits from the growth of population, oppress their employes and provoke strikes that interrupt travel and imperil the public peace, but should by lawful process be assumed by the city and operated for public benefit.

To clear the way for such reforms as are impossible without it, we favor a Constitutional Convention, and, since the ballot is the only method by which in our Republic the redress of political and social grievance is to be sought, we especially call for such changes in our elective methods as shall lessen the need of money in elections, discourage bribery and prevent intimidation.

And since in the coming most important municipal election, independent political action affords the only hope of exposing and breaking up the extortion and peculation by which a standing army of professional politicians corrupt the people whom they plunder, we call on all citizens who desire honest government to join us in an effort to secure it, and to show for once that the will of the people may prevail even against the money and organization of banded spoilsmen.

MR. GEORGE'S THEORY.

On Tuesday evening of last week what may be considered as the public ratification meeting of the nomination of Mr. George and the platform of opinions and purposes was held in the hall of the Cooper Union. The room was filled with workingmen and their families; indeed, it had the appearance in an uncommon degree of a family meeting. The throng was enthusiastic, and Mr. George was received on his appearance upon the platform with strong and ringing cheers, and was constantly applauded during his speech. In regard to one of the special features of the platform, he said:

This movement aims at political reform, but that is not all the significance of my candidacy. This movement aims at more than political reform; it aims at social reform. What we do to-night is to unfurl again the standard of the equal rights of man, to take up again the sentiment of the Declaration of Independence. Upon us devolves the duty of overthrowing that more insidious form of slavery which results in industrial slavery. This movement is a revolt of the masses, not simply against political corruption, but against social injustice. And is it not time and is this not the place? Look around this city and what do you see? On the one side a few men richer than it is good for any men to be; on the other side a great mass of men struggling and straining and working and worrying to get a most pitiful living. In this metropolis of the Western world, in this year of grace, there is a large class of so-called free and independent American citizens with whom no red Indian in anything like his native state could afford to exchange. In this so-called Christian city there are large classes living in want and squalor, and vice born of want—classes among whom you may see, if you choose to look for it, misery that would appal. Is this by the will of the Creator? Then it is the fault of man. Men, as men and as citizens, on us devolves the duty of removing this wrong.

In the platform that the convention has adopted, and on which I stand, the first true step in that direction is made. Why are there such poverty and such distress in this city on the one hand and such wealth on the other? There is one great fact that will stare in the face anyone who chooses to look at it; a vast majority of us, 99 per cent at least, must pay the other one per cent by the week, by the month or by the quarter for the privilege of living and working here. See how we are crowded in New York. London has a population of 1,500 to the square mile. The city of Canton, in overcrowded China, has a population of 3,500 to the square mile. New York, taking all its area, has a population of 54,000 to the square mile, and leaving out the uninhabited portions it has a population of 85,000 to the square mile. In the Sixth Ward there is a population of 149,000 to the square mile. In the Tenth Ward there is a population of 276,000 to the square mile. In the Thirteenth Ward there is a population of 224,000 to the square mile, and this includes in the square mile roads, squares and all open places. There is one block in this city which ordinarily contains 2,500 inhabitants, and every living-room in it is also a work-room. There is in one ward a tenement covering one quarter of an acre, which contains an average of 1,350 people. At that rate a square mile would contain 3,456,000. Nowhere else in the civilized world to-day are human beings packed so closely. Nowhere else in the civilized world to-day is the mortality, and especially infant mortality, so terrible. In that district known as Mulberry street, there is, according to the report of Charles F. Wingate, the commissioner appointed by the Legislature or Governor (I forget which), to make an investigation of the sanitary condition of the district, a death-rate of 65 per cent, and in the tenement district it is said that 90 per cent of the children die before they arrive at the age of five years.

Is there any reason for such overcrowding? There is plenty of room on this island. There are miles and miles and miles of land all around this nucleus. Why cannot we take that and build houses upon it for our accommodation? Simply because it is held by dogs in the manger who will not use it themselves and who will not let anybody else use it, unless they pay an enormous price for it, because what the Creator intended for the habitation of the people whom He called into being is held at an enormous rent or an enormous price. Did you ever think, men of New York, what you pay for the privilege of living in this country? I do not ask what you pay for bricks and mortar and wood, but for rent; and the rent is mainly the rent of the land. Bricks and mortar and wood are of no greater value here than they are in Long Island or in Iowa. When what is called real estate advances it is the land that is getting more valuable; it is not the houses. All this enormous value that the growth of population adds to the land of this city is taken by the few individuals and goes for the benefit of the idle rich, who look down upon those who earn their living by their labor. But what do we propose to do about it? We propose, in the first place, as our platform indicates, to make the buildings cheaper by taking the tax off buildings. We propose to put that tax on land exclusive of improvements, so that a man who is holding land vacant will have to pay as much for it as if he was using it, just upon the same principle that a man who goes to a hotel and hires a room and takes the key and goes away would have to pay as much for it as if he occupied the room and slept in it. In that way we propose to drive out the dog in the manger who is holding from you what he will not use himself. We propose in that way to remove this barrier and turn this property to the use of labor in putting up buildings for the accommodation of the people of the city.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

The New Church in Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE corner-stone of the Ocean Hill Reformed Church of Brooklyn, corner of Hopkinson avenue and Herkimer street, was laid on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 2d, with appropriate religious services, in the presence of a large number of spectators.

The Rev. A. J. Hutton, pastor of the Church-on-the-Heights, Brooklyn, gave a very elegant and able address, embracing an account of the struggles and achievements of the Reformed Church, describing her early history, and commending it as a Church both in doctrine and history worthy of our adherence and support.

The Rev. W. A. Holliday, D.D., son-in-law of Allison Trask, Esq., one of the most munificent donors to the enterprise, very happily and impressively spoke of the church in three aspects, viz.: as a shelter and home for the flock, as a schoolhouse for instruction, and as a sanctuary for worship, and urged the people to rally to it as such.

The Rev. C. L. Wells, D.D., pastor of the Church of Flatbush, in his characteristic, pleasing and vigorous manner, addressed the people on the object and design of the church, and enforced the importance of the work, concluding with assurances to the people that all the churches of the South Classis of Long Island were in hearty sympathy with the movement, and congratulating the pastor and the people on the work so auspiciously commenced.

The Rev. A. Messler Quick, pastor of the church, deposited a long list of documents and papers in the box, and laid the stone with appropriate religious ceremony.

The Revs. Daniel Van Pelt, Jacob Webber, N. Pearse, Wm. D. Perry and M. G. Hansen also took part in the services.

The church is to be a substantial Gothic structure of brick, with brown stone and terra cotta trimmings, eighty feet in length by fifty-two feet in width, surmounted by a tall spire at an angle facing the street corner. The location is one of the finest in the city, having, from a beautiful eminence, a commanding view of Brooklyn and Long Island Sound on the northwest, and of Jamaica Bay and the ocean on the southeast, and in the midst of a rapidly growing section that will soon be completely covered with handsome residences. PARTICIPANT.

The Missionary Conference.

DELEGATES can take the Fifth avenue or Third avenue horse cars from the Bridge or Fulton Ferry to Twelfth street; or Ninth street cars from Hamilton Ferry to Fifth avenue. The church is on Twelfth street, Brooklyn, just below Fifth avenue.

They will also confer a favor by forwarding their names as soon as convenient, that places may be assigned for their entertainment. U. D. GULICK.

257 TWELFTH STREET, Brooklyn.

Our Foreign Missions.

THE financial condition remains practically unchanged. The receipts for September,—always one of the poorest months in the year,—were $2,041.55. For the five months ending Sept. 30th they are still a little—about $300—in advance of last year. With the close of the present month the long period of comparative inaction ends. We may breathe more freely and take a hopeful look forward.

At this time it may be well to re-state just what is required for the year. The appropriations amount to $82,000. Other expenses, amounting to nearly $2,000 in all, have been or will be increased, in sending out Mr. and Mrs. Oltmans and returning Mrs. Rapalje to China. Of the whole amount about $14,000 have already been received, leaving for the seven months yet to come $70,000 to be raised.

This is a large sum, calling for $10,000 a month till the end of the fiscal year. But every dollar of it is needed—not one can be spared without injury. And it is for a large work, largely blessed and constantly growing larger, which the Lord has put into our hands. Let us show ourselves worthy of such a service, and BEGIN AT ONCE. If those who have the lead will bend their energies to getting something from all, the issue cannot be doubtful. Let us make it sure. COR. SEC.

THE FERRIS SEMINARY.—The letter of the Rev. H. Loomis, the energetic and intelligent representative of the American Bible Society in Japan, published on the sixth page, mentions an article in a Japanese journal by Prof. Toyama. The wise advice of the Professor has been anticipated at the Ferris Seminary. For some time the mingled instruction in religion, literature and housekeeping, which he recommends, has been a characteristic of that institution. It is gratifying to find that course endorsed by so high an authority, and the endorsement commends the Seminary to our hearty confidence and support.

The Rev. Dr. Amerman writes, under date of Tokio, August 31st, "You will be glad to know that we are having many new applications from those who wish to become pupils in the Isaac Ferris Seminary. But the limit of accommodations is nearly reached and would be far exceeded if we should receive all who have applied. The opening of the new term has been deferred two weeks on account of the cholera, but on Sept. 15th it is hoped the school will open. If the proposed enlargement can be permitted there is no reason why the institution should not be the largest, as it is already the most effective, of its kind in Japan."

The Rev. Mr. Booth is now requesting the money necessary to the enlargement. The amount needed is about $12,000. No better investment of money can be made by those interested in the welfare of the Japanese people. Of the influence of properly educated Christian women there is no need that a word be said.

THE CHOLERA.—Dr. Amerman also writes: "You have been informed by the papers of the progress of the cholera. It has come near its end, we trust, in Yokohama, where there are not more than 10 or 12 new cases a day. We have probably not seen the worst of it in Tokyo yet, though the number of new cases per day has been nearly 300. A very large number of cases prove fatal within 24 hours, some within four or five. Those among the foreign population are few, but we are not exempt, and, with a single exception, the worst district in the city lies on the borders of the foreign concession. The dear Lord has us in His keeping. The government seems to have exerted itself to the utmost to prevent, limit and stamp out the disease, and deserves all praise."

The following are extracts from letters received from pupils of the "Isaac Ferris Seminary," respecting the cholera in Yokohama:

Miss Hama Hirano, in a letter dated August 2d, writes: "The lion of cholera wastes Yokohama very fiercely and swallows those who do not preserve their health. Once it was so powerful that a hundred or more were captured by it in one day, but now it has ceased a little. But there is no one who has fallen a victim to cholera among our Protestants; therefore, we consider that this must be God's mercy and we are giving thanks to Him for it."

Miss Tetsu Satō, in a letter dated Aug. 21st, says: "We cannot go far away from school, because cholera is very bad in Yokohama, and four or five days ago ninety to one hundred persons died daily; but now the disease is waning. When I think of the thousands of souls who, knowing not the true God, were taken from this world, I feel very sorry; but, on the other hand, I observe that the Almighty has sent this disease to show the terrible result of sin. I heard that many people in Yokohama have acknowledged our true God, from the reason that no Christian has been afflicted by the cholera, and that it began from the time when they were engaged in their festival of idols."

Missionary Convention.

A WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION of the Classis of Orange was held in the Reformed Church of Ellenville, N. Y., on Tuesday, the 28th of September. Dr. and Mrs. Jacob Chamberlain, of India, were present, and delegates also from five churches in the Classis, and reports were received of the work of three other auxiliaries.

Mrs. Chamberlain met with the ladies in the afternoon and gave an informal talk upon the schools of the Arcot Mission, and answered various questions about the customs and people of India.

A general meeting was held in the evening, when Dr. Henry Myers, of Newburgh, in a brief address presented the needs of the Domestic Board. He was followed by Dr. Chamberlain, who in an earnest and impressive address called upon the women of America to help relieve, by their prayerful and united efforts, the awful oppression of the women of India.

All present felt that a fresh incentive had been given them for faithful work in the future. SEC.

THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met at the Synod Rooms last Monday morning and, in the absence of the Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers, who was expected to read a paper on the "Classification of the Miracles," discussed "The Duties of Consistories and the Dismission of Church Members." Next Monday a paper will be read on "The Slang of Protestant Theology," by Rev. M. G. Hansen; and the Rev. Dr. C. S. Vedder, of the Huguenot Church, Charleston, S. C., will describe to the Association the condition of the people and churches of that city since the earthquake. All ministers of the Reformed Church are invited to attend.

A Long and Fruitful Ministry.

THE Classis of Rensselaer met in regular session at Schodack Landing on Tuesday, Oct. 5th. Rev. Dr. Drury and Rev. H. A. Hendrickson were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference in Brooklyn. The recommendations of Synod received conscientious attention, and much time was given to an earnest and spirited discussion of the need of greatly increased contributions and of measures to be adopted to secure that result.

The meeting was especially memorable as marking the retirement of one of our most faithful and beloved pastors, the Rev. Elbert Nevius, after a service of forty years. The minute adopted by Classis in no degree represents the informal hearty tributes of honor and affection uttered and heard, not without tears. The official record of Classis is as follows:

In acceding to the request for the dissolution of the pastoral relation between Rev. Elbert Nevius and the Church of Stuyvesant we would put on record our appreciation of our brother's approved abilities and faithfulness, and our congratulations that he has been permitted to fulfil the duties of his pastoral office for the period of forty years with so much acceptance to his people, credit to himself, and fruit for the Master.

After more than fifty years of active service, (forty of them spent in this one charge,) he has earned the right to honorable retirement, and into it we accompany him with our wishes and prayers for his comfort and happiness. Though no longer in the active pastorate, may he yet be privileged to witness to a Saviour's faithfulness, and continue to yield fruit to His praise.

In his so recent sore bereavement we extend to him our profound sympathy, and pray that he may be upheld and comforted by that same Comforter to whose effectual support he has directed so many mourners.

Not the least of Mr. Nevius' kindly services was to prepare the way for the immediate continuance of his work. Mr. George Zabriskie Collier, the son of the late Ezra W. Collier, was received from the Classis of New Brunswick. After due examinations, creditably sustained, arrangements were made for his ordination and installation at Stuyvesant, on Wednesday, Nov. 3d, at 2.30 P.M. S. C.

We, the Consistory of the Reformed Church of Stuyvesant, in assenting to the request of Rev. E. Nevius, our pastor, for the termination of the pastoral relation at the expiration of his fortieth year of service, wish to place on record our affection and regard for one who has served the Church with such marked ability, faithfulness, and consecration through so many years.

We desire to bear testimony to the uninterrupted harmony which has ever characterized our relations, the instructive and quickening quality of his ministrations, and inestimable value of his godly, consistent and self-denying example.

We also extend to him our hearty and sincere sympathy in the heavy and sore affliction which has come upon him, on the eve of his resignation, in the sudden death of his beloved wife, the companion, sympathizer and helper for over fifty years, in all his efforts to benefit souls and upbuild the Master's kingdom.

Our prayers and wishes will be with him in his retirement and while he waits the summons home, and may his remaining years be full of the peace and comfort which the Holy Ghost doth work.

....THE CLASSIS OF KINGSTON met in the Reformed Church of Rochester, Ulster Co., October 5th. All the churches were represented except three.

A bountiful table was spread in the basement of the church and served by the ladies of the congregation, thus affording time for social converse.

An excellent sermon was preached by the Rev. William H. Vroom on The Lifegiving River, Ezekiel 47: 8, 9.

The Rev. Stephen D. Noyes and the Rev. Calvin E. Lasher were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference in Brooklyn.

Classis assumed the apportionment of two cents per member for the entertainment of General Synod.

The following overture to the General Synod was adopted:

Whereas, Our work, as a denomination, in the West, calls for the husbanding of our resources, as well as for liberal donations; therefore,

Resolved, That the General Synod shall respectfully request its Board of Domestic Missions to decline appropriations to the churches of any Eastern Classis, to an amount greater than the sum total of the contributions of all the churches constituting that Classis to said Board for the revious year—ending April 30th. S. C.

....The Classis of Passaic met at Boonton, Oct. 5th. Rev. H. W. Teller preached from 1 Chron. 13: 10.

The Boards and Funds were earnestly commended to the liberality of the churches. Sunday, Nov. 7th, was appointed as a day of special prayer for Foreign Missions.

A call from the Church of Pompton upon the Rev. J. A. Trimmer, of the Presbytery of Newark, was approved.

Revs. E. S. Booth and Dr. Mandeville respectively and eloquently addressed the Classis upon the work of missions and education.

This meeting was pleasant, and all the pastors were present except the Rev. H. E. Nies, who is enjoying his vacation in Michigan. Brother King lives in a new and commodious parsonage and among a devoted people. The ladies of the church entertained the members of Classis and others in the lecture room in a manner that should satisfy even a king. Classis adjourned to meet at Pompton Oct. 14th, at 2.30 P.M., to receive the pastor-elect.

At this meeting delegates will be appointed to the next Missionary Convention.

S C.

....Paterson, N. J.—Last Sunday the Rev. N. H. Van Arsdale preached his fifth anniversary sermon as pastor of the Broadway Reformed Church. Arranged in excellent taste was a pyramid of autumn leaves and grasses on the pulpit platform at the left of the desk. A large audience was present. His text was Psalm 126: 3, "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." In enumerating some of the "great things" that the Lord had done for them, he included the beautiful new church edifice, dedicated about two years ago. Their contributions for all purposes during the five years footed up to $33,661.54, of which amount $2,128.77 was for benevolence. The Young People's Lyceum had in their treasury $900 for a new pipe organ. The Sabbath-school had painted the interior of the chapel, removed the pews, substituted chairs, and added a large number of choice books to the library, all at a cost of $430. The school numbers twenty-seven officers and teachers, and one hundred and sixty pupils; twenty-seven scholars had confessed Christ and united with the church. There had been added to the membership of the church altogether forty-nine persons, of whom thirty-four were on confession. Sixteen deaths had occurred among the communicants. With the occupation of the new building about two years ago, the church entered upon a career of greater spiritual prosperity.

In the evening a delightful Praise Service was held.

...The Hudson River Ministerial Association met in regulsr session at Schodack Landing on Monday, Oct. 4th. The attendance was smaller than usual, but the sessions were interesting and profitable. In the afternoon Rev. T. S. Brown, of Chatham, read an essay on "Young Men's Christian Associations and the Church," deprecating the possible and sometimes actual diversion of young men from the meetings and work of the Church. In the evening, in place of the sermon and in lieu of an exegesis, Rev. Dr. C. Van Santvoord read one of his Vedder Lectures, on "Seience and the Scripture Record," very much to the interest and enjoyment of the large congregation. The hospitality of the Schedack Landing Church was as usual abundant and hearty. Particularly was the supper together in the church parlors most enjoyable. D.

...Personals.—The Rev. John Forsyth, D.D., is seriously ill....The Rev. J. C. Van Deventer has received a call from the church at Nyack, N. Y.

....The Classis of Geneva met in the Church of Tyre, N. Y., October 5th. The Rev. Peter De Bruyn presided. The Church of Marion requested temporary supplies; request was granted. The Church of Tyre was recommended to the Board of Domestic Missions for aid. Rev. Wm. H. Ballagh was received from the Classis of Monmouth, a call tendered him from the Church of Lodi was approved and accepted, and arrangements were made for his installation.

Rev. W. H. Nasholds was elected a member of the Board of Superintendents of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, also Classical missionary agent in behalf of the Foreign Board, and Rev. F. W. Ruhl was appointed agent for the Domestic Board.

The Rev. Jacob Chamberlain, D.D., was present, by invitation, and in the evening spoke on missions, dwelling especially on the work in India, the manners and customs of the people, and the opening prospect of the Gospel in that field. The audience was deeply interested in the address. S. C.

....Six-Mile Run.—The six Sabbath schools connected with the church at Franklin Park, N. J., Rev. H. D. B. Mulford, pastor, held a very successful anniversary on the afternoon of October 9th. People came from far and near and crowded the large audience-room of the church. The reports showed an aggregate of over four hundred persons engaged in the work of the schools, and that ten of the scholars had confessed Christ during the year. Two very admirable addresses were delivered, one to the children by Rev. Edwin F. See, General Secretary of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., and one to the parents and teachers by Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, of Plainfield, N. J.

....The Classis of Paramus met at West New Hempstead, N. Y., Tuesday, October 5th, and ordained and installed John Laubenheimer as pastor of that church. Rev. D. M. Talmage presided and read the form, Rev. Wm. Mauchee assisted in the devotional exercises, and Rev. N. H. Van Arsdale preached the sermon. The floral decorations about the pulpit were profuse and attractive. There was a good attendance and deep interest was taken in all the services. The excellent music indicated that the choir had faithfully rehearsed their anthem selections. The Church has not had a pastor for several years. The young brother begins his ministry among a substantial and appreciative people and in a field where he can do a good work.

Memorial.

JAMES ANDERSON, M.D., and Adrian H. Muller, died at their residences in this city on Wednesday of last week. Both were natives of this city. Dr. Anderson had lived here nearly eighty-nine years, and Mr. Muller a few days more than eighty-two years. They were respected and confided in by the best men of the city and dear to a large circle. Many citizens have so long been associated with them, and have been so accustomed to lean upon them, to look to them for counsel and for co operation, that the world seems empty now that they are gone. Dr. Anderson was in fairly good health until three days before his death—but a few days ago he called at this office, as he often did,—and Mr. Muller had been an invalid to a degree for a few years. How much of unquestioned Christian character and worth, of sympathy, of benevolence, of active interest in all that tends to make life profitable, the world has lost by the death of these venerable men, time only can reveal. The loss is great. Dr. Anderson was the oldest elder of the Collegiate Church; Mr. Muller, probably, held the same relation to the South Reformed Church.

Dr. Anderson was one of the early presidents of the New York Academy of Medicine, and had been president of the State Medical Association, and was long an influential member of both organizations. He was the founder and first president of the Physicians' Aid Society, and was through many years prominent in official positions in the College of Physicians and Surgeons. In our Reformed Church he has been heartily active as long as we can remember in all our general interests. It would be difficult to name the important denominational movement in which he has not had a part.

Mr. Muller was a graduate of Columbia College, receiving his diploma in 1822, was for almost an average lifetime the secretary of the Merchants' Insurance Company, and has been known by a host of people as the head of one of the chief real estate auction and commission houses in the city. He was the first to venture upon the sale of stocks and bonds at auction, and his sales of such securities have been one of the prominent features of the commercial life of this city. Mr. James H. Roosevelt appointed him in his will one of the trustees to found a hospital in this city, for which the will made a princely provision. Few trusts have been as wisely and faithfully discharged. In the South Reformed Church Mr. Muller has long been a main reliance.

Mr. Muller's funeral was conducted by Rev. Dr. Roderick Terry last Saturday morning, that of Dr. Anderson by Rev. Drs. Ormiston and Chambers, of the Collegiate Church, and Rev. Dr. E. W. Donald, of the Church of the Ascension, on Monday morning. On each occasion an unusual number of venerable men was present.

The Huguenot Church.

THE Rev. Dr. Vedder, of the Huguenot Church of Charleston, S. C., which suffered severely from the earthquake, will preach next Sunday evening in the Collegiate Church on Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street, Rev. Dr. Coe, pastor. He deserves a cordial welcome for his own sake and as the representative of a venerable Christian congregation.

American Bible Society.

THE Board of Managers met at the Bible House on October 7th, 1886, the Hon. Enoch L. Fancher, LL.D., President, in the chair. Grants of books to the value of $6,800 were made for distribution, largely through colportage, at home and abroad. Letters were presented from the Society's agents in foreign lands: from Mr. Prince, of St. Petersburg; the Rev. Dr. Blodget, of Peking; Dr. Trumbull, of Valparaiso; and the Rev. J. Dardier, of Switzerland. The receipts in September were $18,077.93; issues from the Bible House during the same month, 82,276.

Total receipts since April 1st, $221,564.04; issues from the Bible House since April 1st, 500,854 volumes.

The American Board of Foreign Missions held its annual meeting last week at Des Moines, Iowa. Places of entertainment had been secured for between six and seven hundred members, but there was in attendance from outside about twelve hundred persons. The Board sustained the Prudential Committee in its decision not to commission any candidates for the foreign mission fields who believed in the doctrine of probation after death. The members of the Prudential Committee were re-elected, except the Rev. Dr. Thooring, who is about to remove to Minneapolis and could not conveniently serve, and Professor Egbert C. Smyth, of Andover, who advocated the commissioning of candidates holding that belief. To fill these vacanies in the Committee, Rev. C. E. Dickinson, of Lowell, Mass., and Rev. F. H. Atwood, D.D., of Salem, Mass., were elected. At the last session of the Board the following resolution was adopted:

That the Board recognizes and approves the principle upon which the Prudential Committee has continued to act in regard to appointments for missionary service, in strictly conforming to the well-understood and permanent basis of doctrinal faith upon which the missions of the Board have been steadily conducted, and to which, in the exercise of its sacred trust, the Committee had no option but to conform. The Board is constrained to look with great apprehension upon certain tendencies of the doctrine of a probation after death, which have been recently broached and diligently propagated, that seemed decisive and perversive and dangerous to the churches at home and abroad. In view of these tendencies they do heartily approve of the action of the Prudential Committee in carefully guarding the Board from any committal to the approval of the doctrine, and advise a continuance of that caution in time to come. The Board recommends to the Prudential Committee to consider in difficult cases turning upon doctrinal views of candidates for missionary service the expediency of calling a council of the churches to be constituted in some manner which may be determined by the good judgment of the Committee to pass upon the theological soundness of the candidate, and the Committee is instructed to report upon this matter to the Board at the next annual meeting.

News of the Week.

Wednesday, Oct. 6.—It is stated that General Kaulbars, the Russian agent in Bulgaria, has received 500,000 francs to further agitation in Bulgaria; the note presented to the Government before he left was insulting to the dignity of Bulgaria....A volcanic eruption occurred on the Island of Niapu, one of the Friendly Islands, in which the whole island was buried twenty feet under volcanic dust; the inhabitants escaped.

...The Spanish Revolutionists have been pardoned, owing to the intercession of the Pope....The Court of Appeals have decided adversely to the appeal of Alderman Jaehne and he will have to remain in prison.... There was much activity among the stock brokers in New York yesterday....The steamer "La Mascotte's" boilers exploded at Welleys' Landing on the Mississippi river and more than twenty persons were killed and wounded....Henry George accepts the nomination of Mayor of New York at the hands of the workingmen....The Reading Railroad is to be foreclosed....The alleged murderer of the Logan family in Missouri has been lynched.

Thursday, 7.—Lord Randolph Churchill's endeavor to bring the Tory party to a broad Democratic basis is looked upon with great favor and for the time puts the Home Rule question in the background ...Russia is endeavoring to form an alliance with both Bulgaria and Servia ...The French Institute has accepted the Duke d'Aumale's gift of the estate of Chantilly....A number of persons were victims of choke-damp in a colliery in England....There is a crisis in the Spanish Ministry on account of the clemency of the Queen to the rebels....The "Anchoria" of the Anchor line is ten days overdue, and much anxiety is felt for the passengers and safety of the ship....Two hundred and fifty cattle, thought to be diseased, have been spirited away from the distilleries of Chicago....General Gordon has been elected Governor of Georgia....Twenty-five persons were killed or missing from the "Mascotte" disaster and many of the wounded will die....The general agent of the Peabody Fund for educating the poor class of the South reports $1,000,000 as lost in repudiated State bonds....Four aldermen, who were indicted with Jaehne, are summoned for trial....There is a contest among the delegates for admission to the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor now being held at Richmond....The Episcopal Convention opened in Chicago.

Friday, 8.—It is rumored that there is a conspiracy recently discovered in which it was designed to kidnap King Milan of Servia....M. Karaveloff, the Bulgarian regent, has resigned....It is said that Austria will oppose further Russian advances in Bulgaria....Two hundred Egyptian rebels have been killed and many prisoners taken at Tamai in Egypt....A dispatch from London states that a severe riot took place at Ramsgate, between English and French fishermen....At a Cabinet council in Madrid, Queen Christiana signed a decree freeing the slaves in Cuba from further servitude....The whole Spanish Ministry has decided to resign....The Sultan refused to grant Great Britian a coaling station in the Dardanelles. ..A new trial has been refused to the Chicago anarchists....Dates have been fixed for the trials of the indicted aldermen....Dr. James Anderson, a well-known physician of New York, is dead.... The doctrine of "probation after death" is being discussed in the Congregational Assembly at Des Moines, Iowa.

Saturday, 9.—The Daily News of London says that a committee is preparing a bill to establish four national councils to represent the provinces of Ireland....A plot has been frustrated in Vienna, Austria, by which it was intended to destroy the city and kill the emperor; many arrests have been made ...General Kaulbars has a cold reception in several parts of Bulgaria that he visits ...Riots at Delhi, India, took place recently between the Hindoos and Mohammedans over religious subjects....Another American schooner has been seized by the Canadian Government for anchoring eight miles from the Custom House.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Hymn.

BY REV. FREDERIC R. MARVIN.

"LORD, be merciful to me a sinner,"
Prayed the publican of old:
From his heavy heart the guilty burden
In repentant sorrow roll'd.

Lord, be merciful to me a Christian,
That so little grace I show;
That within the sacred path of duty
So reluctantly I go.

Lord, be merciful to me a Christian;
Take desire for sin away;
Grant me constant grace to love and serve Thee,
Growing like Thee day by day.

Lord, be merciful to me a Christian;
Bid my doubting fears depart;
Let Thy changeless, shoreless peace forever
Take possession of my heart.

Lord be merciful to me a Christian;
With Thyself my spirit fill;
Henceforth all I ask, desire or covet,
Is to know and do Thy will.

A Letter from Japan.

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 9th, 1886.

I CALLED yesterday upon one of the oldest and ablest of the Japanese preachers in Tokio, and found him full of work and of joy at the new and important openings on every hand. He had just received a young man of high position into his church who was about to enter the Seminary and prepare for the work of the ministry. As he had abundant means, no expense for his support would be incurred by the mission.

He had recently visited the large town of Chiba and baptized ten persons. Nearly all were men and people of considerable means and influence. There are now about thirty Christians at that place, and a church is likely to be organized as soon as some one can be found to take the care of it.

It was a great pleasure to hear from this man that he and the other leading men among the Japanese preachers connected with the union churches, have recently changed their views in regard to the position of foreign missionaries. They had thought it would be much better to have the Japanese churches entirely separate from the missionaries, and in the Presbyteries and Assembly the latter were to sit as corresponding members only. This is now the status of the missionaries of one of the largest missions, and it is probable that the idea came from that quarter, as well as from the universal desire on the part of the Japanese to be free from all foreign influence and to conduct all their affairs in their own way.

But this man now said we are agreed that we were wrong; and it is now our desire not to cut ourselves aloof from our spiritual fathers and teachers, but to draw still closer to them, and unite fully and heartily in all departments of Christian work. "We thought," said he, "that Japanese evangelists were better suited to the work of spreading the Gospel among our people than the missionaries from abroad."

But now we have been convinced that the larger experience and superior knowledge of those from other lands are essential to the highest success. We want men to go with our preachers and to show them the art of preaching, so as to lead men to Christ. Teachers are also in demand everywhere.

It is his desire, and also that of others, that thirty new men should be sent at once to Japan for the special work of teachers and evangelists. He says the next ten years is to decide the future of Japan, and the Romanists and Greeks are making desperate efforts to get the precedence, firmly and fully establishing their faith in every part of the country. The minds of many of the people are turned toward Christianity, and in their ignorance of the difference of the various forms of religion, they accept the first that comes.

If the six missionary bodies, now working together, could only carry out this idea and send the men so much needed, a wonderful change would be wrought in this land in the next few years, and Japan would become an impetus to other Asiatic nations to accept the Gospel and all the blessings that it brings. Men will also gladly go from this land to any country where there is need of Christian work. The Japanese converts are doing nobly in their efforts to spread the Gospel among their own people; and with experience and proper training will make good laborers in other fields.

According to statistics recently published, the Greek Church is making constant headway, and nearly equals in its membership the Protestant body. They now report 205 churches, 148 chapels, 17 priests, 104 evangelists, and 12,546 members. This is an increase of 1,470 during the last year. One of the Greek churches and some of their preachers have joined the Protestants.

From the weekly reports of baptisms in the Christian, it is seen that the growth in the membership of the Protestant churches is now about 500 per month. It is becoming more and more evident that the government is favorable to Christianity, and owing to political reasons it evidently prefers that of the Protestant type. Several of the missionaries are now engaged as teachers in various parts of the country, and there is no restriction as to teaching the Christian religion. Forty converts were reported in the government school at Sendai during last year. Eighteen more in connection with Mr. Fukuzawa's school at Tokio have connected themselves with the Methodist Church as the result of the labors of Rev. Mr. Kitchen.

But one of the most important items of news for a long time is an article in the leading magazine of Japan by the recent President of the Government University at Tokio, in which he speaks very earnestly in regard to the better education of women and the great need of a change in this matter. He declares that no problem in the country demands more earnest attention than this. While many improvements have been made in schools for young men, the advance of the people in this direction has not been what is needed.

Prof. Toyama does not stop, nor is he content with the advocacy of a merely superficial education. He claims that lessons in reading, writing, elementary science, and polite accomplishments constitute but a fraction of what is required, and if the civilization of Japan is to proceed on a sound and lasting basis, it is necessary to introduce new methods of living and a higher system of morality. Japan cannot claim to be civilized until the women are trained to something higher and purer than their present mode of life. What is wanted is that female education should be conducted by European and American ladies. Not only study of books, but contact and association with persons of refinement and culture of their own sex is essential to a complete culture and the development of a position and high type of character.

Prof. Toyama is not an avowed Christian, but, strange to say, his conclusion is, that as it would be too expensive to send Japanese ladies abroad, it is desirable to place them in Christian schools and under the care of missionaries in Japan. The course of instruction recommended should include reading, writing, conversation, music, needle-work, and housekeeping. Above all, the girls should be educated in the principles of civilized morality and the requirements of the best society.

Prof. Toyama states that the higher classes in Japan are not hostile to religion; and if once persuaded that material benefits accrue from connection with any certain creed, they will be ready to accept it. Already there are in official and private circles visible signs of a disposition to favor the introduction of Christianity for the sake of its civilizing influences.

He asks that the schools for this purpose should be more central than those now established, and should include classes for women as well as girls, and he adds: "The education of women would be an unfailing source from which the teachings of Christianity would percolate steadily and surely through the whole empire."

Such statements as the above, and from such a source, should have the most careful consideration. This is an indication of the tendency of the highest Japanese thought, and it behooves all who are interested in the highest welfare of our race, to do their utmost in the accomplishment of the glorious results of such an enterprise. All the mission schools for Japanese girls are filled to overflowing, and applicants are constantly being sent away. It is often a serious question who shall be taken and who refused. The limit of usefulness is the faith and consecration of the Christians at home.

Other leading papers have also taken up the subject of the condition of women, and there is an evidence that the people are being aroused to see the needs of great changes in the social status and moral condition of the female sex. It is harvest-time now, and all that is needed is the reapers to gather in the golden sheaves.

As an evidence of what Christianity has already done for the women of Japan, there are many societies formed to care for the poor and help in Gospel work, and during the prevalence of the cholera, several volunteered to go as nurses in the hospitals to which the victims were sent.

Some years ago I was travelling in Central Japan, and while sitting in my room an old woman came in, and after some conversation, she remarked in a tone of utter despair: "In your country the women are taught and know everything, just like the men, but in this country we know nothing at all." And such is the wail of thousands in this beautiful land. May the light and blessings of the Gospel come quickly to all.

H. LOOMIS.

Which Kind Will You Have?

BY REV. N. D. WILLIAMSON.

WHICH kind of communion wine will you have? This is the practical question which comes before each church; not what kind of wine they have or had in Palestine, but what kind of communion wine within your reach in the United States of America, will you have? The discussions about the character of the Palestine wine, lead to such frequent criminations and recriminations between brethren in Christ, that the question may well be considered, whether there is any practical result at all worth the "wear and tear" of brotherly love connected with these disputations. Practically, there are two kinds of communion wine offered you. Which kind will you have? The first is

THE WINE OF COMMERCE.

My knowledge of the heredity of alcoholism began fifty years ago with the explanation that the reason why a good man, who had been on a sad "spree," had been started in it by communion wine, was because he inherited the love of liquor. My divorce from the "wine of commerce" for communion purposes occurred years ago, on the discovery that the church receptacle for communion wine—always the "best"—was lined with a tenacious and stout matting of logwood, etc., that would almost stand alone.

A man who used liquors and had sold the higher grades of them, said to me: "If you want pure wine, you must be sure of your manufacturer, and when the wine comes you must get astride the barrel and keep on it until it is in your own cellar." And what sad stuff the wine of commerce given to communicants often is! Nauseous to the taste, with perhaps no grape juice in its composition! Anyone who looks in a liquor dealers' manual, can see what vile concoctions they make. And the probabilities are strong, that nine-tenths of those who use the wine of commerce will get some of these concoctions on their communion tables. Shall we run this strong risk of giving this vile stuff to our Christians as a sacred symbol?

There have been and are manufacturers of "pure communion wine." But a disappointment in the character of their wares, led to efforts at self-help with variable results until 1879, when complete relief was found; and it was of such a character that the wonder was we had not known it before. We learned how to procure the other sort of communion wine.

"THE FRUIT OF THE VINE."

A day's sojourn in Saratoga to witness the opening of the Presbyterian General Assembly, in the church then under the care of Dr. Peter Stryker, brought the personal enjoyment of the communion service of the Assembly. The communion wine was so exceptionally delightful, that I wrote to Dr. Stryker for his recipe, and received the following, which seven years' experience has proved to be thoroughly reliable:

"Take ten quarts of grapes, (we used Isabella, but you can use any kind), remove the stems, add one quart of water, steam until the grapes burst open, then strain them. (We strained them two or three times.) To the juice add three pounds of sugar. Let the mass boil five minutes, then put in air-tight cans, or bottles, if you prefer, only BE SURE TO EXCLUDE THE AIR. When you use it, you can add to it twenty-five per cent of water. Have the cans or bottles of a size to hold the quantity you need for a single service, as what is over cannot be used again."

If the officers of each church will thus prepare in the grape season, by careful hands, the quantity needed for a year, they will find all the difficulties about good communion wine thoroughly solved, and a nice balance left of their ordinary expense account. Here, then, are "the wine of commerce" and "the fruit of the vine." Which kind will you have?

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 17th.

"Go Thou and Do Likewise."

"IT does not seem much like Sunday, does it?" said Lucy Armitage to her friend Kate Hall, as they stood together at the end of the long piazza, which was crowded with groups of summer boarders who had stopped to chat a while after breakfast.

"No, but they are going to have service in the parlor by-and-by, and then the children will want to sing after dinner, so we won't be such heathen after all. And we have our books besides."

"I wish there was a church in the village."

"So do I. Wouldn't those fisher people make a picturesque audience? Look at that old sailor over there." And Kate pointed to a weather-beaten tar, seated on an upturned boat, and whittling at a piece of driftwood, while a crowd of children jostled round him. "And just see those other little tots playing in the water. How jolly they all look. I wish it was to morrow and we could go have a romp with them."

"Let's make a Sunday-school out of them."

"How could we?' asked Kate, after looking to see whether her companion was in earnest. "Where would you have it?"

"Down there on the beach."

"And who would you have for superintendent?"

"Dr. Larned."

"The D.D. LL.D.?"

"Exactly."

"And where are your teachers?"

"Plenty of the ladies will help after it is started."

"What will you do for a choir? You can't have a Sunday-school without singing, you know."

"Well, that's the trouble. Most of the ladies' voices are—"

"Limited?"

"Yes. And none of the gentlemen sing, except Mr. Starr."

"Surely you don't propose to ask Milord Starr? That would be a little too much."

"Yes, I do."

"But, my dear, such a lover of classic music would lose caste forever, if he should undertake to sing Moody and Sankeys with a lot of dirty children. Then reflect how his æsthetic soul would suffer from their discords."

"Never mind. We'll give him a chance for once of being useful as well as ornamental."

"That's me," said Mr. Starr, who had caught the last words.

"Who told you?" asked Kate, facing round on him.

"Oh, everybody says so. But why have you young ladies deserted us so cruelly this morning? I have looked everywhere for you, and was just going to drown myself in despair."

"We've been busy planning," said Lucy. "And we were wondering whether you would do us a favor if we asked you prettily."

"Can you doubt it? I should be charmed."

"Well, we want you to play chorister for our Sunday-school."

"Are they going to have a Sunday-school too? Why, I thought it was decided that one service was all that was due to the Fourth Commandment under the circumstances. It always seemed to me that piety took a vacation when people went to the seashore."

"Don't be irreverent, please," said Kate. "This is Lucy's and my private enterprise, Mr. Starr, and, of course, you won't refuse to help us."

"Of course I won't. Tell me what you want and I'll do my best."

"Well, we want to have congregational singing, so you must not be ambitious in your selection of tunes. Let's open with 'Hold the Fort.'"

"And end with 'Sweet By-and-By,' with something familiar in between. How will that do?"

"Beautifully. I see you have the idea, so we shall leave you to practice, while we go after the scholars."

Having provided themselves with some bright cards and children's papers, they went down to the beach and unfolded their plan to the old sailor on the upturned boat.

"Wal," he said, when they had finished, "you're more'n welcome as fur as I'm concerned. But these youngsters hain't been brought up that way, and I guess the last one on 'em would go to the bottom afore they got to the end of the First Commandment. Religion's allers ben kinder sceerce round these parts,—not much of it, and not werry good wot there was."

"But don't you think that's a great pity?" asked Kate.

"Not but what I suppose they've had some up there," he went on, with a jerk of his thumb toward the hotel, "but they've kep' it mighty close, bottled up and marked 'Private,' ye know. I've heerd them at their preachin' and prayin' sometimes, but they don't seem to want none on board but cabin passengers."

Neither of the girls knew just what to say to this, so Lucy turned her attention to a yellow-haired urchin, who had been staring at them gravely all this time, and holding up a picture before him, said, "Don't you think that's pretty."

"I think you is," said the little fellow, cautiously poking one finger into the folds of her dress.

Both girls laughed, and the old man, delighted at his grandchild's compliment, joined in vociferously. After this, he looked on them with much greater favor.

"'Tain't your fault, I s'pose, as you've ben the fust to take notice onto us. Anyhow, I say I'll help you all I kin; and when Joe Saunders passes his word, he sticks to it."

Leaving it to his care to gather the children together, they went to the hotel, promising to return in about half an hour with their assistants.

"That will give us a good hour before church time," said Lucy. "And now, the next thing is to get Dr. Larned. Do you think he will object?"

"I shouldn't think so. I'll ask him if you will get the teachers."

The bargain was struck at once, and Kate lost no time in getting her job off her hands. "Dr. Larned," she said, walking straight up to him as he sat with a huge volume on his knee, "is it not part of your business to help on good enterprises?"

"I should call that all my business, M'ss Hall," said the doctor. "Have you any such work for me?"

Whereupon Kate, without more words, told him what she wanted, and he accepted the situation. Lucy fared equally well as to teachers, and having invited the children of the hotel to join them—an invitation accepted most gleefully—they were ready to start, the gentlemen carrying a few comfortable campstools for the elder ladies. It was a somewhat motley group that waited for them on the beach, but they divided them into classes as expeditiously as possible, and the Sunday-school went forward as Sunday-schools usually do, with some few variations, such as a match game between three boys as to which could throw the furthest out to sea; a request by Lucy's class that they might try on her glasses in turn; and a tendency among Kate's to talk all at once, each being very outspoken in throwing grave doubts upon the other's historical accuracy.

However, on the whole, it was to be counted a success. And when, at the end, Dr. Larned said, "How many of you want to come again next Sunday? All who do hold up your hands," it was carried with acclamation.

But the week proved one of storm, and on Saturday evening Lucy said dolefully:

"Oh, dear, what will become of our poor little Sunday-school? This is decidedly a wet blanket."

"Soaking wet, I should say," said Kate; "and it is always demoralizing to miss a Sunday."

"I am much relieved to hear you young ladies talk in this way," said Mr. Starr. "I thought you would rather, a great deal, be drowned, choir and all, than give up the fort."

"I am afraid we shall never get them together again," said Kate, paying no attention to this remark; "and it was all so lovely last Sunday."

"Especially that boy who, having danced a double shuffle on my best hat, spent the rest of the time poking bait down his friends' necks. It is no end of a pity that his spititual education should be kept back a week."

"If I could get anybody to listen to me," Mr. Starr went on after a pause, "I have a plan to propose."

"What?' said both girls in a breath.

"If you would honor me so far as to use my bachelor quarters for your school, I should be highly flattered."

"Oh, but we are such a rowdy lot!" cried Kate, with a rueful thought of his dainty parlors, but brightening nevertheless.

"I know. But there's no mean pride about me; I am never ashamed of my friends. Besides I will have some of the truck taken out for the day, so that there may be more room, and less scope for injury."

"Mr. Starr," said Kate, "you are a jewel!"

"Of the first water," added that gentleman, with a glance at the weather, which wretched attempt the girls, in their gratitude, allowed to go uncensured.

Week after week the little school collected, sometimes on the sand, sometimes in Mr. Starr's cottage. The scholars came very regularly, and there was a gratifying improvement in demeanor among them, until they "looked," Mr. Starr said, "less like a circus, and more like an afternoon tea." At last the beautiful summer days drew slowly to an end, and the wind began to blow cold and strong from the ocean, threatening to carry our visitors inland with it. One night, muffled in shawls, Lucy and Kate sat talking alone on the piazza.

"I wonder," said Lucy, "whether our project has done any good after all."

"Of course it has," answered Kate, energetically. "Don't talk that way; it gives me the fidgets. Do you suppose God would let any honest work for Him go to waste? I don't."

Just then a heavy step sounded on the gravel, and the burly figure of Joe Saunders loomed up in front of them.

"Good-evenin'," he said, pulling off his cap. "I heerd you was a goin' to leave us to-morrow, and I come round to see ef 'twas so."

"Oh, no, not to-morrow. Don't make it any sooner than it is. You didn't think we'd go without saying 'good by' to everybody, did you?"

"It warn't likely; but I wasn't willin' to run no resks, so I thought I'd find out for sure. You see," and Joe squared his elbows on the porch railing, "mebbe you and me won't come alongside no more in this world; when a man lives by the sea it's mighty onsartain, there's no tellin' when the winds will send him to the bottom. So I says to myself, 'Joe Saunders, ef you've got anything to say, now's you time.' 'Taint much; only to tell yer that we're all real thankful to you for wot you've done for us, and we'll allers remember it. I suppose there's some folks as ud think I ought to say somethin' 'bout wantin' to pay you back for your goodness, but I ain't pertikler about that. I know Him as does the payin' for sech jobs don't need no help o' mine. He'll do it good Himself when the time comes."

"It has been a great pleasure to us—the little we have done," said Lucy, as he paused.

"Depends upon wot you call little, Miss. I call it a big thing to offer to sheer heaven with a lot o' people that never thought narthin' much about it afore. At fust I used to feel as ef I couldn't be easy, any how you'd fix it, in a place where there weren't to be 'no more sea;' but I don't worry now. I guess th' Almighty's smart enough to satisfy all hands, and satisfy 'em perfect, too. So I'm a-goin' to look after the young uns a bit when you've went—try and learn 'em some verses and keep 'em from forgittin' their tunes and like that, yer know. They kinder take to me some way, I dunno why. An' mebbe you'd like to hear as I've about decided that when the books is opened, and the names is bein' read out, mine is goin' to be one of 'em, ef I kin contrive it,—and the Bible says I kin, ef I sot my mind to it. Then, ladies, when that blessed day comes," Joe went on, turning his face to the rolling, moonlit ocean, "me and you and the Lord'll know who put the idea in my head the fust."—Sally Campbell, in The Churchman.

THE LUTHERANS.—The following is a specimen of the rate at which the Lutheran Church is increasing, and of the provision it makes for its wants: "The Augustana Synod held recently its twenty-seventh convention in Minneapolis, Minn. Thirteen young men were ordained. For missionary and synodical purposes more than $20,000 were contributed. For the new college and seminary buildings $48,245 were received, of which amount $25,000 were given by Mr. P. L. Cable, an American friend. About $30,000 additional will be needed to complete the building. There are now more than 100,000 members in connection with the congregations. The Swedish catechism is to be translated into English."

THE ROMANISTS are looking to Europe for professors for their University, to be established in Washington, D. C. A committee is now in Europe, or is soon to go, to find the men. The fact creates considerable dissatisfaction among the priests in this country. The Papal Church has been here two hundred years, and now, by this action, confesses that it has not produced scholars equal to the demands of the proposed institution.

THE METHODIST "Million for Missions" to be raised by November 1st, is said to be raised and pledged, except $50,000.

A HALL is to be erected at Bridwater, England, in memory of George Williams, the originator of Young Men's Christian Associations, who was converted at Bridwater nearly fifty years ago.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“Vexed Questions in Theology. A Series of Essays.” By James Freeman Clarke. This clever volume takes up or touches most of the points at issue between Humanitarianism and Orthodoxy, and discusses them in a pleasant way without much depth and without any bitterness. Dr. Clarke has great good nature and a fine spirit of optimism. He thinks that there has been a great improvement in theology, and that there will be still greater advances. We think so too, but not in the line he anticipates. He shows at times a great incapacity to comprehend the position of those from whom he differs. Thus, on the first page of this volume, he begins a diatribe on the Five Points of Calvinism by saying that the creeds “scarcely allude to those truths which Jesus makes the chief burden of His teaching,—love to God, love to man, forgiveness of enemies, purity of heart and life, faith, hope, peace, resignation, temperance and goodness.” True, most true, but is Dr. Clarke so ignorant as not to know the reason? Creeds confess what other people deny; and they are forced into existence by the attacks of errorists. But did anybody ever deny that the duties Dr. Clarke enumerates are in the New Testament and obligatory upon all men? Why, then, should we take pains to confess what no one impugns? Besides, the creeds confess abundantly what lies at the root of all these virtues, and is the pre-requisite to their existence and continuance, viz.: the renewing grace of the Holy Ghost. They follow the Master's precept, “Make the tree good and its fruit good.” If the soul be born from above, then all Christian graces come in due season and in natural order, whereas without that inward radical change, virtues are like apples stuck on the withered branches of a dead tree. They soon decay and perish. (Geo. H. Ellis.)

....“The Story of Hungary” has a special value in the “Story of the Nations Series,” from the fact that there has been heretofore no history of that country in English. The task has been committed by the enterprising publishers to Prof. Arminius Vámbéry of the University of Buda-Pesth. Though he special studies and the books which have made him famous have related to Central Asia, he has undertaken this work from patriotic considerations, and has certainly done his country a great service in bringing to the popular knowledge of the English-speaking races the eventful and picturesque story of the gallant and much suffering Magyars.

Prof. Vámbéry goes back to pre-historic times, and traces the Magyars to the same origin as the Turks and the Finns, and makes them indentical with the Huns. And yet it was this brave people, whose lot it was to defend Europe for centuries from both these invading races. The great episodes which he graphically relates are such as the conversion to Christianity, the Protestant Reformation, the 160 years of Turkish domination, the bitter rule of Austria, and the struggle for liberty in 1848–9. The great historic figures of St. Stephen, the first king, of Ladislaus, Louis the Great, John Hunyadi, King Matthias, Louis Kossuth, and others are painted with heroic effect, and the whole “story” is one of enchaining and thrilling interest. One cannot rise from it without feeling that there is still a great future for the Magyars, and rejoicing that Hungary is now the right hand Siamese twin of the great Austro-Hungarian Empire. (Putnams.)

....“Meditations of a Parish Priest.” This is the title of a volume made up of selections from the note books of a French Curé, the Abbé Roux. The sub-title, “Thoughts by Joseph Roux,” calls up at once the “Pensées” of the Great Pascal, and suggests a companion, from which only a strong thinker, as well as writer, can creditably emerge. That these “seed-thoughts” of a parish priest should have been published in accordance with the judgment of critics and almost in contravention of the Abbé's wishes, have been hailed in France as a literary discovery, made their authors famous, and been counted worthy of translation into other languages, is a strong testimony to their worth.

The “thoughts” are arranged under ten different headings, from I. Literature, Poets, to X. God, Religion, and though widely unequal in merit, are throughout characterized by strong individuality, freshness and acuteness of thinking, combined with that epigrammatic brightness of expression to which every French author aspires, and which characterizes the masterpieces of French literature. The translation seems well made by Isabel F. Hapgood. (Thos. Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“The Iliad of Homer. Books XVI.-XXIV. With Explanatory Notes for the Use of Students in Colleges.” By W. S. Tyler, D.D. This volume belongs to “Harper's Classical Series,” issued under the wary and able supervision of Dr. Henry Drisler, and resembles in form and character its predecessors in the Series. The editor has rightly selected the last nine books of the Iliad, as those have a certain completeness and are not usually read in preparatory schools. His long experience as Professor of Greek in Amherst College fits him to make his notes meet the wants of students, and suggest to them the appropriate things in literature as well as language. His preface is interesting and weighty. We are glad to see his recommendation of the old custom of committing to memory the choicest passages. It would be a great gain to have the custom restored everywhere. (Harpers.)

....“The Making of a Man.” By Julia McNair Wright. The man is a tramp who does not smoke, gamble or drink, and is in search of a lost brother. He rescues a boy in a flood and finds that the youngster is in search of an uncle. There is added a kind, wise naturalist to the party, and the three walk across the country from Pittsburgh to New York. The tramp tells his terrible experience in the matter of rum, and has considerable knowledge added by the talk of his friends. All the dreadful scenes on the way come from alcohol as found in cider, beer and whiskey.

The main part of the story is well told. But false statements abound, which fanaticism in modern times has endeavored to maintain, such as the “two wine theory,” and detracting amazingly from the value of the book. (The National Temperance Society.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The literary article in Lippincott's Magazine for October is “How to Choose a Library,” by Dr. F. N. Zabriskie. The subject is treated in the author's characteristic vein of sentiment and humor, but contains a good many practical suggestions, evidently deduced from his own experience. The catholic tone, as well as the keynote, of the article appears in the following: “I would not be counted among the friends to few books, nor among the enemies of new books....Let us not be swept to an extreme by the present reaction, however healthy, toward a restricted or rather a more discriminating use of books. Let our reading be a broad and generous one. While we fix our camp under the shadow of the great educators and inspirers of the world, let us not fear to make the very widest and most adventurous excursions into the fresher fields and newer pastures of a humble and even an ephemeral literature.” Edgar Fawcett contributes a realistic and powerful story, called “A Lear of Tompkins Square.” George P. Lathrop writes his early struggles and later experiences as an author, and Joe F. Ellick his “Experiences of a Base-ball Umpire.” Grant Allen has a curiously learned and entertaining “History of James” (that is, of this universal surname). George May Powell writes on “Conciliation” as the only way to prevent “Friction Between Labor and Capital,” and E. S. Nadal has an appreciative notice of the late Hon. John Welsh of Philadelphia. W. H. Babcock replies to Mrs. Bloomfield Moore's defence of the Keely Motor in the September number. W. E. Norris's serial, “A Bachelor's Blunder,” is still unfinished. Excellent as this story is, it may well be questioned whether such long novels are fitted for serial publication. “Our Monthly Gossip” does not strike us as being quite as good as usual, though the number as a whole is up to the high-water mark of Lippincott.

....The Century for October is crowded with good things; there is not a dull page in it. The frontispiece is a striking portrait of the Norwegian poet, Björnstjerne Bjornson, an interesting description of whose home is given among the illustrated articles. “American Explorers in Assos,” by F. H. Bacon and W. R. Ware, illustrated by several noted artists, is a paper of far more than ordinary interest. The conclusion of Frank R. Stockton's short serial, “The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine,” is disappointing. The first chapter was the strongest, the story weakened as it progressed. The War articles—equal to the most interesting that have yet appeared—are Corinth, Stonewall Jackson's Last Battle, and Personal Reminiscences of Stonewall Jackson, by Margaret J. Preston. The publishers promise that a distinctive feature of the coming numbers of the Century will be “The Authorized Life of Lincoln,” by his confidential secretaries, John George Nicolay and Col. John Hay, whose portraits appear in this number, with sketches of their lives by Clarence King.

....In the Popular Science Monthly, Mr. Charles S. Ashley writes so well on The Distribution of Wealth, that everyone will wish that he will carry out some of his statements more at length. For example, “the beneficial operation of speculation” in stocks receives only a single pithy sentence. If he would illustrate and prove his position he would find readers. The entire paper is timely and valuable. Dr. Newton's address on Meteors, read to the American Scientific Association, is instructive and probably correct in its positions. Mr. A. G. Warner's running review and comment on Le Play's Studies in Social Phenomena is an essay that will be remembered and referred to. The address of Mr. Christie, the Astronomer Royal, before the Royal Institution, rather advocating Universal Time, is strong and admirably expressed; but we are not convinced. Virgil G. Eaton argues that civilized men are on the way to A Bald and Toothless Future. We hope not; but the facts arrayed are discouraging. The portrait of Gen. John Newton, one of the best the Monthly has ever printed, and the sketch of his life, will be heartily welcomed. If the editor's educational essay on Fraud and its Victims should be read and pondered by many parents, the results would be profitable.

....Mr. Henry C. Maine, of Rochester, N. Y., has been a painstaking observer of sun spots and contemporaneous meteorological events for some years, and what he says in regard to them deserves attention. In the Sidereal Messenger he presents a strong argument to prove that the “Red Light,” which accompanied the sunrise and sunset eighteen months and more ago, was produced by the storms on the sun, manifested by spots. The article is elucidated by several interesting engravings from photographs. Photometry is one of the topics of the day among astronomers, and they will read with interest Mr. Parkhurst's discussion of Instrumental Photometry. The Editorial Notes are not as varied and engaging as they often are, for there is a dearth of special phenomena just now. By the way, is not the nebula of Andromeda below its usual brilliancy at present?

....In the London letter of The Book Buyer for the month it is said that the cheapening of books in England has not resulted in increased purchasing, but has had a contrary effect. Other interesting facts are recorded. An excellent portrait of Mr. H. H. Boyesen faces the first page, and on a subsequent page he tells why he is an author and how it was that his first book saw the light. The sketch is tantalizing by its brevity. Mr. Champlin's lively record of his coach ride through Southern England, and Mr. Benjamin's Persia, both admirably illustrated, receive the chief critical attention. The usual brief and instructive reviews and list of recent books occupy nearly all the remaining pages, accompanied by specimens of illustrations, among them being one of Miss Alcott, who has at last gratified the desire of thousands by completing Jo's Boys, a sequel to “Little Men.”

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Thomas Whittaker: Through Unknown Ways; or, The Journal-Books of Mrs. Dorathea Studley. By Lucy Ellen Guernsey. 12mo, pp. 406. $1.50; also,

From Morn till Eve. By Cecilia Havergal. Illuminated by M. A. C. 32mo. 35 cents.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.: The Boys' Book of Famous Rulers. By Lydia Hoyt Farmer. Illustrated. 12mo, pp. 477. $1.50.

John B. Alden: Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature. Vol. 2. 12mo, pp. 478; also,

Hours With the Bible; or, The Scriptures in the Light of Modern Discovery and Knowledge. From Creation to the Patriarchs. By Cunningham Geikie, D.D. With Illustrations. 12mo, pp. 381. Cloth, 60 cents; half morocco, 90 cents.

Charles Scribner's Sons: The Ivory King: A Popular History of the Elephant and its Allies. By Charles Frederick Holder. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 330. $2; also,

The Chronicle of the Coach: Charing Cross to Ilfracombe. By John Denison Champlin, Jr. Illustrated by Edward L. Chicester. 12mo, pp. 298. $2; also, Little Lord Fauntleroy. By Frances Hodgson Burnett. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 209. $2.

Daniel Miller, Reading, Penn.: A Child's Life of Christ. By the Rev. C. Z. Weiser, D.D. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 328. $1.

Robert Carter & Bros.: The Crisis of Missions; or, The Voice Out of the Cloud. By the Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. 12mo, pp. 370. $1.25; also,

All of Grace. An Earnest Word with Those Who are Seeking Salvation by the Lord Jesus Christ. By C. H. Spurgeon. 16mo, pp. 128. 50 cents.

American Tract Society: Along River and Road in Fuh-Kien, China. By Edwin Joshua Dukes. With Map and Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. 12mo, pp. 348. $1.25.

Funk & Wagnalls: How to Win. A Book for Girls. By Frances E. Willard. With an Introduction by Rose Elizabeth Cleveland. 12mo, pp. 125. $1; also,

The Mentor. A Little Book for the Guidance of Such Men and Boys as Would Appear to Advantage in the Society of Persons of the Better Sort. By Alfred Ayres. 16mo, pp. 211. 50 cents.

D. Lothrop & Co.: Uncle Titus: A Story for Children and for Those Who Love Children. From the German of Johanna Spyri. By Lucy Wheelock. 16mo, pp. 201. $1.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Phantom City. A Volcanic Romance. By William Westall. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 97.) 16mo, pp. 158. 25 cents; also, Clare of Claresmede. A Romance. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 546.) 4to, pp. 72. 20 cents.

Nathan the Wise. A Dramatic Poem in Five Acts. Translated by William Taylor, of Norwich. From the German of Lessing. (No. 37, Cassell's National Library.) 32mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

October.—The Book Buyer, The English Illustrated Magazine, The Sidereal Messenger, The Homiletic Review, Christian Thought, The Brooklyn Magazine, New Englander and Yale Review, The Old Testament Student, American Journal of Insanity, The Church Review, The Presbyterian Review, The Lutheran Quarterly.

Colgate & Co's

CASHMERE BOUQUET PERFUME

For the Handkerchief

THIS EXQUISITE PERFUME CLINGS WITH REMARKABLE TENACITY TO ALL WOVEN FABRICS

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY,

BY

FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

1 vol., 8vo. Illustrated by R. B. Birch. $2.

No story for children has appeared for years which has attracted at once, and to the same degree, the admiration and praise of readers, young and old. One of the chiefly notable things about the tale is that the little American boy numbers among his friends almost as many grown people as children. Both will be certain to welcome the story most heartily in this handsome book form.

There never was a sweeter, more beautiful story than "Little Lord Fauntleroy."—[Brooklyn Union.

The charming idealistic serial of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," by Mrs. Burnett, is undoubtedly the most notable child's story of the year, and in each chapter develops the influence of the pure, sweet little lord among his retainers with clear beauty.—[Boston Journal.

It is very hard to have such a story dealt out to one by installments of a chapter or two at a time. In the illustrations the spirit of the story has been caught and reproduced.—[The Churchman.

There is something in the way in which Mrs. Burnett writes of children, or rather in the way in which her children speak, that appeals irrrsistibly to the heart.—[N. Y. Star.

CHRONICLE OF THE COACH. Charing Cross to Ilfracombe. By JOHN DENNISON CHAMPLIN, JR. Illustrated by Edward L. Chichester. 1 vol., 12mo. $2.

Mr. Champlin has written a breezy story of a ride through England on a coach-and-four. He visited, with his party, some of the most famous and most interesting towns and literary landmarks in Devonshire and old England. The narrative of this unique journey, it goes without saying, is always bright and entertaining. The illustrations by Mr. Chichester are extremely clever, and add much to the charm of the book.

THE IVORY KING. A Popular History of the Elephant and its Allies. By CHARLES FREDERICK HOLDER. 1 vol., small 8vo, illustrated. $2.

Prof. Holder's new book is a companion volume to his "Marvels of Animal Life," published last year. The elephant certainly stands pre-eminent in the animal kingdom as the most interesting in its character and habits, and Prof. Holder has made the most of an especially fascinating subject.

HANS BRINKER: Or, The Silver Skates. A Story of Life in Holland. By MARY MAPES DODGE. Beautifully illustrated. 1 vol., square 12mo. $1.50.

A new edition of Mrs. Dodge's ever popular book, published with all the illustrations of the fine holiday edition, at one-half the former price.

* These books are for sale by all booksellers, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

Charles Scribner's Sons,

743--745 Broadway, New York.

A CHRISTIAN YOUNG LADY wishes a position as resident or visiting governess in English and music; or to be companion for a young or middle-aged lady. References given. Address B. V., this office.

MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano-forte construction.

Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

The Crisis of Missions;

Or, The Voice Out of the Cloud. By the Rev Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. 16mo $1.25

That Quisset House. By Jennie M. Drinkwater Conklin. 12mo ... 1.50

Bible Warnings.. By the Rev. Richard Newton, D.D. 6 illustrations. 12mo 1.25

My Pearl. A Story by Alida W. Graves. 12mo 1.25

The Gillettes. By the Author of "Win and Wear." 16mo.

1 Dick the Captain ...75c. 3 Jack, who Persevered.....75c.
2 Nan, the Missionary.75c. 4 Bert the Enterprising.. .....75c.

The Slave Girl of Pompeii. Holt..... .60

Madge Hardwicke. Giberne... 1.00

Storm Signals. New sermons. Spurgeon..... 1.00

My Sermon Notes. III. Matthew to Acts. By Spurgeon..... 1.00

All of Grace. By Spurgeon..... .50

Hodge on Romans. 8vo. New edition..... 3.00

Dr. Hanna's Life of Christ. New edition. 3 vols..... 3.00

Fraser's Synoptical Lectures on the Books of the Bible. 3 vols..... 4.50

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.,

530 Broadway, New York.

* Any of the above sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

"This book is, on the whole, the best one out."—Christian Intelligencer.

Carmina + + + Sanctorum

A SELECTION OF

HYMNS AND SONGS OF PRAISE,

WITH TUNES.

THE REV. ROSWELL D. HITCHCOCK, D. D., THE REV. ZACHARY EDDY, THE REV. LEWIS W. MUDGE, } Editors.

Containing 746 Hymns, 21 Doxologies, 43 Chants, with seven separate Indexes. It is believed that the reduction in the number of Hymns will meet with universal approbation, as it has been effected by omitting those which were practically duplicates or inferior echoes.

There are 500 Tunes, including all the best of recent compositions, together with all those old, familiar ones so deservedly loved in American churches.

Broad pages and new, large type, cloth covers and flexible back. CLERGYMEN OR COMMITTEES may obtain copies free for examination, subject to return if not adopted. Address

A. S. BARNES & CO.,

NEW YORK. PUBLISHERS. CHICAGO.

Useful for Everybody.

MANY MISTAKES MENDED

IN READING, WRITING and SPEAKING.

12mo. 320 pages. $1 by mail.

N. TIBBALS & SONS, New York

"OUR BABY'S First and Second Year."

By MARION HARLAND,

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,

REED & CARNRICK,

MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

Arnold, Constable & Co

FURS.

Sealskin Sacques, Jackets and Dolmans of the very best London dye (specially selected), trimmed or plain.

Muffs and collarettes of Black, Blue and Silver Fox. Round and Fancy Muffs of Sealskin, Natural Beaver and Otter.

FUR TRIMMINGS.

A very large assortment of Sable, Black Fox, Beaver, Persian Lamb and Swans Down.

An extensive assortment of

FALL AND WINTER NOVELTIES.

Now in Stock,

Costumes, Suits, Evening Dresses,

Cloaks, Mantles, Opera and Street Wraps, Jackets, &c.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

MOQUETTE CARPETINGS

We have now in stock our complete assortment of this season's patterns in these most desirable goods. They are especially recommended for beauty of design and coloring and great durability

W. & J. SLOANE

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts

NEW YORK.

BLACK SILKS.

SPECIAL ATTENTION IS INVITED BY JAMES M'CREERY & CO. TO THEIR PRESENT STOCK OF

BLACK SILK TEXTILES,

CONSISTING OF THE NEWEST AND MOST APPROVED WEAVES FOR GENERAL USE, ALSO TO A VERY LARGE COLLECTION OF RICH NOVELTIES FOR GARNITURES IN DESIGNS, ENTIRELY NEW AND EXCLUSIVE.

James M'Creery & Co.,

Broadway and Eleventh Street, New York,

ANNOUNCEMENT.

AFTER CAREFUL STUDY OF THE USAGE OF ASSURANCE COMPANIES AT HOME AND ABROAD, AND OF THE EXPERIENCE OF THIS SOCIETY IN ALL THE VARIED REFORMS INTRODUCED BY IT, THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY HAS COMBINED IN ONE FORM OF POLICY ALL THE ADVANTAGES AND GUARANTEES WHICH CAN SAFELY AND PROPERLY BE UNITED, AND NOW OFFERS IT TO THE PUBLIC UNDER THE NAME OF THE FREE TONTINE POLICY.

IF YOU DESIRE ASSURANCE ON YOUR LIFE, YOU SHOULD SECURE ONE OF THE EQUITABLE'S FREE TONTINE POLICIES, BECAUSE (1) IT IS

Indisputable,

AND YOU BUY A CERTAINTY INSTEAD OF A POSSIBLE LAWSUIT; (2) IT IS

Unrestricted,

AND YOU ARE NOT, AS IN ORDINARY CASES, PROHIBITED FROM GOING WHERE AND DOING WHAT YOU PLEASE; (3) IT IS

Non-Forfeitable,

AND YOU CAN NEVER BE DEPRIVED OF A JUST INDEMNITY EVEN ON SURRENDER; (4) IT IS

Payable Immediately

AFTER DEATH, THUS PROVIDING AGAINST EVEN TEMPORARY EMBARRASSMENT; (5) IT IS

Pre-eminently Lucrative,

IN MANY CASES PROVIDING ASSURANCE IN LATER LIFE FOR NOTHING, OR YIELDING BACK THE WHOLE, OR NEARLY SO, OF WHAT HAS BEEN PAID IN BY THOSE PREFERRING TO WITHDRAW; (6) THE FORM OF POLICY IS

Simple

AND SHORN OF NEEDLESS FORMALITY; (7) THE ADVANTAGES OFFERED UNDER THE POLICY ARE

Not Obtainable in Combination in any Other Company.

OR UNDER ANY OTHER POLICY.

FOR TABLES OF RATES AND FULL EXPLANATIONS, APPLY BY LETTER OR IN PERSON TO

THE EQUITABLE Life Assurance Society

President,

HENRY B. HYDE.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

Witnesses.

"Wherefore seein we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witn sses. ...I us run with patience the race that is set before us."—Heb. 12:1.

"I AM working alone, and no one heeds!"
Who says so, does not know;
There are clear eyes watching on every side,
And wherever our feet may go,
We are "compassed about with so great a cloud,"
That if we could only see,
We could never think that our life is small,
Or that we may unnoticed be!

We seem to suffer and bear alone
Life's burdens and all its care;
And the sighs and prayers of the heavy heart
Vanish into the air;
But we do not suffer or work alone,
And after a victory won,
Who knows how happy the hosts may be
Who whisper a soft, "Well done!"

Oh, do not deem that it matters not
How you live your life below;
It matters much to the heedless crowd
That you see go to and fro;
For all that is noble and high and good
Has an influence on the rest,
And the world is better for every one
Who is living at his best.

But even if human eyes see not,
No one is unobserved,
There are censures deep and plaudits high
As each may be deserved;
We cannot live in a secret place,
There are watchers always by,
For heaven and earth are full of life,
And God is ever nigh.

Oh, for a life without reproach,
For a heart of earnestness!
For self-forgotten, for meanness slain,
For hands well used to bless!
God, raise us far from the little things,
And make us meet to be
Skilled workers here in the place we fill,
And servants unto Thee!

—Marianne Farningham, in London Christian World

The Guest Chamber.

BY all means let us have a guest chamber if we can possibly spare the apartment, and if not, let us so arrange our household that some room can be afforded for the accommodation of visitors. Hospitality is one of the dearest privileges of the home, and one of the first things regretted, when home life is exchanged for life in a boarding-house, is that the opportunity to invite friends is neccessarily so restricted. The guest chamber should be thoroughly comfortable, and it can do without certain elaborate luxuries if the bed and pillows be soft, elastic, clean and dainty, if there is plenty of covering on the bed, with an extra pair of blankets or a spread conveniently accessible in case of need. There ought to be abundant facility for washing; toilet soap, plenty of towels, not hard and slipperery, above all, not new towels, which are very disagreeable; pins ought to be on the cushion, needles and thread, a button-hook, and any other little contrivance or convenience which may occur to the hostess. If there is no hot water in the house to be turned on at a faucet, then hot water should be brought in the morning to the guest's door. There ought to be provision for the mind as well as the body, and no guest chamber is complete in which there are no books. A Bible, of course, should be part of the furniture, and there should a'so be several bright or restful books, which may while away an hour pleasantly if the friend desire to spend some time in her room. Writing materials—pen, ink and paper, are not amiss, as indeed nothing is which will add to the happiness of the friend within your gates. A bed and a table, a stove and a candlestick, were the suggestions of the Shunamite matron when she thought of entertaining the prophet as he passed her house, and they still remain the requisites, although a rocking-chair is in these days to be substituted for the more primitive stool, and a lounge on which to recline is a delightful supplement to the bed.

All this is by way of introduction to the sensible words of a contributor, who, looking particularly to arrangements usual in the country, has something to say about

SPARE BED-ROOMS.

I went out calling not long ago on a friend who had lately moved into our neighborhood. We were talking about the house when she expressed her desire to have a spare bed-room, yet went on to say that she really did not believe in having a spare room, especially in winter, as the beds were sure to become damp and icy, unless great care was taken to prevent it.

This reminded me of the experience of a friend who travels, and has had more or less knowledge of spare beds. He is often kindly received, everything provided that could add to his comfort; an easy chair is given at a pleasant fireside, good food, agreeable conversation, but—bedtime comes, and he must face the inevitable spare bed.

All looks inviting until he steps in. Then, what so damp, cold and icy! Chilled and shivering, sleep forsakes my eyes, and, says he, I am glad when morning comes so that I can get out and get warm.

Many a one can relate a similar experience. Now, I say, if people keep a spare room in this way, it is better not to have one.

Health, once lost, is hard to get back. Therefore, we ought to be careful that our thoughtlessness does not cause some one to suffer the loss of it.

The spare room should be sunned and aired often. If it is very cold, and you expect a guest, warm the bed by placing in it some good-sized stones thoroughly heated an hour before bedtime. If your guest is unexpected, and you cannot heat the stones, you can take the bedclothes and hang them round the stove, turning around often, which will soon take off the icy coldness. If you cannot do this, place your guest upon a cot-lounge, or even easy chair in your sitting-room, where he may slumber at least without getting chilled, but do not send him to your damp, icy, spare bed.

I hope all owners of spare beds will take a kindly hint before our winter season, soon at hand, remembering that health is wealth. MATER.

Among Aunt Marjorie's pleasantest memories is one of a dear old lady, long past her three-score and ten, who made it her office to see to the nightly comfort of the children and guests in the home where she bore the honored title of "Aunty," a title given her, indeed, by the whole town. That our feet were not to be cold was her special care, and the last thing at night her hands would steal softly under the blankets to feel them, and, though it was against all Spartan ideas of hardening, the hot bottles which she slipped into the bed to take the chill from the sheets, are held in grateful recollections still. Better than the stones which our contributor recommends, would be a tin warming-pan, which holds hot water and retains the heat a long time, or an india-rubber bag, which is for the same purpose, and is a great comfort.

Do We Read?

DO we read, or has reading gone out of fashion? The question is seriously asked at present, notwithstanding the influx of cheap publications, chiefly novels, which, inundating our households, drives the books worth reading out of sight, swallows up our leisure, and kills the taste. It would once have been impossible to discover among well-bred people, persons who had never heard, for instance, of the "Vicar of Wakefield," who had never read the "Pilgrim's Progress," to whom half of Scott's novels were practically unknown. This is so no longer, although the masterpieces of literature may be had almost for the asking.

Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine for October, observes with very little exaggeration:

There is no product that men use which is now so cheap as newspapers, periodicals, and books. For the price of a box of strawberries or a banana you can buy the immortal work of the greatest genius of all time in fiction, poetry, philosophy, or science. But we doubt if the class that were to be specially benefited by this reduction in price of intellectual food are much profited. Of course, some avail themselves of things placed within their reach which they could not own formerly, but it remains true that people value and profit only by that which it cost some effort to obtain. We very much doubt if the mass of the people have as good habits of reading as they had when publications were dearer. Who is it who buy the five, ten, and twenty-cent editions? Generally those who could afford to buy, and did buy, books at a fair price, to the remuneration of author and publisher. And their serious reading habit has gone down with the price. We have an increasing leisure class. When does it read? Not much in the winter, for the demands of society are too exigent then. For private reading there is no time, and a short cut to information is sought by means of drawing-room lectures and clubs, which are supposed to give to social life, without interfering with it, a lacquer of culture. In summer it is impossible to read much; what is called the mind needs rests by that time, and the distractions of out-door life in the mountains and by the sea forbid anything but the most desultory skimming of the very lightest products of the press. To be sure, the angel of the Atlantic Ocean sees a row of pretty girls on the coast, seated on rocks or in the sand, all the way from Campo Bello to Cape May, with novels in their hands—one of the most pleasing imitations of intellectual life ever presented in the world. It is perfect when there is breeze enough to turn over the leaves. And the young men—those who are in business, or who are supposed to be getting a more or less "conditional" education—do they read as much as the young ladies? It is a curious comment on the decay of the reading habit in households, the blank literary condition of the young men who come up to the high-schools and colleges.

Now we are not trying to defend the necessity of reading. They say that people got on in the Middle Ages very well without much of it, and that the women then were as agreeable, and the men as brave and forceful, as in this age. But it is certainly interesting to consider whether, by reason of cheap and chopped up literary food, we are coming round practically to the Middle Ages relative to reading, that is, to reading anything except what is called news, or ingenious sorts of inventions and puzzles which can be talked about as odd incidents in daily life are talked about. Reading to any intellectual purpose requires patience and abstraction and continuity of thought. This habit of real reading is not acquired by the perusal of newspapers, nor by the swift dash which most people give to the cheap publications which are had for the picking up, and usually valued accordingly. It is an open question whether cheap literature is helping us any toward becoming a thoughtful and reading people.

Thanksgiving.

THESE hours belong to joy, you say,
Grief should put by her somore pall,
Care should cast all her burdens away
And bitter tears be forbidden to fall.
The sad should be merry, the old should be young,
And gladness burst forth in joyfullest song.

Ah! how can I out of gladness sing!
My ships have not come home from sea,
My fields do not rich fruitage bring;
Proud billows still rush over me.
Friends gone! Hopes dead! Spring's tide frozen o'er!
How can my unstrung harp praise more!

Oh, God I forget! I wrong Thee, great Giver!
A myriad ties are left unriven;
I have memories sweet that can perish never—
Loved friends on earth, loved friends in heaven.
There is shining behind the cloud a light,
Heaven's morning will dawn on earth's darkest night.

Then rise, put on strength, oh, fainting heart!
Be glad in the sunlight, be strong in thy God,
For to snow-clad hills, and deep valleys apart
The spring will come shining in glory abroad.
Return thy mute harp, praise the Lord strong and high,
For darkness is fleeing and morning is nigh!

The Wedding Trip.

THE Catholic Review talks with sovereign good sense about the expensive journeys taken by young married people. It is a matter in which those who have money may properly set an example for those who have not. The unostentatious and comparatively inexpensive wedding journey of Mr. George Gould, a few weeks ago, was admirable. This is what the Catholic Review says:

"Suppose the case of a young man who works hard and earns his own living as a clerk, a piano tuner, a salesman, or in some other respectable occupation; who has lived carefully, laid by a few hundred dollars, and feels that he can at last afford to get married. His bride is a young woman in his own walk of life, who has been accustomed to living comfortably, but economically, and upon this remarkable and healthy basis their plans for married life are laid. Nine times out of ten they go far to wreck the whole affair simply by a wedding journey. In the first place, they both purchase expensive clothes. They are married with considerable state, and if they were to stop with that and go from the church at once to their home and begin housekeeping, they would find that a serious inroad had already been made upon their savings.

"But that is not the programme by any means. From the church they ride in a carriage to the railroad station. There they take chairs or a whole compartment in a parlor-car, and make straight for the nearest big city, and there they put up at the largest and most expensive hotel. Then begins a life of pleasure and sight-seeing. They do as the people about them do, and for a week or two they live as if they were millionaires. The money that the young man has drawn from the bank melts away like snow in the sun.

"When the young couple return and take up life in their new home, how does the matter present itself? They have lived, for a week or two, as rich people live. They have had a taste of luxury to which they were unaccustomed. They must be more than human if they do not think with regret and longing of their brief taste of luxury, ease and splendor, and if husband and wife are perhaps lacking in sturdy strength of mind and not fortified by a Christian contentment with their state in life, discontent and repining and envy are almost sure to cloud their happiness. The details of their narrow domestic life, which would naturally be accepted as a matter of course and as a part of their common happiness, will be found dull, sordid and distasteful, because so different from the life of which they have had a fleeting glimpse during their wedding journey.

"The young people begin their married life out of tune and spoiled for true rational happiness in it; and, moreover, they have paid such a price for a few days of an artificial and, for them, wholly unsuitable existence, that they are heavily handicapped in the early part of their race, and it is very fortunate if even their children do not feel for years the evil effects of their parents' yielding to the tyranny of custom in the matter of a 'wedding journey.'"

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

A Wonderful Life.

John Frederic Oberlin.

ONE day, in an old book which I count among my treasures, I read the story of a wonderful life. Some things in regard to it may interest our "Little Heads," so I will write them out for their benefit.

The man, whose name stands at the head of this article, was a minister of the Gospel. He began to serve the Lord when he was a little boy, and he never grew tired of serving Him even when old, gray-headed and feeble.

He was born in Strasbourg, on the Rhine, in the year 1740, and carefully educated in that city. When quite a lad, thinking that he would like to be a soldier, he got permission from some military officers to practice under their direction. His father preferred, however, that he should give his time to study, in order that he might enter a profession. No doubt his father's decision was wise, yet the boy laid in a good store of bodily strength as he went through the exercises of the military drill.

When twenty years of age he wrote out a solemn and formal agreement to obey the Lord, and from that time on he proved himself a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

In looking at the map of Europe, one can see between the river Rhine and the Vosges Mountains a spot of territory over which there has been much dispute. It is called by the French, Ascace, by the Germans, Elsass, and has belonged at different times to both nations. In the last century it belonged to France.

In this province is a mountainous canton called the Ban de la Roche. When Oberlin was born it contained five villages, in which were living less than a hundred families, simple and ignorant peasants. So very ignorant were they, indeed, that when their pastor, Monsieur Stouber, attempted to have the children taught to spell and read, the parents were frightened by the strange-looking syllables in the spelling-books, and thought that these must have some connection with evil spirits. When they found, however, that, after learning how to spell, the children were able to read what they pleased, the grown people, too, became students of the spelling-book.

These simple folks lived in small huts on the mountain-side, and ate wild apples and pears, together with inferior potatoes. During their long winter, lasting from September to May or June, they were entirely shut in from the outer world, not having any way of reaching the larger villages or the cities.

When Oberlin, at the age of twenty-six, became their pastor, it was known that he would attempt to improve their condition. Accordingly, some of these half-savages formed a plan to waylay and beat him. When the day came for carrying out their design, Oberlin, who had been informed of their intention, preached a sermon on the text, "I say unto you that ye resist not evil." Afterward, he went to the house where he knew that the conspirators were talking together, and presenting himself to them, said: "Here I am, my friends Your design upon me I am acquainted with. You have wished to deal with m in a practical manner, and to chastise me because you deem me culpable. If I have in fact violated the rules which I have laid down for you, punish me for it. It is better that I should deliver myself up to you and save you the meanness of an ambush."

The peasants were so impressed by their pastor's courage and nobility of spirit that they were ever afterwards willing to be guided by him.

One of the first improvements that Oberlin made was to build a road by which the natives of the Ban de la Roche could hold communication with the outside world. He could induce them to work upon it only by himself taking a pick-axe and setting the example; but after the road was built and they were able to carry their produce to market, they were sufficiently proud of their work.

Another thing that the good pastor did was to get seed potatoes from other places, so that the quality of these vegetables might be better than it had been. Then he taught the people to build cellars deep enough to protect the potatoes from frost. He taught them, also, how to cultivate their ground; had young men trained to be masons, wheelwrights, smiths, carpenters, and glaziers; and in course of time gave instructions, either personally or through others, in weaving, spinning, knitting, straw-plaiting and dyeing. He also collected money from his friends in Strasbourg for the erection of a schoolhouse, and afterward succeeded in getting one in each of the five villages. He also started an infant school, in which the very little children were taught while their parents were at work.

So it came to pass that in time Oberlin's parish grew to be a very happy and prosperous one. The people were no longer either idle or ignorant, but were so industrious and contented that they became quite famous on account of their changed condition. Besides learning to take care of themselves they had learned the lesson of Christian charity. They took care of the sick and of orphans, helped the poor who went to live among them, and raised money to send Bibles and missionaries to other places.

No wonder that they had come to love the friend through whose efforts all these wonders had been wrought. They called him "the good papa," and took great delight in listening to him as he talked to them of what he loved to talk of best—the truths of the Holy Bible. Sometimes, when they were gathered around him, the women working while they listened, he would say: "Well, my children, are you not tired? Have you not had enough?" They would generally answer, "No, papa, go on. We would like to hear a little more." Yet when tired they would say so and thank him, and then the teacher would stop.

When he grew to be a very old man, and no longer able to walk from one village to another in order to preach, the people would take turns in sending horses for him to ride. Sometimes as he passed through Waldbach, the village in which he lived, he would shake hands with every child he met, saying: "Jesus loved children; it was to those who resemble them that He promised the kingdom of heaven."

No sadder day ever came to the mountain canton than that on which the good pastor died. In his eighty-sixth year he bid adieu to those among whom he had so long lived and labored, and went to receive his reward. A whole parish trained in useful arts and in Christian virtue was the monument of John Frederic Oberlin. COUSIN LOIS.

An Old Lady's Talk.

"I WISH my papa would take me out to drive," sighed little Ida as she threw down her doll and went to the window.

"Perhaps he will when he comes home," said her mamma.

"I wish he would come now," said Ida; "I am tired of all my plays."

Ida's grandmother sat in the corner with her knitting. "What you really want is something to do, child," she said. "Learn to be of use in the world, and you will be happy."

"I do not like to be of use," said Ida; "I want something pleasant to happen all the time."

"You never can have that wish granted, dear," said her grandmother. "There will be sure to be some time in which you will be left to yourself. Besides, people get tired even of pleasant things after a while."

"Why, that is true," said Ida. "I thought my doll was a beauty, but now I do not seem to care for it; and my kitty was as nice as she could be, but now that she is spoiling into a great cat I do not like to play with her. I wish I was as old as my sister Alice; then I could have company, or go out when I chose to do it without asking mamma, and people would pay me more attention than they do now, and invite me to ride, and say nice things to me."

"Is Alice never tired?" said the old lady, glancing at a beautiful young girl who had just come in.

"I am always tired," said Alice, laughing. "I was just wishing that something would happen—something quite new and entertaining."

"Oh, the pity of it!" sighed the grandmother, "rich, young and in good health, yet tired of life!"

"Are you never tired, grandma?" said Alice. "Do you never find the days long?"

"They are always too short for me," said the old lady. "I have so much to do that I never can keep ahead of my work."

"I guess you only like to work because you are old," said Ida. "You have forgotten how you used to feel when you were a little girl."

"Indeed I have not," said the old lady. "Girls had to work in those days. They not only had to help with the cooking and sweeping and dusting, but they had to take their place at the spinning-wheel and spin the yarn to knit their own stockings."

"Oh, grandma," said Ida, "I should think that would be great fun. I found an old spinning-wheel in our garret the other day, and I tried it, and found I could make it go round just as fast. I wish you would teach me how to spin."

The old lady smiled as she said, "It is one thing to set the wheel in motion and another thing to spin with it. Threads tangle and break, and one has to have patience and perseverance in order to learn how to do the work."

"I should hate it," said Alice. "I hate to sew, and I hate to be patient or useful. It is too stupid."

"We were not stupid at all," said the old lady. "Our tasks were given to us, and we took pleasure in trying to do them well. When we found a spare hour in which to amuse ourselves, we were merry enough. We had no rich dresses or finery. Our dress was plain but comfortable—short and scant enough not to get in our way when we ran about the house, and loose enough not to interfere with our motions."

"I should think it must have been horrid," said Alice. "Yet I do believe you would like to have us brought up in the same way, grandma."

"No, dear child, not exactly," said the old lady; "but I would like to have you seek to be good and to do good, rather than to be always thinking how you can amuse yourself. The older you grow the harder it will be for you unless you learn that a selfish life can never be a happy one."—The Morning Star.

Little Heads Together.

No. 1.

SCRIPTURAL ENIGMA.

I am composed of 21 letters, and am a command given to Christians.

5, 2, 12, 15, 14, a noted high priest.
2, 7, 21, 6, a book of the New Testament.
3, 13, 2, 20, the mother of six patriarchs.
8, 5, 19, 2, 12, a woman driven with her son into the wilderness.
11, 5, 19, 15, 14, a god of the Philistines.
16, 18, 12, 6, 21, part of the names of three books of the Old Testament.
1, 5, 10, 4, 18, 14, 19, a mode of moving sometimes used to express manner of life.
13, 17, 9, a well-known priest. E. M. C.

No. 2.

TWO EASY DIAMONDS.

I.—1. In hundred. 2. Part of a century. 3. A harbor. 4. However. 5. In hundred.

II.—1. In nightly. 2 A covering for the head. 3 Native. 4. State of equality. 5. In nightly. E. M.

No. 3.

CROSSWORD ENIGMA.

I'm found in arrow, but not in bow
I'm found in reap, but not in sow
I'm found in ear, but not in eye;
I'm found in guard, but not in spy;
I'm found in sofa, but not in cot;
I'm found in meadow, but not in lot;
I'm found in raven, but not in dove;
Now guess me at once and I'll send you my love.

NELLIE LEFFERTS

Answers to Puzzles of September 22d.

No. 1.—2 Samuel 19: 18. Amos 7: 8. 2 Kings 10 6] Gen. 41: 42. Ecclesiastes 7: 29. Proverbs 27: 7. Job 23: 4. Job. 23: 30. Job 24: 2.

No. 2.—The tongue is not steel, yet it can cut;

No. 3.— S-ummer, queen of seasons thou,
U-niversal, round thy brow,
M-onarch, crown of roses thine,
M-aking glad the hearts of sadness,
E-very bird and flower in gladness
R-evels in thy genial time.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Oct. 12th.

The Associated Banks of this city at the close of the week reported loans increased $3,561,200, specie increased $1,613,900, legal tenders reduced $1,726,900, deposits increased $3,168,500, surplus of reserve reduced $905,125, making it $5,058,800. The rate on call loans varied through the week from 4 to 10 per cent. The average rates were from 5 to 6. The best commercial paper was quoted at 5 1-2 to 6 per cent. The bank clearances exceeded those of the previous week by over one hundred millions of dollars, and those of the corresponding week in 1885 by $334,200,000, due largely to the increased activity at the Stock Exchange, but also in good part to the larger demands of trade. The redemption of National Bank continues, but since September 1st over 13,000,000 in silver dollars and certificates have been added to the circulation....The Stock Exchange was active. The pendulum swung back and forth, swayed by rumors, but the market is strong at heart. Purchases on European account continue. Railway earnings continue to show a gratifying increase....The imports of merchandise at this port for the week were valued at $7,089,234, and the exports at $6,576,980. Sterling exchange was quoted on Saturday at $4.82 for sixty day bills and $4.85 for demand....The closing quotations for grain yesterday were: Wheat here 81 1-2, at Chicago 69 3 4; corn here 43 1-2, at Chicago 33 1 8; oats here 29 3 4, at Chicago 24 1-4. Exporters bought grain rather more freely during the latter part of the week, but are doing a hand-to-mouth business, as is to be expected when prices are drooping. Hay and straw are in good demand and firm. Cotton is quoted at: October and November, 9 10-11; December, 9 15-16; January, 9 22-23....Fall trade in general shows an increase of 25 per cent on that of last year. The prospects are cheering in nearly all departments.

Free Tontine Policy of the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

THE Equitable Life Assurance Society has recently taken an important step, and one that we believe will promptly commend itself to thousands who at present have no assurance upon their lives, in deciding upon a Free Tontine Policy, which continues the many advantages of Tontine assurance; is absolutely incontestable after two years; does not restrict as to travel, residence or occupation after the first year; is paid (when the policy has become incontestable) immediately upon proof of death, and promises to prove quite lucrative in returning large dividends. We could name other strong features of this policy. The growth of this Society has been marvelous, and that the popularity it to-day enjoys is deserved must be conceded, for it has been managed with marked ability by wise, vigorous and sagacious men, who have always displayed large liberality towards its members. A pamphlet, with full particulars, can be obtained from the Society, 120 Broadway, New York.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

Ten thousand packers of the Chicago Packing & Provision Co. struck for a reduction of hours. Eight hours is what is demanded as a day's work ...The condemned anarchists made speeches at their rehearing when the sentences were affirmed....U. S. Senator Austen F. Pike, of New Hampshire, dropped dead suddenly at his home. ..Four persons were wounded in a sham battle at Elmira on the Fair Grounds.... The anxiety about the missing steamer "Anchoria" increases.

MONDAY, 11.—The overdue steamship "Anchoria" is lying off St. Johns, N. F., with her main shaft broken. The passengers and crew are reported to be well and safe....An election riot took place in Sophia. The Russians complain of rough usage, and General Kaulbar has telegraphed to the Czar that he must be recalled or else furnished with troops ...It is reported that Russia is preparing a note to the powers which will be the beginning of decisive measures in Bulgaria....The Canadian Commission sent to Hudson's Bay report navigation practical by that route to Europe for four and a half months of the year.... The anarchists of Chicago have been sentenced to be hung....The packing house employers in Chicago are preparing for a long strike....A man was found in New York barking like a mad pog and showing other symptoms of hydrophobia....Formal charges have been preferred against the professors of Andover Theological Seminary for heresy. ..Ex-Senator Yulee, of Florida, is dead....The iron and coal trade is more hopeful than it has been for some time

TUESDAY, 12.—Governor Hill commuted the sentence of the Theiss boycotters to 100 days' imprisonment, which made their terms expire yesterday....The Episcopal General Convention at Chicago discussed yesterday missionary work among the colored race, and the Enrollment fund....The Chicago packing house strike continues....General Miles' report on the surrender of Geronimo received at the War Department ...Tammany Hall nominates Abram S. Hewitt for Mayor....Ex-Alderman Sayles is supposed to have fled to Canada. Next Monday had been fixed as the time for his trial....The statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World" is almost finished and is to be unveiled Oct. 28th....The New York Presbytery deposed Rev. H. R. Wilson from the ministry....It is felt in England that the Irish question is reaching a crisis....The Fisheries dispute reached its climax in the hauling down of the American flag from the masthead of the Gloucester schooner "Marion Grimes," by order of Captain Quigley....The "Anchoria" safe in the harbor of St. John's; arrived Monday night.

A NEWLY formed church among the Zulus has the following among its regulations: "No member shall be permitted to drink the white man's grog or native beer, nor to touch it with his lips."

We have no doubt that many of our readers will be pleased to see in another part of the INTELLIGENCER the pictures, which we are glad to publish, of De Land Academy and Dormitory, to which College reference was made in these columns some few weeks ago. The purpose of its founder, Hon. H. A. De Land, of Fairport, N. Y., was "to establish in Florida a Christian high school and college for both sexes, inferior to none in this country in character and rank." We are pleased to note that he has been successful in doing this beyond even his most sanguine expectations, and that the fall and winter term begins with a large attendance of students from leading families of the South and North.

MARRIAGES.

BURNS—DIEFENDORF.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Currytown, N. Y., Wednesday, Sept. 29, 6 P.M., by Rev. G. Wyckoff, William Wellington Burns, of Flat Creek, N. Y., to Anna E., eldest daughter of Reuben Diefendorf.

BURWELL—KILLGORE —In Cotullu, Texas, on Sept. 29, by Rev. W. W. Killough, Mr. John A. Burwell and Miss Belle Killgore.

CORTELYOU—WIKOFF.—At Griggstown, N. J., Oct 7, by Rev. John A Van Neste, assisted by Rev. R. V. Palmer, Mr. Robert S. Cortelyou, of Hackensack, N. J., and Miss Annie L. Wikoff, of Griggstown.

LAPHAM—HERRICK.—At the home of the bride's parents, Oct. 7, by Rev. I. S. Schenck, assisted by Rev. Wm. J. Leggett, Walter R. Lapham and Lucinda Herrick, both of West Ghent.

SIPPERLY—COLE.—At the home of the bride's parents, Oct. 6, by Rev. I. S Schenck, Ellsworth F. Sipperly, of Claverack, and Lillie W. Cole, of West Ghent.

SPRAKER—DIEVENDORF.—At the residence of bride's parents, Currytown. N. Y., Thursday, Oct. 7, 8 P M., by Rev. G. Wyckoff, Joseph Allen Spraker, of Sprakers, N. Y., to Elizabeth A., eldest daughter of Jacob Dievendorf.

VAN DUYN—VAN NUYS.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Griggstown, N. J., Sept. 1[illegible] by Rev. Robert V. Palmer, assisted by Rev. Willard N. Ogborn, Mr. Hugh S. Van Duyn, of Kingston, N, J., and Miss Susie A. Van N[illegible] of Griggstown.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

PATTISON.—At a special meeting of Consistory of the Reformed (Dutch) Church of Astoria, L. I., Sept. 20th, 1886, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

The Consistory of the Reformed (Dutch) Church of Astoria, L. I., desiring to attest their sense of the loss sustained by this church in the death of their late fellow officer, William Pattison, and to express their sympathy with his afflicted family, make record of the following minute:

Resolved, 1. That in the death of our beloved brother the Official Board of this church loses an efficient elder, the church a devoted member, and the community a worthy Christian citizen.

2. That our departed brother was endeared to his official associates and to the Christian community by his unfailing gentleness and sweetness of character, and by a life adorning the doctrine of our Lord.

3. That to his wife and family, esteemed and worthy members of this church, we tender our sincerest sympathy, praying that in this hour of trial the consolation of the Christian religion may be theirs.

4. That the Secretary be directed to send a copy of these resolutions to the family of our late brother, and to furnish a copy for publication to THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER. JOHN J. HALSEY, Clerk.

SUTPHEN.—Entered into rest at Morristown, N. J., Oct. 1, Mrs. Christine D. Sutphen, eldest daughter of the Rev. William Brush, and wife of Jacob L. Sutphen, aged 49 years.

Of a retiring disposition, and in ill health for several years, Mrs. Sutphen bore her affliction with calm trust in God and with the patience of faith and hope. Her experience was moulded in the furnace of sanctified trial, and by careful and intelligent study of God's Word, which was very precious to her. Although mostly confined to her home by her sickness, an unconscious spiritual influence went forth from her that was deeply felt by her neighbors and friends who witnessed her constancy and cheerfulness in painful suffering and gradual decline. And when the trial of her faith was completed, she passed quietly away saying, "All is well!"

Mrs. Sutphen was a member of the Clinton Avenue Reformed Church in Newark, N. J., during the last seventeen years.

The afterglow of her character and life is radiant with Divine comfort and heavenly light for those whom she has left walking in the valley of the shadow of death. T.

WILLIAMSON.—At Newark, N. J , Oct. 1, after a short illness, Mrs. Helen S. Williamson, wife of Cornelius T. Williamson, aged 56 years

Mrs. Williamson was in her pew in Clinton Avenue Reformed Church on the Sabbath morning previous to her death, apparently in usual health. That evening she was stricken with the painful disease of which she died on the following Friday, in the full assurance of the faith which she had confessed in her early youth and maintained throughout her life. A Christian matron, a faithful wife and mother, a sincere and quiet follower of the Saviour, her home was her chosen sphere of duty and happiness, and her Church the place where she loved to meet the Lord and His people.

Mrs. Williamson was for many years a member of the old Franklin Street Church, afterward removed to West Twenty-third street, under the ministry of Dr. Hardenbergh and of the Rev. H. D. Ganse.

The severity of her illness precluded much conversation, but her dying words to her daughter were as good as a volume of testimony: "The Lord afflicts; —but I will trust Him." T.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF BERGEN will meet in the Lafayette Reformed Church on Tuesday, Oct. 19th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial minutes will be presented. WM. RANKIN DURYEE, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF GREENE appointed Oct. 19th, at 7 P.M., for the ordination of the candidate, Wm. B. Hill, the Rev. Mr. Vanderwart to preach the sermon and the Rev. B. B. Staats to read the form and offer the ordaining prayer. S. C.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular session in the Reformed Church of Williamsburgh, (Rev. Dr. Terhune's), on the third Tuesday of October, (19th), at 10 o'clock A.M.

The sermon will be preached in the evening by the Rev. W. F. Crannmer, or his secundus, Rev. Lewis Francis.

W. H. TEN EYCK, S. C.

THE SOUTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND will meet in regular fall session at East New York, L. I., on the third Tuesday of October, (19th), at 10 o'clock A.M. Classical assessment to be paid at this meeting. R. G. STRONG, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW BRUNSWICK will meet in stated session on Tuesday, October 19th, in the Suydam Street Church, (Rev. Dr. Campbell's), in the city of New Brunswick, at 9.30 A.M. Rev. James LeFevre will preach the sermon.

F. T. CORWIN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF NEW YORK will meet in regular session on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10 o'clock A.M., in the lecture-room of the church, 5th avenue and 29th street. All applications for Classical aid must be sent to the undersigned, corner of Lexington avenue and East 81st street, at least ten days before the date of meeting.

OLIVER H. WALSER, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE will meet in fall session at Cuddebackville, Tuesday, October 19th, at 2 P.M. Carriages will meet delegates at Guyward at 11.25 A.M. Consistorial minutes must be presented and Classical dues paid. The subject for religious meeting in the evening, "Infant Baptism and the Religious Training of the Young." Revs. Schoonmaker and Darrach to open the discussion.

R. DEWITT, S. C.

THE CLASSIS of PASSAIC made these arrangements for the installation of the Rev. J. A. Trimmer, at Pompton, on Thursday, Oct. 14th, at 7.30 P. M.: Rev. J. Few Smith, D.D., of Newark, to be invited to preach, and Rev. S. T. Searle, sec.; Rev. H. W. Teller to charge the pastor and Rev. P. Furbeck, sec; Rev. J. L. Danner to charge the people and Rev. W. E. Bogardus, sec.; Rev. A. A. King, President of Classis, to preside and read the form. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PHILADELPHIA will meet in stated session at Addisville, Pa., the third Tuesday in October, 19th, at 11.30 A.M. Conveyances will meet delegates at Somerton, on Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, at 10.17, and those leaving Philadelphia at 9.40 will be met at Churchville at 10.33.

S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF POUGHKEEPSIE will meet in stated session in the Church of Cold Spring, on Tuesday, October 19th, at 10.30 A.M. Consistorial minutes to be presented and dues to be paid.

A. P. VAN GIESON, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER made the following appointments for the ordination and installation of Mr. George Zabriskie Collier, at Stuyvesant, N.Y., on Wednesday, Nov. 3d, at 2.30 P.M.: The Rev. Dr. F. N. Zabriskie to preach the sermon, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Campbell to charge the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Drury to charge the people, the President of Classis to preside and read the forms. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE appointed the following supplies for vacant churches: Gilboa and Prattsville, November, Rev. D. K. Van Doren; January, Rev. J. G. Smart; March, Rev. P. Phelps, D.D. Schoharie Mt. and Central Bridge, October, Rev. J. G. Fagg; Dec. Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. W. A. Wurts; Sharon, October, Rev. J. G. Smart; Dec., Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. J G. Fagg.

D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER made the following appointments for the installation of Rev. W. Schmitz in the Church of Roxbury, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d: The President, Rev. Dr. Wortman, to preside and read the form; to charge the pastor, Rev. B. C. Lippincott or Rev. S. T. Cole; to charge the people, Rev. Dr. Wortman or Rev. W. A. Shaw; to preach the sermon, Rev. Abram Lansing or Rev. J. H. Van Doren. S. C.

CLASSIS OF WESTCHESTER.—A regular meeting of the Classis of Westchester will be held in the Church of Fordham, N. Y. city, on Tuesday, the 19th day of October, at 10 o'clock A.M. Rev. William E. Turner will preach the sermon.

C. K. CLEARWATER, S. C.

AFTER October 10th the address of Rev. Wm. H. Ballagh will be Lodi, N. Y.

CORRESPONDENTS will please address Rev. C F. A. Klein, Ph.D., at Lennox, Lincoln Co., Dakota.

Our readers will confer a favor upon the publishers of this paper and, perhaps find it to their own advantage if, when answering an advertisement found in these columns, mention is made that it was seen in THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

Publisher's Department.

MRS. CHARLOTTE LISLE, OF CHICAGO, well known to the Western press, ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me... but a remdey has removed it."

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

Every day adds to the great amount of evidence as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is unequalled for general debility, and as a blood purifier, expelling every trace of scrofula or other impurity. Now is the time to take it. Sold by all druggists.

No Opium in Piso's Cure for Consumption. Cures where other remedies fail. 25c.

In gathering wild flowers, autumn leaves, or picnicking in the woods, we are more or less exposed to danger from poisoning by ivy or other wild vines and shrubs. The poison is under certain circumstances readily absorbed by the blood, and painful swellings or eruptions are caused. Such affections Hood's Sarsaparilla readily cures, as it expels all impurities from the blood. Even in cases of poisoning by Paris green, Hood's Sarsaparilla has been remarkably successful. It should be kept constantly in the house for all blood disorders. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass., and is sold by all druggists. 100 Doses $1.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economica than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.
Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS
and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.
No family, rich or poor, should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

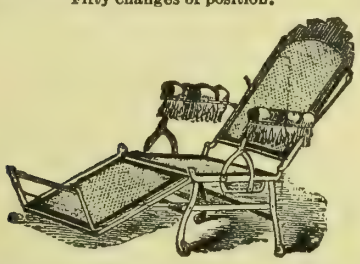
JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

PLUNKETT'S
Old Reliable Folding Chair.

Fifty changes of position.



Also, Comfort Folding Mantle Beds and Cribs.

PRICE $11, $12, and $13.

Send for circular.

112 West 14th Street, - New York

HAVE YOU READ THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF

REV. CHARLES G. FINNEY?

If not, send for a copy. "Every student of divinity, every man and woman that would be a practical Christian, should read that book." Price $1.75. Published by

A. S. BARNES & CO., 111 William St., N.Y.

The faintest color on the cheek of the Maiden is yet a color. In the fading away of the deep purple stain into the white body of flower, there is a distinct limit line. These tones are pure. Purity of tone was never better rendered than in our Ready Mixed paint at $1.35 per gallon. If no dealer in your neighborhood, send to us direct. Dealers who do not sell these goods are requested to write for color cards, terms, &c. The best goods. The heaviest advertised of any in the market. Our agents fully protected. They are easy to sell. The F. J. Nash M'f'g. Co., Nyack, Rockland Co., N. Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART.

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞Distance no hindrance a we Give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

the popular favorite for dressing the hair, Restoring color when gray, and preventing Dandruff. It cleanses the scalp, stops the hair falling, and is sure to please.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

NEW BOOKS

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NOW READY.

THE PRESBYTERIAN DIGEST OF 1886

Embracing, with the contents of the edition of 1873, the Acts of the Assembly, from 1874 to 1885 inclusive, and an addendum of the Acts of the Assembly of 1886.

By the REV. W. E. MOORE, D.D.

8vo. Sheep. Price, $5.00, net.

Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates.

The False and the True Spiritualism.

By the REV. JOHN CHESTER, D.D.

16mo. Price, $1.15.

WOOD, HAY AND STUBBLE.

By KATE W. HAMILTON.

12mo. Price $1.25.

THE CHESTER COTERIE.

By KATE LIVINGSTON HAMILTON.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

1886 MUSIC TEACHERS 1887

Teachers of Piano; Teachers of Organ; Teachers of Theory; Teachers of Choirs; Teachers of Music in Schools; Teachers of all Instruments; Trainers of the Singing Voice; Teachers of Classes;

Are all WELL AND FULLY provided for in the immense stock of Oliver Ditson & Co., which contains 500 books directly used in teaching, and 1500 other music books, all well compiled and useful. These are of their own publication, and they have, in addition, all the other noted books of the world. Also, pieces of Sheet Music almost without number.

Teachers of Music who cannot visit their stores in Boston, New York or Philadelphia, or that of Lyon & Healy in Chicago, their principal agents in the WEST, are cordially invited to call for and examine Ditson & Co.'s books in any reputable music store, or to correspond directly with Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston.

Lists and Catalogues cheerfully furnished to the profession, and all inquiries as to music and music books answered, and musical advice given by their army of employees, many of whom are well trained singers, players and composers. Send to, or call on

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.
Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

FOR CHOIRS

A Low Priced Collection of Music.

IDEAL ANTHEMS

BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.

The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.

"IDEAL ANTHEMS" contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.

Price, 85 cents each by mail, postpaid; $8.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid.
☞SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.
PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O.
And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

8 Per Cent.

Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address. DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York

WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free.
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

OUR PRICES

ALWAYS THE LOWEST.

Attention is Directed to Our Large and Attractive Stock of

FALL GOODS

All the Novelties in

Suits and Cloaks

AND

Hats and Bonnets.

The Most Approved Makes of

BLACK AND COLORED SILKS,

SATINS, VELVETS & PLUSHES

Hosiery, Underwear, and Gloves

For Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

DRESS GOODS

In the Newest Styles and Colorings.

We are Sole Agents for the U. S. of the Celebrated Red Star Brand of Wonderful Wearing

VELVETEENS,

Noted for its Rich Color and Close Resemblance to Silk Velvet. 39 Shades. Price, 74 cents. To Prevent Imitations a Red Star is Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

Mail Orders Carefully Executed.

R. H. MACY & CO.

WASTE

EMBROIDERY SILK.

Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,
69 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

CARPETS.

Our assortment of artistic novelties in English Royal Wiltons, (our own importation,) Aubusson Axminsters, Gobelin Moquettes, and all the Finer Grades, surpasses anything ever before exhibited.

PRICES EXCEEDINGLY ATTRACTIVE.

SPECIAL SALE.

8,000 different styles (a recent purchase) of Wiltons, Moquettes, Velvets, Brussels, and Extra Super Ingrains, Best Quality, this Season's Designs, we offer at a slight advance above the manufacturers' cost of production.

An Immense Variety of Reversible

SMYRNA RUGS AND MATS

Just Opened, at Less than Auction Prices.

UPHOLSTERY

For Furniture Coverings and Draperies in the Finest Imported Fabrics a Specialty.

500 P'rs Chenille Curtains at $12; worth $16.

1,000 P'rs Lace Curtains (Taped Edge) at $2; worth $3.

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,

Sixth Avenue and 13th Street, New York.

CONSUMPTION

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong in my faith is its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N.Y.

A BIG OFFER. To introduce them, we will Give Away 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 23 Dey St., N. Y.

RIDLEYS'

Grand St., New York.

NEW BUILDING

NOW COMPLETED,

Which gives us an additional selling space of 62,350 SQUARE FEET.

Now making our Establishment the largest and most comfortable shopping place in the city.

NO INCREASE OF DEPARTMENTS,

but larger assortments of Fine Goods.

Dress Goods.

In this department a class of goods will be found equal to the best in any section of the city.

THE PRICES, HOWEVER, WILL SO DIFFER AS TO FAVOR THE BUYER.

French designs in Velvet, Plush, and Striped Combinations.

English Combinations in Plaids, Fancy Broche self-colored Wool Plushes.

40-inch English Hair-line Stripes, 39c. a yard.
40-inch French Hair-line Stripes, 50c. a yard.
45-inch Scotch Tufted Combinations, fancy, 95c. a yard; plain, 90c. a yard.
44-inch Extra Heavy French Serges, in large plaid combinations, at $1.25; plain to match, $1.15.
38-inch All-Wool Gray Mixed Tricots, 43c. a yard.
40-inch All-Wool Cashmere Cloths, 50c. a yard.
54-inch All-Wool Camel's-Hair Homespuns, 49c. a yard.
54-inch All-Wool Scotch Mixed Cheviots, 89c. a yard.

ROBES.

Embroidered Cloth Robes, $8; elsewhere $11.
Embroidered French Tricot Robes, $12; elsewhere $16.

Every Novelty in Dress Goods.

MILLINERY

OPENINGS HAVE BEEN GENERAL

during the past week among the many houses in this and neighboring cities, and we now ask for a

COMPARISON, satisfied that a visit will convince all that our assortment of

TRIMMED

MILLINERY

Is not only the largest in the city, but that the prices will show a saving of one-third or one-half over prices prevailing elsewhere. Untrimmed Hats in every shape and style.

SILKS.

68 pieces All-Silk Heavy American Surahs, in Cardinal, Garnet, Bronze, Tan, Brown, and Ecru, at 49c. a yard; usually sold at $1.
22-inch Dress Satins, all colors, 69c. a yard.
Satin Rhadames, 94c.; regular $1.25 quality.
All-Silk Black Watered Silks, 69c. to $1.50 a yard
60 Pieces Guinet Black Silks, 97c. worth $1.50.

400 pieces Stripe Silk Velvets and Plushes, all the latest designs in Stripes and Plaids, such as Pekin Cluny, Veloure Quadrille, Pekin Faille, Francaise, with Veloure Bosselé.. } 69c., $1.09, $1.50 to $6.50 PER YARD.

Ladies' Suits

In Large and Varied Assortments.

Tailor-made English Jackets, $3.90, $4.90, $6.
Ladies' Fine Imported Ragonals, $6.75; worth $15.
Misses' Cloaks, Jackets, and Newmarkets.
Misses' Fine Berlin Coats, $4.75 and $6.50.
Misses' Astrakhan Jackets, $4.90.
Misses' School Sacques and Coats, $2.48 and $3.50.
Ladies' Tailor-made Cloth Suits (all wool), $9.75.
Misses' School Suits, Trimmed Velvet, $2.75.

OUR CHIEF AIM

Is to make prices so low that they will show a gratifying saving to all visiting our establishment.

FASHION MAGAZINE.

Fall number is profusely illustrated, and contains, besides original sketches, stories, poems, etc., a complete Price List of our entire stock. Subscription 50c. per annum. Sample copies 15c.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS

309, 311, 313 to 321 Grand St.

56 to 70 ALLEN, 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST., N.Y.

The Church.

Wanted.

WANTED—in places of folly and sin,
Courage, these wayward souls to win,
Voices, to tell them of Jesus' love,
Faith, that points to the rest above.

Wanted—yes, in the homes of the poor,
Christian love, to open the door;
Gentle hearts, to soothe the pain
That to the needy comes oft and again.

Wanted—in the business hours of man,
The "golden rule" in each trade to plan,
In all that we say, whatever we do
That the love of God may shine all through.

Wanted—grace to bear each loss,
Trials, to burn the gold from the dross;
Will, to bow in obedience mild
To the rule of Christ as a little child.

Wanted—wisdom, peaceable, pure,
To know the soul's deep sin and cure;
Perfect trust in a loving God,
Walking the path our Saviour trod.

Wanted—to be kept from evil here,
To live in His love without a fear—
Nothing to know but His will divine,
And that I am His, and He is mine.

—Nashville Banner.

The S. P. C. H. and the S. P. P.

BY A CLAM DIGGER FROM WAY BACK.

MY DEAR MR. EDITOR: Will you allow a constant reader to find a place in your columns for a new scheme which will settle all theological controversies, and which will relieve your mind of many perplexing questions which I know must have been harassing it of late. If it were not merely as a "guarantee of good faith," Mr. Editor, I should not tell you my real name, or let you know that I hail from the clam diggings of Maine; but you need not think that because I come from "Way Back" I have no ideas of my own. In fact, I sometimes think that the constant fish diet we here live upon must account for the bright idea I am about to communicate, and my constant dwelling in the fog has dispelled the terrors of the theological fog bank.

Though I do live in Way Back, I not only subscribe regularly for your journal, with whose views on theological subjects, I am sorry to say, I totally disagree, but I also take one of your esteemed contemporaries, published in a larger city, as well as the Andover Review. With the theories advanced in those valued periodicals I am more than satisfied, Mr. Editor. They are what I long have waited for, but never before found. Surely the day of sweetness and light is dawning. I am sorry you do not appreciate these new views. I can only mourn over your narrowness of vision, and rejoice that there are some who are no longer chained to an iron-bound creed.

But there are one or two matters in which even these advanced thinkers seem to me woefully hidebound. For instance, there is the missionary question. I took the ground, as soon as I adopted these new views that have given me so much comfort, that missionaries were entirely superfluous luxuries; and, though I have read all the learned arguments on both sides, I fail to be convinced of the justice of the contrary view. I know that my new friends will not go with me yet, but why they should not I cannot see. In the next life these poor heathen will have a good chance, if they don't have it now. My good friends of the new theology are all agreed on that score.

Well, if they are to have a chance, why shouldn't they have the best? I'm sure Paul and Apollos know a good deal more about the truth than the average minister who comes to Way Back. They can put the truth in a more persuasive way, too. I say, give the poor pagan the best chance. It's cruelty to the heathen to take away their chance of hearing Paul and Apollos present the truth. I am going to organize a new society, Mr. Editor, and it shall have just as long a name as any of the new societies. It shall be called the S. P. C. H.—the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to the Heathen. Its motto shall be, "Not a cent for missions." I should be ashamed to be ruining the chances of the poor, unprotected heathen, and ruining my pocket-book at the same time. The beauty of this society, Mr. Editor, is, as you see, that it don't cost anything, and, if its principles are adopted generally, it will be worth at least $500,000 to the Congregationalists of America.

And why should not we carry our principles a little further? I am sure our old slow-coach of a minister in Way Back doesn't present the truth as it ought to be presented. He graduated at Andover more than thirty years ago, when they taught the old doctrines that are how exploded. No one who listens to him has a fair chance. He sometimes preaches about law and justice and perdition. I don't call that presenting the truth, and if those who cannot listen to his old-fogy notions don't have a better chance to hear the truth by-and-by, I should like to have my friends, the professors, tell me why.

It's folly to sow wheat in the fall if it will grow better when sown in the spring. I think it's better to wait until eternal springtime, and then the seed of truth will have a fair chance to germinate. So I think I shall enlarge the scope of my society and give it a longer name—the S. P. C. H. and the S. P. P.—the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to the Heathen, and the Society for the Prevention of Preaching. This would not only be a great blessing to the multitudes, who will thus have a chance to hear Paul and Apollos, instead of such preachers as our old moss-back of a minister, but it will be at least five millions of dollars a year in the pockets of the people.

I am aware that many of my theological friends will not agree with me in this doctrine, and may oppose my new society. They will say that the last command about disciplining the nations remains in force, whatever good or harm may seem to come to individuals. But this is strangely inconsistent, is it not, Mr. Editor, when they do not know but the last command is an interpolation? For my part, I think the apostle recorded this in an uninspired moment, when he had forgotten or misunderstood just what had been said. We all know very well that, though the Bible contains a revelation, it is not necessary to consider every verse authoritative. This verse does not agree with my inner consciousness, I cannot believe it.

But I do believe in my new society, and I hope, Mr. Editor, that you will kindly help me to establish on a firm basis the S. P. C. H. and the S. P. P.—The Congregationalist.

THE nervous break-down of Secretary McCabe suggests a serious problem. That "tireless" man has run over this continent scattering his contagion of enthusiasm, first for church extension and then for missions. He has been called "the prince of beggars," but those who made the misnomer themselves, teach that it is more blessed to give than it is to receive, and that the winged secretary has in fact been enriching the Church with the heaven there is in liberal giving. Long ago he was warned against overwork, but he was deaf to caution, and conferences and churches have lured him to physical collapse. In very fact, he has been wounded, not by speech and sermon, but rather through the greater wear in lecture and song. Dr. T. M. Eddy died through extra work, and not by regular duty. We think the same is true of Bishops Simpson and Gilbert Haven. They all labored when they ought to have rested, and toiled when they ought to have slept. An opposite course sapped their strength and bankrupted their vitality. What shall one prescribe for such men? The busiest men do the extra work in the Church and world, and both would have sadly suffered had those heroic servants declined their importunate summons to extraordinary service. Had they husbanded vital force by doing as do men who are in less demand, they might have been alive today.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 4. FOURTH QUARTER.

M. Christ Crucified.....John 19: 17-30.
T. Christ Suffered for Us.....1 Peter 2: 13-25.
W. Christ Suffered for the Ungodly.....Rom. 5: 1-21.
T. Darkness and Death.....Matt. 27: 31-50.
F. The Veil Rent.....Luke 23: 26-49.
S. The Burial.....John 19: 31-42.
S. Redeemed from the Curse.....Gal. 3: 1-14.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN O. VAN DEVENTER.

Oct. 24th.—"Jesus Crucified."—John 19: 17-30.

Golden Text.—"It is finished."—JOHN 19: 30.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 JOHN 1: 7.

INTRODUCTION.

WE are about to contemplate the most dreadful act of man's sinful course, which, at the same time, is the most wonderful exhibit of God's grace to sinful men. We are so familiar with the story of the Cross that we fail to respond sufficiently to its pathos, and we need the help of the Holy Spirit rightly to apprehend and appreciate the truths now before us. In our study let us keep in mind the thought of Paul, "He loved ME and gave himself for ME."

THE LESSON.

I. JESUS LIFTED UP.—VS. 17-22.

V. 17.—Before His arrest, Jesus had said, "If I be lifted up I shall draw all men unto me," and we are now to see Him lifted up on the Cross that He might thus draw all men unto Himself. As He started out on the way to the place of crucifixion, He was compelled to bear a portion at least of His own Cross upon His shoulders, according to the custom in such cases. This soon proved too heavy a burden for His lacerated shoulders, and the Cross was transferred to Simon of Cryene. The site of Golgotha, or Calvary, has not been fully identified. We only know that it was outside of the city, but not far away.

V. 18.—"Where they crucified him." The details of this form of execution have been omitted from the inspired narrative, and it is unnecessary for us to say more than that, "Death by crucifixion seems to include all of pain and death that partakes of the horrible and ghastly." "And with him two others, on either side one." We do not know whether it was a matter of convenience that these thieves were crucified with Jesus, or whether it was done to add a deeper shade to the dishonor of His death. Their share in the sufferings of our Lord gave to one the opportunity of becoming partaker of His glory.

V. 19.—"Pilate wrote a title." It was customary thus to proclaim the offence for which the crucified was executed, in order to heighten the effect of the punishment upon others. Pilate seems to have recovered some degree of independence after the sentence had been pronounced, and, instead of placing as His crime that which the Jews had charged against Jesus, viz., blasphemy, he wrote, "JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS." This title was at once a royal proclamation of Jesus as King and a condemnation of the Jews for having rejected Him.

V. 20.—"It was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin." It was evidently Pilate's intention to give the widest publicity to what he doubtless considered scornful sarcasm against the Jews. This threefold title was the first proclamation of the Gospel to the entire world. These three languages represent the Old and New Testaments and Church history for fifteen centuries. They foreshadowed the universal proclamation of Jesus as King, not of the Jews only, but of the whole earth.

V. 21.—This title was displeasing to the Jews who read it, and the chief priests came to Pilate with a protest against its form. If he would only represent Jesus as a claimant for royal honors they would be satisfied. They felt the truthfulness of the words, and recognized therein their own condemnation.

V. 22.—"Pilate answered, What I have written, I have written." If he had manifested some such firmness during the trial of Jesus, he would not have stained his soul with innocent blood.

II. THE GARMENTS DIVIDED.—VS. 23, 24.

Vs. 23, 24.—"Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts." The Roman law made the clothing of a crucified person the booty of the guard that placed him upon the cross. The outer apparel of Jesus was easily disposed of, but His tunic, or undergarment, was a seamless robe such as the priests were accustomed to wear, and the soldiers hesitated about cutting it into pieces, so they determined who should be its possessor by casting lots, thus unconsciously fulfilling the prophecy of the Ps., "They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots."

III. JESUS AND HIS MOTHER.—VS. 25-27.

V. 25.—"Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother...." This little company of women, together with John, the beloved, seems to have been drawn near to the Cross by a common sympathy for the sufferer. It is difficult to determine whether three or four women are designated here. They were those who had tenderly ministered to Him during life; His mother in His childhood, and the others during His ministry.

V. 26.—"When Jesus therefore saw his mother." Amid the agonies of the Cross He could still think of and provide for His mother, who was probably already a widow, and whose first-born Son was dying before her eyes. "Woman, behold thy son." John was most like himself, of all the company of disciples, and, therefore, he knew that her declining days would be tenderly guarded by Him.

V. 27.—"Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother" These words constitute the will of the dying Jesus, as He bequeathed to His mother a son, and to His friend a mother, each representing to the other in after years the absent loved one. "From that hour that disciple took her unto his own home." Some have thought from this that John led Mary immediately away from the Cross, and that she was thus spared the sight of the death of her Son; but it seems as if the instincts of both mother and disciple would not permit them to leave His side until the last moment.

IV. THE DYING SAVIOUR.—VS. 28-30.

V. 28.—"Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished.' He had perfect knowledge of His Father's purposes concerning Him and just when the cup had been drained. "That the Scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst." His thirst had doubtless been inconceivable before this time, but He had refrained from giving any expression to it until the last moment, and then rather in order to exhibit the agreement between prophecy and fact, than for His own personal relief.

V. 29.—"There was set a vessel full of vinegar."

This may have been provided for the purpose of relieving the thirst of the victims. Immediately the soldiers filled a sponge with vinegar, and raising it upon a stem of hyssop, placed it to His mouth.

V. 30.—"When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar." He had refused the stupefying drink which had been offered Him at first, but now accepts the cooling draught, for His sufferings in our behalf were ended. "He bowed the head and gave up the ghost" This expression is not simply equivalent to He died, but indicates that the separation of body and spirit was a deliberate and voluntary act on His part. "I lay down my life of myself."

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. The death of Jesus was shameful.
2. The death of Jesus was painful.
3. The death of Jesus was in accordance with the plan of God.
4. The death of Jesus was voluntary.
5. The death of Jesus was in our stead.
6. The death of Jesus was accepted by God in our behalf.
7. The death of Jesus is our only way of redemption.
8. Are you crucified with Christ?

Influence of a Godly Couple.

MR. AND MRS. E always reminded me of what is written concerning Priscilla and Aquila, so conversant with "the way of the Lord," and of Zechariah and Elizabeth, who were "both righteous before God." This godly couple, according to the apostolic injunction, "walk together as heirs of the grace of life." They are persons of eminent spirituality; they take a leading part in the service of song, and seem to feel a sacred pleasure in it; they are faithful Sunday-school teachers; and they are deeply interested in everything relating to the work of the Lord. They are well grounded in the doctrines of the Gospel from their early learning of evangelical catechisms, and they are steady and studious readers of the Word of God and of religious publications. Any mention of the success of revival efforts or missionary operations, or any conversation tending to religious edification always gains a ready response from these dear Christians, and their hearty amen is heard at the close of every prayer that is offered in their home.

The influence of this pious pair has been most happy in the case of their own children. Six of the number were snatched away from them by that awful scourge, diphtheria, in the course of a fortnight—the youngest a babe, the oldest about fifteen years of age. Charles, the eldest, seemed to have no fear of death. Some time after his disease, his parents found an article, which he had cut from a newspaper, with this heading, "Reader, Are You Saved or Lost?" Scripture passages were quoted to aid the reader in giving a Scriptural answer, and he was requested to sign his name under the columns headed "Saved" or "Lost," as he might decide. The dear boy had inscribed his initials, C. G. E., under "Saved." When Albert, a boy of ten years, was sick, his mother, entering his room, found him on his knees, and so absorbed in prayer that he did not seem to notice her entrance or withdrawal. Ellen, four years old, gave the most satisfactory evidence to her parents of having been born again. Jesus and salvation were often on her tongue. Every one of these children, old enough to understand the sinner's need, seemed to be an intelligent believer in Jesus.

While passing through the purging fires of the Great Refiner, our friends, sorely tried though they were, even unto death, were brought into a more conscious dependence on Him who bore the griefs and carried the sorrows of His people, and became the better fitted to be the helpers of others. Often do they speak of their experiences of saving and supporting grace, and recommend to the sorrowing and the sinful the dear refuge of their own weary souls. These good pepole appreciate the power of religious literature, and spread it through the community in the form of papers, tracts, etc., as opportunity offers. The great desire of their hearts is to win souls. Mr. E. had been a soldier before his conversion, and became deeply interested in soldiers, in consequence. Hence, when his wife once said, "What would you do if I should be taken from you?" he said: "I should enlist again in the army, so as to be a missionary among the soldiers."

The Roman captain who had built the Jews a synagogue was justly applauded as a lover of the Jewish nation. Mr. E. was not able to do the like; but he pitied the case of the scattered settlers among whom he lived, and pleaded for them at home and abroad till sufficient funds were obtained to build the house of God, the outgrowth mainly of the faith of the E.'s, and a few other religious families. It is thus that Christian homes, even in the waste places of the land, may be made centres of holy influences, radiant points from which Gospel light may spread far and wide. Is your home such a one?—S. C., in Herald and Presbyter.

DIVINE SURPRISES.—An under-officer accosted me and said: "You would not recognize me, but a few weeks ago I heard you preach in San Francisco. You gave me just the truth I needed. It has done me good, and I want to thank you." Unlooked for fruit! How much of it the Lord has growing and ripening for all who try to serve Him faithfully. There is cheer in seeing what we endeavor to do accomplished. But there comes to the soul a pecular charm of satisfaction when results to God's glory are achieved through our poor, imperfect instrumentality, indeed, and yet to our perfect surprise. The heavenly Father's surprises to His children—how glad He is to give them; how glad we are to receive them! And to both what a special relish is added because of their element of surprise. —W. F. Bainbridge.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Advantageous in Dyspepsia.

Dr. G. V. DORSEY, Piqua, Ohio, says: "I have used it in dyspepsia with very marked benefit. If there is deficiency of acid in the stomach, nothing affords more relief, while the action on the nervous system is decidedly beneficial."

Care for the Children

Children feel the debility of the changing seasons, even more than adults, and they become cross, peevish, and uncontrollable. The blood should be cleansed and the system invigorated by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Last Spring my two children were vaccinated. Soon after, they broke all out with running sores, so dreadful I thought I should lose them. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them completely; and they have been healthy ever since. I do feel that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved my children to me." MRS. C. L. THOMPSON, West Warren, Mass.

Purify the Blood

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, or Webster's Dictionary. For full particulars address

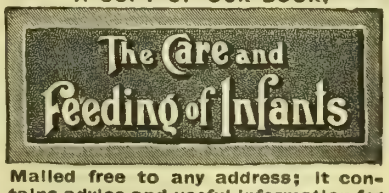
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO., P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,



Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

Lactated Food

The Most Successful PREPARED FOOD FOR NEW-BORN INFANTS.

It may be used with confidence when the mother is unable wholly or in part, to nurse the child, as safe substitute for mother's milk.

No other food answers so perfectly in such cases. It causes no disturbance of digestion, and will be relished by the child.

In CHOLERA INFANTUM,

This predigested and easily assimilated Food will surely prevent fatal results.

FOR INVALIDS, it is a Perfect Nutrient in either Chronic or Acute Cases.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach In dyspepsia, and in all wasting diseases it has proved the most nutritious and palatable, and at the same time the most economical of Foods. There can be made for an infant

150 MEALS for $1.00.

Sold by Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.00.

☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids" free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY

FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000,000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6%, 7%, 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable

WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.

F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.

CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.

Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N.Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 137 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

Church Decoration.

Church Furnishing.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

J. & R. LAMB,

59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry

Finest Grade of Bells,

CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c. Send for Price and Catalogue. Address H. McSHANE & CO., Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.

Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.

VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY

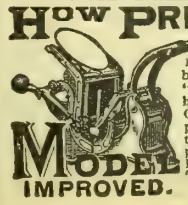
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,

For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO., 113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

HOW PRINTING PAYS



"The Proof of the Pudding," &c. How richly it pays to own a Model Press is shown in a handsome little book, containing several hundred "proofs," from the 15,000 people who have Model Presses. Business men, Clergymen, Teachers, Boys, Girls, persons out of work,—everybody interested. A Press and Outfit complete, from $5.00 to $10.00 and up. Book mailed free. Address,

The Model Press Co., Limited, 912 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

THE MANHATTAN Life Insurance Company

156 and 158 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

JAMES M. McLEAN, President.
JACOB L. HALSEY, 1st Vice-Pres.
HENRY B. STOKES, 2d Vice-Pres.
HENRY Y. WEMPLE, Secretary.
S. M. STEBBINS, Actuary.

Points for an Insurer to Consider.

AN ORDINARY LIFE INSURANCE Policy provides an estate for your dependents after your death, free from the claims of creditors.

AN ORDINARY ENDOWMENT POLICY provides for death and also for one's advancing years; but at a heavy outlay.

The Manhattan's New Plan

offers both advantages combined in one, and at a very much reduced cost

This new policy is superior to ordinary Life Insurance, because you need not "die to win."

Superior to ordinary endowment insurance, because much less expensive.

Superior to "Tontine" Insurance:

1st Because the results are not estimated, but fixed in a positive contract.

2d. Because, after three years, there is no forfeiture of payments on discontinuance of the policy, a cash or paid up value being guaranteed, by the New York Law. Business men appreciate the advantages of this new form of insurance, and are largely investing in it, because—

The annual deposit is practically saved, while it secures needed insurance during a designated period.

ATLANTIC Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2[illegible]
Capital paid in cash	1,[illegible]00,000 00
Net surplus	1,35[illegible],679 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0[illegible]
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	20[illegible],040 1[illegible]
Net Surplus	1,3[illegible],941 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,6[illegible] 39
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,3[illegible] 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9[illegible],697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,73[illegible],640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	2[illegible],000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886	10[illegible],394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR. } Ass't Sec's

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

Glittering Gold Quartz

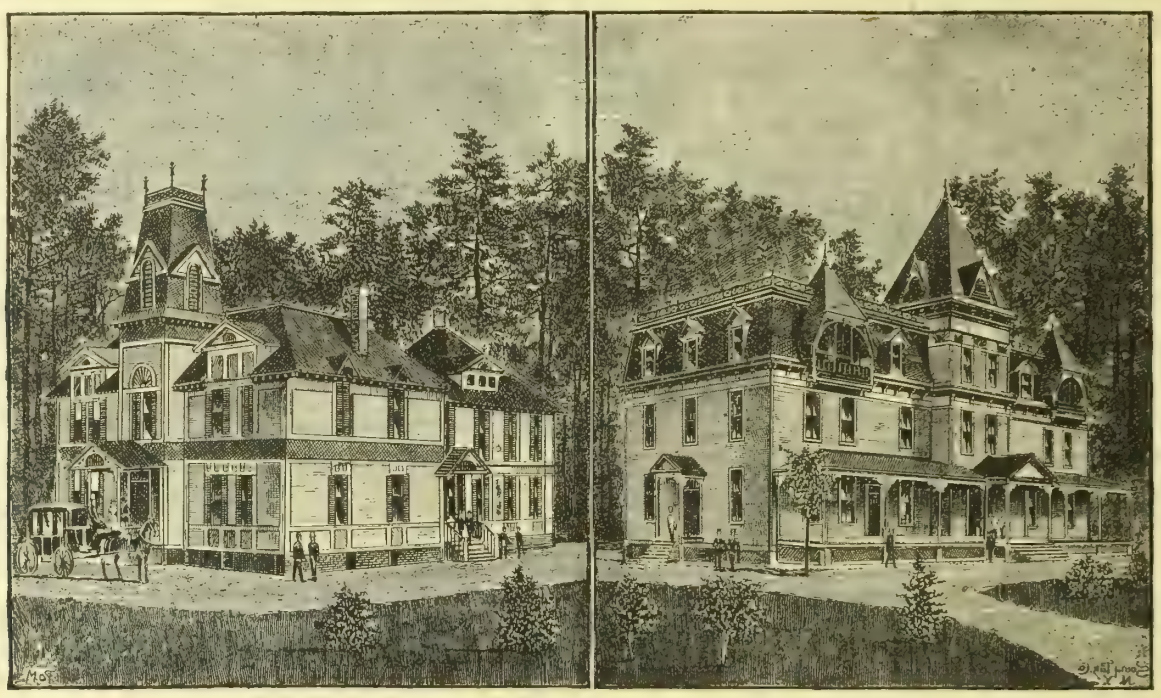
Just as taken from the Mines in the Rocky Mountains, made into beautiful Scarf pins. To quickly introduce, price only 33c., post paid. Address, H. H. TAMMEN, Mineralogist, DENVER, COLO. Send Stamp for large illust. catalogue of Mineral Cabinets, Agate Novelties, Indian Relics, etc. Trade Supplied.

FLORIDA

ACADEMY and COLLEGE,

At DeLAND, FLORIDA.

A first-class Academy for BOTH SEXES. Five courses: College Preparatory, Higher English, Normal, Business, Industrial Drawing. First-class Art and Music Departments. Fine new dormitory buildings, enabling us to furnish board and tuition at reasonable rates. The purpose of this Institution is to give, in the delightful climate of Florida, as thorough and liberal an education as can be secured in the best New England schools. DeLAND COLLEGE will also receive students of BOTH SEXES, prepared to enter the Freshman Class.



DeLAND ACADEMY AND DORMITORY.

NEW DORMITORY.

The citizens of De Land and vicinity—together with generous friends of education in the North—have erected a spacious and elegant Dormitory Building, thus supplying a very urgent need of the institution. The first floor of this building is supplied with Reception and Music Rooms, Office, Dining-Room, etc. The Dormitory rooms are large, well furnished and pleasant, and the entire building is heated by steam. The President and family, as well as other teachers, will reside in the building, and parents may thus feel assured of a careful oversight of, and interest in, their children. The young ladies will be under the direct control of the Preceptress, Mrs. Helen B. Webster.

LOCATION.

The city of De Land is in Volusia County, on the East coast of the Peninsula, about 100 miles south of Jacksonville. It is accessible by both river and rail, located on high, rolling pine land, not near any water standing or running, and is remarkable for its general healthfulness. The Mutual Life Insurance Co., of New York, grants its policy-holders a perpetual permit to live in De Land the year round. The famous Irondequoit Dairy, established here, furnishes the city with absolutely pure milk from Jersey cows, and the large ice factory adds another luxury. The climate is almost a specific for throat and lung troubles, catarrh, rheumatism, etc. The population numbers about 1,500 white people, and is far superior to most Northern towns of the same size in its moral and intellectual tone. There are in the city six white churches, all possessing houses of worship, a well-organized public school and a kindergarten. Three weekly papers are published in De Land, also. The general healthfulness and beauty of the city, its accessibility, together with the high character of its inhabitants, and the stimulating intellectual, moral and religious influences, make this almost an ideal location for an institution of learning. Students who are unable, from delicate health, to attend school during the winter in the North, find it possible to pursue their studies here regularly and yet constantly improve in health.

GENERAL STATEMENT.

DeLand Academy owes its existence to the generosity and foresight of Hon. H. A. DeLand, of Fairport, N. Y. The purpose of its founder was to establish in Florida a Christian High School for both sexes, inferior to none in this country in character and rank.

It was assumed that there was a demand for such an institution on the part of two large and rapidly increasing classes of students. First, the young men and women of the State of Florida—a State whose population is increasing perhaps faster than that of any other State in the Union. And secondly, the large number of young men and women, who from delicate health on their own part or that of their friends, are compelled to spend the winter in this more genial and kindly climate.

This assumption has been fully verified, and these classes of students have both been largely represented among our pupils. The institution is now fully organized, possessing fine buildings, admirably furnished, and supplied with apparatus and illustrative material of all kinds, equal and in many cases superior, to that possessed by the best institutions of a similar grade in the North; with courses of study well adapted to meet the varying needs of those who may desire a liberal education, and a faculty in charge composed exclusively of teachers of liberal culture, wide experience and marked success. The Board of Trustees, therefore, confidently invite students to avail themselves of these advantages.

Send for Catalogue to

J. F. FORBES, President, DeLand, Florida, or H. A. DeLAND, Fairport, New York.

A MILLION
BOOKS
RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.
ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.
LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.
LEGGAT BROTHERS,
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal equest. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 05 Broadway, New York

Unique and Tasteful Designs
IN THOROUGHLY WELL MADE
FURNITURE
AT
Moderate Prices.
Warren Ward & Co.,
Designers and Manufacturers,
6 & 8 E. 20th St., New York.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.
16 years perfect success, 12,531 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating $8,369,200
All the Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity to amount of 5,135,820
We have decided to place ourselves on a plane above every competitor. Hereafter every mortgage that we negotiate will bear our full legal
UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE OF BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST,
Interest 6 per cent, payable as in the past, by half yearly coupons, at the
NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.
Assets to the value of nearly a MILLION DOLLARS are pledged by our guarantee.
SEND FOR PAMPHLET CONTAINING FACTS AND FIGURES, FORMS, AND 450 TESTIMONIALS.
Our Law Department will collect Bonds and other securities in all the Western States for individuals and corporations.
Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,
Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

KNABE
PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

DEAFNESS Its causes, and a new and successful CURE at your own home, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists without benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others. Full particulars sent on application. T. S. PAGE, No. 41 West 31st St., New York City.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

WHEATLET
A NEW BREAKFAST
FOOD.
Delicate, Delicious. Superior to Cracked Wheat, Wheat Grits, or Oat Meal.
Cooks in 5 Minutes.
Put up in cases of 30-2lb. pkgs, ½ bbls. and bbls.
Absolutely the Best. Ask your Grocer for it.
FRANKLIN MILLS CO., Lockport, N. Y., Mfrs.
J. W. BEARDSLEY'S SONS, 179 West St., N.Y., Mill Agents. Send for circulars and price list.

EDUCATIONAL.

Rutgers Female College,
58 West 55th street, commences 49th year September 22d. Rev. John Hall, D.D., President of the Board of Trustees. Boarding and Kindergarten Departments. Address the College.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.
[Founded A.D. 1830.]
721 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.
REV. HENRY B. CHAPIN, PH.D., PRINCIPAL.
English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 67th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL.
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address
SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principa.

Seethis
"NOTES ON DECORATIVE ART," free for 4 cents postage, covering information on Tapestry, Lustra, Kensington, Oil and Mineral Painting. Regular lessons by mail. Painted and chromo designs to rent. Orders executed.
Art Agency, H. A. JOHNSON, 42 W. 23d St., N. Y

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years will be sent free on application to the
Equitable Mortgage Co., 208 B'way, N.Y.

The Christian Intelligencer

Een-dracht maakt macht.

Vol. LVII.—No. 42. Whole No. 2934.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1886.

$2.65 a Year in Advance. No. 48 Church Street.

Editors: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
Associate Editor: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

AT THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE to be held next week, Tuesday and Wednesday, in the Twelfth Street Church, Brooklyn, it is very desirable that the time given to the "Question Drawer" be used to the greatest advantage. To a large degree this may be gained by selecting questions of a practical character, and preparing them as far as possible before the Conference meets. Questions will be answered by the missionaries in attendance, and other competent persons. We would remind the delegates that they may essentially aid in making this Conference truly successful by a ready participation in the discussion of subjects which will be presented in the papers and addresses; or those which may be suggested in other ways.

THE PASTORAL LETTER.—Inquiry is made for copies of the Pastoral Letter. It was mentioned in these columns on Sept. 22d, and again on Oct. 6th, that it is found in the Minutes of the last General Synod beginning on the 207th page. Copies are not to be had in any other form. It is never too late to present the subject contained in the letter—the need of recruits for the ministry. The death of Dr. Forsyth recalls the fact that from one rural Academy, chiefly by the influence of one godly man, in the space of a few years, eight or ten young men were led to devote themselves to preparation for the ministry, a large proportion becoming eminent in their calling and all becoming useful to the church. Every man owes a debt to his profession, and ministers should make it a part of their business to at least endeavor to lead young men of promise to consecrate themselves to the highest work in which they can engage—that of a minister of the Word of God. Christian parents also should know the claims of the Lord upon their sons.

THE FOURTH INDIAN CONFERENCE at Mohonk Lake, Ulster Co., N. Y., held last week, attracted a larger attendance than any of its predecessors. Nearly every member of the Board of Indian Commissioners was present, and a number of those who have been connected with the Board in previous years. The teachers in the Indian schools, the Indian Rights Association, the officers and members of the Woman's National Association in behalf of the Indians, and the officers of the Missionary Boards of the churches, were well represented. Senator Dawes was also there, and the Hon. Erastus Brooks, of New York; Judge Jas. H. Campbell, of Philadelphia; President D. C. Gilman, of Johns Hopkins University; Mr. H. O. Houghton, of Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; Dr. H. O. Ladd, of Santa Fe, President of the University of New Mexico; Col. Kinney, of the Hartford Courant; Rev. Dr. Mabie, of the Christian Union; President Magill, of Swarthmore College, Penn.; Prof. Morgan, Principal of the State Normal School, Providence, R. I.; Hon. E. L. Pierce, of Milton, Mass.; Col. Elliot G. Shepard, of New York; and a large company of intelligent friends of the Indians. The gentlemen named and the others present were generally accompanied by their wives. It was not a company of sentimentalists, but of practical, successful men and women who, in various positions, have given full proof of their sagacity and executive talent. Those who have made the condition of the Indian the study of years, who have visited the Reservations, who have made themselves familiar with the legislation of Congress in relation to the red men and its results, who have carefully observed and examined the methods adopted for years past in the treatment of the tribes, and who are more competent than any other citizens of the United States to render an intelligent judgment, were present in force. The conditions were favorable to calm and dispassionate discussion. The genial and considerate hospitality of the Hon. A. K. Smiley and Mrs. Smiley, and of their associates in the management of the Mountain House, and the endeavors of all employed in the house to make the stay of Mr. Smiley's guests an agreeable and profitable one, promoted a most friendly interchange of opinions and a common desire to attain the best results. The members of the Conference were entertained at the expense of Mr. Smiley, were present by his invitation, and the generous spirit which prompted such rare hospitality and which ministered constantly to the comfort of the guests, was transmitted to the convention and its committees. Among the notable occurrences were the addresses of Miss Elaine Goodale in respect to the Sioux and the career of the graduates of Eastern Indian schools; of Mr. Herbert Welsh, of Philadelphia, upon the unhappy recent changes of agents, clerks, and other employes on the Reservations; the exceedingly earnest plea of Mrs. Hiles, of Milwaukee, in behalf of the oppressed Mission Indians of Southern California; the serious and impressive argument of Senator Dawes to engage promptly and with energy in an endeavor to make the Indian "a self-supporting citizen;" the paper of Prof. Painter on the Relation of our National Indian Policy to the Ends we Seek; Mrs. Quinton's clear, comprehensive and humorous recital of the achievements of the Woman's Association, and the witty, pathetic and instructive account by Miss Alice Robertson of her school in the Indian Territory, being herself the granddaughter of a noble Christian man who became a convict in order that he might instruct the Indians, and the daughter of parents who spent their lives in missionary service on a Reservation. The conclusions of the Conference, reached with almost absolute unanimity, were that the civil service rules should be applied to the selection of agents, clerks, etc.; that as rapidly as practicable the Indians should receive lands in severalty and be admitted to American citizenship; that the education of the Indian, intellectual, industrial and religious, should be carried forward with increased liberality and energy. Two sessions a day were held for three days, beginning on Wednesday morning.

The New Platform.

THE political creed announced, in connection with the nomination of Mr. George, by the wage-earners, must have been received with almost universal disappointment. The labor unions have been meeting regularly, have discussed, one would suppose, the grievances under which they work, and have reached conclusions as to what relief they desire, what method of improvement in their condition seems to them practicable and just. But we look in vain in the platform for any evidence of intelligent deliberation, leading to definite conclusions, worthy at least of the respect of their fellow-citizens. This same lack of statement of grievances and remedies has characterized the contentions of the wage-earners with employers throughout the year. Strikes occur, and the reasons for them are not obtained frequently until they are under full headway or on the decline. But among these many failures to make a definite outline of their hardships, it is difficult to find one as complete as is this new politico-industrial platform. The wage-earners and their associates ask only that the police shall not interfere with any meetings they may wish to hold, shall not sit as judges upon what they may say, also that public work shall not be performed under contracts, and that the taxes—on real estate, as we suppose,—shall be laid exclusively on the land and not at all on the improvements upon it.

The police are not to interfere with the public meetings held in the interest of labor. This can mean only one thing. Law abiding citizens do not complain of the action of the police. A section of the force is present at all public meetings, and no one complains that they prevent the freest discussion of political and social measures in which all citizens are, or ought to be, interested. Until recently even socialists and communists and anarchists have been free to say what they pleased. They have counselled incendiarism, violence, riot, wholesale and indiscriminate massacre of their fellow-men, and have been let alone, from the expectation that their harangues would serve as a safety valve and carry off the pressure of discontent and hostility to existing social relations. But this hope has proved vain. Exhortations to the destruction of life and property have been embodied in deeds, and the great body of citizens has resolved that men shall no longer be allowed to incite other men to burn the houses of their fellow citizens, and to maim and kill in blind fury the men and women who at the moment might be open to assault. And the people have decided that anarchical meetings, inciting men to such violence, shall be regarded as conspiracies against the common safety and welfare, shall be dispersed, and that the participants in them shall be arrested and tried as conspirators, incendiaries and murderers. This resolution will be adhered to by every man who values the life of himself or of any orderly and innocent member of society, or who values the right every man has to the undisturbed enjoyment of the fruits of his thought and work. It is strange, exceedingly strange, that any body of men can be found in this free land who will deliberately embody in a political platform a declaration that men shall be free to hold public meetings to stimulate the reckless and thoughtless and desperate to indiscriminate assaults on life and property.

The wage-earners ignore the great middle class, consisting of those who are neither rich nor poor, but who prize their homes, their families, their friends, the acquisitions of their intelligent industry, and will not tolerate those who would destroy both life and property in blind fury. This middle class includes the farmers, the large majority of professional men, the large majority of tradesmen and merchants, the great body of those who live upon fixed incomes, and constitutes a host it is folly to defy. If the condition of the wage-earner shall be improved, it will be through the sympathy and co-operation of the great middle class, which is one of the best results of a representative free government and a Christian civilization.

The wage-earners would have no public work performed under contract. If we understand their language, such work is to be done by the day. But the contract system has been adopted, because under the day's work system, the wage-earners were indolent and did not give a fair day's work for a fair day's wages. Workingmen are human. They have the infirmities and the vices common to humanity. To hire men by the day has been found to be the most expensive of all ways of getting work done. The contract system is a necessity, based on the general dishonesty and indolence of men. It is subject to abuses. They ought to be corrected. But to pay by the day and not by the piece is a custom to which intelligent men will return when the millennium shall be evidently drawing nigh.

The final distinctive proposition of this political declaration is the most absurd, preposterous and astonishing assertion in its department ever presented to the American people. All the tax—on real estate we suppose—is to be laid on the land, so that all land owners shall be compelled to put up buildings, and workingmen shall have cheaper homes. The first inevitable effect of such a regulation would be to double the taxes on the medium and lower grades of residence property, and workingmen would be compelled to pay a higher rent than at present. Such a tax would inure to the benefit of those who live in costly mansions. Are workingmen aware that the great bulk of State and local taxes are paid now by the land and the more valuable buildings? They ought to know that the men who are harping on every man's right to the land, and that the land ought to bear all the taxes are in nine cases out of ten, the nine cases including Mr. George, speaking from inexcusable ignorance.

There is nothing in this new political creed, which has attracted, and which its framers should have anticipated would attract, the attention of the whole country, which sheds a single ray of light upon the labor problems. There is nothing which describes a single grievance of labor or indicates a method by which it can be removed. This creed will not succeed in retaining the allegiance of sensible workingmen. They will in due time abandon an organization which so marvellously avoids the declaration of the needs and desires of the very persons it professes to serve. We have had hope that the conflict of the present year would result in definite statements, in due order, of the wants and wishes of the wage-earners. It seems impossible to get them.

"Old Colony" Papers.

Dr. John Maclean.*

A VENERABLE figure, and an embodiment of the Princeton of the past, has disappeared from our streets. One of the objects which most struck my attention on coming here was the erect though aged form of ex President Maclean, whom I met almost every day, walking with slow and dignified step and courteously touching his hat to me, though still a stranger to him. He presented rather an odd and decidedly unconventional appearance, his clothes being of a very old fashion, and wearing sometimes a shawl and a sort of dressing gown. But his whole bearing and manners were such that he might have worn almost anything, and every passer-by would have said, "There goes one of God's gentlemen." In fact he belonged not only to the "old school," but to an almost extinct species of gentlemen, perhaps too good for human nature's daily wont in this bristling or veneered nineteenth century.

Mr. Maclean was the one man from whom I did not wait to receive recognition on taking up my residence in Princeton. I felt that his years and peculiar position laid the obligation upon all new comers to be presented to him. In coming to Princeton, one came to John Maclean, in the same sense as they came to the town or the literary institutions. So I joined the continuous procession of visitors and graduates and neighbors, who for years have sought him in his retirement with their tribute of respect and affection. It was very pleasant to sit in his study, with his old books and mementoes about him, and to hear him tell of the times and the men of a past generation, and especially of the day of small things and of struggle and crisis in the history of the College, under whose shadow he was born and with which he had been connected for more than seventy years.

One year ago, at the closing exercises of the Theological Seminary, he addressed the graduating class in clear firm tones, though in his eighty-sixth year. He dealt mostly in personal reminiscences, and among other things announced himself as a pioneer among the now uncountable army of hot water drinkers. While a senior in college he cured himself of dyspepsia and nervousness by this course, and had never found the need of any other stimulating or soothing beverage. He attributed his health and longevity largely to this habit.

During the past year, however, it became evident that his system was beginning to yield before the assaults of time. His step was slower, his appearance in public more infrequent, and his memory at fault in conversation. The death of his brother, an eminent physician in his day in Princeton, greatly hastened the decline, and when he appeared at the Alumni meeting last June to take his final farewell of his beloved college, it was rather as a shade of the past than as one who represented the living present. Without designing it, that appearance was dramatic in its incidents and pathos. The whole company of four hundred rose to their feet as he entered. "No greater ovation was ever accorded in Princeton to any man, than was that day to Dr. John Maclean," says one who speaks with authority on all matters of Princetonian history. He was too feeble to respond in person, but the brief farewell words which he had prepared were read by one of the senior professors. He then withdrew, leaning on the arm of a friend, amid the silent and standing homage of the assembly. He continued to decline in strength, and in less than two months quietly passed away, without suffering, from simple exhaustion of vitality.

Dr. Maclean's ancestry is traced back to the founder of the Scottish clan of that name in the thirteenth century. His grandfather, a surgeon in the British army, was the third man to scale the Heights of Abraham in Wolfe's attack on Quebec. His father was the pioneer professor of chemistry in this country, and the instructor of the elder Silliman. His mother was a sister of Commodore Bainbridge. He was born with the nineteenth century, his birthday being March 3d, 1800. He was a native of Princeton, and was never out of the place for any length of time, except during a brief period of teaching at the Lawrenceville school five miles distant, and for a tour in Europe in 1850. He entered the Sophomore Class at thirteen, and graduated at sixteen. In the powerful College revival of 1815, he was brought into the discipleship of Christ, together with Charles Hodge, (Bishops) McIlvaine and Johns, and other afterwards distinguished men. He became tutor at eighteen years of age, and was professor successively of mathematics, natural philosophy, languages, ancient languages, and the Greek language and literature. He was librarian for twenty-six years, Vice President for twenty-five, and President for fourteen (1854-68).

Dr. Maclean's conduct of affairs lay through the most critical periods of the history of Princeton College, unless it be that of the American Revolution. There was a time during his vice-presidency, when the funds were at so low an ebb that there was hardly enough income to properly support a single professor, and there was serious thought of disbanding, as well as of a policy of retrenchment. But his hopeful energy and influence availed to not only go on, but to enlarge the scope of the college. The Faculty of two or three was increased by the accession of men like Albert Dod, John Torrey, Addison, and James W. and Stephen Alexander, and Joseph Henry. The means were obtained chiefly by the efforts of Maclean, though in a considerable part by the heroic self-sacrifice of himself and his associates in reducing themselves to almost impossible salaries.

During his presidency he increased the roll of students from 247 to 314, and the endowments from $50,000 to $500 000. This being the favorite college for southern students, the Civil War, of course, was a severe blow and depleted it of its chief source of supply. But four years after the close of the war he left it in a condition far in advance of its previous one, both in numbers and in resources. John C. Green had already begun his magnificent series of donations. Nassau Hall was rebuilt during this period. On his retirement, the trustees granted him a pension of $1 500 a year for life. It was richly deserved by one who had saved the very existence of the institution, had shaped its policy and laid the foundations of its subsequent remarkable development, and had in fact given himself unreservedly during a long life-time to its welfare.

The religious character and purpose of Princeton College was always uppermost in Dr. Maclean's mind. He took an active, personal part in the spiritual work, and was a genuine pastor of his young flock. One, who both as pupil and pastor had the best means of knowing, tells me that he has good reason to believe that Dr. Maclean made it his business to bring the subject of religion personally to every student. At the same time he was an exceptional disciplinarian, managing to retain the affections while he watched closely the conduct of the students. Though universally known as "Johnny," he was not to be trifled with, nor to be regarded with anything but profound respect.

His personal qualities are described by those who knew him best as energy and decision, practicalness and accuracy in all things, keen intuition of men and their motives, quick and tender sensibility to other people's feelings and circumstances, unbounded benevolence to the poor, open-handed hospitality and profound piety. He had no opportunity to become an expert scholar in any special branch, but was versed in all the branches of college instruction in his day and could temporarily supply the place of any professor. He was a firm unionist during the Rebellion, and was all his life an earnest advocate and practiser of total abstinence. His supreme greatness was that of goodness. Prof. Duffield said at his funeral, that "probably no man was loved by more people or more deeply than he was."

Dr. Maclean outlived all his associates of early life. He was, I believe, with one exception (Rev. John Rodney, since deceased) the oldest surviving graduate of the College, and the oldest alumnus of the Theological Seminary. Every previous officer and teacher of the College had died. He stood alone among us, full of years and of honors; and Princeton has lost one of its noblest landmarks, and the world one of its best and most useful men.

F. N. Zabriskie.

Princeton, N. J., October 5th, 1886.

* Dr. Maclean's death and funeral occurred during my absence on my summer vacation. As the college was not then in session, it was announced that a memorial service would be held at the opening of the term, and I have waited to prepare a sketch till that event should furnish a special renewal of interest in the subject. But as the service seems likely now to be postponed till the next Commencement, I hasten to tribute without further delay.

October Days.

UPON the hilltop's sharpened crest
I watch the listless creeping
Of elfin fingers that enshroud
Fair nature for her sleeping.

I see them turn, with daintier press,
The maple's golden yellow,
And subtly leave their blood-red kiss
On backgrounds faint and mellow.

O'er matted fields of stubble land
The purple mist-wreaths shiver,
And down, through ruddy sumach boughs
The softened sunbeams quiver.

The idle winds go idly by,
Among the branches sighing,
'Till wooed and won, on fickle hearts,
The fluttering leaves are lying.

And in the wood's deep silences
The nuts are thickly falling,
While faint and low a bird's sad note
Its wandering mate is calling.

Oh autumn days! oh golden prime!
Oh nature's pain-kissed sweetness!
Thy beauty waits the first king's power,
E're knows it earth's incompleteness!

Then hush, oh heart! Be still and learn,
The fuller sense of duty
Weaves round the barren rocks of life
God's own perfected beauty.

And ever lives this sculptured truth
Beside earth's incompleteness,
The royal peace of love and life
Is earned through sorrow's sweetness.

—Birch Arnold in The Interior.

The Early Days of the Church of Hudson, N. Y.

WE give a portion of the historical address read by Mr. Stephen B. Miller, Monday afternoon, September 27th, at the Semi-Centennial of the Reformed Church of Hudson, N. Y. The address possessed unusual interest recited many entertaining incidents, and was complete as an historical record.

In a day when centennial and bi-centennial anniversaries are being celebrated throughout the land, an institution or community coming before the public with its semi-centennial, may, perhaps, be regarded as only half grown. Yet, fifty years is a period long enough in which, not only to have made a history worthy of preservation, but long enough also to make difficult the search for those facts connected with it most worthy to be recounted, and to make it sadly apparent that by far the greater number of those who were factors in the work of organization are no longer numbered among the living.

I stand here to day almost the only link between that day of trembling hope which marked the birth of this church and this, the day of its glad fruition. One of two or three individuals who are now living, and are still connected with it, I participated, although but a mere lad, in all the scenes and events which clustered around its beginning, and as to my hands seems to have been committed the preservation of their record, as well as the subsequent years of its history, I could not well refuse to accept the task assigned me.

It is a simple sketch of plain facts I am about to give you, gathered with much care, and I may add with much pleasure, inasmuch as with the labor there has been the constant opening up of a store of pleasant recollections of men and things long since passed away, and the revival of memories obscured by shadows of the years gone by. At its beginning I must ask your generous indulgence if at times I seem to be personal. I must necessarily be so, that I may take you not only to the very starting point in its history, but through the period most interesting in the history of every organization, those early years of struggle and uncertainty which mould its character and shape its destiny.

Looking to a period fifty years forward, how distant it seems, how few, even of the youngest, dare even hope to reach it. Looking backward over a period of fifty years passed, how short seems the way over which we have journeyed, and how closely the events which have met us therein crowd our memories. To-day the scenes and events connected with the early years of the history of the church come back to me as vividly and real as if of recent occurrence.

I can never forget the impression I received when under peculiar circumstances I was permitted to enter its first service. I had never been within the walls of the Court House of that day where it was held, and the place with its plain, gloomy surroundings and appointments seemed to me one so peculiar in which to hold a religious service, that I was not only closely and curiously observant, but became at once an interested participant in all that took place then and thenceforth, and thus able to tell you much of what will follow in this sketch.

We have a two-fold object in our gathering as a church to-day. It is not only that we may be entertained by a recital of events which through many changeful years have led up to a degree of prosperity of which we may with reason be glad, but we come also to reverence and honor the memories of those whom we must ever regard as the fathers of this church.

Every institution should be made a monument to its founders, and ours is the happy privilege to day, gratefully to rear a memorial, although it may not be a material one, yet one that shall prove quite as enduring as marble upon the records of this church, to those faithful men and women who in its infancy nourished it by their gifts of time, energy, money and prayers, as in one sense the child of their own creation.

Some of them lived to see it grow into strength and vigor, yet not one of them lives to-day to share with us the joy which comes over the success which crowns this the opening year of the second half century of its existence.

The question has often been asked, why this church should have been almost the last to be established in a city founded in the midst of a population wholly of Hollandish descent, and surrounded by churches holding the faith of the Reformed Church of Holland, or as it was then more popularly known, of the Dutch Reformed Church. Rightly to get at the reason for this and to understand clearly the circumstances which called it into existence, we shall be compelled to glance briefly at a period half a century prior to its organization.

Of the association formed of citizens of Providence and Nantucket known as the "Proprietors," who in the month of July, 1783, purchased the tract of land which included the site of the city of Hudson, nearly all belonged to the Society of Friends. With the exception of a few families living in the little hamlet then known as Claverack landing, who were accustomed to worship at Loomenburg, now the upper part of the village of Athens, where a Lutheran Church had been established as early as 1704, all of the families within the limits of the tract purchased were connected with the Dutch Reformed Church at Claverack Village, established in 1726, and which is justly called the mother church, having given freely of her children to all of the churches which now surround her. It was then under the charge of Rev. John Gabriel Gebhard, whose field of labor was one of great extent. While it might have been convenient to many at this point to have had a church established in the new colony nearer to their homes, they were so devotedly attached to Dominie Gebhard, that it would have taken much to induce them to sever their connection with his church.

It was a time, too, when it was not considered a hardship to ride a long distance to attend public worship. Nor did there exist in any degree the missionary spirit which to-day leads each denomination to be watchful for a new field and all of them quick to enter it, however, small. The general use of the Holland language in their religious services, as well as in their homes, also made the founding of a church in the midst of an English speaking colony well nigh an impossibility.

Above all, the Dutch people did not like the new comers, and for a time held no communication with them. This aversion to them grew out of the fact that in most of their transactions with their neighbors from the Eastern States, they had not, as they claimed, been fairly dealt with. This feeling was general, and so deeply rooted in the Dutch mind that the dwellers at Albany refused to sell to the Proprietors, of whom we have spoken, a tract of land selected by them near that city, upon which to establish their enterprise, saying frankly to them that they did not wish them located in their vicinity, a fact which at once led to the purchase of Claverack Landing.

These considerations, their love for their church and domine, their lack of missionary zeal, the use of the Dutch language in their worship and the dislike for their new neighbors, led them into a feeling of contentment with their church relations and a willingness to leave to others the planting of new organizations, and they, I think, also furnish us a full explanation why this church is not to-day celebrating its centennial instead of its semi-centennial.

This leads us to answer another question, why this church entered the field fifty years later.

The first denomination to organize and erect an edifice in this city was that of the Friends, or Quakers, in the first year of its existence. They greatly overshadowed all others numerically as well as in social and business strength. Those here to-day who can recall the Hudson of even fifty years ago, will not fail to remember how their plain garbs thronged these streets, their plain speech was everywhere heard, and how many of its homes were filled with these benevolent, gentle-spirited and loving people. To-day scarce a single one is seen, and I think within the past year, the last one who fully adhered to their peculiarity of dress and speech passed away. I allude to one, Mrs. Diantha McCord, whose descendant, an earnest and active minister of the Gospel in our own denomination, Rev. John G. Gebhard, is with us to-day, one of numerous illustrations showing how happily and usefully at last the Dutch and Quaker elements were blended.

The entire disappearance of a sect so overwhelmingly strong from a city founded by it, is a singular feature of its church history. With the great influx of population which so rapidly followed the founding of the new colony there came other denominations, who were prompt to organize and prepare for the erection of comfortable places of worship.

. . . . . .

We pass to the year 1835. Hudson had then become a busy city of considerable population, extending its limits as far east as Seventh and Eighth streets, and the Presbyterian church had become strong and wealthy. The Hudson and Berkshire Railroad had been projected, the tendency of business was toward the upper portion of the city, and it was predicted that its future growth would be found in that direction.

There had been a growing desire for another church, and as the Presbyterian church was then regarded as very far down town, the need of an uptown church was widely and somewhat warmly discussed. A considerable number of families of Dutch antecedents, among them many of the prominent business men of that day, resided in the upper part of the city. These felt a very natural desire that the new church, if it were possible to establish it, should be of the order in which they had been reared, arguing with some force that its chance of success would be far greater as a Dutch Reformed than as a Second Presbyterian church, as the future increase of the population of the city would continue to be largely from the Dutch congregations surrounding it.

Rev. Richard Sluyter, of the Dutch Reformed Church of Claverack, took a deep interest in the movement and earnestly encouraged this view of it. Mr. Sluyter had been called to Claverack some years previous, as the colleague of Dominie Gebhard in his declining years, and was then in the full pastorate of the church. A large number of those interested in the new project had been connected with his church, some he had married, and the children of others had been baptized by him. With them there still existed strong ties of personal friendship and pastoral affection, and in their homes he was a frequent and welcome guest.

Mr. Sluyter was unceasing in his interest, his effort and his counsels, and through these, which were gratefully acknowledged by this church in its first report to Classis, more than through any other influence, was the decision at last reached that there should be planted in Hudson a Dutch Reformed Church.

. . . . . .

With all discussion ended, all obstacles removed, the time for action had come and the work of organization was immediately entered upon.

The first step in this was the holding of a meeting of the active friends of the project in the month of August, 1835, at the office of Joseph D. Monell, Esq., then standing upon the site of the present Universalist Church. There were present at that meeting Joseph D. Monell, Killien Miller, John Gaul, Stephen W. Miller, Abraham V. V. Elting, William E. Hermance and James E. Delamater. There may have been others there, but these names have alone been preserved as the recognized leaders in the movement and those who were looked to to bear the burden necessary successfully to carry it out.

Joseph D. Monell and Killian Miller, Esquires, were leading members of the bar of Columbia County, men of marked ability and great determination, the former living in the residence erected by him now occ pied by Benoni S. Johnson, the latter in the residence now occupied by Rev. Arthur G. Rogers. John Gaul was a merchant residing and doing business upon the corner of Sixth and Warren streets now occupied by Mr. Stephen W. Ham. Mr. Gaul was a gentleman of the old school, quiet and dignified in manner, but strong in his judgment. Stephen W. Miller was a merchant doing business and residing on Warren street, in the building now occupied by Mr. Wm. H. Crapser, a positive man, of strong character, whose whole heart was given to this work. William E. Hermance was a farmer of prominence residing in the present town of Greenport, at that time a portion of this city, a man of great energy and clear judgment. Abraham V. V. Elting was a merchant residing and doing business in Warren street between Sixth and Seventh streets, clear, calm and deliberative, whose opinion always carried with it weight. James E. Delamater was a carriage builder, doing an extensive business on the east side of Public Square. Mr. Delamater was a man of marked peculiarities, yet of much force of character. His love for display and his somewhat ostentatious style of living secured for him the title of "The Count," by which he was widely known, yet he was generally recognized as a public-spirited, liberal citizen. His residence was that now occupied by Mr. Robert Groat. Robert D. Van Deusen, who was the youngest of this number, was a merchant of the firm of Delamater (Claudius L.) and Van Deusen, doing business in the building now numbered as 338 Warren street. Mr. Van Deusen had not long been a resident here, but was a man cautious in counsel, quiet in manner, yet active and energetic in all matters of business.

All of them were known as up-town citizens, and will be remembered as men in every way fitted for the work upon which they had entered, with a full sense of the responsibility resting upon them and with an enthusiasm inspired by their love for the church of their fathers. With the exception of Mr. Elting, all of them were descendants of Claverack families and had passed their earlier years in the old church.

At the meeting referred to, they formulated an application representing about twenty families, for the establishment of a church to be known as the First Protestant Reformed Dutch Church of the city of Hudson, and resolved to present it at once through Rev. Richard Sluyter to the Classis of Rensselaer, with which the churches in Columbia county were then connected. This application was considered by the Classis and granted at a special session held in the village of Kinderhook on the 25th day of August, 1835, and a committee consisting of Rev. Andrew N. Kittle, of Stuyvesant, Rev. Peter S. Wynkoop, of Ghent, and Rev. Richard Sluyter, of Claverack, was appointed to organize the church and ordain the consistory. These duties they performed on Sunday, the 20th day of September following, the sermon on the occasion being preached by Rev. Peter S. Wynkoop.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

....A New Church Organized.—The committee appointed by the Classis of Bergen at its fall session, consisting of Revs. Peter Van Buskirk and Geo. Seibert, and the elder Isaac D. Bogert, met in West wood, Wednesday, Oct. 13th, and proceeded to organize a church, to be known as the Reformed Church of Westwood. Twenty-six adults presented their certificates, and one was received on confession. After the organization was effected the following persons were elected to the Consistory: Elders, Isaac D. Bogert and Richard Hopper; Deacons, G. H. Collognon and James G. Bogert. The organization starts with the determination to help itself, and has a very bright prospect before it. The town is growing rapidly, and the people in general take a great interest in the new enterprise. Geo. Seibert.

....Newark, N. J.—A lecture, entitled "Robert Burns," was delivered by the Rev. Thos. C. Easton, D D., before a large and appreciative audience in the First Church on Wednesday evening of last week, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. The lecturer, in treating of the genius and fame of Scotland's favorite son of song, traced the influence his verse has exerted to ennoble manhood in the obscure and lowly paths in life. The frailties of Burns and the moral obliquity of his life were alluded to in a vein of pathos, which, without any attempt at palliation, strove to excite a wholesome regret that such brilliancy of intellect should have so often fallen within the shadows which vice and low companionship cast over their victims.

A feature of the entertainment was the musical rendering of selections from some of the more popular lyrics of Burns by members of the choir.

....Bergen Point, N. J.—The new Sunday-school and lecture-room of the Reformed church was dedicated Thursday evening, Oct. 14th. The attendance was large, and the services were very interesting and appropriate. The music, led by Mr. Ellis, of Brooklyn, was of a high order. The building was erected under the auspices of an organization of the church, named "The Corallidaen Society." After the opening exercises, Mr. James Benny, in a brief and appropriate address, as representative of the society, presented the keys of the new building to Rev. J. F. Riggs, as the President of the Consistory, who in receiving them expressed gratitude to all who had contributed to the enterprise.

The principal address of the evening was by Rev. W. W. Knox, of Bayonne, who congratulated all present on the completion of the work, and spoke in a very happy vein of the patience shown and of the results achieved.

After the benediction the guests were invited to a reception, and refreshments were served by the young ladies. For more than an hour congratulations were passed to and fro with a hearty good will.

The new building extends across the back of the church, and is connected with it by doors leading into each aisle. It is 40x68 feet, and contains main room, infant and Bible class rooms, pastor's study and library.

....Hagaman's Mills, N. Y.—On the night of Sept. 30th an attempt was made to burn the church here. A heap of shavings had been placed near the pulpit, saturated with kerosene, and ignited with a lighted candle. The fire was discovered in time to save the church. A reward of $650 is offered for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the incendiary.

....Installation.—Rev. Curtis E. Long was installed pastor of the church at High Bridge, N. J., Thursday, Sept. 23d. Rev. P. M. Doolittle, of North Branch, presided and read the form. Rev. E. G. Read, of Somerville, preached the sermon from Ephesians 6: 19, 20. Rev. W. E. Davis, of Lebanon, delivered the charge (from the Liturgy) to the pastor and people. Rev. W. J. Henderson, of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, and Rev. J. A. B. Ogilvie, of the Synod of Ohio, took part in the devotional exercises.

Rev. Mr. Long has supplied the church for about a year very acceptably.

....South Branch, N. J.—The Sabbath-school of this church held their anniversary Saturday, Sept. 25th. It was largely attended. The superintendent's report was encouraging, especially in the gifts for missions. Last spring a class box system was introduced and the amount collected is threefold greater than by the old way. Addresses were made by Rev. F. M. Kip, Rev. P. M. Doolittle and Rev. E. F. See, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

....The Classis of Raritan met Oct. 12th in the Second Church of Somerville, N. J. There was a full attendance of members present. The following delegates were appointed to attend the Missionary Convention in Brooklyn, Oct. 26th and 27th: Revs. C. H. Pool, J. P. Searle, Wm. Davis, B. V. D. Wyckoff; and Elders John Voorhees, George V. Tunison and S. J. Shurts. Rev. C. H. Pool was appointed Agent for the Board of Foreign Missions, and Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff Agent for the Board of Domestic Missions, in the bounds of Classis.

The pastoral relation was dissolved by mutual request between Rev. George Scarlett and the Church of Peapack. And this brother with noble devotion has signified his willingness to take charge of the smaller and weaker Church of Pottersville, N. J., in the hope of saving it to the denomination. His resignation was universally regretted in Peapack. Classis meets on Oct. 18th to consider his call to Pottersville and to make arrangements for his installation.

Classis approved of the new forms recommended by General Synod, as optional Constitutional Forms. It also ordered the assessment for the entertainment of its delegates to General Synod to be paid, according to the plan recently proposed. S. C.

... The Classis of Passaic met at Pompton, N.J., Oct. 14th. Rev. J. A. Trimmer was received from the Presbytery of Newark.

The following were appointed as delegates to the Missionary Convention: Primarii, Revs. H. W. Teller and A. A. King; secundi, Revs. S. T. Searle and J. Lemoyne Danner.

Brother Trimmer was installed as pastor of the Church of Pompton at 7.30 P.M. Rev. A. A. King presided and read the form; Rev. J. Few Smith, D.D., of Newark, preached from John 20: 13, "Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him," the theme being, "The loss of religious faith and the mode of treating it;" Rev. H. W. Teller charged the pastor, and Rev. W. E. Bogardus the people. The sermon and charges were excellent, the music by the choir well rendered, the audience large, and the autumnal leaves tastefully arranged. The prospects are promising for a happy and successful pastorate.

We are pleased to notice in process of erection, between the parsonage and the church, an attractive and commodious lecture room, which will be completed and ready for use in a few weeks. S. C.

....The Classis of Newark met in regular session Oct. 12th in the North Church of Newark. All but two of the churches were represented. The German Church of Plainfield was encouraged to secure aid in erecting a new church building. Dr. Mandeville was present, and by invitation presented the claims of the Board of Education.

Attention was also given to the recent legislation of the General Synod as to the claims of the missionary work, the day of prayer for colleges, etc. The Rev. R. W. Brokaw was appointed as Missionary Agent, and the following were elected as delegates to the Missionary Conference to be held next week: Revs. Henry Vehslage, D.D., W. G. E. See and C. H. Jones; Elders C. C. Hine, J. H. Condit and Edwin Riker. Arrangements were also made for a series of church visitations during the coming winter, including one or more general meetings of the churches of Newark.

....The Classis of Ulster met in the Church of Blue Mountain Oct. 5th. All the churches were represented, excepting West Hurley, Stewartville and Shandaken. The retiring President, Rev. A. A. Zabriskie, preached an admirable sermon from 1 Timothy 1: 15.

Rev. W. Schmitz was received from the Classis of Raritan, and arrangements were made for his installation as pastor of the Church of Roxbury on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d; the pastoral relation between Rev. W. A. Wurts and the Church of Woodstock was dissolved, and Mr. Wurts, having accepted a call from the churches of Berne and Beaverdam, was dismissed to the Classis of Schoharie.

Rev. Messrs. D. Wortman, D.D., J. H. Van Doren and A. J. Sebring are the delegates to the Missionary Convention in Brooklyn, Oct. 26th and 27th.

In reference to the entertainment of delegates at the General Synod, the following was passed by Classis: Resolved, That this Classis sustain and adopt the recommendation presented by the Synod.

S. C.

Memorial Service.

A VERY interesting service in memory of the late Rev. A. Thompson was held in the Second Reformed Church of Pella, on Sabbath evening, Oct. 3d. The church was filled, some persons being obliged to return to their homes for want of seats.

The congregation being without a pastor, the service consisted of voluntary remarks by members of the church.

After an appropriate anthem by the choir, prayer by Rev. Wm. Moerdyk, pastor of the First Church, and the reading of Scripture by Elder Gesman, a biographical sketch of Rev. A. Thompson, the first pastor of this church, was given by Mr. John Nollen. Mr. J. D. Gaas, another member of the Second Church, said: "The influence of a good man cannot be fully estimated this side of the grave. Such was the influence of Rev. A. Thompson. He was a good man, desiring to be good and do good. Coupled with his love for the ministry, he possessed an amiable, pleasing and winning disposition, by which he exerted great influence for good, especially upon the young. So strong was his desire for the salvation of those under his charge, that if no opportunity presented itself to converse with them, he would plead with and exhort them by means of letters." Mr. Gaas stated that one of those letters was blessed of God to his conversion.

Elder C. Rhynsburger said that Mr. Thompson was induced to devote himself to the ministry while attending divine service in the Holland language at Holland, Mich., 1857. Not being able to understand a word of the sermon, his thoughts were directed to the large congregation and the grand opportunity for good afforded to a preacher of the Gospel. Then and there he decided by the grace of God that he, too, would devote his life to that blessed work. At one time while Mr. Rhynsburger was circulating a subscription list for the pastor's salary, a person said to him: "I am not a church member, never go to church; but the influence of such a man as Domine Thompson upon this community and upon my children is worth so much a year to me, which I will subscribe." Another non-church attendant said: "Domine Thompson is a minister in the pulpit, on the street, in the social circle, or wherever you meet him. I will help support him as long as he remains here." Elder Rhynsburger said that during the last summer, while attending a Sabbath-school Convention, some one was speaking on a certain subject, when another remarked: "Yes, that is just what Domine Thompson, of Pella, used to say nearly twenty years ago."

Surely blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, and their works do follow them.

The undersigned made use of the testimony given to urge young men to give themselves to the work of the ministry, and exhorted all Christians so to live that their death should be felt to be a loss, as was that of the lamented Abraham Thompson. Wm Moerdyk.

Pella, October 6th, 1886.

Rev. Dr. John Forsyth.

REV. JOHN FORSYTH, D D., LL.D., died last Sabbath evening, at his residence in Newburgh, N. Y., being in his seventy sixth year. By his thorough scholarship, the extent and variety of his knowledge, his settled religious convictions, his ability to give a reason for his faith, his genial disposition, his refined courtesy, his thorough Christian character, his devotion to the Lord's work, his constant generosity, his steadfast support of all the work of the Church—educational and missionary—by the respect, confidence and love which men of all denominations and all classes rendered him, he has long been one of the most useful, valuable and influential of the ministers of the Reformed Church. The loss of the Church by his death is incalculable.

Dr. Forsyth, until about twenty-five years ago, although intimately associated with the members and pastors of our Church in many things, was a minister of the Associate Reformed Church, and from 1837 to 1860, excepting a few years spent at Princeton as Professor of Latin, was a Professor in the Theological Seminary of that denomination at Newburgh. He graduated from Rutgers College in 1829, and afterward at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, where he also studied theology, while Dr. Chalmers was one of the instructors. After transferring his relations formally to the Reformed Church he was Professor of the English Language and Literature in Rutgers College. In 1871 he was appointed Chaplain and Professor of Moral Philosophy at West Point Military Academy, a position he held until by reason of age he was put upon the list of retired officers. For many years his pen was in constant service in the preparation of articles for various religious magazines and journals, and for the Princeton Review. A number of his sermons and addresses have been printed, and he edited a few books. But the results of his scholarship and the fruit of his ripe judgment are to be found chiefly in his contributions to periodicals and newspapers, and in more recent years in the translation and annotation of portions of Lange's Commentary. Dr. Forsyth was familiar with modern languages as well as a superior classical scholar.

He never grew old in spirit. His sympathies were with the life of the present. No man had a keener interest in the movements of men day by day, and no man had a more hearty fellow-feeling with every endeavor which promised to better men or society in any form, and this was the nature of his life to the hour when fatal illness seized upon him. His death was caused by pneumonia.

....The Pastors' Association met in the Synod Rooms, Monday morning, and listened to a very able and interesting paper by Rev. M. G. Hansen, on "The Slang of Protestant Theology," in which he described the religious animus of the historian, Froude, from whose writings the title of the essay was taken.

The Rev. Dr. C. S. Vedder, formerly a member of the Reformed Church, and now pastor of the Huguenot Church of Charleston, S. C., described the condition of the Huguenot Church owing to the recent earthquake. The Association resolved to aid Dr. Vedder in presenting the needs of his people before the Reformed Church. Next Monday morning Dr. Joseph S. Van Dyck will present a paper on "Scriptural Theology." All ministers of the Reformed Church are invited to attend. Meeting opens at 10 o'clock.

....The Sixth General Missionary Conference will be held in the Twelfth Street Reformed Church of Brooklyn, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 26th and 27th. The order of exercises will be substantially as follows: Tuesday, 10.30 A.M., a prayer-meeting lasting for one hour. Subject, "The Presence and Power of the Holy Spirit"; after which the organization of the Conference will be effected. At 2.30 P.M., an address of welcome by Rev. U. D. Gulick, pastor of the church, and response by the President of the Conference. A paper by the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions will then be read, to be followed by a paper from the Woman's Board. The Rev. E. G. Read, of Somerville, N. J., will make an address on "The Sunday-School and Missions," and the remainder of the session will be given to discussion, the speakers limited to ten minutes.

In the evening, at 7.30, after a Service of Song, Rev. E. J Booth will address the Conference, and be followed by Rev. Dr. Jacob Chamberlain.

The morning and afternoon of the second day will be devoted to Domestic Missions. Papers will be presented by Dr. West, the Corresponding Secretary, and by Mrs. E. B Horton on behalf of the Woman's Executive Committee. The Question Drawer will occupy forty-five minutes, and be followed by an address from the Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D.D., on "The Opportunity and Obligation of our Church."

In the afternoon, at 2 30, Dr. Wortman will present a paper on "The Immediate Evangelization of America," and Rev. Herman C. Berg on the question "How Best to Secure the Self-support of our Mission Churches." The Rev. W. W. Clark will also speak on "City Evangelization."

The evening session, at 7.30, will be occupied with reports of committees, discussion, and two addresses.

....The Japan Mission.—Rev. James. L. Amerman, D.D., writing from Tokyo, September 22d, makes the following report, relating chiefly to the health of the missionaries at that city and Yokohama:

"This mail leaves too soon to allow me to give you any certain account of the opening of our various school work. The prospect is that we shall have at least as many students in the Theological School as last year and that in the Union College and the Isaac Ferris Seminary the numbers will be larger. The latter, indeed, will be as full as permitted by the extent of accommodations, many applications for admission having been already declined for want of room. The opening of these two institutions has been delayed on account of the cholera, and the work in them is just beginning.

"I am sorry to have to write of sickness among the members of the mission. The cholera has had many victims both in this city and Yokohama, as well as in other parts of the country, but there have been few cases among the foreign population until recently. Within a few weeks there have been about twenty in all in the foreign concession in Tokyo, but no deaths among the missionaries; some of the cases, in fact most of them, have been light; but a few have been very serious, and among them Mrs. Amerman, who was at one time almost in a state of collapse. The Lord has been good to us and spared her life. She is now improving rapidly and is pronounced entirely out of danger. Miss H. L. Winn has also had a severe attack and suffered greatly, but in the Lord's mercy her life, too, has been spared to us. Mr. Ballagh has been very sick during the summer, but writes me that he has entirely recovered. He needs the visit to America for which we hope soon to hear that he has the Board's permission. In speaking of the health of the members of the mission, I must not omit to say that Dr. Verbeck was sick during a portion of the summer, but he is now well again. His daughter has had an attack of cholera, from which she is but just now recovered. Thankful for spared lives and the returning strength of the sick, and hoping that the Master may keep you all in health,

"I remain sincerely yours,

Jas. L. Amerman."

....Rotterdam, N. Y.—The First Reformed Church, of which Rev. J. C. Lowe is pastor, has undergone thorough repairs during the past summer. The interior of the church has been almost entirely reconstructed and remodeled. The side galleries have been removed and a new one constructed across the north end of the edifice, while the pulpit has been changed from the north to the south end, or to what was formerly the rear of the church. The ceilings and side walls of the church are finished in ash with cherry mouldings, forming handsome panels. The pews, the platform and desk, the communion table, stands and chairs are also all of ash and cherry. The pews are upholstered in crimson damask. Handsome stained glass windows have been substituted for the old plain glass ones, and the whole interior of the church now presents a most attractive appearance. The cost of the improvement was about $4,000.

On Thursday, September 30th, the church was re-dedicated with imposing ceremonies, Rev. Dr. W. H. Gleason, of Hudson, preaching a very forcible sermon in the morning to a large audience, and Rev. J. A. DeBaun, D.D, of Fonda, preaching in the evening to an audience equally as large. Both sermons were excellent and were listened to with deep interest. The following clergymen were present and participated in the services: Rev. P. E. Kipp, of Schenectady; F. V. Van Vranken, of Fultonville; J. R. Kyle, of Port Jackson; and A. J. Hegeman, of Hagaman's Mills.

To add interest to the occasion, Mrs. Eleanor Veeder, of Schenectady, presented to the congregation a beautiful and valuable communion service, in memory of her husband, the late Harmon Veeder.

....Scotia, N. Y.—The Ladies' Aid Society gave a sociable recently at the house of Mrs. Benjamin Crippen. The object of the entertainment was to raise money toward the purchasing of an organ for use at the prayer-meetings. The main event of the evening, however, was the presentation of an elegant silk quilt, of novel design and finish, to the wife of the pastor, Mrs. Robert Doig. The presentation was made by Chas. F. Sanders, Jr., in a neat and elegant speech, and a brief reply was given by the pastor.

Brother Doig has been made a life director of the American Bible Society, through the kind liberality of a former parishioner, Mrs. Dr. J. H. A. Graham, of Berne, N. Y.

....Wanted.—Minutes of the General Synod of the following sessions to complete a set for the archives of the Synod: Oct. and Nov., 1813; June, 1814, 1815, 1816, 1817; Sept., 1825; June, 1826, 1827, 1830. Will give in exchange other copies, or pay a fair price for them.

W. H. Ten Eyck.

New Brunswick, N. J.

....Western Items.—The Church of Alto, Wis., made vacant by the removal of Rev. J. F. Zwemer, to Alton, Iowa, has called Rev. J. W. Te Winkel, of East Williamson, N. Y....Rev. A. Westveer, of Berea, N. Y., upon invitation, will occupy for a few Sabbaths the pulpit of the Second Church of Pella, Iowa....Rev. J. W. Dunnewold, of Gibbsville, Wis., has received a call from the Church of Lansing, Ill ...The committee appointed by the Classis of Wisconsin to organize a church at Englewood, Ill., reported that they had organized a church at said place with thirty-three members. The report was accepted and the new church was recommended for aid to the Board of Domestic Missions....Rev. A. Zwemer, who has accepted the call of Free Grace Church in Sioux Co, Iowa, writes that for want of a parsonage he has to ride eight miles every Sunday to get to his church....In the Second Church of Pella, Iowa, on Sunday evening, Oct. 3d, suitable services were held in memory of the late Rev. A. Thompson. Addresses were made by Rev. W. Moerdyk, Messrs. J. Nollen, Sr., J. D. Gaas, C. Rhynsburger, A. F. Smith, and P. H. Bousquet. Appropriate resolutions were adopted and sent to the Intelligencer for publication.

....Personal.—The Rev. J. C. Van Deventer has accepted the call from the Church at Nyack, N. Y....Mr. George A. Sanford, of Newburgh, N. Y., for three years the efficient and successful Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of that city, has accepted a call to a like position in connection with the Y. M. C. A. of Washington, D.C., one of the most important Associations in the country. Mr. Sanford is a member of the Reformed Church of Newburgh, having been previously connected with the Reformed Church of Staten Island and the Reformed Church of Warwick, N. Y., with which last church he united by profession of faith in 1877. C.

The General Outlook.

....The first Provincial Council of the Romish Church which has been held in Scotland since the Reformation met recently in the Benedictine Monastery, Fort Augustus. A code of canons or rules for the better organization and government of their Church in Scotland has been adjusted.

....Judge Jones, of Minneapolis, has presented the Women's Christian Association of that city with a property worth $100,000, for the purpose of making a home for aged women, worn out ministers and their wives. The property consists of eighty acres, all wooded, on which there is a twelve-room cottage and a three-story building containing forty rooms.

....The Christian Advocate of Oct. 7th prints this letter:

Delaware, O., Sept. 7th, 1886.

My Dear Brother Buckley: I have noticed that you take an interest in old people. I have just returned from a visit to a man who was born three years before the Constitution of the United States was written. He entered his 103d year on the 24th of last month. He has several descendants of the fifth generation. He is intelligent, well up with the times, a fine, sprightly talker, easy and graceful in his manners, remarkably cheerful, while his whole being seems to be pervaded with a sweet Christian spirit. He attends church regularly, says he could walk the distance—a mile—without difficulty, but finds his knees getting a little weak, and that he cannot get into a carriage as easily as he once could. Reads his Bible without difficulty, but is troubled with the fine print of the newspapers. Shaves himself, and has not drawn a drop of blood upon his face for ten years. In his whole bearing there is a delightful charm. In conversation his countenance seems radiant with intelligence and good feeling. He indulges in nothing like religious cant, but the language of Canaan seems his mother tongue. Altogether, he is a remarkable man. Cheerful almost to gayety, he diffuses about him a sweet, heavenly aroma which refuses to be incorporated into words, but which is a refreshing tonic to breathe. Long an elder in the Presbyterian Church, of him it may well be said that he is "a living epistle."

The name of this venerable patriarch is Robert Cratty. He was born in Pennsylvania, but was brought to this State when a child. He lives fourteen miles from our city, on a fine farm which he has cultivated for sixty-six years. His age is not apocryphal. His presence and conversation was a felt benediction. When with him I thought of you, and wished you there. I am sure you would have enjoyed it as one of the red-letter hours of your life. If you live to be as old, may your spirit be as sweet and cheerful as his. Sincerely yours,

Frederick Merrick.

News of the Week.

Wednesday, Oct. 13.—It is given on good authority that the Government intends to divide Ireland into three national councils. Mr. Gladstone's condition is believed to be worse than is publicly admitted. ...."Sandwich" men have been arrested in Paris for displaying placards on which were caricatures of Prince Bismarck....It is stated in Paris that 700 Christians have been massacred in Tanhoa, Tonquin; also that thirty villages in that district have been burned and 9,000 inhabitants are starving. ....The war feeling in France is growing daily....Prince Waldemar is spoken of as the successor of Alexander ...Anarchist activity in the West is to be suppressed.... Ex-Alderman Sayles has fled to Canada and forfeited his bail. The bail of the other indicted aldermen has been raised to $40,000....The Chicago pork-packers are still on the strike....A very severe hurricane has swept over the Gulf States, causing a great deal of damage....The "Ottawa House," at Portland, Me., was totally destroyed by fire....A Philadelphia express train was wrecked at Plainfield, N. J. Only the fireman was injured ..The funerals of Senator Pike and ex-Senator Yulee took place yesterday....It is rumored that electric motors will soon replace the street cars in Third avenue, New York.

Thursday, 14.—The landlords of Ireland of the better class are opposed to extreme measures for honest tenants. They report themselves ready to make concessions.... The election in Bulgaria resulted in the return of 480 government candidates, with only 41 opposed. The Sobranje will be overwhelmingly anti Russian....Turkey, it is said, has rejected Russia's overture for joint action against Austria and England. ....M. de Lesseps will sail on Saturday for New York to take part in the dedication of the Bartholdi Statue....The steamer "Miranda" sailed from St. John's for New York with the "Anchoria" passengers.... Slight earthquakes were felt on Sunday and Monday in Germany....The new government in Spain is bitterly opposed for its action with the insurgents....At a meeting of the general managers and superintendents of railways in United States and Canada, uniform rules for the regulation of trains were adopted....All the aldermen who were indicted, except Miller, have renewed their bonds....Packers and strikers at Chicago are still obdurate....The Executive Committee of the National Association of Knit Goods have decided upon a lockout. ....Mr. Powderly has been reëlected General Master of the Knights of Labor.... Eight lives were lost at Sabine Pass, Texas, caused by a boat being upset.

Friday, 15.—A crisis has been reached in Bulgaria. General Kaulbars, the Russian Military Agent, has been ordered by his government to abandon his proposed journey to Roumelia. Diplomatists in Vienna believe that Russia has selected Prince Alexander, of Oldenburg, as her candidate for the Bulgarian throne....It is reported that ex President Gonzales, of Mexico, has been assassinated. Rumors are afloat that the Mexican Government is again struggling to suppress an insurrection movement ... Three companies, two American and one English, are contesting the contract to be awarded for the drainage of the Valley of Mexico. The contract involves the expenditure of $6,000,000....A steam barge, "Selah Chamberlain," sunk by a collision on Lake Michigan and five lives lost.... Sabine Pass and Johnson's Bayou overwhelmed by the Gulf and over 100 lives lost ...The entire town of Eastport, Me., is thought to be destroyed by fire, which still continues....Chief Justice Chase was interred with imposing ceremonies in Spring Grove Cemetery, Ohio....Vigorous opposition is being made to the steam company placing boiler houses on Fifth avenue, New York....The Indian Conference at Mohonk, N. Y., adopted resolutions for an honest Indian service

Saturday, 16.—War clouds still threatening in the East. The Russian Consulate has ordered the Montenegrins and Macedonians to put themselves at the disposal of General Kaulbars. Eleven Italian regiments have been armed with repeating rifles and prepared for war. A severe gale swept over the English coast, doing much damage on land and sea.

(Continued on page thirteen.)

Our Contributors.

A Sonnet.

The Artist and His Violin.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

HOW lovingly he hugs his violin;
A favorite and costly instrument,
Within whose walls the sweetest tones are blent.
It softly leans upon his cheek and chin.
Is there a living heart and spirit in
This miracle of strains, whose sounds have lent
Feeling to thought, and soul to sentiment,
And notes that chord with the heart-beats that win
The admiration of the minds that hear
Its stirring charms which please the happy ear?
A multitude of voices trained it seems,
Are here confined within the narrow space—
Soprano, alto, baritone and bass—
All softened like the music heard in dreams.

Aunt Margaret's Story.

BY KATE SUMNER GATES.

"I AM out of all manner of patience with Tom; there is no sense in his being so forgetful, and he grows worse and worse every day, I do believe," said Marion Evans, rattling the breakfast dishes with unnecessary vigor.

"What has he done amiss now?" asked Aunt Margaret.

"Why, I sent a note by him to Grace, asking her to go in town with me to-day. I told him over and over not to forget it, for I was very anxious to go to-day, and just before breakfast I happened to look in his coat pocket, and there was the note as nice as you please. Now, wasn't that provoking?"

"Rather, my dear, but perhaps there was some excuse for Tom; he may have had more than usual on his mind, and then since your plan has been frustrated, instead of fretting had you not better conclude that there was some reason why it was best that you should not go?"

"Oh, Aunt Margaret," asked Marion, half laughingly, "don't you ever get fretful and out of patience when you cannot do as you wish?"

"I used to, dear, just as you do, but something happened to me once that taught me a lesson."

"Do please tell me about it; perhaps it will teach me a lesson also."

"It was when I was just about your age," said Aunt Margaret, half sadly, "and a party of us young folks were going up the mountain for a day's picnicing and berrying if we chose. We made great plans for it, and expected to have a fine time. I remember I could not get to sleep for a long time the night before, I was so excited and full of joyous anticipation, but when I came downstairs in the morning I found mother sick in bed with one of her worst headaches. We did not keep any help in the house, and as there were four men to get dinner for, besides the children to look after, of course I would not think for a moment of leaving mother alone, but it seemed pretty hard to me that it should have happened so.

"I am afraid that I made everybody about me uncomfortable and unhappy. I know little Tom told me he wished that I had gone on the picnic and never come back unless I could be pleasanter, and even now I can remember just how sad mother looked when I went in with her tea at noon.

"'I am very, very sorry, Maggie,' she said, looking up at me with tears in her eyes.

"'I don't know as you are to blame,' I said shortly, but I am glad to remember that I did feel ashamed of myself, only I could not see why her head must have ached that particular day. Why wouldn't the day before or the day after done just as well?

"But at night when father came home from the post-office, I knew from the expression of his face that something had happened, he looked so sad, and so thankful, too.

"'What is it, father?' I asked anxiously.

"'Joe Willis' horse ran with him coming down the mountain, and they were all badly hurt; they are afraid that Ruth will not live until morning.'

"I cannot tell you anything how I felt, Marion. That was the very team I was expecting to go with, and Ruth had taken the place that I was to have had. If it had not been for poor mother's headache I might have been lying in Ruth's place at death's door, and I was not ready to die! God had mercifully and lovingly held me back, and I had been so impatient and fretful! I have never forgotten the lesson, and since then I dare not fret when my plans fail. I know who has care of me, and that He loves me, and will give me everything that is best for me.

"We know almost nothing of the dangers on all sides of us, or of the consequences of even our apparently most insignificant doings, how can we know what to do or where to go? We can only commit our ways to Him who knoweth all things, and ask to be kept and guided."

Marion's face was softer and gentler, and she went quietly about her work. It was a new thought to her. Was it possible that there was some reason for Tom's forgetting; could it be that this disappointment was one of the "all things" that should work together for her good?

"I cannot see how it can be, and I did want to go so much, but I can trust, and I will try to."

"Oh, Aunt Margaret, if there isn't Uncle Alfred coming up the walk, and he was so sure that it would not be possible for him to come to see us before they went West. Isn't it just splendid," exclaimed Marion, as she was setting the table for dinner.

"I had to come to D—— unexpectedly on business," explained Uncle Alfred, "and of course when I was as near as that I would come here, but I can only stay until the five o'clock train, and nobody knows when I will see you again."

Marion looked up quickly. "I see now," she said softly to her aunt, "and I will try to remember."

"Oh, auntie," she said again that night, with eyes overflowing with tears, "I would not have missed seeing Uncle Alfred for anything. I am thankful that I was kept at home. I will try never to fret again when I am disappointed in my plans, even though I cannot see the why and wherefore as plainly as I have this time."

Education and Religion in India.

BY REV. JOHN H. WYCKOFF.

EDUCATION in India is of two kinds: indigenous and foreign. By indigenous schools, we mean those established and conducted by natives of India on native methods. It is a mistake to suppose that before the advent of the English, education was wholly confined to the Brahmins. In 1835, before the English had done anything to extend primary education, there were estimated to be an average of two schools to every three villages in Bengal and Southern India. A Hindu village would hardly be considered complete without its school. True, these schools are small and the instruction in them lamentably defective, especially when judged by the European standard, but they supply the kind of education demanded by the community. A great many of the old-time schools still exist, and in many places are preferred by the inhabitants to the government schools.

The pupils are taught writing on palmyra leaves, and are especially drilled in mental arithmetic and the system of village accounts. Forms of notes, of bonds, of quittances, leases, and agreements, as well as forms of address, are taught by the teacher from memory. The scholars also learn to read, but imperfectly, using few printed books. Religious instruction forms an important part of the curriculum. The boys commit to memory portions of the Puranas, and are carefully taught religious observances and the rules of caste. The teacher is usually a man of low, moral character, who does not fail to leave his impress upon his pupils. He conducts the school with no order nor discipline, and the punishments inflicted are cruel and degrading, some of which will not bear recital.

These schools must be admitted to be a hindrance rather than a help to the spread of Christianity in India. Although a certain number of men in each village are found able to read, yet the systematic instruction in Hindu superstition that they have received has so warped their intellects and perverted their moral sense, that they are less susceptible to Gospel truth than the grossly ignorant.

Another form of indigenous education is that imparted in Sanscrit schools. These are under the charge of Pundits, and nearly all the pupils are Brahmins. There were 1,800 such schools in the province of Bengal alone, in 1835, attended by 10,500 scholars. The number has greatly declined since that date, though during the last few years the study of Sanscrit has revived—temporarily I think—chiefly through the extravagant praise of Sanscrit literature by European scholars. The studies pursued in Pundits' schools, include theology, philosophy, astrology, grammar, law and poetry. It is astonishing how many elaborate treatises exist in Sanscrit, on these different subjects.

The perseverance and unflagging zeal with which these Sanscrit students prosecute their studies is simply marvellous. Some of them commit to memory the whole of the Rig Veda, without understanding a single verse, occupying ten years in the task. Others give twelve years to the study of grammar alone. No reward nor prizes are offered to the students, and the only inducement to study is the prospective honor of being regarded as a learned man.

Men educated in Sanscrit schools seem further removed from the Gospel than any other class in India. Language cannot be found that will adequately describe the arrogance, narrow-mindedness, and utter self sufficiency of Brahmin Pundits. They believe there is no wisdom to be found outside of their own writings, and have the supremest contempt for European literature and civilization. Says Dr. Murray Mitchell: "Every trained Sanscrit scholar seems clad in a coat of mail, from which our sharpest and strongest arrows hopelessly recoil. The grace of God is omnipotent, but in nothing, perhaps, is that omnipotence more signally displayed than in the conversion of a thoroughly trained Pundit."

The other system of education pursued in India, we denominate foreign; by which we mean education imparted in schools conducted on European methods. It is to be regretted that the East India Company for so many years followed a timid and half-hearted policy in the matter of education and religion in India. Although higher institutions for Hindus and Mahommedans were established at the Presidency towns early in the century, the main object of the schools was to cultivate Sanscrit and Arabic. "The medium of instruction," says Macauley, "was oriental; the mode of instruction was oriental; the whole scope of instruction was oriental; designed to conciliate old prejudices and propagate old ideas." Alexander Duff was the chief means indirectly, of producing an important change in the system, by founding in 1830 an institution in which English was made the principal medium of instruction. Lord Macauley, who was in India at the time, warmly espoused Duff's scheme, and wrote a scathing minute in which he exposed the absurdity of teaching at public expense, "medical doctrines which would disgrace an English farrier; astronomy that would move laughter in girls at an English boarding-school; history abounding with kings 30 feet high and reigns 30,000 years long; and geography made up of seas of treacle and seas of butter."

Lord William Bentick, the Governor-General of India, soon adopted the same view, and issued an official order directing that in future all funds appropriated for education, should be used for the "promotion of European literature and science."

The growth of English education from that date has been very rapid. As the funds at the command of the company were limited, and as there was great need of educated natives to assist in administering the government, it was deemed wise at first to concentrate efforts upon higher education. By degrees, however, the education of the masses through the vernaculars received more and more attention, until now the whole country is covered with a net work of primary, middle and high schools, besides colleges in the large towns, and training schools for those who wish to study engineering, medicine, law and industries; and these are available for students on a scale of fees so low as to be almost nominal. This great scheme of work is supervised by ten directors of public instruction, by more than 450 inspectors, sub-inspectors and deputies; and by nearly 5,500 principals, professors, head-masters and trained teachers.

In 1860 the number of pupils under instruction was 306,506; in 1870 it had increased to 1,096,028; and in 1880 to 1,820,798, including 83 274 girls. This is only about one per cent of the population, but the number is fast increasing, many of the indigenous schools being every year incorporated into the government system. The net expenditure of the Government of India on education annually is £900,000 or nearly $4,500,000.

Schools on the European system are of two kinds: Government and Aided schools. The former are under the direct control of government. The latter are managed by private persons or bodies who receive pecuniary assistance in the form of grant—in—aid, on condition of submitting their schools to government inspection. Aided schools are nearly all comprised under two heads: schools founded and conducted by natives; and those under the control of missionaries. The natives have been slow in establishing schools of their own, preferring to let government and the missionaries do the work for them. Three years ago, however, the government decided to relax its efforts toward the higher education and give more attention to the instruction of the masses.

The effect has been to develope a spirit of self-help among the natives, who have since founded a considerable number of middle and high schools, which are destined to increase. The colleges, with one or two exceptions, are all yet under the control of either government or the missionaries.

Instruction in government schools is exclusively secular. The same may be said of the Hindu schools, though the question of imparting religious instruction in them is now exciting considerable attention. The effect of a purely secular education in a country like India may be readily imagined. It carries with it destruction, sure and certain, to Hindu faith. European science directly confutes the Hindu cosmogony. The ocean of ghee and curds; the serpent swallowing up the sun and moon; the virtue of the five products of the cow; and other Puranic fables, are dismissed by the young student as absurdities too great to be believed. He is thus landed into infidelity; and this is the state of the educated Hindu to-day.

But there is no reason for discouragement. The condition of the educated youth of India, sad as it is, has its ray of hope. The Hindus we believe to be too religious a people ever to become a nation of atheists. Already a reaction toward religion may be discerned in some quarters. "At present the work that is going on is that of sapping and mining, of boring holes into the foundations of Hinduism; and this is done as industriously and perhaps as effectively by government schools and colleges as by missions." As the breaking up of old faiths and customs preceded and hastened the triumph of Christianity in the Roman Empire; so will the present social and intellectual changes in India accelerate the downfall of Hinduism in order that there may be constructed upon its ruins the pure and living faith of Christ. Of the effects of missionary education, we propose to treat in another article.

Boundbrook, N. J.

A Difficulty and a Remedy.

DR. COLE'S strong article and impressive array of figures in regard to the actual growth of the Reformed Church, in the Intelligencer of September 29th, demand attention and serious thought. That the Church should annually suffer such heavy losses by the simple process of "revision," while such large additions to her membership are reported, is certainly a most serious matter. It surely could not have been intended or even anticipated when the Synod authorized the process by permitting the keeping of separate rolls of non-resident members. It is evident that if the privilege is continued, some safeguards should be thrown around it.

The question of how to deal with non-residents is a difficulty that presents itself to every pastor, especially to one coming newly to a church having a long roll of members, a good proportion of whom cannot be found—have passed not only beyond the bounds of the congregation, but beyond the knowledge of the consistory or any member of it. I have heard of a church in which the pastor was accustomed faithfully to add the name of every person admitted to membership, but never to erase a single one from the roll! When he resigned and a new pastor came, he found the roll cumbered with a host of names of persons who had vanished as completely out of sight and knowledge as though they had been dead. Nay, more completely. The fact of death within the bounds of the congregation might have been ascertained and so reported. Of these he could obtain no knowledge whatever. What should be done in such a case?

I once, some fifteen years or more ago, saw the Classis of which I am a member startled quite out of its propriety by a pastor pressed by this same difficulty. In presenting his statistical report on the state of religion in his church, he read among other items, "Suspended for absence, 501" As soon as the Classis could recover itself a halt was called, explanations asked and given, and the offensive item stricken out. Evidently, suspension will not do, but revision seems the only course possible or proper.

Is there any need for such a state of things as would make such wholesale revision necessary? None. No need and no excuse. Some absentees there will, perhaps, always be who cannot be discovered. But they would be comparatively few if Dr. Cole's suggestion should be adopted, and the elders made responsible for the correct keeping of the roll, and not the pastor. And they would be fewer still if some method could be adopted by which communication and correspondence could be maintained between the church and its absent members.

I came across a family this summer who had resided for a number of years in Grand Rapids. They had been members of a church in Boston (I think), and still retained their membership until about a year ago. And every year they received a letter conveying to them the Christian salutations of the church to which they belonged, and making inquiry as to their residence, their church fellowship, and such other matters as might serve to keep the church informed as to their state and whereabouts. To these letters they returned replies, and when at last they sought a letter to one of the Presbyterian churches of Grand Rapids they could properly ask and obtain it because the church had kept up its knowledge of them.

Now I make bold to think that if such a method could be introduced and prevail among us, such wholesale losses by revision would become a thing of the past. A family or member could be easily followed the first year and thereafter, who would be utterly lost to sight after a few years had elapsed without any such communication. If their absence proved permanent, they might be kindly urged to connect themselves with the church most acceptable to them in the place to which they had removed, and the way would thus be open for their proper and orderly dismission when they should desire it. If it were deemed desirable to have a form for such letters for general use, it should not be difficult to prepare one to be printed with the other forms provided for use in other cases.

H. N. C.

Boston Letter.

October 7th, 1886.

SINGING in the Congregational House, singing Monday morning too, and as I caught recently this sound—a chorus of female voices—I knew what it meant. In the office of the City Missionary Society, the customary Monday morning meeting was in progress. The missionaries come from all parts of the city, and here in this circle of prayer find a sympathetic fellowship, and also enthusiastic impulses sending them out to the week's service for Christ. What a fountain-head of power that plainly-furnished room of the City Missionary Society is! Its work, urged by that big driving wheel, Rev. D. W. Waldron, is felt all over the city, in alleys of poverty, neglected sick-rooms, hospitals and asylums.

It is not alone the City Missionary room though that the Congregational House holds. What a great mass of ecclesiastical wheels, felt, as they turn, all over the country, is this sturdy house of stone on Beacon street. As you climb the stairs leading to the second floor, on the right are the headquarters of that splendid agency, the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. Ahead is the doorway of that unique annex, the Congregational Library. Coming back to the main building, we find the head quarters of the American Missionary Association, College and Education Society, American Board, Home Missionary Society, Sunday-School and Publishing Society, and let not that vigorous, well furnished organ, The Congregationalist, be forgotten. The roof of this house of stone covers a vast amount of brain-work done each day for the denomination. Here is the hub of the wheel sending out spokes of effort all over the country.

Just now the feeling is that the "hub" is at Des Moines. The meetings of the American Board are attracting unusual attention on account of the prominence given to the subject of retribution in its relation to mission effort. Only a person living in New England can appreciate New England's interest in this question. The report of the meetings lightning-winged over the wires, has found avaricious readers in the large cities, but the appetite for news is not limited to the cities. We have many little nooks in New England to which the "Boston papers" come once a day, and that reception, perhaps, is at night. I recall one little country town in Maine where my home was, one winter, years ago. About seven o'clock at night the old stage would rattle and bump over the bridge spanning the blue river forever murmuring past the village. That stage would bring the "Boston papers," and we starved until that time. Many are the corners waiting anxiously through the day at the present time, longing to know what at night the news will be from the "American Board." Then the tidings will be taken to stores, sewing-circles, kitchens, and "Jonathan," straining his sight, will read to an interested group the latest telegrams from Des Moines.

Will the Board send Robert Hume, the Andover-tinged missionary, back to India? Will Prof. Smyth, the Andover leader, be re-elected to the Prudential Committee? Will new missionaries be sent out whose views concerning retribution may be classed as speculative? This waiting for news reminds you of the days when the exciting war bulletins flashed northward, and of the political campaigns, when, with a finger on her lips and an ear strained westward, New England waited to hear how "Ohio" had gone in October. I can see how dependent the action of the Board will be on the votes of an element not in sympathy with new departures, and yet anxious somehow to hold the denomination together, to keep the united missionary work moving forward, and who are willing to make a place for the men leaning Andover-ward. Undoubtedly, the new Congregational creed felt the shaping influence of this element, and thus far it has had a strong voice, while not in haste to raise it, in deciding denominational movements generally. A conservative utterance with a pacific application of it may be expected from Des Moines, if this element should dominate opinion inside the American Board meetings.

One by one the religious activities of the city that may have been taking a vacation during the heated term are starting up again. Dr. Meredith's big Bible-class in Tremont Temple, on Saturday afternoons, has gathered once more. Special efforts in the churches are in order for discussion, and Sam Jones' coming is anticipated during the winter. The Congregational ministers decided not to act in the matter of a union effort, and the Baptists have now declined. The Methodist pastors, therefore, will alone co-operate. The action of the Congregationalists was wise for the Congregationalists, and that of the Baptists for their denomination. And yet Sam Jones' methods will suit certain tastes and temperaments, and like the rough charges of the Salvation Army, Sam Jones' assaults on sin will carry certain rough strongholds. It takes all styles to meet all styles; but those accustomed to the calmer and cooler ways of New England will not probably find Sam Jones their helpful pattern.

While Dr. Withrow, of the Park Street Church, is at Des Moines giving the sermon at the opening of the Board meetings, his predecessor has been advertising himself as "Adirondack Murray" at Tremont Temple. The case of W. H. H. Murray has always interested me intensely. He has unusual gifts as a writer. Years ago, I saw an article in the Atlantic Monthly, entitled "Ride With a Mad Horse in a Freight car." I did not know who the writer was, but I saw that he could tell a horse when he met it and describe that animal with rare felicity. All the exciting possibilities of such a ride as the above, the writer depicted with the skill of a master. Afterwards, I found out that this master-pen was owned by the pastor of the Park Street Church. I watched with interest Murray's career, observing what a splendid fight he made for temperance, charging on the enemy with a penholder that few men could offset, though they might brandish the toughest battle-axe. Then came his varied experience in Boston, his attempt to gather and foster an independent congregation (large audiences he did rally in Music Hall), and then his pretentious blowing of trumpets gathering common folks and governors within the scope of his suggestions for the forming of a metropolitan church. Those echoes died away. He disappeared, turning up more recently in Montreal, there figuring as a restaurant-keeper, and now he stands on the platform of Tremont Temple to give a series of four Adirondack entertainments. He last night read his story, "How John Norton, the Trapper, kept His Christmas." In writing this, he is reported as saying, "I had no moral purpose, I have done trying to reform the world." There are people who would like to see this man of splendid capabilities freeing himself from every hindering obstacle and rising to the level of a new activity. I am not blind to his mistakes; I would like to see him coming up to the height of the possibilities within him.

We have our fancies up this way, and at present New England is in a mood for "autumn excursions." The mountain forests have wrapped themselves in rainbows, and are winning just applause. The "Notch" at the White Mountains is a brilliant magnet now-a-days. It is a short-lived splendor. Winter is not far away from the mountain-tops, and then it will daily steal lower and lower down the rocky slopes, whitening the cliffs, powdering the Alpine growth, reaching at last the forests, and, filling the drive-way through the Notch, will get it in readiness for a Thanksgiving sleigh-ride.

Neponset.

....One hundred and nineteen persons were received into the Central Methodist Church, Wilkesbarre, Pa., September 19th.

....Mr. Spurgeon has admitted ten thousand persons into church membership in connection with his ministry in the Metropolitan Tabernacle and its missions.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE FOURTH GOSPEL. The Question of Its Origin Stated and Discussed.” By James F. Clarke. This neat little volume furnishes a very complete account of the controversy on the important theme which it treats. It is especially to be recommended for popular use, because it is as readable as it is conclusive. Dr. Clarke has done well in giving it to the public. (George H. Ellis.)

....“STUDY OF THE ENGLISH CLASSICS.” A Practical Handbook for Teachers. By A. F. Blaisedell, A.M. As this work has reached a fourth edition, there is no room for doubt that it has filled an existing vacuum in our educational apparatus. Nor is there need of extended remark on its merits. It is thoroughly sensible and practical, and may well be commended not only to teachers, but to all who desire to become familiar with the chief ornaments of a literature which has no superior in any modern tongue. The book, as being the result of long experience in teaching, has a higher claim than any mere tentative effort in so important a field. And it is to be hoped that its existence will lead to a more general attention to this part of a liberal education than has usually been given. (Lee & Shepard.)

....The “Garnet Series” of The Chautauqua Library has been enriched by “READINGS FROM MILTON,” comprising copious selections from the “Paradise Lost,” the best of Milton’s odes, and several of his sonnets. Bishop Warren furnishes an explanatory Introduction, and there is a brief Life of the Poet, and an occasional note. The selections are well made, and the volume a neat one. (Chautauqua Press, Boston.)

....Wm Sloane Kennedy has done a timely thing in making up an “ANTHOLOGY” of John Ruskin’s sayings on the various branches of “SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY.” The book is blazing with the mingled wisdom and folly, humanity and savagery of Ruskin, and is exceedingly entertaining, and not uninstructive reading. He has shown himself the self-sacrificing and untiring friend of the poorer classes and the laborer, and deserves a careful and candid hearing. The little volume is attractively gotten up. (John B. Alden.)

....“LIFE OF SCHUYLER COLFAX.” By O. J. Hollister. Born in this city in 1823, Schuyler Colfax attained to full manhood about the time that the Republican party was organized, and with that party he cast his fortunes. So close and prominent was his connection with it from the time of its formation on through the eventful years that followed, that we are not surprised to find this book dealing almost wholly with his political career. His sterling personal qualities were plainly mirrored in his political acts, which the author has admirably grouped in these pages. A more liberal compilation of extracts from the letters and speeches of Mr. Colfax would have added still deeper interest to his biography, and gratified his friends. However, Mr. Hollister has performed his work so well, that, of this class of books, few have come to our hands more interesting. It is the record of the life of a remarkable man. His educational advantages were limited, and he rose to national prominence and influence by the assiduous cultivation and dilligent use of good native gifts. He developed an early passion for politics, and to him journalism had great fascination. While yet a minor he wrote, chiefly on political topics, for the New York Tribune and other papers, his letters being highly prized by Horace Greeley. When twenty-one years of age he began the publication of a paper of his own at South Bend, Ind., which became a recognized force in politics.

He was elected to Congress in the first campaign of the Republican party in 1854, and by repeated re-elections was a member of seven successive Congresses, and was Speaker of the 38th, 39th and 40th, when he was promoted to the Vice-Presidency. He ranked among the most prominent and popular men in the country during the most exciting and eventful period of our national history. He was well-informed, clear headed, courteous, self-possessed and patient; in all circumstances bearing himself as a Christian gentleman.

It was a matter of deep regret to his many friends that Mr. Colfax was constrained to retire to private life under a cloud. Mr. Hollister, in the closing pages of this interesting biography, exonerates him from all blame in his connection with the Credit Mobilier transaction. Whatever might be the judgment of others as to his guilt or innocence in relation to the unhappy affair, there can be no doubt that at the bar of his own judgment he enjoyed the comfort of complete vindication. For proof of this we need only to quote from a letter found in his travelling-bag, where he had carried it for nine years, to be delivered in case of his sudden death, addressed to “Mrs. Colfax. For her and Schuy.” It rehearsed the story of his connection with the Credit Mobilier enterprise, and closed as follows: “When our little boy is old enough to understand all this, if he knows anything then of the base and wicked calumnies to which his father was subjected by enemies and ingrates, he will realize what a faithful and honest public servant received for twenty years of the prime of his life given to the service of his country. And all that sustained me in that wild storm of calumny that raged about me was the knowledge that God at the last day would make my honesty and truthfulness known of all men, and that my dear wife knew it, and confided to the uttermost in her loving and devoted husband, Schuyler Colfax.”

The book is appropriately bound in cloth, and has as a frontispiece a faithful portrait of Schuyler Colfax, and in the volume are pictures of the house in this city in which he was born, and of his residence at South Bend, Ind. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

....“ACTORS AND ACTRESSES OF GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.” Edited by Brander Matthews and Laurence Hutton. This third volume of theatrical biography takes up names well known to many living, such as the elder Wallack, Payne, Burton, Fanny Kemble, and John Brougham. There are some fifteen of these celebrities in the book. The sketch is given of each life, and then follow critical estimates and descriptions by contemporaries. The work is done in excellent style, and for those who love the form of amusement and recreation which the stage presents, the series will be invaluable as preserving the memory and discriminating the talents of the different leaders in the mimic art. (Cassell & Co.)

....“THE NEW MAN AT ROSSMERE,” by Mrs. J. H. Walworth, fully sustains the reputation won by Mrs. Walworth in “The Bar Sinister” and her other works. In our judgment it is one of the best novels of the season. The scene is laid in that part of Arkansas subject to the overflow of the Mississippi; the time a few years after the Civil War, and before the whites and the blacks had fully adjusted themselves to the new order of things; the dramatis personæ, the planters of the vicinity and their families, a couple of carpet baggers, holding fat offices and manipulating the negroes, and Major Denny, formerly a New York lawyer, and his wayward brother Manton. Both of the latter had been in the Union army, and the Major, after nobly impoverishing himself to shield his brother from merited punishment, had gathered together the remnant of his fortune and invested it in a cotton plantation, which he personally superintended. It will be seen that all the elements which went to make up the reconstruction problem are here, and Mrs. Walworth has used them with a master hand. By a few rapid and skilful strokes she sketches a picture and draws characters quite as vivid and real as those presented by the more elaborate descriptions of Miss Murfree in the “Prophet of the Smoky Mountains.” Each character is firmly drawn and well sustained throughout, and the result is the naturalness of reality. Indeed, Mrs. Walworth says that she has only portrayed incidents of actual occurrence, painted with their genuine surroundings, and that the seemingly improbable events in the story are the ones described most literally as they occurred. If she has only grouped together real incidents, she has done this with marvellous skill; but if she has invented the incidents, as well as the plot, she has done this with the art which makes them seem natural. One cannot read the book without a better knowledge of the difficulties of reconstruction and a higher appreciation of those who have met and are striving to overcome those difficulties. The views expressed are moderate and rational, and we have nowhere seen a better statement of the case as it really existed after the war in the agricultural portions of the South. One does not like to lay down the story until it is finished, and yet should not read it hurriedly, or he will lose some of the finer touches. (Cassell & Co.)

....“ST. JOHN’S EVE, AND OTHER STORIES,” by Nikolai V. Gogol, is the title of the second volume in a series of Gogol’s Works now issuing from the press. We confess ourselves at a loss to discover the special charm which warrants publishers drawing so largely from Russian literature, especially as nearly all have to come to us with their originality of style entirely lost, in being translations of translations. The volume before us is full of the extravagantly marvellous, and though graphic in description and possibly true to Russian life and habits of thought and belief, will, we think, fail to enlist and hold the interest of the American reader. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“FROM MORN TILL EVE.” A very tastefully illuminated text-book. Each day in the month has an illuminated text of Scripture, and, on the opposite page, appropriate verses by Cecilia Havergal, founded upon the text. The covers in gilt bronze are also illuminated, and the whole forms a very pretty little gift book. (Thomas Whittaker.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....Wide Awake for October contains a long and interesting article on “Bridges,” by Rossiter Johnson. It has also a paper by Miss Harris, entitled “H. H. and others.” “A Tiny Tale of Travel,” by Celia Thaxter, and “The Gypsy Monkey,” by Sophy May, are, of course, good reading. Each number of Wide Awake is a special delight.

....St. Nicholas completes its thirteenth volume with the October number. The serials, by Frances Hodgson Burnett, Horace E. Scudder and others, which have proved to be of a high order of excellence, are now brought to a close. “Some Curious Mariners,” by C. F. Holder; “The Children’s Exhibition,” by Charles Barnard; and “About Breathing,” by Helen Clark Swazey, repay careful attention. Among the attractions promised for next year are: “War Stories for Boys and Girls,” by General Adam Badeau; Stories and Sketches by Frank R. Stockton; New Short Stories by Louisa M. Alcott; and “Jenny’s Boarding House,” a serial, by James Otis.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Leach, Shewell & Sanborn: Good Reading for School and Home. Original and Selected Articles for Supplementary Reading. 12mo, pp. 300. 60 cents.

G. P. Putnam’s Sons: Humorous Masterpieces from American Literature. Edited by Edward T. Mason. 3 vols. Square 16mo, pp. 237, 294, 309. Price per set, $3.75; also,

The Pearl Series. 6 vols. I. Reflection. II. Fancy. III. Wit and Humor. IV. Love. V. The Poet’s Garden. VI. Faith, Hope and Charity. 32mo. Price per set, $3.

Daniel Miller, Reading, Penn.: The Gospel Call and Other Sermons. By Rev. John K. Millett. 12mo, pp. 366. $1.50.

Lee & Shepard, Boston; Charles T. Dillingham, New York: Dora. By Alfred Tennyson. Illustrated. Square 12mo, pp. 31. $1.50; also,

The Family. An Historical and Social Study. By Charles Franklin Thwing and Carrie F. Butler Thwing. 8vo, pp. 208. $2; also,

A Boston Girl’s Ambitions. By Virginia F. Townsend. 12mo, pp. 295. $1.50.

American Tract Society: Foxwood Boys at School. By Elizabeth P. Allan. 12mo, pp. 267. $1.

White, Stokes & Allen: Old Boniface. A Novel. By George H. Picard. 12mo, pp. 279. $1.50; also,

The Book of Entrées. By Thomas J. Murrey. 16mo, pp. 83. Board, 50 cents.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: Watch and Ward. By Henry James, Jr. (Riverside Pocket Series.) 16mo, pp. 219. 50 cents; also,

In the Wilderness. By Charles Dudley Warner. (Same Series.) 16mo, pp. 226. 50 cents; also,

Orient. With Preludes on Current Events. By Joseph Cook. (Boston Monday Lectures.) 12mo, pp. 340. $1 50; also,

Holy-Tides: Seven Songs of Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, Easter, Whitsun, Trinity. 16mo. 75 cents.

Jacob Smedley, Philadelphia: Golden Gleanings. A Select Miscellany. Compiled by David Heston. Large 8vo, pp. 350. Extra cloth, $1.75. Gilt edges, $2.

Dodd, Mead & Co.: The Children of the Week. By William Theodore Peters. Illustrated by Clinton Peters. Quarto, pp. 161. $2 50; also,

Blue Jackets of ’61. A History of the Navy in the War of Secession. By Willis J. Abbot. With illustrations principally by W. C. Jackson. Quarto, pp. 318. $3.

Charles Scribner’s Sons: The Huguenots and Henry of Navarre. By Henry M. Baird. With Maps. Two Volumes. 8vo, pp. 458 and 535. $5; also,

Children’s Stories of American Progress. By Henrietta Christian Wright. Illustrated by J. Steeple Davis. 12mo, pp. 333. $1.50.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates. The False and the True Spiritualism. By the Rev. John Chester, D.D. 12mo, pp. 320. $1.15; also,

The Chester Coterie. By Kate Livingston Hamilton. 12mo, pp. 236. $1.

Cassell & Co.: Electricity in the Service of Man: A Popular and Practical Treatise on the Applications of Electricity in Modern Life. From the German of Dr. Alfred Ritter Von Urbanitzky. Edited, with copious additions, by R. Wormell, D. Sc., M.A. With an Introduction by John Perry, M.E., F.R.S. With nearly 850 illustrations. 8vo, pp. 859. $6.

S. C. Griggs & Co.: Complete Poetical Works of Benjamin F. Taylor. 12mo, pp. 355. $1.75.

T. Y. Crowell & Co.: The Christmas Country and Other Tales. By Mary J. Safford. 12mo, pp. 285. $1.50.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

The Touchstone of Peril. A Novel of Anglo-Indian Life. With Scenes During the Mutiny. By R. E. Forrest. (No. 547, Harper’s Franklin Square Library.) 4to, pp. 70. 20 cents; also, Joan Wentworth. A Novel. By Katharine S. Macquoid. (No. 98, Harper’s Handy Series.) 16mo, pp. 219. 25 cents.

Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners. By John Bunyan. (Cassell’s National Library, No. 88.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

PERIODICALS.

October.—The Baptist Quarterly Review, The Targum, The Musical Herald, American Art.

November.—The Quiver, Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Family Magazine, The Magazine of Art, The Atlantic Monthly, Cassell’s Family Magazine.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

SOLAR HEAT, GRAVITATION AND SUN SPOTS.

By J. H. KEDZIE. 12mo, cloth, with 23 fine illustrations, $1 50.

"It can be marked as one of, if not the most important scientific production of the year."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Closely connected and ably presented, in a style so brilliant and fascinating that the book will have a lively interest for every intelligent reader."—Boston Home Journal.

KANT'S ETHICS.

A Critical Exposition by ex-President NOAH PORTER, D.D., LL.D., of Yale College. Price, $1.25.

Being the Fifth Volume in the series of

GRIGGS' PHILOSOPHICAL CLASSICS.

"It is an able, scholarly volume, and will richly repay the student for the time devoted to it."—Christian at Work, New York.

"Perhaps the most systematic criticism of the 'Ethics' in the English language."—Allgemeine Zeitung, Munich.

PRECEDING VOLUMES OF THE SERIES:

KANT'S CRITIQUE OF PURE REASON. By Prof. G. S. Morris, Ph.D., of the University of Michigan. $1.25.

"We have seldom seen within the limits of so few pages any exposition of Kant's philosophy that as thoroughly and understandingly covers the subject."—Boston Post.

SCHELLING'S TRANSCENDENTAL IDEALISM. By Prof. John Watson, LL.D., of Queen's University. $1.25.

FICHTE'S SCIENCE OF KNOWLEDGE. By Prof. C. C. Everett, D.D , of Harvard University. $1.25.

HEGEL'S ÆSTHETICS. By Prof. J. S. Kedney, S.T.D., of Seabury Divinity School. $1.25.

"The publication of these handbooks marks an epoch in the history of philosophical studies in this country, and should be encouraged."—Boston Advertiser.

OTHER VOLUMES IN PREPARATION.

All the above books are bound in uniform style, 16mo, cloth. Price, $1.25 per volume, or $6.25 for the set of five volumes, put up in a neat pasteboard box.

GEOLOGICAL STUDIES:

Or, The Elements of Geology, for High Schools, Colleges, Normal and Other Schools.

By ALEXANDER WINCHELL, LL.D.,
Professor of Geology and Palæontology, University of Michigan.

540 pages, 367 fine illustrations, $3.00.

"In style the work is fascinating alike to the literary critic and the student. Its method is progressive, never taxing the imagination severely, and yet always stimulating it, always advancing to a new height, suggesting a broader horizon. In material it is complete; in suggestions for field study it is clear and definitely helpful; in outlining original class exercises it is unique; in illustrations no expense or effort has been spared; in tables and grouping of valuable facts it is complete. In lithological geology it simplifies the essential scientific facts. In structural geology it unfolds the accidents, conditions and classification graphically. In dynamical geology the agencies at work through the ages are emphasized in a manner to awaken admiration for the power behind the geological throne. In formational geology is given what might almost be styled the practical ethics of the science. In historical geology the author takes the student upon the heights of the science, and covers the entire field under the inspiration of the dawn and midday glory of the latest scientific day. The home, the school, the library, and the church, the student, the teacher, the writer, are alike indebted to the author, who will win international fame through this work."—New England Journal of Education, Boston.

Dr. Winchell's Other Works:

PRE-ADAMITES; or, A DEMONSTRATION OF the Existence of Men Before Adam. With Charts and Illustrations. Fourth Edition. 8vo, 500 pages, $3.50.

WORLD LIFE. A study of the formation, growth, and decay of worlds, from their earliest existence as nebulous masses diffused through space to their development into sun and world systems, and their final dissolution. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth. Second Edition. $ .50.

SPARKS FROM A GEOLOGIST'S HAMMER. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $2.00.

GEOLOGICAL EXCURSIONS; or, THE RUDIments of Geology for Young Learners. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"A child may understand it, and yet a cultivated man will devour it. It is filled with illustrations very wisely conceived, and is more delightful and will prove more beneficial than the best novel."—Chicago Evening Journal.

For sale by Baker & Taylor, 9 Bond street, New York, and by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by the publishers,

S. C. GRIGGS & CO.,

87 & 89 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

"OUR BABY'S First and Second Year."

By MARION HARLAND,

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,

REED & CARNRICK,
MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING,
New York.

Unique and Tasteful Designs

IN THOROUGHLY WELL MADE

FURNITURE

AT

Moderate Prices.

Warren Ward & Co.,

Designers and Manufacturers,

6 & 8 E. 20th St., New York.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Taras Bulba. By Nikolai V. Gogol. With portrait of the author. Translated by Isabel F. Hapgood. 12mo, $1.00.

Great Masters of Russian Literature. By Ernest Dupuy. Sketches of the Life and Works of Gogol, Turgénief, Tolstoi. With portraits. Translated by Nathan Haskell Dole. 12mo, $1.25.

St. John's Eve, and Other Stories. From "Evenings at the Farm" and "St. Petersburg Stories." By Nikolai V. Gogol. 12mo, $1.25.

Crime and Punishment. By Feodor M. Dostoyetsky. 12mo, $1.50.

"The readers of Turgénief and of Tolstoi must now add Dostoyetsky to their list, if they wish to understand the reasons for the supremacy of the Russians in modern fiction."—W. D. Howells, in Harper's Monthly for September.

Stories from Life. By Sarah K. Bolton, author of "Poor Boys who Became Famous," "Girls who Became Famous," etc. 12mo, $1.25.

The Labor Movement in America. By Prof. Richard T. Ely. 12mo, $1.50. Although Prof. Ely has been a frequent contributor to Harper's Monthly and other periodicals on similar topics, he has not heretofore written any complete treatise on the great social question such as he now offers to the public, as the result of long and careful study of a subject upon which he is acknowledged to be an authority; and his book will doubtless become a standard work of reference to those who discuss this question in the future.

Silent Times. A book to help in reading the Bible into life. By the Rev. J. R. Miller, D.D. 12mo, $1.25.

Meditations of a Parish Priest. Thoughts by Joseph Roux. 12mo, gilt top, $1.25. Translated from the French by Isabel F. Hapgood.

Girls Who Became Famous. By Sarah K. Bolton. Lives of Harriet Beecher Stowe, George Eliot, Helen Hunt Jackson, Harriet Hosmer, Rosa Bonheur, Florence Nightingale, Maria Mitchell, and other eminent women. Companion book to "Poor Boys who Became Famous." 12mo, with portraits, $1.50.

The Riverside Museum. By Jak, the author of "Birchwood" and "Fitch Club." 12mo, $1.25.

The Christmas Country, and Other Fairy Tales. Translated from the Danish and German by Mary J. Safford. With new and original illustrations by Charles Copeland. 12mo, $1.50.

Boys' Book of Famous Rulers. By Lydia Hoyt Farmer. Lives of Agamemnon, Julius Cæsar, Charlemagne, Frederick the Great, Richard Cœur de Lion, Robert Bruce, Napoleon, and other heroes of historic fame. Fully illustrated with portraits and numerous engravings. 12mo, $1.50.

In Perils Oft. By W. H. Davenport Adams. A book of daring adventures and heroic deeds by soldiers, sailors, travelers, and men of renown, in various parts of the world. 12mo, fully illustrated, $1.50.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,

13 ASTOR PLACE, NEW YORK.

HAVE YOU READ THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF

REV. CHARLES G. FINNEY?

If not, send for a copy. "Every student of divinity, every man and woman that would be a practical Christian, should read that book." Price $1.75. Published by

A. S. BARNES & CO., 111 William St., N.Y.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers 805 Broadway, New York.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART.

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞Distance no hindrance a we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

THE COLLEGIATE SCHOOL.

[Founded A.D. 1820.]

721 Madison Ave., Central Park, New York.
REV. HENRY B. CHAPIN, PH.D., PRINCIPAL.

English and Classical Day School for Boys, with Primary Department. Gymnasium. New Building complete in its appointments. The 67th school year begins Wednesday, Sept. 22. Circulars on application.

38TH YEAR. LYNDON HALL. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—A High-Class School for Young Ladies. Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages, and English branches thoroughly taught, with full regard to the equally important matters of home care and training. Address

SAMUEL WELLS BUCK, A.M., Principa .

Church Decoration.

Church Furnishing.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

J. & R. LAMB,

59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

FACE, HANDS, FEET,

and all their imperfections, including Facial Development, Superfluous Hair, Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, Moth, Freckles. Red Nose, Acne, Blk Heads, Scars, Pitting and their treatment. Dr. John H. Woodbury, 37 N. Pearl St., ALBANY, N.Y. Est'b'd 1870, Send 10c. for book

FOR PRESENTS IN SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Beauty of the King Series.

Scripture Texts for One Month. Illustrated with four varieties of flowers in colors.

His Covenant. Paper, 10 cents.
His Good Promises. Paper, 10 cents.
His Loving Kindness. Paper, 10 cents.
His Testimonies. Paper, 10 cents.

Superior to cards. Please examine them at your Bookstore.

Sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price.*

E. P. DUTTON & CO.,

PUBLISHERS,
31 West 23d Street, New York.

1886 MUSIC TEACHERS 1887

Teachers of Piano; Teachers of Organ;
Teachers of Theory; Teachers of Choirs;
Teachers of Music in Schools;
Teachers of all Instruments;
Trainers of the Singing Voice;
Teachers of Classes;

Are all WELL AND FULLY provided for in the immense stock of Oliver Ditson & Co., which contains 500 books directly used in teaching, and 1500 other music books, all well compiled and useful. These are of their own publication, and they have, in addition, all the other noted books of the world. Also, pieces of Sheet Music almost without number.

Teachers of Music who cannot visit their stores in Boston, New York or Philadelphia, or that of Lyon & Healy in Chicago, their principal agents in the WEST, are cordially invited to call for and examine Ditson & Co.'s books in any reputable music store, or to correspond directly with Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston.

Lists and Catalogues cheerfully furnished to the profession, and all inquiries as to music and music books answered, and musical advice given by their army of employees, many of whom are well trained singers, players and composers. Send to, or call on

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

FOR CHOIRS

A Low Priced Collection of Music.

IDEAL ANTHEMS

BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.

The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.

"IDEAL ANTHEMS" contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.

Price, 35 cents each by mail, postpaid; $3.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid.
☞SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

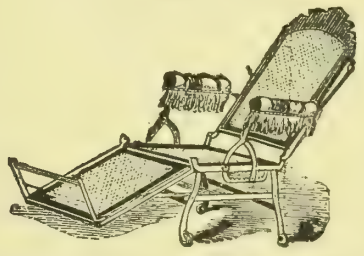
PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O.
And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

PLUNKETT'S Old Reliable Folding Chair.

Fifty changes of position.



Also, Comfort Folding Mantle Beds and Cribs.

PRICE $11, $12, and $13.

Send for circular.

112 West 14th Street, - New York.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intellgencer is printed with our ink.

DEAFNESS Its causes, and a new and successful CURE at your own home, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists without benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others. Full particulars sent on application. T. S. PAGE, No. 41 West 31st St., New York City.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION 1878.

NEW BOOKS

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NOW READY.

THE PRESBYTERIAN DIGEST OF 1886

Embracing, with the contents of the edition of 1873, the Acts of the Assembly, from 1874 to 1885 inclusive, and an addendum of the Acts of the Assembly of 1886.

By the REV. W. E. MOORE, D.D.

8vo. Sheep. Price, $5.00, net.

Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates.

The False and the True Spiritualism.

By the REV. JOHN CHESTER, D.D.

16mo. Price, $1.15.

WOOD, HAY AND STUBBLE.

By KATE W. HAMILTON.

12mo. Price, $1.25.

THE CHESTER COTERIE.

By KATE LIVINGSTON HAMILTON.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't,
1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

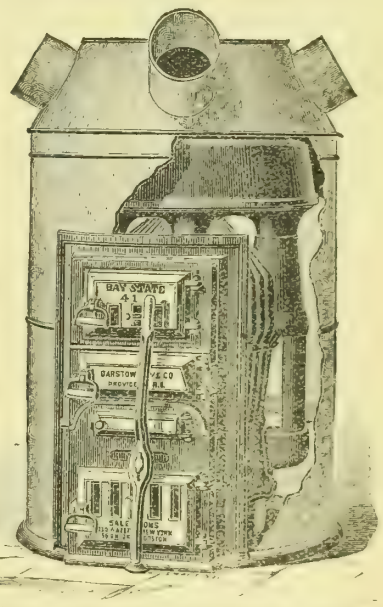
The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Pianoforte construction.

Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

ESTABLISHED 1836.



Steel Plate, Wrought-Iron and Cast-Iron Furnaces. Cast and Wrought-Iron Ranges, Baltimore Heaters and Parlor Stoves. Fifty years' experience in their manufacture

SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE.

BARSTOW STOVE CO.,

230 Water Street, New York.

WHEATLET A NEW BREAKFAST FOOD.

Delicate, Delicious. Superior to Cracked Wheat, Wheat Grits, or Oat Meal

Cooks in 5 Minutes. Put up in cases of 30-2lb. pkgs, ½ bbls. and bbls. Ask your Grocer for it.

Absolutely the Best. FRANKLIN MILLS CO., Lockport, N. Y., Mfrs. J. W. BEARDSLEY'S SONS, 179 West St., N.Y., Mill Agents. Send for circulars and price list.

The principle that goods should go from the manufacturer to the consumer ready to use, is admitted, but the public say the manufacturer may not put in good stock. Well, now try us for that. Our materials are old-fashioned and they are good. $1.35 per gallon Ready Mixed Paint. If no dealer in your neighborhood, send to us direct. Dealers who do not sell these goods are requested to write for color cards, terms, &c. The best goods. The heaviest advertised of any in the market. Our agents fully protected. They are easy to sell. The F. J. Nash M'f'g. Co., Nyack, Rockland Co., N. Y.

Gold for You Cut this out & send with 10 CTS. Silver, & you'll get by mail a BOX of ELEGANT NEW GOODS that will bring you MORE MONEY in 1 Month than anything else in America. Never Before Seen. Either Sex. No Capital. M. Young 173 Greenwich St. N. Y.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER.

"God Has a Good Place for Mothers."

IT was a very strong-hearted and very loving mother who recently used this expression, as she told me how she had been called to "lay away" her two noble boys just entering manhood. The one last taken had come into the kitchen only a few days before his death, and, showing her the muscles of his strong right arm, had said: "Yes, mother, that arm is going to take you out of this kitchen! Soon I shall take care of you, and there will be no more hard work for you!" And then in merry boy-fashion he had kissed her and whirled her about the room. Within two weeks the strong right arm was powerless, and the mother stricken. The story of the rending of her heart is too sad to describe. But the phrase struck me, "I tell you God has a good place for mothers."

The mere fact of the mother's relationship to her child puts her in a good place. One of the most earnest of philosophers says, "This is one of those relationships whose inward qualifications are divinely prepared in the heart, to make the toil a refreshment and the care a joy, and the happy twining of two lives together itself an education for both. The little child has but one father and mother. The relation is unique and all in all to him." It is indeed unique to the child, but it is no less so to the mother. No other relationship she holds is like this one. None fill the same want of her soul. No other so educates the divinest possibilities of her nature. This fact of the relationship lies at the base of all she can effect with her child. It is the inviolable, immovable foundation on which she has the right and privilege to rear, with Divine help, as faultless a structure as may be. The relationship is God's appointment, and, therefore, the mother is in a good place.

The place is good, too, because it is one which calls for much unselfishness on her part. A place where many interests centre, where many practical matters need hourly adjustment. "How clear," says Farrar, "do practical details become in the light of absolute principles." It is the mother who must see that the clear light of these absolute principles falls on all things and all persons in the house, yet who must be such a loving embodiment of these principles that none shall think of abstract truth, but only know and feel that all things move by the sweet compelling power of love.

Again, the mother's place is a good one, because in it and by it God is teaching her the things He would have her learn. God is her Teacher through her children. Is she docile, is she attent, is she studious to catch the Master's meaning as He speaks to her by many voices no ear but hers hears, by a thousand affiliations between her children and herself invisible except to spiritual presence? Is she seeking the significance of the Divine teaching from the pages of her own child's heart and life? "Talk comforting words to the mothers," says Mr. Moody. "When a young mother is just beginning to feel her responsibility, it isn't very difficult to reach her heart." God chooses this place of motherhood for some of His sweetest, deepest lessons.

Good is the mother's place, too, because it is a place of love, where love cannot be too great, where the manifestation of love can hardly be too frequent, and where love creates love. In one of H. H.'s bright reflective essays called "Wetting the Clay," she speaks of the process of the sculptor when modelling the clay which is to serve in every particular as the exact copy for the finished marble. The constant showering and moistening of the clay which precedes every touch of the modelling hand, lest the dry clay crumble to the ruin of the work, is used by her to symbolize the love with which everything the mother does or says to her child should be filled. "Wet the clay," she says to mothers. Give your children love. Love must be in the manner as well as in the heart. Express more winning love, if you would govern your children easily and rightly.

Then how good is the mother's place in the light of that blessed word of the Saviour's, "Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me, and whosoever receiveth me, receiveth not me, but Him that sent me." Why may not a mother be receiving Christ, and so the father, in receiving her own children in His name? Certainly the promise does not exclude her own children, although it embraces every little one we receive in His name. Think how good is that mother's place who is every day receiving Christ in and through her own family of little ones. Her privilege thus becomes her power. We sometimes say the Gospel is brought to our very doors, but here it is put into our very arms, and embodied in the sweet forms of our children.

I have read a story of a woman in very poor clothing gazing intently at a picture of the Infant Jesus in the arms of His mother, and then exclaiming, "Who would not try to be a good woman who had such a child!" It is possible that in receiving our own children we may, at the same time, receive Him who made His own mother blessed among women. "Infancy is a perpetual Messiah which comes into the arms of fallen men and pleads with them to return to Paradise." M. C. G.

A Garnered Sheaf.

THE little ones of our household are quite apt to ask, "Have you brought me anything?" whether our absence from home has been marked by hours or days.

Now that the autumn time finds us settling ourselves after the summer's flitting here and there, the children's question has come back to me many times. The moss, shells, cat-tails, immortelles, autumn leaves and grasses, selected with a thought of how much certain ones would appreciate them; the care, too, the recipients would bestow in arranging them, with a genuine pleasure, realizing there's a bit of history connected with all summer gleanings.

In addition to nature's beauties, I've gathered a sheaf that too will cheer and brighten and strengthen winter days. Little glimpses of what another life is striving to attain, conquer and be by Jesus Christ's help. These recollections come back forcibly and prove a treasure from memory's store-house as well as an incentive:

> "I've gathered handfuls, one by one,
> Here and there for me they fall."

'Twas Sunday afternoon; we were starting for the little chapel school which we attended during vacation. On the stairs Madge said, "Shall we ask those girls to go, too?" alluding to a certain coterie who were being rather merry on the piazza.

Do you suppose they will? I questioned, to which came the response and rebuke: "We can ask them, if they don't go, it's not our fault. We've promised to do whatever we can."

The second instance is a sweet reminder. Hearing of a mutual acquaintance whose summer plans seemed strangely thwarted, we talked a little of the advisability of inviting her to join us. "She's alone, let's ask her; I guess that would be God's way," said Madge; which conclusion sent us into the house to write the letter.

One more sheaf good for every-day living. We were around the evening lamp busy with some fancy work, that in spite of all painstaking efforts seemed determined to go wrong. Over and over again Madge tried, and patiently, too. I could but notice it. In the quiet of our own room that night she said, "I almost lost my temper over that cotton, but I just told Jesus I didn't want to, and asked Him to help me, and He did."

Little things? Ah, try them! The living them shows the trend of one's life and character. Little sacrifices, deeds of kindness, words of cheer, sympathy and comfort, who can estimate how much they may count for us in the harvest home above?

We cull only the sweetest and choicest blossoms for our bouquets; and of all that lies around our pathway we can and do choose—we must. It is ours, too, to know whether we gather more tares than wheat.

The summer's ended. "What hast thou gleaned."

Another Ruth.

An Autumn Odor.

BY MARY R. BALDWIN.

IT had been a long sensuous autumn day, and ere the sun declined we took a remembered path to get away, if possible, from our usual conditions and to find, if we might, that something which we had for days felt that nature held in reserve for us, a something so subtile that we knew not to what sense it might appeal, or indeed whether we owned a sense capable of receiving it.

As we start we are alert in every conscious faculty; we mean that nothing shall escape our observation; too intense, surely for the dreamy influences of the hour, without seeming to know how to help it. We have that insistence which nature scorns, for she takes no one to her heart whom she does not bring first under her magical spell, and into that realm of communion where there is a quiet harmony between the soul's activities and those of her own kingdom. As we walk we whisper, "An autumn in this new Western country can never seem as full and beautiful as the autumns of that fair land where art, being helpful to nature, is yet reverent before her." As our eyes wander over the landscape, we are not really conscious how far the memory of a happy day is making us unjust to the beauty before us. We go on and on until there is only here and there a cottage among the fields stretching before us. But nature is trying her spell, we no longer insist, no longer compare; we feel, vaguely, that she has taken us closer to herself than ever before. Is she going to reveal that something for which we have had a strange longing through the years? It may be so, but if she does we are not really prepared for it; we want a soul enlargement to receive it; all this we are saying to ourselves as we come upon a little grove near a nursery-man's grounds, an experiment in the interest of utility, rather than of beauty. We pass among the young trees and suddenly are stopped by a memory before a buttonwood not more than three feet high; taking one of its leaves we press it between our hands and lo! an encantress seems to hold us in her power. An odor appeals to our sense of smell; an odor held in a mysterious way in a living chamber within us, answers to this one of to-day from the pressed leaf, and we are again a child in a New England village; are again under the buttonwood by the school house upon the green. The old associations range themselves like magic, fast and faster around the remembered odor; we have not entered the thick of life's fight, have not walked the way of environment, have never been beaten back by circumstances; we are in childhood's large, wonderful world, which we really have no care to explore so long as we can have the satisfying pleasure of our mimic life under the buttonwood. With the leaf yielding its scent we might live as a child so long; so long that perhaps we could not get back again our old selves. Autumn, dear, patient, tender autumn would surely through all her influences keep the charm unbroken. But a bell sounds near; was it the school-bell, rung by the relentless hand of the teacher to end the happiness under the old tree? We do not run with the troop of children to answer the summons, we still stand crushing the scent from the leaf. The sound is now close upon us, we raise our eyes, and at a short distance from us a cow is quietly feeding, and thus we are brought back to our life of to-day. The western landscape stretches around the western homes and hearts over in the distance.

And is this landscape without beauty? There are fields near us whose shades of coloring might be worthy of the highest efforts of an artist, and when the autumn sun glints upon them it also glorifies them, and the distant hills have smiles and shadows like the hopes and fears upon the human soul, and the homes yonder have love and welcome, and the hearts there beat in harmony with the world-wide longing and purpose toward better and truer living.

A Bit of Wise Counsel.

WE take this bit of wisdom for mothers from the columns of Church and Home:

Teach the children to respect you. Perhaps you smile at this. Love seems so far above and beyond respect! The children love you with all their hearts. Granted. But for all this, neglect not to cultivate respect in them. A devoted mother is willing to forego comfort for the sake of her loved ones. Sleepless nights and aching limbs must sometimes be; but there is another kind of self-denial for mothers. When Marion has devoured her own portion of the choice fruit or confection, and her baby fingers stretch towards mamma's plate, deny yourself the pleasure of giving her the whole, or a portion of what belongs to you.

When Isabel longs for a new hat which she does not really need, and the family purse reminds you that you cannot purchase that without wearing your old cloak another winter, buy the new cloak, and let the hat wait. It may be there is an instructive course of lectures in progress. For some reason all the family cannot attend. Take your turn with the others. You will be surprised to see how willingly the girls or husband will remain at home when they find "mother" cares about going. Do not say, "Anything will do for me." Have a proper care for your person and apparel.

Encourage the children to work. Something more than encouragement may sometimes be necessary. In most cases, however, a judicious mother can so interest the boys and girls that work will not be a heavy burden. Marion wants to wash dishes, but is too small. Let her dust, while Isabel does the dishes, and by-and-by instruct them both in the mysteries of bed making and bread-making. Be sure that the boys chop the wood and bring the water. No doubt it would be easier to do all this work yourself, there's so much "bother" about teaching children, but for their sakes, if not for your own, give the extra time and labor.

All this may require self-denial on the part of the loving mother, who would gladly give herself and her possessions for the dear ones; still, in kindness to them, as well as to herself, these simple rules should be followed. When each child has his or her allotted portion of work, and mother is treated with the respect that is her due, there may be fewer sickly attempts at art, and fewer wishy washy stories and poems written. There certainly would be fewer poor, tired women longing for rest, but mother, instead of being the slave and drudge, to be thrust into the background when parlor company comes, will become what God designed her to be, the queen of the home.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The School-Boy's Warning.

LISTEN to the merry brook,
Running through this sheltered nook;
See the tiny, speckled trout
As they dart and sport about.
On the water bright and clear
Let not your shadows fall, for fear
You'll affright these keen-eyed trout,
And send them to the depths about.
Hook and line they do not fear,
In the chattering brook so clear.
Oh! you foolish, foolish trout,
To bob your little head about;
Why ope your mouth and shut your eye?
And thus be caught by floating fly?
To be ensnared by tempting bait,
Finding your mistake—too late.
School boys, now a lesson learn:
Do not be tempted by a worm,
A fly, a line, a shining hook,
Let nothing tempt you from your book.
Marbles, or top, or kite, or s ring,
A ball, or buzzing fly on wing.
Obey with care, your teachers kind,
Your lessons learn, their precepts mind;
Be not allured by tempting bait,
To find you've erred—alas! too late.

MRS. E. P. RUNK.

Better than a Doll.

"AUNT EMILY, see my doll!"

It was, indeed, a doll worth seeing that Grace Colston held up for Mrs. Aikman's inspection. A lovely waxen creature almost life-size, that could not only open and shut her eyes, and cry and move her joints, but by some marvellous arrangement could even walk. She was a child of fortune as well as her young owner. This was evident from her silk dress trimmed with rich lace; her velvet mantle with quilted satin lining and down border; her gold necklace and stylish hat with its curling plume, as well as the extensive and elaborate wardrobe, which filled the open drawers of the miniature dressing-case appropriated to Miss Maud Angeline.

"It is a beautiful doll, and she is beautifully dressed," said Mrs. Aikman.

"Yes, Aunt Emily, and everything she has I made myself. Kittie has to have a sewing-girl to make her doll's dresses, and I don't think they look as well as mine do. I love to sew." So saying, Grace smoothed down Maud Angeline's dress with all the pride of a young mother.

Aunt Emily smiled. In that home of wealth and fashion and luxury, where the children had been surrounded with servants from infancy, she was glad to see the simple, unspoiled nature that thirteen-year old Gracie still kept, as well as her innate self helpfulness and industry. These traits reminded her of Grace's grandmother, who, in the homelier surroundings of a farmhouse, had been a tender mother, a notable housewife, an energetic, generous, noble woman. She understood the memories that had softened the tone of her brother, the busy, absorbed merchant, as laying his hand on Grace's curly head, on the evening of her arrival, he had said, "Grace, I fancy, has mother's looks, and I hope she is going to make a woman like her."

But after Aunt Emily had admired Maud Angeline and praised the neatness of Grace's sewing, and after Grace had run downstairs to give her precious doll an airing, a little sigh escaped from her aunt. She was thinking of the money Maud Angeline represented, from her buttoned kid shoes to the lace-trimmed parasol which she carried in her dainty, gloved hand, and of the little children in that great city pinched and cold, suffering for clothes to keep them warm.

"How much warm flannel," she said to herself, "how many pairs of shoes and stockings the cost of that one doll would have bought! And Grace could have learned to sew equally well for a live child as a wax one, and have learned besides something she has never yet known—the pleasure of doing for others."

Mrs. Aikman did not press her views of the matter upon her sister-in-law, a lady largely absorbed with social duties, and who, because she had more sensible ideas than sometimes belong to fashionable people, regarded her domestic management as infallible.

Yet one day not long after, Aunt Emily said to Grace: "I am going to see a poor woman of whom Jane, the chambermaid, has been telling me. Her husband has lately died, after a long sickness, and left her with three children, the youngest only a year old. She is English, with no near relations in this country, and none who can help her anywhere. I am going to take her some lace to mend, as Jane tells me she does fine sewing very nicely. Would you like to go with me?"

Grace readily assented, as she would have accompanied her aunt anywhere. She had read of poor people in books. She had seen ragged men and children on the streets, but of actual poverty she had no more idea than her Maud Angeline. They had not far to go, for the extremes of life often lie close together. As they turned off the wide, handsome avenue into narrow streets and alleys, where the houses grew more and more shabby and tumble-down in appearance, Grace drew closer to her aunt, and asked, with wondering eyes: "Aunt Emily, how can people live where it is so horrid and everything smells so?"

But more revelations were in store for Grace when, reaching the house they were in search of, they went up one, two, three, four flights of stairs, to one low room under the roof where Mrs. Munger lived. Very clean it was, for Mrs. Munger had seen more prosperous days, and still kept her old habits of order and neatness. But Grace had never seen so bare a room. Beside it, those of the servants at home seemed almost luxurious. There was no carpet on the floor, the tiny cracked stove contained hardly fire enough to warm the room for early December, the few chairs and table were of the cheapest sort, the covering on the bed in the corner looked thin and scanty, and as Grace glanced from the faces of the widow and her children to the cupboard, she fancied the contents of that must be very small.

Mrs. Munger did not complain or lay bare her necessities even when Aunt Emily, with gentle sympathy, drew from her something of her story.

Grace was quite delighted with the baby that cooed and crowed in her arms, while the older children stood aloof, regarding her rich dress with admiring eyes. As they emerged again into the street, she exclaimed in awe-struck tones: "Oh, auntie, did you notice that poor baby's clothes? How poor and thin they were for this cold day! And what kind of shoes did the other children have on?"

"I should think they had been made from an old hat. Their mother has evidently very little to do with, but does the best she can with that little."

"Why didn't you give her some money?"

"I am going to, my dear, but in the way Mrs. Munger will like it best, by paying her for work. As to shoes, I should think the little boy might wear some of Johnny's. Perhaps you can find a pair he has thrown aside that would make the little fellow comfortable."

"Of course I can, and jackets, and no end of things! And, perhaps, Mrs. Munger could make a dress for the little girl out of one of my old ones. I'll make her up a bundle as soon as I get home. Aunt Emily, I do believe that one of Maud Angeline's embroidered flannel skirts would be big enough for that baby."

"I dare say it would."

"She has three, and I might spare the plainest one. I don't know whether any of her dresses would fit the baby or not." This she added a little reluctantly, for the thought of parting with any of that treasured wardrobe cost her a pang, and self-sacrifice was something wholly new to Grace.

"They would not be suitable for the baby even if they fitted her," answered Aunt Emily. "The baby needs warm, but simple dresses."

They walked a little while in silence, and then Grace drew a deep sigh. "Mamma gave me eight dollars yesterday to buy a new pink satin dress and trimmings for Maud Angeline to wear to Addie Bates' party next week. Would that get much for the baby?"

"It would clothe the baby warmly and comfortably for all winter."

"O, Aunt Emily, let us buy the things right away! and," her tones growing more earnest, "are there many children as poor as that?"

"Hundreds, my dear, in this city, to say nothing of all those gathered into asylums, and homes, and nurseries, where they must be fed and clothed. To some of them the dresses you outgrow and cast aside would do much good. To the sick children in hospitals, the toys you grow tired of, and the papers you have read, would afford great pleasure."

Mrs. Colston interposed no objection to Grace's use of her money. "I give a large donation each year to the Benevolent Society, but if you are certain that these are worthy poor, and Grace chooses to help them, I am willing, only she must never go alone to such places as they live in, and I hope she will catch no disease by going with you."

So Grace and Aunt Emily went out shopping for the baby's benefit, and under the latter's direction Grace made the little garments herself. After they had all been finished in the neatest manner, came the happy day when she carried them to the baby. With her own eyes she saw it invested in a new warm suit, while the mother fairly cried for pleasure as she exclaimed: "I believe, dear child, the Lord sent you, for I did not know how I was going to get comfortable clothes for the children this winter."

After leaving, Grace said to her Aunt Emily, who had accompanied her: "Do you know, auntie, I never thought that the money I was spending for candy and on my doll would make a poor baby so comfortable? Of course, I'm ever so fond of Maud Angeline, but a real, live little child that can feel and look happy, and know that it is warm, is ever so much better than any doll."

ELA THOMAS.

Child Strategy.

A LADY, teaching her little daughter, four years old, pointed to something in the book and asked: "What is that, my dear?"

"Why, don't you know?" inquired the child.

"Yes," said the mother; "but I wish to find out if you know."

"Well," responded the little miss, "I do know."

"Tell me, then, if you please," said the lady.

"Why, no," insisted the little one, with an arch look; "you know what it is, and I know what it is, and there is no need of saying anything more about it."—Early Dew.

Little Heads Together.

No. 1.

WORD-BUILDING.

1. An article, another article, an auxiliary verb, a staff, a boat.

2. A letter in man, an adverb, a small serpent, a part of a ship, a Turkish coin, an embarrassing predicament, something found near outer doors

3. A pronoun, a city, the atmosphere, the haunt of a wild beast, a Scottish lord, a small reptile.

4. A letter found in cat, a preposition, a verb, a fruit, an Italian, poet born 1265, a way in which horses are harnessed, a command.

5. A vowel, an article, a conjunction, a man from Denmark.

6. A vowel, a verb, a nickname of one of the Presidents of the United States, an animal, a yellowish resin found as a fossil, one who finds fault, to climb with difficulty.

"ITTALIE."

No. 2.

DROP LETTER SAYING.

T-e-e-a-i-v-r-i-i-g-o-v-r-l-o-d. E. M.

No. 3.

DIAMOND.

1. In continent. 2. A pronoun. 3. Methods. 4. Companionship. 5. What all should be. 6. Unpleasant medicines. 7. To fasten. 8. To speak (backward). 9. In continent. V.

Answers to Puzzles of September 29th.

No. 1.—

P A U L
P E O R
T E N T
G N A T
N O A H
A T A D
E N O N
L U K E
F A C E
S E T H

No. 2.—

STEW
TREE
EELS
WEST

No. 3.—Some of your hurts you have cured,
And the sharpest you still have survived,
But what torments of grief you endured
From evils which never arrived!

Correct answers from Lewis D. and Jennie Labagh.

Original puzzles for this department are solicited. Everything for the "Children's Portfolio" should be directed to Cousin LOIS, at this office.

The American Board on Future Probation.

THE announcement that the report of the Committee on Dr. Alden's Report as Home Secretary would be next on the programme, was received with a movement of interest, it being expected to open the controversy on the question of Future Probation. Pres. S. C. Bartlett, of Dartmouth College, then read the report of the committee, of which he was chairman, and was frequently interrupted by applause, that went to show how the gathering stood upon this question. The report, among other things, said:

An important and prominent feature of the report is its distinct presentation of the respective functions and obligations of the officers of the Board, as handed down by the settled usage of the past, and defined by the Constitution and action of the Board itself. It thus appears that in the selection of candidates, while the preliminary correspondence is conducted by the Home Secretary, and the most careful inquiry is made as to the fitness of the candidate for this specific work, the Secretaries have no vote upon his final acceptance, but the whole responsibility is assumed and borne by the Prudential Committee, who, in the faithful discharge of this duty, not unfrequently find it necessary for various reasons to defer action. It also appears very distinctly and unmistakably that the officers have been acting under the express direction of the Board itself, as given in the year 1849, in the following language: "The Board does not assume to decide upon the fitness of an individual to be a minister of the Gospel; but it is their duty to decide, and that intelligently, on his original and continued fitness to be sustained by the funds committed to their disposal, as a missionary to the heathen.... The contributors of the funds for foreign missions demand more evidence of faithfulness in the preaching of the Gospel than can possibly be in possession even of the permanent ecclesiastical bodies scattered over the country, and they will hold the Prudential Committee and the Board responsible for seeing that no part of their contributions go for the propagation of error, either in doctrine or in practice." In this emphatic statement, it will be observed, the Board, while claiming the right to decide upon the fitness of an individual to be a missionary to the heathen, disclaims the authority to decide upon his fitness to be a minister of the Gospel. It has been sugges ed that the Prudential Committee might be relieved of the difficult and delicate duty of pronouncing upon the theological fitness of the candidates by some carefully devised method of referring the question to a properly constituted vicinage council. The committee mention this as a suggestion, on which they are not called and do not deem themselves competent to decide. Without entering upon further consideration of any of the topics presented in the paper before us, we would recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That we recognize with profound gratitude the continued marks of favor with which our Lord and Master regards this great work of preaching the Gospel to all nations.

2. Resolved, That the Board recognizes and approves the principle upon which the Prudential Committee has continued to act in regard to appointments for missionary service, in strictly conforming to the well understood and permanent basis of doctrinal faith upon which the missions of the Board have been steadily conducted, and to which, in the exercise of its sacred trust, the committee had no option but to conform.

S. C. Bartlett, J. H. Fairchild, W. H. Davis, C. F. Gates, G. H. Whitcomb, W. E. Hale, } Committee.
J. G. Vose, (with qualified assent.)

In presenting the report of the Committee on Dr. Alden's Report, Pres. Bartlett spoke of the six hours' session, given by the committee to the contents of the report and the expressed wishes of a large number of brethren of various views. They had sought to do their duty. Dr. Vose, of Providence, who signed the report with qualified assent, gave his reasons for so doing, in a clear and forcible manner. His main desire was to promote harmony. He thought the second resolution liable to be misunderstood. He thought the Board should never assume the prerogative of an ecclesiastical court. He heartily joined in the praise given touching the faithfulness, integrity and general wisdom of the Prudential Committee. He preferred a fair and properly composed council for the settlement of the theological fitness of candidates.

Prof. Egbert C. Smyth, D.D., of Andover, addressed the Board on the Committee's report. He avowed his wish for harmony. He was sure there was a grave misapprehension as to the spirit and purpose of those who had been compelled to differ with the majority of the Prudential Committee. He emphasized the statement of Dr. Vose that the Board is not an ecclesiastical court. He read from the Manuals used by the Prudential Committee, and commented on the use of them. He thought men had been turned away from the work by insisting on doctrinal tests. He thought no one should be rejected for any speculative opinions on secondary matters.

At the close of his address Dr. Bartlett called for a statement from Sec. Alden. Dr. Alden reviewed the course of the Committee in general and in particular cases, with great frankness, quoting from letters from and to candidates, and from the records of the Committee, showing what had been done, and the reasons for the action taken. Not an applicant had been rejected. Action had been deferred, for further correspondence. Dr. Lyman Abbott spoke in favor of a council to decide on the fitness of candidates. Dr. Noble, of Chicago, offered the following resolution as supplementary to those of the committee:

Whereas, From remarks made on this platform it seems difficult, if not impossible, to draw a genuine statement, in terms so clear and strong as to cover the case; therefore

Resolved, That this Board distinctly and emphatically disavows its belief in what is called the doctrine of future probation, and it hereby instructs its Prudential Committee to exercise great care in selecting missionaries for the foreign field.

In supporting his resolution, Dr. Noble said: "We are here to discuss a matter for which I think we should go without eating and without sleeping until we can settle it and settle it definitely. My face is toward the light, and if I may be indulged in a matter personal to myself, I will say from the very outset that this has been the stand which I have taken. I have been in councils where there were brethren coming up whose faces leaned in the direction of probation after death; but from their statements and from my sympathy with them, and from my view of the whole of what was wisest, I have voted in every instance for those men right straight through. My action has been misinterpreted. The largest council, as has been said, that was ever called in America for the installation of a man put itself on record in language as clear as that I hold in my hand to day; and yet a brother who has been upon this platform this morning, speaking about these things, has misrepresented that action entirely. Now I feel that we have reached a point where we must let it be known before the world where we stand. What is it about this thing, Mr. President, that is so sweet and beautiful, for they come before us as the apostles of light and sweetness? But what do we see? 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' That thing touches Andover: it disturbs and it divides. It enters into the city of Boston, it disturbs and divides. It enters into the newspaper offices and it is a great good fortune if it doesn't disturb and divide. It enters into the churches and straightway there comes alienation. It enters into the ministers' meetings, and there is a division and strife. It enters into the American Board, and instead of being here to-day to consider the great problem of saving the world, joined hand in hand and heart in heart with that work, we are intruded upon by this thing that calls itself simply a secondary doctrine, yet lifts itself to the front everywhere and also divides us. Now I say distinctly, we have had enough of it and this American Board, so long as I have any vote to give, shall give a vote that will be distinctly on the side where we will understand it, and the Prudential Committee will understand it, and the churches will understand it. Oh, what a strange thing it is! Here are men seen in our churches, writing in our newspapers and reviews, going up and down in the land speculating about the future, and about the saving of souls in the future. There are two great ways of looking at this matter. One is to speculate here and to adjourn the saving of souls to the future. Another is to save souls here and adjourn speculation to the future. I propose to do what in me lies to save souls here and now; and when, if, through the infinite mercy of God in Christ Jesus, I am permitted to enter into the rest that remaineth for the people of God, then I will speculate and rejoice in speculations. But for the sake of missions, for the sake of our churches, for the sake of our standing before the world, for the sake of our influence upon all bodies related to us in the same work, I want this American Board to lift itself up and to take a position that from this time forward shall be unequivocal."

Dr. Chapin, of Beloit, offered the following as a substitute; which Dr. Noble accepted, and the Board passed it with the resolutions of the Committee:

The Board is constrained to look with grave apprehension upon certain tendencies of the doctrine of a probation after death, which has been recently broached and diligently propagated, that seem divisive and perversive and dangerous to the churches at home and abroad. In view of these tendencies they do heartily approve of the action of the Prudential Committee in carefully guarding the Board from any committal to the approval of that doctrine, and advise a continuance of that caution in time to come.

Mr. Z. Styles Ely and Dr. W. H. Ward, of New York, Dr. Noble, Dr. Goodwin and Prof. Boardman, of Chicago, ex-Pres. Andrews, of Marietta, O., Rev. C. O. Brown, of Dubuque, Sec. Clark and Judge Miller, of New Haven, spoke earnestly on different aspects and sides of the question.

Following the adoption of the Report of the Committee and the supplementary resolution, E. W. Blatchford, Esq., of Chicago, Vice-President of the Board, offered the following resolution:

The Board recommends to the Prudential Committee to consider, in difficult cases, turning upon doctrinal views of candidates for missionary service, the expediency of calling a council of the churches, to be constituted in some manner which may be determined by the good judgment of the Committee, to pass upon the theological soundness of the candidates, and the Committee is instructed to report on this matter to the Board, at the next annual meeting.

Pres. Hopkins read a letter from Pres. Dwight, of Yale College, and made remarks himself, favoring Mr. Blatchford's resolution. The resolution was adopted.—Report of The Advance..

The Episcopal Convention.

THE General Episcopal Convention assembled in Chicago, while discussing the report of the Board of Missions on Monday, Oct. 11th, again recommended the Enrollment Fund of $1,000,000, to be raised by the laymen of the denomination, no one to be allowed to give over $5, and to be an endowment of the Board of Missions, yielding $50,000 yearly. The project was entrusted to five laymen of Pennsylvania, where the plan originated, the lay deputies of each diocese to aid them in carrying out the plan. In three years, it is hoped, the money will be raised.

On Wednesday, upon the motion of Rev. Phillips Brooks, of Boston, it was resolved, after an earnest debate and amid hearty applause, to send a Christian greeting to the Congregational Council, also in session in Chicago. On Friday morning, however, the House of Bishops sent in a message declining to concur in this action. A plan to enlarge the Board of Missions by the election of a Missionary Council every three years, with power to appoint a Board of Managers, consisting of fifteen bishops, fifteen presbyters and fifteen laymen, was discussed on Friday.

On Saturday a vote was taken on the proposition to change the name of the Church from the Protestant Episcopal to the American Catholic Church, and it was defeated, twenty two dioceses casting a clerical vote against it and twenty-nine dioceses a lay vote, while seventeen dioceses cast a clerical vote for it and eleven dioceses a lay vote. The dioceses voting for it, with only four exceptions, were comparatively weak bodies in the South and West. Two hundred and ninety-five votes were cast, eighty-two clerical and thirty lay deputies voting for the change, and ninety-nine clerical and eighty-four lay deputies against it. But the vote, compared with that of the Convention of Philadelphia, shows that a feeling in favor of the proposition is growing.

Financial.

Tuesday, Oct. 19th.

The banks of this city last week increased loans $54,100, gained in legal tenders $210,300, and in deposits $931,100, lost 417,400 in specie, added $105,200 to circulation, and reduced the surplus of reserve $439,850, making it $4,618,950. The average rate on call loans was 6 per cent, and on the best commercial paper 5 1-2 to 6. The rate on call yesterday afternoon averaged 7 per cent. The steamers arriving Saturday and Sunday brought about $600,000 in gold, making the total within a few months about $8,500,000.

The imports of merchandise at this port last week were valued at $3,616,077, and the exports at $5,989,807. Foreign exchange sold yesterday at $4 81 for sixty-day bills and $4.84 for demand for sterling.

The Stock Market continued active and strong during the week. Manhattan Elevated stock was run up to 175 on Saturday, fell yesterday to 167. Delaware and Lackawanna closed yesterday at 140 3-4 bid. It is ticklish work dealing in these high priced stocks. Good bonds are held firmly.

Foreign grain markets were reported firm yesterday. The visible supply of grain, east of the Rocky Mountains, reported yesterday, showed an increase of 1,041,104 bushels of wheat, 178,032 of corn, and 140,458 of oats. The totals were 53,828,539 bushels of wheat, 13,755,674 of corn, and 5,135,901 of oats. Quotations for November grain were: Wheat here 84 1-4, in Chicago 73; corn here 45 1-2, in Chicago 35 1-2; oats here 32 1-4, in Chicago 25 3-4. No. 1 red wheat sold yesterday for 87 1-2 cents for cash.... The supply of hay and straw is large. Quotations yesterday were: Choice timothy 80 to 85 cents, clover mixed 55 to 60, long rye straw 65 to 70, oat 40 to 45, wheat 25 to 35....Cotton closed yesterday at Oct. and Nov., 9 7-8; Dec. 9.12-13; Jan. 9.19-20.

General trade does not show as large as increase as it has for a few months over the corresponding date of late year. The clearances last week exhibited an increase of about 11 per cent, outside of New York of about 14 per cent, over last year.

There is considerable activity in real estate at satisfactory prices.

....As regards the three leading denominations in Scotland, the following abstract of figures has been published: Established Church, 564,445 members; contributions $1,832,150; Free Church, 329,541 members; contributions, $3,130,140; United Presbyterian Church, 177,517 members; contributions, $1,950,980.

....Chaplain McCabe reports that the Methodist Episcopal Church is within $40,000 of the $1,000,000; and sends out a last appeal, to the effect that every Sabbath-school class in the whole Church raise one more dollar right away. The fiscal year closes October 31st, when the full amount must be secured.

....On Sept. 17th a colossal statue of the famous Grotius was unveiled at Delft. Many nations have contributed to this monument to the great jurist. The design of the whole and the model of the statue are the work of the sculptor, Stracké, of Haarlem. The bronze casting of the statue took place at Breda. The drawing for the pedestal was contributed by Garnier, the architect of the Paris Opera House. The mighty pedestal, which stands over 13 feet high, and weighs 30 tons, is of dark brown Swedish granite, cut and polished at Berlin. The foundations are of Swedish granite. Thus Sweden, Germany, Holland, Belgium, and France will help to commemorate the author of De Jure Belli et Pacis.—The London Times.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

There are anti-Jesuit riots in Chili.... Thirty six new cases of cholera and twenty-six deaths are reported at Peste, Austria. ....The passengers of the steamer "Anchoria" protest against detention at St. Johns, Newfoundland ...A duel took place in Idaho between two Indian chiefs. Both Indians were killed ...Forty houses were destroyed in Buffalo and several lives were lost and a vast amount of damage was done by the terrible storm which swept over that city night before last ...Severe storms are reported from several quarters, especially in the North and West....Janitor Titus, of Belvidere, N. J., has been found guilty of murder in the first degree....Knights of Labor have ordered the beef butcher of Armour not to go to work and that his meats should be boycotted....Two receivers were appointed for the New Jersey Central Railroad ...Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for Mayor for New York by the Republicans.

Monday, 18.—Seventeen lives lost in a storm in Great Britain....The cholera is making frightful ravages in Corea....General Kaulbars protests strongly against the Bulgarian election returns... The Agrarian troubles are growing more and more acute in Ireland....The Government in Bulgaria refuses to yield to the demands of Russia and war is very imminent....There is no fresh conflict between the Vatican and the Roman Government....The proposition to change the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church was voted down at the General Convention....Four hundred armed men are guarding the packing houses in Chicago. .. The Third Avenue Railroad in this city has been ordered to pay $49,000 of license fees. ....The South Boston Iron Works, which is one of the largest cannon factories in the United States, closed on Saturday ...Mr. Hewitt and Mr. Roosevelt accept the nominations for Mayor of New York city ... Yellow fever, it is said, has broken out in Biloxie, Miss....The village of Salisbury, My., was nearly destroyed by fire. Loss over one million of dollars....Rev. Dr. John Forsyth, of Newburgh, N. Y., died yesterday....Mrs. Parsons, wife of a condemned anarchist, addressed a meeting of Socialists in New York city....There is considerable dissatisfaction among the Knights of Labor over the salaries paid to their own officials.

Tuesday, 19.—Passengers from the "Anchoria" arrive in this city and praise the captain and crew....The canvass for Mayor of the city has become very energetic....The packing-house employes in Chicago return to work on the ten-hour basis ...Reports of damage by the storm of last Friday along the Lakes continue to come in....The boa constrictor which escaped from his box a few days ago in this city, escaped again in Boston at the museum and was captured after a severe struggle of an hour and a half....The Bartholdi Statue of Liberty, on Bedloe's Island, is nearly completed....Solomon Sayles, bondsman for H. L. Sayles, fugitive Alderman of this city, paid his bail bond of $25,000 yesterday, and Francis McCabe, another ex-alderman, was sent to jail ...Bulgaria more quiet.... Three of the French Cabinet resigned yesterday....Wreckage from the storm of last week continues to come ashore along British coast....French farmers ask protective duty for their wheat....It is proposed to spend $28,000,000 in enlarging the navy of France.

In view of the reopening of Cooper Union on November 7th, for Sunday evening Gospel Services, a large choir is being formed. Members of the old Hippodrome, Park Theatre, and Cooper Union choirs, and other singers who can render regular service on Sunday nights, are invited to meet in Annex Hall, 14 and 16 Fourth avenue, on Wednesday evening, October 27th, when steps will be taken to organize for work

Well Deserved Success.

(From the New York World.)

The great success of the Knabe Pianos is alone due to their brilliant and superior qualities for harmony, sweetness of tone, great power, and a thorough equalization throughout the entire scale, as well as their pliant touch. They are universally pronounced by the press and the musical profession as being unsurpassed by the instruments of any other maker. One of the most prominent qualities of the Knabe Piano, and one which is generally overlooked by the purchaser, is the superior workmanship that characterizes them, and it is conceded that they will retain their tone, and the general usages of wear, far beyond those of any other first-class maker.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by David W. Lewis & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.
Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.
Marking-plates furnished when desired.

New York, October 16, 1886.

Butter.—Receipts for the week, 37,343 pks.; exports 3,886 pks.

The late advance seems to have been too sharp and sudden to be maintained, and prices this week are lower with larger offerings, and a surplus carried over unsold.

The fall has been fine; frosts through N. Y. State held off late and diarymen have been induced to feed grain by the higher prices so that the fall make is larger than had been estimated and the week's market closes about 2c. off for finest last week's creamery make. Choice October dairy tubs and pails when offered bring 25a26c. quick, but the bulk of fall dairy make runs light-bodied and poor. Early firkins very dull. The refrigerators here are full of held Western creamery butter all the way from Ohio to Dakota, The finest of the ice-house stock is selected from at 22a23c., with more or less sales in line at 20a21c.; and there were sales of about 1,000 pks. this week for export at 16a18c.

Fancy fresh creamery	30 @—
do dairy (selections)	25 @26
N. Y. State dairies entire, good to fine	20 @24
do do common to fair	15 @18
N. Y. State creamery firkins	20 @23
Western creamery, summer make	15 @20
Butter, poor to common	10 15

Cheese.—Receipts for the week, 46,649 boxes; exports 18,702 boxes.

The market has been ½c. lower. Exporters, except for a few fancy specials on orders, were indifferent to buying, and prices on most all medium quality and earlier makes were nominal. Quite a large proportion of stock goes into winter storage. At the close strictly fancy September makes were steadier in price. We quote:

Factory, colored, full cream, finest	11¼@11¾
" white, " "	11¼@11½
" good to fine "	10 @11
" night milk skims	8 @ 9½
" skims	2 @ 6

Eggs.—Receipts for the week were 10,348 bbls. and 11,388 cases.

Fresh gathered stock sells well at 21a23c.; held ice-house stock has been very dull at about 18a20c. Limed eggs were offered and some sales made at 17a18c. We quote:

Near-by marks, strictly fresh eggs, per doz.	21 @23
Western and Canada, " " "	18 @20

For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Depression of Spirits and General Debility, in the various forms; also as a preventive against Fever and Ague, and other Intermittent Fevers, the "Ferro Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Caswell, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic; and for patients recovering from Fever or other sickness has no equal.

Publisher's Department.

Mrs. Charlotte Lisle, of Chicago, well known to the Western press, ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me... but a remdey has removed it."

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c.
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

For Babies.

A prominent physician says: "In my opinion, the general use of Lactated Food would very largely reduce the alarming death rate now prevalent amongst infants." This is undoubtedly true, for Lactated Food has been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods had failed, and has been the undoubted means of saving many lives. It contains great nutritive properties, and overcomes all irritation of the digestive organs. Babies thrive upon it as upon mother's milk. It is never rejected by the weakest stomach, infant or invalid.

Between disease and the many cheap preparations which are palmed off under the name of blood purifiers, take your chances with disease, until you can procure Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the only reliable blood purifier. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

To thoroughly cure scrofula, it is necessary to strike directly at the root of the evil. This is exactly what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, by acting upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing it of all impurities, and leaving not even a taint of scrofula in the vital fluid.

3 months' treatment for 50c. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. Sold by druggists.

MARRIAGES.

BRADT—PELTON.—At the parsonage in Jerusalem, N. Y., Oct. 12, by the Rev John Scarlet, Mr. Elmer E. Bradt, of Reedsville, N. Y., to Miss Margaret E. Pelton, of South Bethlehem, N. Y.

FINNEY—SEARCH.—At the residence of the bride's parents, near Richboro, Pa., Oct. 13, by Rev. E. Birdsall, I. Newton Finney, of Hatboro, Pa., and Mary P. Search, of Richboro.

HUBER—BRADT.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Oct 6, by the Rev. John Scarlet, Mr. John Huber to Miss Anna E. Bradt, of Unionville, N. Y.

MUNGER—MATHER.—At South Bend, Ind., by Rev. N. D. Williamson, Oct. 12, Dr. Merritt L. Munger and Miss Ida M. Mather, both of Chicago.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

ROLPH.—I wish to bear testimony to the memory of Aaron Rolph, who departed this life last August in the seventy-fifth year of his age. The deceased was a member of the Reformed Church of Pottersville, N. J., from the time of its organization. While he was never called to any official position in the Church of Christ, still our brother was one of the Lord's hidden ones who adorn their profession by a godly life. It was delightful to visit his home. He was unenvious and ever content with the good Providence of God. He was firm and clear in his religious convictions and abounded in the grace of charity. He was never known to speak ill of his neighbor, and ever studied the things that make for peace.

As his pastor for six years I found great comfort from his fellowship and was ever strengthened and encouraged by his prayers and counsel. He was the pastor's friend and cherished the memory of those who had ministered unto him in holy things.

His last lingering, painful illness he endured with Christian fortitude. In patient submission he said, "the Lord's will be done." The death of this aged servant was a translation, He would repeat, "Oh blessed Jesus," and pray for those who had kindly ministered unto his necessities, assuring them "the Lord will reward you for all that you have done for me."

In this age of the world when so many are tempted to turn away from the Bible, it is good to look along the path of the just that shineth more and more unto the perfect day and behold such triumphs of faith. "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Wm. H. Hoffman.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

Fulton Street Daily Noon Prayer-Meeting,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THE installation of the Rev. Wm. H. Ballagh as pastor of the Church of Lodi, N. Y., will take place October 26th, at 2 P.M. The Rev. Wm. H. Nasholds to preside, preach the sermon and read the form; the Rev. F. W. Kuhl to deliver the charge to the pastor, and the Rev. Peter DeBruyn to charge the people. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER made the following appointments for the ordination and installation of Mr. George Zabriskie Collier, at Stuyvesant, N.Y., on Wednesday, Nov. 3d, at 2.30 P.M.: The Rev. Dr. F. N. Zabriskie to preach the sermon, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Campbell to charge the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Drury to charge the people, the President of Classis to preside and read the forms. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE appointed the following supplies for vacant churches: Gilboa and Prattsville, November, Rev. D, K. Van Doren; January, Rev. J. G. Smart; March, Rev. P. Phelps, D.D. Schoharie Mt. and Central Bridge, October, Rev. J. G. Fagg; Dec. Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. W. A. Wurts; Sharon, October, Rev. J. G. Smart; Dec., Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. J G. Fagg.

D. K. Van Doren, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER made the following appointments for the installation of Rev. W. Schmitz in the Church of Roxbury, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d: The President, Rev. Dr. Wortman, to preside and read the form; to charge the pastor, Rev. B. C. Lippincott or Rev. S. T. Cole; to charge the people, Rev. Dr. Wortman or Rev. W. A. Shaw; to preach the sermon, Rev. Abram Lansing or Rev. J. H. Van Doren. S. C.

Board of Education.

RECEIPTS FOR SEPTEMBER, 1886.

From Church of Addisville, Pa., 7; Colt's Neck, N.J., 7.52; Flatlands, L.I., 14.10; James D. Blauvelt, Esq., Clarkstown, N.Y., 10; Fairfield, N.J., 7.20; Fordham, N.Y., 25; Schraalenberg, N.J., 21.66; Holland, Neb., 10; Church of Comforter, Wiltwick, N.Y., 4.55; Bergen Point, N.J., 20; Clarksville, N.Y., 4.36; West New Hempstead, N.Y., 3.07; Saratoga Church, Schuylerville, N.Y., 18.75; Vriesland, Mich., 7.82; English Neighborhood, N.J., 4; Middletown, N.J., 3.12; Piermont, N.Y., 18.80; Bronxville, N.Y., 4.17; Mrs. E. F. Spoor, 1st Coxsackie, 5; Miss A. G. Fairchild, 1st Coxsackie, 5; 1st New Brunswick, N.J., 20.42; Rev. E. Mead, Keyport, N.J., 800; 2d Claverack, N.Y., 13.83; Constantine, Mich., 11.25. Total, $1,046.62.

Special Funds.—From Peter Lott, Esq., Woodhaven, N.Y., 100; and Wm. F. Wycoff, Jamaica, L.I., 100 for aid to students in Northwestern Academy; 1st Hackensack, N.J., for Northwestern Academy, 55; Kiskatom, for A. Miyake, student, 33.03. Total, $288.03.

F. J. Hosford, Treasurer,
34 Vesey Street, N. Y.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economica than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. Royal Baking Powder Co., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, dry, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practicing physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief,

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It helped me immediately, and effected a speedy cure.—G. Stoveall, M. D., Carrollton, Miss.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases. —M. A. Rust, M. D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe Cold, which, from exposure, grew worse and finally settled on my Lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My Cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Saulsburgh, Penn.

Cured By Using

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he finally prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine a short time, and was cured. —Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles, $5.

The Church.

Communion.

OUR hand can grasp a hand;
  Our eye can meet an eye;
And through these tokens understand
  Our mutual sympathy.
A smile can touch the heart;
  A word can move the soul;
A sentence make the feelings start,
  And streams within us roll

Then, since these mystic powers
  While in the flesh are given,
What blest communion must be ours
  When spirits meet in heaven.
Unburdened of the clay
  That comes between us here,
Our trammels will be torn away
  In that celestial sphere.

And since our spirits thus
  Can men's emotions move,
Much more can God who fashioned us,
  His power within us prove.
With Him we do commune,
  In joy, in pain, in grief;
And soon as e'er we seek, so soon
  He gives our souls relief.

O rapturous height of bliss,
  To which we then may soar;
When, in the world that follows this,
  We dwell forevermore!
With God we shall enjoy
  More close communion there,
And in His service find employ,
  And in His glory share.

—Rev. T. Nield, in Journal and Messenger.

How It Worked.

WE made an experiment, and it was a success. The Sabbath morning congregation was the largest we had ever seen in the church, but was still too small to satisfy reasonable expectations. The people were without a pastor, and were founding their hope on securing one; and they were apparently thoughtless of their own obligation, and the possible outcome of effort on their part to bring people to the house of God. So we suggested that all take a Sabbath afternoon walk, that very day, and cordially invite all they saw to the services of the evening hour. It was kindly received, and in the cool of the afternoon people might be seen all over the town inviting friends, neighbors and strangers to the church. One lady, seventy five years of age, brought her quota of two. The result was, that the congregation at the evening service was twice as large as that of the morning, and the sanctuary was quite well filled. Let all who read go and do likewise.—Herald and Presbyter.

Loyalty to the Church.

IT is a very commendable thing for Christians to have charity one for another, and to entertain kindly feelings toward the members of other religious denominations. It is not only commendable, but it is a part of our Christian duty. As fellow-soldiers in a common cause, fighting the hosts of sin and iniquity, it behooves the members of all orthodox churches to cherish feelings of fraternal friendship toward one another. Time is too precious to be wasted in foolish bickerings over ways and means for prosecuting the work in hand. The needs of the hour are too great to admit of unprofitable wrangling over points of doctrine. Such bickerings and such wrangling do no good, and often result in much harm.

But there is such a thing as being too liberal in one's religious views. Every church has certain fundamental points of doctrine upon which its stability as an organization depends. To these points of doctrine its members subscribe, and the church has a right to demand that they shall be loyal to them. If such were not the case, what becomes of the power or authority of the church? Or what is the necessity of trying to perpetuate the church as a distinctive organization? If these fundamental doctrines are laid aside and declared to be of no effect, then the ideas of the founders of the church are lost sight of, and there is a revolution. The church cuts loose from its former moorings, and becomes, to all intents and purposes, a new organization.—Star and Crown.

A Strong Man Made Stronger.

ON the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee is a miniature valley. At the head of this valley, about three miles from the coast, are the ruins of an ancient city. Here once lived a remarkable man. For physical strength he was a very Samson. Not less notable was he for spiritual capacity. In early youth, his splendid promise made men say "He will be a great man for either good or evil." The years fulfilled the prophecy; he became great for evil, and admitted evil companions. In time they came in troops. They occupied all the chambers of his brain. His will, his imagination, his memory, his affections swarmed with his chosen friends, until they took possession of him, tore down the walls of his moral being and made a very hell of him. There were two thousand demons in him, enough to make a Roman legion. And he had the strength of a legion. Men could not hold him. Even when they stole upon him in his sleep and chained him, he burst the chains as if they had been cords of silk. Men knew his cry from afar, and shuddered. Sometimes he would seem to get a glimpse of his own soul, and then he would cut himself as if to take his life. But he lived on.

One day, from over the sea, came a stranger. He beached his little boat and stepped ashore. He, too, was a remarkable man. Slight of build, gentle in manner, and making no cry on the streets, he, yet, was stronger than our strong man armed. Men already knew his power, but he had no reason to fear it. Strangely enough none of the great folks of the famous city came down to greet the distinguished visitor. But the strong man came to meet him. They stood face to face, and by some law unknown to us each knew the real character of the other. Strength met strength—man met man at opposite poles of being—in that narrow valley. And while it was impossible but that one should conquer the other, what followed can hardly be called a contest. The hitherto resistless combatants for supremacy in the poor giant's soul, recognized, in this calm stranger, an old and almighty foe. And, as if speaking not to the man before him but to them, he commanded, and they fled. It is a strange story, but until I know more than Sacred Record teaches, I shall believe that the demons left the man for swine, and that the swine, whom we deem lowest among brutes, could not endure for a moment what we men seem to enjoy, but stung to madness, went headlong to destruction. At once the strong man of Gadara has vanished from the scene, and a stronger man has taken his place. Demons have taken away with them a power of demons, but they have left the power of a man. Under the hand of the master of spirits the ruin of a lifetime is undone in a moment, and, clothed and in his right mind, the mighty Gadarene is, for the first time, really strong.

Consider what it is that constitutes strength in man. Was Ajax, was Achilles, strong? Was Voltaire strong? Is it either physical, or intellectual might that makes a man? Are we not all in danger of making heroes out of poor material? Is not Tennyson quite right in saying, "Self knowledge, self-reverence, and self control, these alone lend life to sovereign power," and a greater than he is right also, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." Surely our Gadarene friend sitting at Jesus' feet, in possession of himself, and under the sway of his Lord, was in the way to sovereign power—was in his very humility and childlike trust, a mightier man than the mad Hercules he had aforetime simulated,—to witness for Christ, in morals and manners, a greater man than Socrates or Samson. A child may outdo a giant. Who can read this story and doubt the possibility of an "instantaneous conversion." One day this man is the abode of demons and the terror of Decapolis; the next he is a teachable disciple of the Prince of Peace; and the next he is an accredited herald to men of "what the Lord has done" for him. There is hope for every man. Oh, that men could see what it is to be truly strong and seek character—moral worth—where alone it can be found—at Jesus' feet.—Dr. Braislin, in Baptist Weekly.

....The Methodist Mission in Utah has received during the past year 168 members, 61 of whom had been Mormons.

....In the Scottish Episcopal Church views of the most extreme type are now all but universally prevalent. High Churchism in Scotland is scarcely distinguishable from Popery itself.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

Lesson 5. Fourth Quarter.

M. The Empty Tomb.....Matt. 28: 1-15.
T. The Vision of Angels.....Luke 24: 1-12.
W. The Risen Saviour.....John 20: 1-18.
T. Early at the Tomb.....Mark 16: 1-11.
F. Christ the First-Fruits.....1 Cor. 15: 22-23.
S. The Risen Judge.....Acts 17: 22-34.
S. Raised by the Power of God.....Acts 13: 30-39.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN O. VAN DEVENTER.

Oct. 31st.—"Jesus Risen."—John 20: 1-18.

Golden Text.—"The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon."—Luke 24: 34.

Central Truth.—"It is Christ that died, yea rather that is risen again."—Rom 8: 34.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Jews who had been so eager for the crucifixion of Jesus were fearful lest the bodies of the sufferers should hang upon the crosses during their Sabbath, and thus profane that holy day. They, therefore, sought to have their deaths hastened by the breaking of their limbs. When the soldiers came to carry out this command they found that Jesus was dead already, having voluntarily anticipated the course of nature. In order to satisfy themselves, but more especially that the Scripture might be fulfilled, they thrust a spear into His side, whence flowed the mingled blood and water indicative of a broken heart. Nicodemus and Joseph, men in high station, who had been deterred by prudence from confessing Jesus during His life, gave Him a hasty but honorable burial. The embalming of His body had not been fully completed when the approach of the Sabbath compelled His friends to postpone their further work until the first day of the week. We can imagine something of the gloom which must have settled down upon the disciples during the tedious hours of that Sabbath.

THE LESSON.

I. THE EMPTY TOMB.—VS. 1-10.

V. 1.—"The first day of the week." After the Sabbath had fully passed. The evening hours with which this first day began had probably been occupied by preparations for the more complete embalming of Jesus. "Came Mary Magdalene." Not alone but accompanied by other faithful women. She, however, was the leader in this company, and it is with her especially that the narrative has to do. "Seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre." This stone had been in their minds as an obstacle to the carrying out of their plans, and they had gone on hoping to find help at hand to remove the stone. While still at some distance, Mary saw that the stone had been removed.

V. 2.—"Then she runneth and cometh to Simon Peter." Without going nearer she turned back to tell the news to the chief disciples. "They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre." She had instantly jumped to the conclusion that the opened sepulchre meant a rifled grave. She had no thought of a possible resurrection.

V. 3.—"Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple" They evidently shared Mary's apprehension, and went to see if they could find any clue to His whereabouts.

V. 4.—"The other disciple did outrun Peter." Possibly because younger, or perhaps spurred on by the intensity of his affection.

V. 5.—"And he stooping down saw the linen clothes lying, yet went he not in." Although first to reach the sepulchre he hesitated about intruding upon what seemed to his devout mind holy ground.

V. 6.—"Then cometh Peter,....and went into the sepulchre." Peter was restrained by no such feelings as those that had held John back. He was determined to see what this strange thing meant. "And seeth the linen clothes lie." The order in which the sepulchre was found is thus emphatically mentioned in order to show how the truth of the resurrection dawned upon the Apostles' minds. There was no indication of haste or violence.

V. 7.—"And the napkin that was about his head, ...wrapped together in a place by itself." Jesus appears to have exercised the utmost care of these discarded grave clothes, which loving hands had provided for His burial.

V. 8.—"Then went in that other disciple,....and he saw and believed." John is giving us his own spiritual autobiography, and speaks for himself, yet implying a similar faith in Peter. The evidence was sufficient as to the fact of the resurrection, as to its significance that were still in the dark.

V. 9.—"For as yet they knew not the Scripture." Their ignorance of these things seems incomprehendible to us, but we must remember that it is always easy to be wise after the event. We read the Scriptures in the light of the experience and testimony of these men, whom sometimes we criticize harshly.

V. 10.—"Then the disciples went away again unto their own home" There seemed to be nothing to be gained by tarrying at the sepulchre, and as waiting was their present duty they returned to their homes to wait and wonder. They were not left long in suspense.

II. THE RISEN MASTER.—VS. 11-18.

V. 11.—"But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping." She could not tear herself away from this spot so endeared to her as the last resting place of her Lord. The others had evidently said nothing to her as to the possibility of the resurrection. "And as she wept she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre." The tomb was probably a natural cave in the side of a hill, which had been enlarged and arranged for a place of burial. The low door prevented a person from seeing the interior without stooping down.

V. 12.—"And seeth two angels in white." These ministering spirits may have been attending the Saviour on the Cross, and guarding His tomb during the time that He was held in its embrace. They now become visible in order to prepare Mary for the manifestation of Jesus Himself.

V. 13.—"Woman why weepest thou?" We may believe that it is a part of the work of angels to comfort the sorrowing children of God. Their question assures Mary of their sympathy, as it might also have suggested to her a hopeful thought if she had not been so preoccupied with her grief. "They have taken away my Lord." The cry of a broken heart, denied the poor comfort of weeping beside the grave of the departed. This one thought wholly occupied her mind at this time.

V. 14.—Before the angels could offer her a further explanation, she became conscious of the approach of some one behind her. "She turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus." It is easy to explain the fact of her not recognizing Jesus, but we know that He after His resurrection did not manifest Himself to His disciples except when and how it pleased Him. The disciples on the way to Emmaus were equally blind.

V. 15—"Jesus saith unto her, Woman why weepest thou?" He would draw out an expression of her grief, in order the more effectually to remove it. "She, supposing him to be the gardener." This was the most natural thought under the circumstances, and the other suggestion came into her mind that he had for some reason removed the body to another resting-place. "Tell me where thou hast laid him and I will take him away." If friendly hands had removed the precious body, then she still might have the satisfaction of completing His burial and visiting His grave.

V. 16.—"Jesus saith unto her, Mary." Only one word was necessary. The tone, which no one else could employ; the name, of which others in that vicinity would be ignorant, served to awaken her heart from its sorrow. "She turned herself." While supposing Him to be the gardener she had only given Him half of her attention. "Rabboni, which is to say, Master." As one word had revealed Jesus, one was sufficient to pour out her heart of love and joy.

V. 17.—"Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not." It is evident that Mary's first thought was of a renewal of the former life which Jesus had lived with His disciples. She welcomed Him as One from whom she would not again be separated. "I ascend unto my Father and your Father." Only after His ascension could He, by the gift of His Spirit, return to abide with His disciples. The terms of this message shows how intimately Jesus associates His people with Himself. "My brethren;" "My Father and your Father;" "My God and your God."

V. 18.—"Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples." Thus a woman was made the first evangelist as she proclaimed as a fact that Jesus had triumphed over all His enemies.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. A loving heart is prompt to serve.
2. Difficulties often disappear as we approach our duty.
3. Fear often defers blessings.
4. Jesus left his tomb as a Conqueror.
5. Jesus has sympathy for those who weep.
6. Jesus will reveal Himself to those who seek.
7. Service is often the best worship.
8. We should be prompt to share our "good news" with those still in darkness and sin.

Cannot Read the Name.

WEN young Christians make their public confession of Christ they take His name; they, like those at Antioch, are called Christians, but this name can only be read in this dark world by the light which is in them. The sunlight will not reveal their identity, only the light from within will. The name must be written on their characters, which must be transparent, but there is no transparency without light. The effect must be like the numbers on the transoms of our street doors. The stranger stares and strains his eyes to see the number and goes away disappointed, because there is no light from within to identify the name or number of the indweller. Let your light shine from within that men may read on your character your Christian name.

Down at the Heel.

THE Interior remarks: "When Robert Hall aimed at a thing he always hit it—if there was enough of it to be hit. When he said that a lax theology is the parent of a lax morality, he hit that nail squarely on the head and drove it in to stay. Public and private morality are down at the heel in these days because the theology taught from our pulpits is very largely diluted with milk and water. They were better fifty years ago because evil-doers were kindly informed that, if they escaped punishment in this world, there was a hell in the next for this world's incorrigible—a fact not too frequently alluded to in these days."

....The native Christians of Madagascar have given more than $4 000,000 for the spread of the Gospel within the past ten years.

....Thirteen missionaries were sent out from Philadelphia week before last by the United Presbyterian Church for foreign fields.

....A gracious revival has been enjoyed in the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, the Rev. W. N. Richie, pastor. Ninety six persons, forty-six by confession, were added to the church during the last three months.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

In Nervous, Mental or Physical Exhaustion.

Dr. N. S. READ, Chandlersville, Ill., says: "It is of the highest value in mental and nervous exhaustion, attended by such functional disturbances as sick headache, dyspepsia, diminished vitality, etc."

Rheumatism

We doubt if there is, or can be, a specific remedy for rheumatism; but thousands who have suffered its pains have been greatly benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you have failed to find relief, try this great remedy.

"I was afflicted with rheumatism twenty years. Previous to 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse, and at one time was almost helpless. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley Village, Mass.

"I had rheumatism three years, and got no relief till I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has done great things for me. I recommend it to others." LEWIS BURBANK, Biddeford, Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, or Webster's Dictionary. For full particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

The Physician's Favorite!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

☞ It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.

☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY

FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000 000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

THE BEST POLISH FOR

Gold and Silverware.

PRODUCES greatest brilliancy.
REQUIRES least labor.
IS HARMLESS in every respect.

Sold everywhere, and sent, post-paid, on receipt of 15 cents in stamps.

SEE THAT FULL NAME ELECTRO-SILICON IS ON EACH BOX.

Send address, mention this paper, and receive

A TRIAL SAMPLE FREE.

THE ELECTRO SILICON CO., 72 John St., New York.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $250,000.
Carefully selected 1st Mortgage Farm Loans payable in N. Y. Unrivalled facilities. Absolute satisfaction. 10 years' experience. No losses. Refer to 3d Nat'l Bank, N.Y. City; Nat'l Bank, Lawrence, Kan.; and Hundreds of Investors. Send for pamphlet, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City, Albany & Phila. N.Y. Office, 187 B'way, C.C. Hine & Son, Agts.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT Cincinnati O

MENEELY & COMPANY
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free.
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

THE MANHATTAN
Life Insurance Company
156 and 158 BROADWAY,
NEW YORK.

JAMES M. McLEAN, President.
JACOB L. HALSEY, 1st Vice-Pres.
HENRY B. STOKES, 2d Vice-Pres.
HENRY Y. WEMPLE, Secretary.
S. M. STEBBINS, Actuary.

Points for an Insurer to Consider.

AN ORDINARY LIFE INSURANCE Policy provides an estate for your dependents after your death, free from the claims of creditors.

AN ORDINARY ENDOWMENT POLICY provides for death and also for one's advancing years; but at a heavy outlay.

The Manhattan's New Plan

offers both advantages combined in one, and at a very much reduced cost.

This new policy is superior to ordinary Life Insurance, because you need not "die to win."

Superior to ordinary endowment insurance, because much less expensive.

Superior to "Tontine" Insurance:

1st. Because the results are not estimated, but fixed in a positive contract.

2d. Because, after three years, there is no forfeiture of payments on discontinuance of the policy, a cash or paid up value being guaranteed, by the New York Law. Business men appreciate the advantages of this new form of insurance, and are largely investing in it, because—

The annual deposit is practically saved, while it secures needed insurance during a designated period.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 2[illegible]
Capital paid in cash	1,[illegible]00,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000 [illegible]
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0[illegible]
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	20[illegible],040 1[illegible]
Net Surplus	1,3[illegible] 9,[illegible]41 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,6[illegible] 39
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	743,3[illegible]0 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9[illegible] 2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	[illegible]26 0[illegible] 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	180,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886	10[illegible],394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, Jr. } Ass't Sec's

Are You CONSUMPTIVE.

Have you Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Indigestion? Use PARKER'S TONIC without delay. It has cured many of the worst cases and is the best remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs, and diseases arising from impure blood and exhaustion. Often saves life. Cures when everything else fails. Gives new life and strength to the aged and infirm. $1, at Druggists.

HINDERCORNS.

The safest, surest and best cure for Corns, Bunions, &c. Stops all pain. Ensures comfort to the feet. Never fails to cure. 15 cents at Druggists. Hiscox & Co., N. Y.

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX 353 Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

Arnold, Constable & Co

NOVELTY DRESS GOODS.

Confined and attractive styles in Plush, Wool and Mixed Beaded Fabrics, with plain solid colored materials for combination. Also, a large variety of choice medium grade goods, plain and fancy weaves. Striped Scotch Lincey Shirtings, etc.

NOVELTIES.

Paris Costumes, Suits, Evening Dresses, Cloaks, Wraps, Opera Cloaks and Jackets. Also, those of our own manufacture from the most desirable materials.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

Solid Silver
Exclusively.

TRADE MARK. STERLING

Whiting M'f'g Co.,
Silversmiths,

Union Square and 16th St.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' CLOTHING.

The largest and most complete assortment of fashionable styles, comprising everything from Hats to Shoes, can be found at the Devoting our attention exclusively to the requirements of children of all ages up to 17 years, we claim that we are beyond competition in this line—and invite all who desire to clothe their BOYS and GIRLS in the BEST MANNER, and at the LEAST COST, to favor us with a call, that we may demonstrate this fact to their satisfaction.

Mail orders have special care.

BEST & CO.,
60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

KNABE PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

8 Per Cent.
Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

BODY BRUSSEL
CARPETING
AT RETAIL.

Novelties in design and c ing, especially prepared for Season by the leading For and Domestic Manufacturers now to be found in our stock

W. & J. SLOAN
Broadway, 18th and 19th sts
NEW YORK.

Fall and Winter Dress Goods.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.

Offer among their large assortment of Fall and Winter Dress Goods the following special lines:

A large stock of Wool Serges, 42 inches wide, at 65 cents per yard.

Two lines of Stripe and Check Cheviots, at 85 cents per yard; also, a full assortment of Fall Coverings in heavy-weight Camel's Hair Beatrice cloths, at $1 per yard, well worth $1.50.

ORDERS BY MAIL } From any part of the country will receive careful and prompt attention.

James McCreery & Co.,
Broadway and Eleventh Street, New York City.

Estey Organs Pianos

To those who are using the ESTEY ORGAN no word of praise or commendation is needed. The ESTEY PIANO is just as thoroughly made, and is guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has.

ESTEY ORGAN CO., Brattleboro, Vt.

A MILLION BOOKS

RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.

Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.

LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.

MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.

LEGGAT BROTHERS,
1 CHAMPERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

A CHRISTIAN YOUNG LADY wishes a position as resident or visiting governess in English and music; or to be companion for a young or middle-aged lady. References given. Address B. V., this office.

Hats and Bonnets.

The Most Approved Makes of
BLACK AND COLORED SILKS,
SATINS, VELVETS & PLUSHES

Hosiery, Underwear, and Gloves

For Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

DRESS GOODS

In the Newest Styles and Colorings.

We are Sole Agents for the U. S. of the Celebrated Red Star Brand o Wonderful Wearing

VELVETEENS.

Noted for its Rich Color and Close Resemblance to Silk Velvet. 39 Shades. Price, 74 cents. To Prevent Imitations a Red Star is Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

Mail Orders Carefully Executed.

R. H. MACY & CO.

CARPETS.

ALL THE LATEST NOVELTIES

In the Oldest and Most Celebrated Looms of Europe and America we are now Offering at the Lowest Prices Ever Known for Fine and Reliable Goods.

RARE BARGAINS.

(THIS WEEK.)

500 pcs. Velvets, Best Quality and Designs, Just Received and Placed on Sale at Less than Manufacturers' Cost of Production.

1,000 pcs. Best Body Brussels and All-Wool Extra Super Ingrains at Equally Low Figures.

INGRAIN ART SQUARES, DRUGGETS, RUGS, AND MATS AT LESS THAN AUCTION PRICES.

UPHOLSTERY

For Furniture Coverings and Draperies in the Finest Imported Fabrics, at Fabulously Low Prices.

500 P'rs Chenille Curtains at $12; worth $16.

1,000 P'rs Lace Curtains (Taped Edge) at $2; worth $3.

Window Shades [a Specialty.]

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,
Sixth Avenue and 18th Street, New York.

ENTERPRISE MEAT CHOPPERS.
BEST IN THE WORLD.
GUARANTEED TO CHOP, NOT GRIND THE MEAT.

FOR CHOPPING SAUSAGE MEAT, MINCE MEAT, HAMBURG STEAK FOR DYSPEPTICS. BEEF TEA FOR INVALIDS, &C.

Farm and Fireside says: "It is the only Meat Chopper we ever saw that we would give house room. It has proven such a very useful machine that we want our readers to enjoy its benefits with us."

No. 10 Family Size, Price, $3.00.

No. 10 Chops 1 pound per minute. Price, $3.00.
12 Chops 1 pound per minute. Price, $2.50.
22 Chops 2 pounds per minute Price, $4.00.
32 Chops 3 pounds per minute Price, $6.00.

American Agriculturist says: "We have given this Meat Chopper a thorough trial with most satisfactory results. They excel anything of the kind made in either hemisphere."

SOLD BY THE Hardware Trade

Send for ... ENTERPRISE M'F'G CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

RIDLEYS'
Grand St., New York City.

PROGRESS IN GRAND STREET.

rom an establishment which, in 1849, occupied a site 12½x30 to the present

NEW BUILDING

Which is a five story Iron Front structure, making our establishment the Largest Retail House in this city, covering as it does, the entire block on Grand Street and 200 feet on Allen and Orchard Streets respectively.

WITH INCREASED SPACE,

Larger assortments than ever are promised, and greater comfort to purchasers. We are

NOW DISPLAYING

A stock of Fall and Winter Novelties unequalled in this city

FOR EXTENSIVENESS, ASSORTMENT, or LOW PRICES.

The class of goods will be found to equal the best in any section of the city, while the difference in prices favors the buyer.

MILLINERY GOODS.

Dress Goods, Dress Silks, Trimming Silks, Plushes, Velvets, Ladies', Misses', and Children's Suits, Cloaks, and Wraps.

Ladies' and Misses' Underwear, Infants' Outfits, Hosiery, Men's Furnishings, Kid Gloves, White Goods, Fancy Goods, Lace Trimmings, Flowers, Feathers, Ribbons, Ornaments, etc.,

AND IN FACT EVERYTHING

That can possibly be needed in the family for wear or ornamentation, even to

HOUSEFURNISHING GOODS,
CARPETS, AND FURNITURE.

FASHION MAGAZINE.

Fall number fully illustrated, devoted to Literature, Fashion, and contains Price-list of our entire stock. Subscription 50c. per annum. Sample copies, 15c.

Orders by mail specially attended to.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,
309, 311, 313 to 321 Grand St.,
56 to 70 ALLEN, 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST., N.Y.

EQUITABLE
Mortgage Company.,
SIX AND SEVEN PER CENT
FARM Mortgages & Municipal in Kansas, Missouri & Nebraska BONDS
PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST
GUARANTEED.
Capital, $600,000.00.

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years sent free on application.

OFFICES:

W YORK, 208 B'way, Evening Post Bl'dg.
CHARLES N. FOWLER, V.
BOSTON, 23 Court Street.
H. H. FITCH, Manager.
PHILADELPHIA, 112 South Fourth Street.
CHAS. BENJ. WILKINSON, Manag
KANSAS CITY, Mo.
JOHN AVERY, General Manager.

A BIG OFFER. To ... them, we will Give Away ... Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 23 ... St., N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer

Een-dracht maakt macht.

Vol. LVII.—No. 43. Whole No. 2935.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1886.

$2.65 a Year in Advance. No. 48 Church Street.

Editors: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
Associate Editor: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

FREEDOM.—The Critic of the 16th, in a notice of "Progressive Orthodoxy," mildly dissents from some of its views, but says, "When it is a question of the right to discuss these matters freely," etc. We ask, who questions such a right? The press is free to all who want to use it. Any man who is free can use his freedom. But some men are not free. They have given assent to certain statements of doctrine, and in consequence hold a certain position and stipend. They are, therefore, not at liberty to attack these statements anywhere without previously giving up their position and stipend. For them to do otherwise is not an exercise of independence, but a breach of faith, a violation of common honesty. And all possible talk about free discussion in such cases is an absurdity. It has just as much force as would a similar proposal respecting the right of a man to repudiate a note which he had signed and sealed.

A GOOD MAN'S BECOMING FUNERAL.—Last Wednesday the obsequies of Dr. Forsyth were held in the city of his birth and residence. The day was exceptionally fine. A great concourse of relatives and friends was present. The exercises were simple and most appropriate. The pastor of the church where he worshipped, and several of his predecessors in the office, and others bearing intimate relations to the departed, officiated. The life of the good man, his scholarship, his wisdom, his genial nature, his wide acquaintance with letters, his genuine and steadfast faith, his beautiful exhibition of Christian love and charity, were duly set forth. Very touching was the testimony borne by one of the speakers to the invaluable service he rendered to the young in guiding the development of character and life. The grief at the loss of one so largely and variously useful was overborne by joy and thankfulness in meditating upon a career so rounded and complete in all that makes the Christian scholar and gentleman.

After the services in the church a long procession, which included from forty to fifty ministers of various denominations, accompanied the bier to the cemetery, where beneath the rays of the descending sun all that was mortal of John Forsyth was committed to the tomb with words of prayer and hope. And not a few re-echoed the wish of one of old:

> "Let me die the death of the righteous,
> And let my last end be like his!"

WHILE sceptics and semi-sceptics are making a great noise and attracting much attention, the Lord's work is going on quietly but effectively over the whole earth. The Rev. J. C. Fletcher, in a letter published in The Evangelist of last week, gives a significant example of the steady extension of a knowledge of the truth. He says, "The first time I visited Italy as a student, some thirty-seven years ago, I could not purchase a single copy of the Bible—no, not even a portion of it—without note or comment, except in the little Kingdom of Sardinia, and even there the right to buy and sell the Bible had only existed two years. In 1852 a Seminary mate of mine was imprisoned in Florence for explaining the Bible." But a change has occurred during the past twenty-five years. Signor Meille, an able, honest, godly Waldensian, the General Agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in his last report shows that within the quarter of a century of Italian emancipation the sales have been: 186,495 copies of the entire Bible; 450,719 New Testaments; 596,459 "portions," that is, copies of a single Gospel or Epistle, making a total of 1,233,673 copies. Contrast with this the declaration of Signor Boughi, a distinguished Italian littérateur and statesman, in his annual letter to the London Athenæum last January, that very rarely in Italy any book, except cheap translations from French novels, sells beyond two hundred copies. But the Italians have bought in twenty-five years nearly a million and a quarter of Bibles or Scripture portions. Last year they bought over 90 000 copies, of which 5,076 were Bibles and 16,042 New Testaments. This has been accomplished also notwithstanding the incessant and often vehement opposition of the Papal priests, who still even go so far as to seize and burn the Scriptures when they can. Mr. Fletcher includes in his letter this very interesting incident: "In Milan, Signor Ghelfi had the happy thought of displaying in the window of the Bible depot a large quarto Bible for passers-by to read, taking care to turn the page every morning. He soon observed that two or three of those whose business led them daily past his door stopped to read their two pages of the Bible before going to their work. One morning he heard one of these men complain that the page had not been turned. It was turned at once, and a conversation followed. The result was that this man was led to the truth, and has since joined one of the Protestant Italian churches."

THE POLITICAL CONTEST for the Mayoralty of this city is of national importance. Success here by the advocates of Mr. George, or a promising approach to success, will lead to endeavors to elect men of like opinions in many sections of the country. It is of great importance that the opinions and purposes of Mr. George shall be rejected, a week hence, by such a majority as will discourage future attempts to place men of like opinions in important political positions. The economical regulations advocated by Mr. George are not merely theoretical, they are thoroughly unreasonable, dishonest and unjust. His book on "Progress and Poverty" is constantly referred to by his friends as his chief work and an able statement of his convictions and purposes. In that book he deliberately says:

> By the time the people of any such country as England or the United States are sufficiently aroused to the injustice and disadvantages of individual ownership of land to induce them to attempt its nationalization, they will be sufficiently aroused to nationalize it in a much more direct and easy way than by purchase. They will not trouble themselves about compensating the proprietors of land. Nor is it right that there should be any concern about the proprietors of land. . . . In the name of the prophet—figs! If the land of any country belong to the people of that country, what right in morality and justice have the individuals called land-owners to the rent? If the land belong to the people, why in the name of morality and justice should the people pay its salable value for their own?

The great majority of those who own property have paid for it out of their earnings and savings. Other people, according to Mr. George, are to take it away "without troubling themselves about compensating the proprietors." Nothing more thoroughly dishonest has ever been proposed. A public act of the kind would be as immoral as that of the burglar who rifles a man's home or the thief who robs an orchard. When a man who asserts such economic regulations, not in the heat of debate, but with the calm deliberation of one writing a book, is nominated for an influential office, he ought to be rebuked by a vote that cannot be mistaken.

He declares also:

> The institution of public debts, like the institution of private property in land, rests upon the preposterous assumption that one generation may bind another generation. If a man were to come to me and say, "Here is a promissory note which your great-grandfather gave to my great-grandfather, and which you will oblige me by paying," I should laugh at him, and tell him that if he wanted to collect his note he had better hunt up the man who made it; that I had nothing to do with my great grandfather's promises. And if he were to insist upon payment, and to call my attention to the terms of the bond in which my great-grandfather expressly stipulated with his great-grandfather that I should pay him, I would only laugh the more, and be the more certain that he was a lunatic. To such a demand any one of us would reply in effect, "My great grandfather was evidently a knave or a joker, and your great-grandfather was certainly a fool, which quality you surely have inherited if you expect me to pay you money because my great grandfather promised that I should do so. He might as well have given your great-grandfather a draft upon Adam or a check upon the First National Bank of the Moon."

It is right and just that when the city of New York assumes the expense of such a work of lasting public utility as Central Park, or Brooklyn creates Prospect Park, or the two unite in constructing such a highway between the two cities as Brooklyn Bridge, that the payment of the outlay should be spread over three, four or five generations, because they partake of the benefits. They ought to bear a part of the cost. This principle is justly applicable to all public works. And if a man's grandfather, to avoid the sacrifice of his property by a forced sale, to save himself from loss, or to enable him to better his fortune, gives his note as an obligation resting on his property, the heirs who receive the property so saved or acquired are under an unquestionable obligation to pay the note. No honest man will refuse to discharge such an obligation.

As to whether citizens shall vote for Mr. Hewitt or Mr. Roosevelt we have nothing to say; but all honest men should endeavor to defeat Mr. George.

Prayer for Missions.

SUNDAY, November 7th, was recommended by the General Synod to the churches as a day of special prayer for Missions, for the evangelization of the world and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on all nations. The proposition to set apart this day for such a purpose had its origin we believe, in Great Britain. It has been accepted by the American Board, the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, by our own Board and others. It has a special importance from the fact that while the annual Week of Prayer was originally proposed with this definite object in view, it has of late widely departed from it,—having become in most places, a season of special prayer and effort for the revival of religion in those churches and localities in which it is observed. With this we have no quarrel. The results in many places have been most blessed.

But the original object ought not to be thus lost sight of. It has sufficient importance to demand and deserve for itself a special season of united, earnest prayer for its advancement. Many signs, in the broad field of missionary operations, point to a Providential development which will call for their great and immediate enlargement, for men and means in greater number and volume than have ever been provided before in the history of the Church.

The field is wide open. Every nation and people is accessible to the preacher of Christ and His salvation. It was not always so, nor until comparatively recent times. For this the fathers prayed in the earlier days of missionary enterprise. For this many now living have prayed, with little expectation of seeing the answer in our own times. Yet the answer has come—fully, completely. The harvest field is as wide as the world, and with new emphasis comes the voice of the Master to His Church, "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth laborers into His harvest." This also, He may be expected to grant in answer to her earnest, believing, united prayer.

But there is need of a new agency, or an old agency developed to new proportions—the agency of natives trained for the work, and full of faith and of the Holy Ghost. Better than missionaries—as evangelists—in all the great mission fields are men of the same nation, with the same habits of thought and feeling, who can speak, in their own tongue in which they were born, to their countrymen the manifold works of God. What marvels of grace might not be wrought by a Hindu Luther, a Chinese Moody, a Japanese Whitfield or Wesley.

But more than all is needed in all the missions, the missionaries, the native churches, the heathen themselves, the mighty power of God, the Holy Ghost. Old obstacles in their old forms have disappeared. But the hardest to overcome still remain. They have their seat in the human heart, which is the same everywhere. They have special power among nations held for ages under bondage to falsehood, superstition, ignorance, vice, the power of foolish and injurious prejudices and social customs and distinctions. The indifference of the heathen multitudes to the message they proclaim is, after all, the great obstacle and the great burden to missionaries everywhere. That indifference the Holy Ghost, and He alone, can remove. Why may He not be expected to do it, and reproduce in every field the scenes of Pentecost, if the Church of Christ unitedly and earnestly plead for His descent, His presence and His power?

But for these answers, His Church is not prepared. Despite the labors done and the gifts bestowed, the sad confession must be made that the greatest hindrances to the advancement of Christ's cause among the heathen are found not among those heathen, but at home. With bright exceptions, the churches as churches, their members as Christian men and women, have not yet begun rightly to appreciate and embrace the high purpose and commission of their Lord. The larger blessings,—the freer access to the peoples; the awakening of heathen minds from their sluggish indifference into a longing for the truth; the changing of widespread and long cherished prejudices against the Gospel of redeeming love into a new and general readiness to receive it on the part of those slumbering and perishing millions, may well be denied to those who make tardy and scant provision for the comparatively few to whom they do have access. If a new day of power is near at hand, we here have need to feel that power first—to anticipate its coming. If, with the present work upon our hands, we stagger under it—the money and the men come hard—what should we do if God should indeed open the windows of heaven on our mission fields? They need that blessing, every one of them. We need it even more, that we may by our zeal invite it and by our prayers secure it for them.

OLD COLONY.—The Critic is very highly esteemed by competent judges. Some of them declare it to be the best literary critic in the country. Speaking of Lippincott's Magazine for the month, it says, "F. N. Zabriskie, whose too infrequent papers have always a humor not unlike that of Charles Lamb or the Autocrat, contributes by far the most piquant and sensible yet of the many suggestions as to the choice of a library."

A DESIRE of years with us has been to have a rendering into English of the Martyrology of the Netherlands. The heroic sufferings of English, Scotch, French, Spanish and Italian martyrs have been recounted in our mother tongue. At last the Rev. Mr. Van Pelt has supplied us with five chapters, largely rendered from a Dutch work, on the Martyrs of Holland, and we are thankful. The first chapter will be found on the sixth page.

"Old Colony" Papers.

Sundries.

PRISONER'S SUNDAY....THE BARTHOLDI STATUE....THEATRICAL VIRTUE....CURIOSITIES OF JOURNALISM....A PLEA FOR THE EDITING OF THE DAILY PAPER.

LAST Lord's Day was observed as "Prisoner's Sunday," more generally than ever before. This is a good sign of the broadened and more tender and practical type of piety in our day. It was almost a thing unknown, a generation or two ago, for prayers to be offered in behalf of these "spirits in prison," and the theory seemed to be that criminals should be treated with a brutality analogous to their own conduct. Like mad dogs, there was nothing to be done except to put them out of the way. But now, the grace of God is thought none too good, nor too impotent, for the outlaw and the outcast, and the Spirit of Christ has raised up a hundred John Howards and Elizabeth Frys where there was one. Public sentiment has been roused to demand decency in jails, separation of the hardened from the novices in crime, and of the sexes from one another; the substitution of hard labor for solitary confinement; a system of rewards for good behavior, in place of penalties for misconduct; the abolishment of cruel and corporal punishments; a more general, as well as less perfunctory, attention to the spiritual needs of the convicts; and an organized effort to open up the way of self-support, and of return to a virtuous life, after their discharge.

There has, to be sure, been going on alongside of it a weak and demoralizing sentimentality which makes a hero and martyr of the malefactor, feeding him on sweatmeats and covering his "dock" with flowers, signing petitions for his pardon, and going into hysterics over the thought that he should pay the penalty of murder with his life,—all of which usually results from the exact opposite of the evangelical spirit and indicates a lax estimate of moral evil. But the real and practical prison reform is done by the disciples of Him, who was magnifying the law and revealing the untold sinfulness of sin at the very moment that he absolved the penitent thief and with pierced hand unlocked for him the gates of Paradise.

But while we do this, and do it more thoroughly, let us not leave undone the vaster and more essential reform which does not begin at the prison door. Let us learn to put small trust in our godless common school system, or in any growth of "intelligence." Let us not be satisfied with an hour a week of Sunday-school work. Let the Church of to-day bend all its energies to the question of not merely what can be done, but what should be abandoned in the way of exclusive and stereotyped and commercial methods, in order to bring back the masses to their only hope for this life or the next. And let all friends of God and man unite in the movement to shut up the liquor saloon, whose side-door leads to the jail, and its back-door to the prison-house of despair.

To-morrow a ten years' undertaking, and an act of remarkable international courtesy, will be crowned by the dedication of the completed Bartholdi Statue, presented by the French people to the people of America as their Centennial offering. It will awaken anew the gratitude of our countrymen for the essential and chivalrous aid rendered by the French in our war of independence. It occurs at an auspicious time, when that gallant and much struggling nation has also secured what promises to be a stable republic, and not less when the truth which alone makes "free indeed" is regaining a hearing and a welcome in the land of the Huguenot. Shall there not be an increased interest awakened among the Protestant Christians of America for the evangelization of France? And may we not hope that the attention of that people will be drawn, as never before, to the origin and foundation of our liberties—in the Gospel and the religion and the stern morality, which the pioneers of the new world brought to New England and New Amsterdam. Let it be as true of our "liberty enlightening the world," as of the great torch of 30,000 candle-power, that "its light is thrown upward" as well as over the dark surface of the sea and land.

I trust that there will be no shamefacedness, nor unfaithfulness to the truth of history, in the frank expression of this fundamental fact and principle at the dedication services. And all the more because the distinguished sculptor himself has given it as his opinion, that the donors of the statue not only had no such thought in their mind but no such belief in their hearts.

The spasms of virtue which the press and the theatre-going public have recently displayed are as absurd as they are saddening. Who imagines that the reaction against the Violet Cameron outrage upon public decency arose from any objection to the woman's character, or her relations to the noble lord who acts as her showman? How many of our ladies would have stayed away from the theatre, if the scandal had not been so flaunted before the public as to acquire the taint of vulgarity? How many of them would fail to go to see Bernhardt, or nine out of ten of the actresses of the day, whose lives will no better bear investigation? There have been probably half a dozen notable actresses of late years, whose characters were unreproached, but all the rest—including perhaps the most distinguished representative of the English stage to-day—have been notorious for their impropriety.

And here, as I have said again and again, is the root of this whole question of the theatre and its irredeemable immorality. Few modest women will contemplate a career of such publicity, subjecting them to such situations and relations with men on the stage, and obliging them to act characters and speak language which they would shrink from in private life. Or, if modest when they enter upon their profession, the corrupting atmosphere they breathe, and the steady pressure and almost violence of temptation, are pretty sure to result either in their fall or their retirement. And where the women are such, the men will be still worse. The plays will take their tone from the players, and the play-goer will be steadily degraded and benumbed in his moral instincts, and changed into the image of that upon which he looks.

The attitude of the morning press of New York toward the Lonsdale-Cameron scandal, and its selection for reprobation of the "Violet" ray in the glaring rainbow of theatrical immorality, were simply ludicrous. All the time, these horrified papers were not only giving their readers the minuted details of the relations between these parties, but perfuming their sheets daily with polecat odors of every similar scandal which they could obtain or invent.

The latest curiosity of journalism is the "special cable dispatches" from England, on which the papers pride themselves, and which are even "copyrighted," lest some less enterprising rival should appropriate the precious nuggets of exclusive news. These dispatches are in the first person, and in the most authoritative terms. The writers are simply omniscients, and speak not only from behind the scenes but behind the throne. I have wondered at times whether it was Salisbury or the Prince of Wales or Bismarck, who was revealing the secrets of cabinets and forecasting the future. The fun is that these respective correspondents will give us, with equal dogmatism of imperial assertion, each having "come directly from one who speaks with the highest authority," and being "able to say without a shadow of a doubt," precisely contrary reports. And even more have I been amused, where news has been authentic, to find usually in the "Associated Press dispatches" the very same information which these specially inspired correspondents flaunt in our faces, together with a great deal more and later intelligence.

Another feature of the enterprising journalism of our day is the increasing abridgment of the foreign news to the smallest compass. This might be a virtue, if the same course were pursued in the editing and sifting of the home news. Half a column will be given to the great world events which are going on in Great Britian, the Balkan Provinces and China, and in all Europe and Asia, Africa and South America, while page after page will be covered with a mass of petty, local, unassorted, disagreeable, and largely defiling items gathered from every nook and corner of the land. Why need this be? And is it not an utter mistake to suppose that the public want such a waste-basket (not to say, swill-tub) emptied upon them every day?

That this spreading and spinning out is not necessary is strikingly illustrated to my eye every day, by the fact that my evening paper compresses all the essential news since its last issue into a column or less. So that I might dispense with my morning paper, and still not lose anything of importance in the events of the time. Let one try it, if he would realize what a vast amount of rubbish we get in these papers, and have to rake over in order to get the few grains of real value. Why should we not have a morning paper of character and ability which shall give us the news in some such condensed, selected, and expurgated form, without column after column of mostly trashy and repetitious editorials, and the rest made up more as the best Sunday papers are made up, of interesting and instructive general reading? Or, better yet, why not give us a smaller paper at a cheaper price? Oh, for an editor who conceives of his business as something distinct from that of a stoker or a stevedore, with nothing to do but to shovel in all that comes to hand!

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

PRINCETON, N. J., October 12th, 1886.

In a Theatre.

FIDDLE sounds, in a foul, pent place;
Seams of sin on every face

Uplooking there from the seats below,
Foul-mouthed men and a shameless show.

A young girl stepping upon the stage,
Singing songs is half her wage;

Selling her soul the other half,
They greet her now with a jeering laugh.

A face that somehow hints of good,
Though stamped with all of the demonhood

That comes to souls that God made white
Given over to shame and night.

And lo! she sings. The song that broke
From her lips had naught of jibe or joke.

'Twas "Annie Laurie," and her face
Lost, the while, its old disgrace,

Her voice grew soft and sweet and clear;
She sang as though the words were dear.

Till the angel woke in every man,
And memories stirred as memories can;

Though seeming dead for long, wrong years;
Memories stirred and so did tears.

The reeking air turned meadow-sweet
And daisies danced beneath their feet,

While each man walked with his love or bride
In the morning-break on the mountain side.

She ceased. No sound of plaudits came
From the mute-grown men in that place of shame;

But one man sobbed, and the rest were still;
And the God above had worked His will.

—Richard E. Burton, in The Advance.

Fishing for Souls.

BY THE REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D.

ON a certain bright morning, long centuries ago, two fishermen were on the shore of the sea of Galilee washing their nets. Two others, named John and James, are near by mending their nets in a smack. Our Saviour comes in sight, followed by a multitude of people, and wanting a pulpit to address the crowd, He uses Peter's boat for the purpose. As soon as His discourse is finished He turns to His four disciples and gives the order, "Launch out into the deep."

Impulsive, quick-spoken Peter—who has been wittily called "the Irishman of the Apostles"—replies in a desponding tone, "We have been toiling all night and caught nothing." Just so, many a pastor and many a Sunday-school worker has often felt. The business of every minister and of every Christian laborer is to fish for souls. Honest efforts sometimes result in empty nets and disappointment. "I have preached as well as I know how, but I have seen few or no conversions." The teacher says, "My instructions and prayers do not seem to have brought my scholars to Christ." What then? Will you give up?

Listen to ardent Peter. He is despondent over the past; but he is not discouraged or despairing over the future. So he grasps the oar and, with hopeful alacrity, he is ready to sally out for another venture. "Nevertheless, Lord," he exclaims, "at Thy word we will let down the net." There spake out a resolute faith and a ready obedience. In those clarion words is a motto for every pastor, every church, and every band of Christian workers at the beginning of a fresh year of labor after the summer scatterings.

Faith never gives up under failures. Faith is eager o pull out and try another throw of the net, if Jesus will only go along in the boat. Let us make sure of that; let us not launch out this year without imploring the presence of the Master with us. Then let us set the bow of the boat toward the deep water, and pull at the oar of thorough, conscientious, faithful work. The fish are in the deep water, and we must go where they are; while we linger and loiter in the shallow water they will not come to us. When Jesus appointed His disciples to be "fishers of men," He did not bid them sit down and wait for sinners to come to them. "How to reach the masses?" is the stereotyped question, to which the best answer is—go after them. The church or the mission school which will not do this can expect nothing but empty nets and the guilt of neglected duty.

Suppose that all our churches, in resuming their spiritual operations this season, should nobly and zealously determine to break over the old barriers and launch out into more aggressive work. Into the neglected regions where sin and misery abound, let the Gospel be carried; the sinners of the slums will never come to us; we must plunge into the slums. The dram shops are sending souls to hell by the thousands; why should not God's people "move on the enemy's works?" In all our church edifices why not fill up the dreary emptiness on Sabbath evenings by throwing open all the pews free, and doing our utmost to draw in the non-church-going multitudes? If past methods of preaching have failed, why not try more fire, more simplicity, and a more practical, soul-stirring style of spiritual fishery? If the Master bids us lay hold of the oar of earnest, prayerful, aggressive work for perishing souls, what will likely be the result?

Look at the disciples on Gennesareth and you will see. They have pulled out into the deep water; they have lowered their basket-nets, just as the Master commanded them. Lo and behold, a multitude of fishes are enclosed, and the net is beginning to break! Peter signals to John to bring his boat alongside and help gather in the prodigious "haul." Up comes the other smack, eager to have a hand in the exciting partnership; not a single fish must be allowed to escape. (In like manner might a Dutch Church which could not cover a mission field invite help from their Presbyterian neighbors; and if there is a revival under way in a Methodist Church, let their Baptist and Congregationalist neighbors catch the fire and coöperate.) The two little vessels on Galilee were soon so overloaded that they threaten to sink; and Peter throws himself down in adoring wonder and cries out that he is unworthy of such a marvellous blessing. "Depart from me, Lord, for I am a sinful man!" That was Peter's way of saying what we ministers sometimes say in times of glorious revivals when we realize how much more God is giving us than we deserve.

"Follow Me," says Jesus lovingly to His disciples, "and I will make you fishers for men." The loaded boats are pulled ashore; faith has found its rich reward, and hard work in obedience to Christ ends in a fulness of blessings. Is there not an instructive and inspiring object-lesson for us all in this scene on Galilee? Sure we have been that all spiritual labors that were undertaken without the presence and the power of the Divine Spirit have ended in total failure. Sure, also, we may be, that when we launch out at Christ's direction, and in humble, honest co-operation with Him, we shall find His promises fulfilled. This will be a good fishing season in every church that has faithful arms at the net and the Lord Jesus in the boat.

The Presbyterian "Ministers' House" in Perth Amboy.

BY THE REV. WM. HALL.

THIS attractive "Rest for the Weary," established two or three years ago by gift to the Presbyterian Church, by Dr. Bruen, its patrimonial owner, for the use of aged and invalid clergymen and their widows and orphans, is a very prominent object in New Brunswick's neighbor city on Raritan Bay, and, as a most worthy institution of a sister Church, claims a reverent and admiring notice.

This stately building was erected long before the Revolutionary War, by the Board of Proprietors of East New Jersey, and, early in that crisis, was the residence of Governor Franklin, who was arrested in it for his Tory proclivities. Some sixty years since I first noticed it, on a trip to New Brunswick by a steamboat, commanded by the subsequent millionaire and railroad king, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt. It was then the family mansion of a Mr. Bruen, a tall, dignified, silver-haired gentleman, of benignant aspect, whom I remember once to have seen. But, by a recent brief call at this House on one of its venerable ministerial guests, the writer has obtained a more familiar acquaintance.

In the report of the Presbyterian Board of Relief, the Rev. Dr. Cattell, its indefatigable Secretary, thus speaks of this beautiful and benevolent establishment: "The 'Ministers' House' at Perth Amboy is most pleasantly situated near the sea. It is a noble old mansion, shaded by ancient trees, in the midst of a park of seven acres. A large and very excellent library has been collected and arranged in a room well adapted for the purpose, so that habits of reading and study may not be interrupted by a removal to the Home. The effort of the Board, in all the arrangements, has been to meet the wishes of the Church, in providing the guests a plain, but well-appointed and comfortable Christian home, where not only the honored veterans of the Church may find rest, but where those who have been broken down in the midst of their years, may find refreshing and healing."

The report from those within the house is in full harmony with the above. Says one of those who have felt its benefits, an aged minister, "I have enjoyed the comforts of this pleasant House for more than two years, and have found it to be most admirably adapted to the purpose for which it was designed. Any person who would not be satisfied and thankful here, could not be anywhere." Another is "not only content, but happy, in this Paradise of the Church; free from past toils and trials."

It seems that, during the past year, a member of the Baptist Church, in Germantown, Pa., has bequeathed nearly $300,000 for a similar Home for Baptist ministers. Whether such a provision for aged and infirm ministers of the Word in the Reformed Church is called for, the writer of the present article is not informed.

Sir William Dawson, F.R.S., F.G.S.

PRINCIPAL DAWSON, as he has long been known, knighted by the Queen a year or two ago, the famous geologist, is now about sixty-six years old. He is one of the foremost men of science of this century, and one of the highest authorities in physical geography and geology. He is a native of Nova Scotia and received his academic training in the college of Pictou. Afterward he studied for a year in the University of Edinburgh, then returned to Nova Scotia, and engaged with ardor in geological research. In 1842 he accompanied Sir Charles Lyell during his tour in Canada, and immediately after gave special attention to the carboniferous rocks of Nova Scotia. In the autumn of 1846 he returned to the University of Edinburgh and obtained the ordinary literary and classical education, and also a knowledge of Hebrew, which he has used with great effect in some of his works.

In 1847 he was married to an Edinburgh lady, the youngest daughter of Mr. George Mercer. Besides sympathizing fully with her husband in his scientific researches, she has sustained his faith by her high Christian character and won admiration by her devotion to beneficent Christian work.

In 1850, when thirty years of age, Mr. Dawson was chosen as Superintendent of Education for Nova Scotia, and for three years rendered service of the highest value during the formative period in that province of schools and educational institutions. He was prominent in the establishment of the national Normal School, and in founding the University of New Brunswick.

In 1855 he became the Principal and Professor of Natural History in McGill College and University, located at Montreal, a position he still holds. Under his superintendence the institution has prospered much beyond the expectation of those who projected it. Besides, Dr. Dawson has had the Protestant Normal School under his care, from which vantage ground he has exerted an influence upon the whole school system of the country.

While attending faithfully and effectively to these educational duties, his scientific labors have been great and constant, and the results of his researches have been published in articles in scientific journals and popular magazines and in a series of volumes, all of the highest scientific value. He has also frequently delivered courses of popular lectures on scientific themes.

Sir William Dawson is a member of the Presbyterian Church and, notwithstanding his many duties, conducts Bible classes for students, Sabbath-school teachers, and others, when at home in Montreal. "The Bible," he says, "has been my strength from day to day."

A year ago he was elected President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and delivered a memorable address at its annual meeting of last August.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not therwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

Woman's Missionary Convention.

THE fifth annual convention of the Women's Missionary Societies of the Classis of Westchester was held in the Reformed Church of Peekskill, Rev. Mr. De Vries, pastor, on Thursday, Oct. 14th. The meeting was well attended, delegates from nine churches being present.

At the morning session, which opened at 10.30, three interesting papers were read. The first was entitled "How the Heathen Pray." The second, upon "The Burden of Church Work resting Upon the Few; Its Evil and Its Cure," was followed by a practical and useful discussion upon the hindrances in trying to organize and sustain societies. The subject of the third paper was, "What is the Primary Object of Missionary Societies? Is It Money-raising?"

Interesting and encouraging reports of the work done in the eight societies in the Classis were presented, showing that the money contributed through them during the past year had amounted to $1,390 98

After a pleasant intermission of an hour, during which lunch was served, the afternoon session opened with an address by Mrs. Booth, of Ferris Seminary, Japan. She spoke of the beginning of missionary work in Japan, and of the great success of the work done in the schools to-day. Mrs. Horton, of Staten Island, then made a stirring address upon "How to Give Interest to Our Societies," dwelling much upon the importance of missionary work in the West. A paper upon "The Needs of the Western Fields," was followed by another paper giving news from the Western missionaries.

The convention was animated with a desire for more personal consecration to missionary work, and the fact that results are not to be expected without it was dwelt upon. Earnestness and deep interest were manifested, and we feel sure that the convention must prove helpful and stimulating to all present. N.

... The Classis of Westchester met at Fordham, New York city, on Tuesday, Oct. 19th. All but one church were represented. The Rev. Wm. E. Turner preached the Classical sermon. The pastoral relation between the Rev. J. A. Todd, D.D., and the Second Church of Tarrytown, which has existed for 31 years, was dissolved. The usual routine business was transacted. The recommendations of General Synod in regard to missionary work, education, etc., were endorsed. Classis approved the new Optional Forms, and also concurred in the assessment for the entertainment of General Synod. Revs. J. J. Rankin, W. A. Dumont, Henry De Vries, and Elders Geo. N. Williams, John Pagan and George Silver were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference. The Church of Fordham entertained the Classis handsomely in a feast of Christian love. The session of Classis was more than usually full and interesting. S. C.

....The Classis of New York met on the 19th of October and spent the day in the transaction of various items of business. During the past year it has suffered the loss of several of its most valued members, and minutes of respect to the memory of these were unanimously passed. It rejoices, however, in the addition to its number of those whose assistance it highly values. Rev. A. E. Kittredge was received as a member of Classis, and arrangements were made for his installation as pastor of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church on the evening of November 3d, at 8 o'clock. The reports of the Missionary Agents for the past twelvemonth were full of encouragement, and Classis resolved to do all in its power to raise the amounts apportioned it by the Corresponding Secretaries of the Boards for the current year. Much pleasure was expressed in the hopeful outlook of the German Church of Yorkville, which has, with the aid of the Church Extension Committee of the Classis, bought property in East 84th street, and hopes soon to build. A committee was appointed to arrange for special religious services in such churches as desire them, similar to those of last winter, from which so much benefit was realized. For the development of certain needy fields in the upper part of the city the services of a missionary—probably a student of our own Theological Seminary at New Brunswick—will be secured, and Classis hopes to be able soon to report the organization of a new mission.

In view of the needy condition of the farming region of Texas, Classis approved of a resolution recommending the matter to the benevolent consideration and action of all our people.

Altogether the session of Classis was a very encouraging one, and great hopes are entertained of the progress of our Church in the city during the coming winter. S. C.

....The South Classis of Bergen met on the 19th inst. in the Lafayette Church in Jersey City and held two very pleasant sessions. It was resolved that on the evening of the day on which Classis may meet next spring a Sunday-school convention should be held, at which all the Sunday-schools connected with the Classis should be represented. The matters sent down from the General Synod were attended to, and approval given to the amendments to the Constitution endorsed by the Synod. Foreign and Domestic Missions were discussed and the churches earnestly urged to come up to the apportionment proposed by the Boards. The Revs. Wm. W. Knox, E. A. Meury, James F. Riggs and Wm. R. Duryee were appointed delegates to the Brooklyn Conference on Missions. Rev. C. F. A. Klein was dismissed to the Classis of Iowa. D.

....The North Classis of Long Island met in the Reformed Church of Williamsburgh, on Tuesday, Oct. 19th, 1886. The sermon was preached in the evening by the Rev. W. S. Cranmer, from Matt. 4: 7, "It is written again."

The pastoral relation between the Rev. G. Van Emerick and the Reformed Church of Sayville was declared dissolved. The Classis having approved a call made by the German Evangelical St. Peter's Church of Brooklyn, E. D., upon the Rev. J. C. Guenther, who was received by letter of dismission from the Newark Presbytery, arrangements were made for his installation.

The Revs. A. Hageman, Chas. I. Shepard and H. C. Berg, and Elders A. H. Downer and Peter Van Dyck were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference to be held on the 26th and 27th inst. in the Twelfth Street Reformed Church, Brooklyn.

The proposed Constitutional amendment in regard to the Optional Forms was approved by the Classis. The Classis also "approved and commended to the several pastors and churches the various recommendations relating to the work of the Church." And Resolved, That the churches of our Classis be urged to increased effort for the cause of Domestic Missions, so that if possible we may raise the $2,400 apportioned to us.

The Rev. H. C. Berg was appointed Domestic Missionary Agent for the Classis. The Rev. A. Hageman is Foreign Missionary Agent for the Classis.

Classis resolved to pay the special assessment for the entertainment of delegates at the next meeting of the General Synod. S. C.

....The Classis of Philadelphia met at Addisville, Pa., Oct. 19th, every church being represented. The acts and recommendations of General Synod received attention, and special consideration was given to the different Boards of the Church. The proposed change in the method of entertaining the delegates to General Synod was approved, and arrangements were made to raise the amount of the expenses apportioned to this Classis.

The following were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference in Brooklyn: Primarii, Revs. Saml. Streng, W. R Taylor; Elders Charles Lefferts, C. Hunt; secundi, Revs. W. H. Clark, D.D., C. W. Pitcher; Elders John Supplee, Richard Carter.

S. C.

....The Classis of Poughkeepsie met in the Church of Cold Spring Oct. 19th. Rev. J. E. Lyall was appointed Missionary Agent. Revs. J. B. Campbell, M. B. Thomas, J. E. Lyall, and Elder C. C. More were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference in Brooklyn.

Special attention was given to the Disabled Ministers' Fund, and the churches of the Classis were earnestly recommended to contribute to its increase. Mr. H. Garabed and Mr. Walter T. Scudder were recommended to the Board of Education.

The ladies of the church, after their custom, spread a bountiful table in the lecture-room and entertained the Classis in a manner which called forth hearty expressions of thankfulness. S. C.

....The Classis of New Brunswick met in the Suydam Street Church, New Brunswick, on Oct. 19th. Revs. Alexander McWilliam, Jas. Cruikshanks, and Elder Thomas Cooper were appointed delegates to the Missionary Conference. The following Overture was adopted, to be sent to the General Synod:

Whereas, The time of the General Synod is fully occupied by its regular general business, so that it is desirable to diminish the burdens laid upon it; therefore,

Resolved, That this Classis overture the General Synod to recommend to the Classes for adoption an alteration in the Constitution, whereby the Particular Synods shall be the final courts of appeal, except in cases involving matters of doctrine, in which case the General Synod shall remain, as at present, such final court of appeal.

In reference to aiding Asiatic students, who come from the mission fields to study for the ministry, the Classis took the following action, while recommending two such students for the present:

Resolved, That the Boards of Education and Foreign Missions be requested to consider and decide what is the proper course to be pursued in reference to aiding Asiatic students, who come to this country to prepare for the ministry.

The following minute was recorded:

Whereas, It pleased our heavenly Father on the 24th of August, 1886, to call to his rest and reward our co-presbyter, the Rev. John Addison Van Doren, who was for twenty-eight years the faithful and beloved pastor of one of the churches of this Classis; therefore be it Resolved, 1. That we, the ministers and elders of the Classis of New Brunswick, do place upon our records our testimony as to the fidelity and zeal of our father and brother, Rev. John A. Van Doren, as a minister of our Lord Jesus Christ.

2. That we recognize with wonder and submission the mysterious ways of Providence, in laying aside, by broken health, this gifted servant for nearly a score of years.

3. That in view of his long membership of this Classis; the interest he always manifested in its proceedings and labors; and the wisdom of his counsel and the fervor of his prayers in our deliberations, he is entitled to our grateful remembrance.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the family of our deceased associate, with the tender of our sincere condolence in their bereavement, and that the same be published in The Christian Intelligencer.

Stated Clerk.

....The Classis of Illinois met in the Church of Havana, September 21st. Rev. Mr. Phraner preached the Classical sermon. A missionary meeting was held during the evening of the second day.

On joint application the pastoral relation between Rev. F. A. Force and the Churches of Spring Lake and Manito was dissolved. Also, that between Rev. C. Oostenbrugge and the Church of Raritan. Rev. A. G. Zigeler was appointed stated supply of Churches of Havana, Spring Lake and Manito.

A committee was appointed to organize a church, with English preaching, in Chicago, should the way be clear.

All the Synodical injunctions were carefully noted, and whenever needed, urged upon the churches.

Rev. G. Huyser was elected Foreign Mission Agent, and Rev. W. H. Phraner Agent for the Board of Domestic Missions.

The following minutes were adopted:

Whereas, This Classis has heard with great sorrow of the death of Rev. J. F. Morris at Bushnell, Ill.; and

Whereas, This brother has been a devoted servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, and has spent a large part of his life in laboring to build up the kingdom of Christ in general, and the Reformed Church in particular, within the bounds of our Classis; and

Whereas, His wise counsels and words of cheer were always highly appreciated; therefore be it

Resolved, 1. That we deeply deplore the loss of this aged member of our Classis, who has been removed by death to the mansions on high.

2. That we sympathize with the family of the deceased in their sorrow and affliction, and commend them to the tender care of that God who has bidden the widows and the fatherless to trust in Him.

3. That a copy of above be sent to the family; also published in the Intelligencer.

Whereas, The sad intelligence has just been received of the departure from this life of Rev. A. Thompson at Readington, September 18th; and

Whereas, Rev. Thompson organized the Second Church of Pella, and was its faithful and zealous pastor for twelve years, and also served the Church of Pekin one year; and

Whereas, This Classis recognized his eminent counsel, sound judgment and wise advice in things pertaining to the Classis and the Church at large; therefore

Resolved, 1. That we bow with humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, in removing by death, after a painful sickness of more than a year, a much esteemed friend and eminent servant of the Lord from the church militant to the church triumphant.

2. That we hereby tender our hearty sympathy to the deeply afflicted widow and children, as well as to the aged father and brothers and sisters, in this their sore trial and bereavement.

3. That above preamble and resolutions be published in the Intelligencer and De Hope, and a copy be sent to the widow. S. C.

....The Pastors' Association met Monday morning at 34 Vesey street and listened to a paper on "Scriptural Chronology," by Dr. J. S. Van Dyke." Next Monday Rev. I. W. Gowen will read a paper on "Development of the Prayer-Meeting."

...The Gleaner.—Subscriptions for The Mission Gleaner expired with the last (Sept.-Oct.) number. Will the friends of the magazine please send in their names promptly, and also earnestly endeavor to secure new names and an increased circulation? We desire to make this periodical entirely self-supporting, and it can be done only by individual effort of friends in our churches. Price, 25 cents per year. Send orders to Mr. R. Brinkerhoff, 34 Vesey street, New York.

....Dr. Forsyth.—At the meeting of the Classis of New York, held Oct. 19th, the following was adopted as a tribute of respect to the memory of Rev. J. Forsyth, D.D.

The Classis has learned of the death of the Rev. J. Forsyth, D.D., LL. D., and adopts the following minute:

The close of his life of eminent usefulness awakens our profound sorrow. His natural abilities, enriched with varied scholarship and large experience, peculiarly fitted him for the fields of service to which at different periods of his life he was called; as pastor in Philadelphia and Newburgh; as Professor in the Theological Seminary of the Associate Reformed Church at Newburgh; in the College of New Jersey at Princeton; in Rutgers College at New Brunswick, and as Professor and Chaplain in the United States Military Academy at West Point.

His sound judgment made him an invaluable counsellor to his friends, in public positions of trust and in ecclesiastical assemblies, of which our experience enables us to speak with strong conviction. His genial, social qualities endeared him to a very large circle of friends, who will mourn that they shall hear his voice and see his face no more in his happy home, which was the seat of a refined, Christian hospitality. His kindness and beneficence toward men, and his simple, unaffected piety toward God crowned a beautiful character and life. Called in Providence to occupy important positions, grace was given him to make his wide-reaching influence always felt in behalf of truth and righteousness. He devoutly reverenced the Holy Scriptures, and fed upon their revelations as the bread and the water of life. It was his joy to place himself and every attainment at the feet of "Jesus Christ and Him crucified." He was loyal to the Saviour whom he loved and in whom he trusted. He was never happier than when proclaiming "the unsearchable riches of Christ." We mourn the loss of a brother beloved and honored. We will cherish his memory with tender and affectionate regard. We commend to the God of all comfort the widow, bereft in her feebleness of the companion on whom she has leaned for so many years.

....Paramus, N. J.—The Rev. J. C. Van Deventer preached his farewell sermon last Sabbath, after a very fruitful pastorate of seven years. There was a large audidience present at the concluding services. Mr. Van Deventer's departure for his new field is a matter of universal regret by the people of Paramus. In his sermon he stated that the additions to the church had been, on confession 55, by certificate 33, making a total of 88.

....Fishkill, N. Y.—A musical concert was given in the church, Oct. 13th, which was enjoyed by a large audience, and netted the young people about $55.

....Newark, N. J.—The Second Church have begun their new house of worship on Pacific street and New York avenue. The chapel, to contain Sabbath-school and lecture-room, will be built first; the main building will probably not be begun until the old church edifice is disposed of. The designs for the new chapel and church present a neat and tasty structure that will prove an ornament to the part of the city in which the church is to be located.

....Personal.—Rev. C. I. Shepard, of Newtown, L. I., has been tendered a unanimous call from the Church of Flatbush, Ulster Co., N. Y.... The Second Church of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has extended a call to Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, of Plainfield, N. J....Rev. Geo. Scarlett preached his last sermon as pastor of the Church at Peapack, N. J., Sunday, Oct. 17th....The Sloan Prizes for the best and second best entrance examinations to Rutgers College were awarded to J. F. Berg, of Albany, N. Y., and Alexander Van Wagoner, of Paterson, N. J....Rev. D. C. Preyer, of Newark, N. J., has received a call from the Church of Franklin, N. J.

....Western Items.—A meeting is called of all those interested in and who desire the organization of an English-speaking Reformed Church in the city of Chicago. The object is to gather the young and English-speaking portion of all the Hollanders in the city and form them into a church. A good move in the right direction. The work is under the supervision of a committee of the Classis, with Rev. W. H. Phraner as chairman....A church is to be built this fall at Spring Creek, and another at Platte Creek, Charles Mix Co., Dakota....The parsonage at Alton, Iowa, is undergoing great improvements and is about ready to receive the new pastor, Rev. Jas. F. Zwemer.

...Rev. E. W. Bentley, D.D., died on Saturday last at his residence at Canton Centre, Conn., in his 61st year. He was born near Lee, Mass., graduated from Yale College in 1850 and from the East Windsor, now Hartford, Theological Institute in 1854, and became the pastor of the Reformed Church of Ellenville, N. Y., during the same year, where he remained thirty years, retiring on account of failing health. For many years he has been a Trustee of the Hartford Seminary. He was a faithful minister, an able preacher and sympathetic pastor, and a valuable and genial friend. He served wisely among us on important committees, was for years the efficient Stated Clerk of the large Classis of Orange, where he was highly esteemed and was one of the most influential members. The Church of Ellenville was about fourteen years old when he became its second pastor. It grew into a strong organization under his care. Since his retirement two years ago from active service, Dr. Bentley's health has varied very much. At one time he has been quite well and again much disabled. He adhered conscientiously and intelligently to the faith of the Reformed Church, and engaged heartily in all the educational and mission schemes of the Church. His pastorate was one of constant usefulness.

....The Classis of Paramus met on Monday at the Synod's Rooms. A joint application was received from the Church of Paramus and the Rev. John C. Van Deventer, asking for a dissolution of the pastoral relation existing between them. The request was granted, the dissolution to take effect Oct. 25th. A call was presented by the Church of Nyack upon the Rev. John C. Van Deventer, which was approved and accepted, and arrangements were made for his installation.

....Bedford Reformed Church of Brooklyn.—Nearly six years ago Rev. Walter T. Griffin was called to the pastorate of this church, then but a small, weak band. He engaged in the work before him with all his heart and soul. In the pulpit, and from house to house, has he labored to do his Master's work, and great results have followed these labors and the prayers of God's people there. Over three hundred souls have been added to the church during these six years. But now Mr. Griffin has been obliged to resign his place as pastor of this flock, for he has labored beyond his strength. His health has been failing for the past two years, until now, by the advice of his physician and his friends, he has decided to rest for a year or more, trusting that, with God's blessing, he may recover strength and be enabled once again to resume work in the Master's vineyard.

On Saturday last, the 23d instant, he sailed with his wife and child on the steamer "Chateau Margeaux," for Bordeaux, France. It was a sad but interesting occasion. About one hundred of his congregation were there to see him off, and he embarked amidst tears and smiles, prayers and good wishes for a pleasant, safe voyage, his speedy restoration to health, and return to his native land, his relatives and friends. With the waving of handkerchiefs (as long as the vessel was in view) they departed on that beautiful autumn afternoon. On the previous Thursday evening a parting gathering of the congregation was held at the church. It was well nigh the entire congregation that was present. At its close a purse of about seven hundred dollars was placed in his hands as a token of the appreciation of his faithfulness. B.

At a special meeting of the Consistory of the Bedford Reformed Church, held on the evening of October 8th, 1886, the resignation of our beloved pastor, the Rev. Walter S. Griffin, on account of ill health, was received. It was accepted, and the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

We, the Consistory of the Bedford Reformed Church, having received from our pastor his resignation, do hereby Resolve, 1. That it is with sincere regret that we feel compelled to submit to the same sorrow at parting which he has expressed in his resignation of the pastorate.

2. That we desire here to place on the records of the church the deep sense of gratitude that we feel to him for his devoted, untiring and faithful work among us, and praise God for the work he has been permitted to do.

3. That in view of the work he has performed, and the sacrifices he has made, we feel ourselves morally bound, should our church be from any source relieved of its financial burdens, to give him one year's salary.

4. That, while accepting his resignation, we will earnestly pray for his speedy recovery of health, and will always cherish a most kind and grateful remembrance of him.

Praying, also, that many years of usefulness may be added to his life to labor in the Church of Christ, we bid him as pastor a sad adieu. J. A. Blake, Clerk.

....The South Classis of Long Island met in the Church of East New York on Tuesday, 19th inst.

Special resolutions were passed urging the churches to more earnest endeavors to secure more liberal collections for the Foreign and Domestic Missionary Boards. Rev. A. H. Brush was appointed Missionary Agent for the Board of Foreign Missions, and Rev. U. D. Gulick for that of Domestic Missions.

The students, Wm. V. D. Strong, son of the late Rev. Selah W. Strong, and Edgar Tilton, Jr., of Brooklyn, were commended to the Board of Education.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. D. N. Vanderveer, D.D., and the First Church of Brooklyn, was dissolved, and the following resolution heartily and unanimously passed:

Resolved, That Classis, in dissolving the relation existing between the Rev. D. N. Vanderveer and the First Reformed Church of Brooklyn, affirms its full and cordial confidence in the Christian character of Brother Vanderveer, as in the conscientious and unselfish motives which have actuated him in concurring in this request of the Consistory for a dissolution of relation existing between them.

The pastoral relation between the Rev. Walter T. Griffin and the Bedford Reformed Church was dissolved. The following action was taken:

Whereas, This Classis has learned with sorrow of the infirm health of the Rev. Mr. Griffin and consequent resignation of his pastorate; and

Whereas, His labors at the Bedford Church have been so arduous and self-sacrificing that his present physical condition is doubtless largely, if not entirely, consequent thereon; therefore

Resolved, That the Classis express their fraternal and affectionate sympathy with Brother Griffin in his present sore trial, and their earnest and prayerful hope that his contemplated rest and travel in foreign lands may be blessed to his speedy and complete restoration to health and to his chosen work as a preacher of the Gospel.

....The telegraph announces the death of the Rev. Robert West, D.D., at Sycamore, Ill., on Monday morning. For a few years he has edited The Advance, of Chicago, with great ability. He was in the prime of life, being only forty-one years old, and is a great loss to the Congregational Church and the Church at large.

News of the Week.

Wednesday, Oct. 20.—Jacob Sharp, James A. Richmond, James W. Foshay and Thomas B. Kerr, were indicted by the Grand Jury for bribery in connection with the Broadway Surface Railroad, and each held in $50,000 bail ...Abram S. Hewitt declines Henry George's challenge to a joint debate on the questions involved in the Mayoralty campaign....The will of the late Samuel J. Tilden is to be admitted to probate to day....An elevator falls and crushes a man to death at the new aqueduct. ....U. S. Senator Edmunds was re elected by the Vermont Legislature....A mob of Chicago packing-house strikers was fired on by Pinkerton's men; two men wounded.... Governor West, of Utah, reports, and urges additional anti polygamy legislation... The business portion of Oakland, Me., destroyed by fire; loss $300,000 ...Edward F. Hall, Jr., a Wall street broker, blows his brains out....Thomas M. Carnegie, the millionaire iron manufacturer of Pittsburg, Pa , is dead. ....Mr. Gladstone publishes an addendum to his pamphlet on the Irish question in the new edition....A Cabinet crisis is threatened in Paris. Prime Minister M. de Freycinet is trying to arrest it ...The Socialists decide to parade in London on Lord Mayor's Day in spite of the warning of the police....The revolutionists in Mexico are scheming to overthrow President Diaz....Emperor William is seriously ill.

Thursday, 21.—Turkey is massing troops along the Bulgarian frontier. The Bulgarian government is arranging with a London firm for a loan of £400,000 ...Earthquake shocks felt in Alsace, Lorraine and the Vosges....Hong Kong advices say that the French had a fight with about 2,000 pirates near Hooloc, Tonquin, and killed 500 Anamites....Moonlighters denounced by Bishop Nulty in Dublin....The land war is about to begin in Ireland. The resistance is to be made by estates—the rents refused by landlords to be formed into an estate fund available for tenants picked out for eviction....The General Assembly of the Knights of Labor at Richmond, Va., adjourned yesterday. It appeals for mercy in behalf of the condemned Chicago anarchists....Pinkerton guards were dismissed by the Chicago packers....Certain clauses of Mr. Tilden's will, admitted to probate yesterday, are to be submitted to the Supreme Court for construction ...The twenty-third annual convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Opera House, this city.... The Aqueduct Commissioners require $7,000,000 more for the work....John Jay read a paper before the Bedford Farmers' Club on "American Agricultural Products in the Markets of the World." ...An explosion followed by fire occurred yesterday at the Standard Oil Company's Works at Constable Hook, N. J. Loss $15,000....The first underground fire alarm telegraph was laid yesterday in Sixth avenue.

Friday, 22.—President Cleveland visits Richmond, Va., and makes a speech at the State Fair. A brilliant reception was tendered the President by Governor Lee.... Mr. Blaine visited Brownsville, Pa., his birthplace, yesterday....The National Convention of the Universalist Church, in session at Akron, Ohio, provide for a Board of Foreign Missions....The trial of Alderman Francis McCabe postponed until it shall have been ascertained whether he is of sound mind....Mayor Grace petitioned to appoint two females on the Board of Education....A shell exploded at Sandy Hook, killing Lieut. W. M. Medcalfe and Private Joseph King....The Chicago packing house strikers at work again. Knights of Labor denounce Pinkerton men....The schooner "George L. Smith," Gloucester, Mass., with fourteen men, missing since Aug. 14th. Supposed to be lost....The Binkley House, Sherman, Texas, destroyed by fire. Several persons badly burned and injured. Loss $70,000... The fate of Bulgaria still undecided....Passengers of the "Anchoria" adopt resolutions of thanks to Commander John G. Small, his officers and crew ...An Irish land agent was shot at in Kerry while riding along the highway.

(Continued on page twelve.)

Our Contributors.

Martyrs of Holland.

BY REV. DANIEL VAN PELT.

I. The First Martyrs of the Reformation.

THE Proto-Martyrs of the Reformation were not, so far as we know, natives of the Republic of the United (Northern) Netherlands; neither was the scene of their martyrdom within these provinces. Nevertheless, the significance of their position, and justice to their memory, eminently deserve and demand that to them we devote the first paper of our series.

On April 18th, 1521, Luther had announced his irrevocable decision before the Diet of the German Empire, assembled in the city of Worms, on the Rhine, in the memorable words, "Here I stand; I can do no otherwise. So help me, God. Amen." Luther was placed under the ban of the Empire; his teachings were condemned; their promulgation threatened with condign punishment.

Charles V. was Emperor of Germany, an electoral office not much more than an exalted title. Over the territories of the Empire he had little or no jurisdiction, excepting such as were his own hereditary possessions. But he was supreme Lord of Spain and the Netherlands. What here he wished to accomplish could be done by his mere word. In this same year, 1521, the first of his sanguinary and savage placards was issued, sentencing to death all adherents of the Reformation. These remained no dead letters; they bore horrible fruit in multiplied and multiform and frightful martyrdoms.

In the city of Antwerp there existed a monastery of the Augustinian Brotherhood. Luther was an Augustinian monk, and for a while it looked as if the Reformation might be no more than a controversy between different monastic orders. At any rate, in monasteries of his own order his writings were read with avidity, and his doctrines found early acceptance, while other orders felt bound to oppose him at first on the mere ground of monkish rivalry. The Antwerp brethren eagerly avowed a sympathy with Luther's sentiments, and as early as 1519 they preached these to ever-growing audiences in the church connected with their convent.* Soon after the placard of 1521, the Prior and one of his principal monks were arrested and sent to Brussels. The former retracted; the latter escaped both retraction and punishment; both were released.

Meantime the other brethren were not deterred from their evangelical preaching. So active and successful were they in disseminating Luther's principles, that the government was exasperated to the direst vengeance. The monks were all arrested, the host and sacred vessels were solemnly removed from the monastery, and the buildings razed to the ground. Most of the brethren, alarmed, and not prepared to die for their faith, recanted. But the Prior, Henry of Zutphen, and three of his monks remained firm, and suffered themselves to be led to prison. The fate of the Prior will form the subject of our next paper, and therefore we will dismiss him here with simply remarking that he was rescued from prison.

The three heroes of the faith with whom we have now to do were Lambert Thorn, John Voes and Henry Esch. They were imprisoned at Brussels, where Margaret of Austria, the aunt of Charles V., ruled as Regent over the Netherland Provinces. She was a bigoted Catholic, and entered with zest upon the enforcement of the emperor's placards to their fullest import.

No less than six theologians of the University of Louvain were commanded to repair to Brussels to conduct the examination of the prisoners. Being asked what they believed, they replied that they held the Apostles' Creed, and believed all that was contained in the Holy Scriptures; that, moreover, they believed in a Christian Church, but not in such an one as the Inquisitors recognized. In the second place, it was demanded of them, whether they accepted the decrees of the Councils and Fathers? They boldly answered, Only so far as they were consistent with, and did not gainsay the Divine Scriptures. A third question was, Whether they considered that those who disregarded the decrees of the Pope and the Fathers were guilty of death or damnation? To which they gave answer, that salvation or damnation hung upon the commandments of God, not upon human institutions.†

The 1st of July, 1523, should be a date deeply imprinted upon the memory of the Protestant world, for it marks the beginning of an epoch of as great significance to the Church of God as that begun by the martyrdom of Stephen, or by the first persecution under the Roman emperors. On the great Market Place of Brussels, overshadowed by the magnificent Town Hall, with its slender and lofty tower, surrounded on all sides by imposing buildings, some of which became memorable in the subsequent struggles for liberty of conscience, a vast assembly of people had gathered to behold a spectacle which was then happily a novel one to them, but which was soon to become all too familiar and frequent. In the centre of the square, on the spot where later flowed the blood of Egmont and Horne—and where, to day (strange mockery of former tragedies!) stands a music pavilion,—a scaffold was erected. The dignitaries of the Church and the Louvain professors, arrayed in their robes, were seated on chairs according to their rank. In the midst was placed a table, draped and arranged to represent an altar. The youngest of the three condemned heretics, a beardless youth, was made to kneel before this altar. At eleven o'clock the exercises began. After the Prior of the Grey Friars had preached a sermon, a bishop read the formula for degradation from the priesthood, and performed the accompanying ceremonies. This part of the performances lasted exactly one hour. At noon the youth was led back to prison, and the other two victims were each in turn brought forth to be subjected to the same public degradation from their holy office. This done, it remained but to execute upon them the sentence for heresy—to be burned alive at the stake. But for some unexplained reason one of their number, Lambert Thorn, was not led to execution. D'Aubigné seems to think that he was overcome by the fear of so frightful a death, and recanted. Another authority alludes to a report of this kind, but remarks that this does not seem probable, for in such a case the Inquisitors would have been but too glad to make as public an announcement of the recantation as possible. The Dutch historian of the Reformation, G. Brandt, upon the authority of Erasmus, gives it as his opinion that he was secretly put to death in prison.

To John Voes and Henry Esch, then, must be awarded the undoubted crown of martyrdom; to them belongs the distinction of having been the Proto-Martyrs of the Reformation. For them, at least, we know that the fires had no terrors. Calmly they answered, when the chief Inquisitor told them that, if they would even now recant, he had the power to release them: "Those are the words of Pilate; thou wouldest have no power at all over us, except it were given thee from above." They availed themselves of every opportunity to address the surrounding multitudes, and averred that they died as Christian men, believing in a Holy, Catholic, Christian Church. They declared that this was a day for which they had greatly longed; that to bind them to the stake was unnecessary, for they would clasp it with their own hands.

Nor were these words mere idle boasts. They remained steadfast and even cheerful when they had mounted the ominous pile of faggots. As if to try their fortitude, the fuel was lighted in such a manner that the flames advanced very slowly. The name of Jesus was constantly upon their lips; they repeated in concert the Apostles' Creed. As the fire crept nearer and nearer they diverted their attention from its cruelly slow approach, and supported each other in their holy firmness by singing, alternately, the several stanzas of the "Te Deum." When the ruddy tongues of fire began to leap up and lick their feet, one of them said: "These seem to me like roses which are being strewn on my pathway." But at last the choking fumes and the fearful torture took away consciousness and brought the welcome death, after they had finally in audible tones commended their souls unto God.

Even beyond death, however, the malice of their persecutors pursued them and sought to undermine their fair fame, and to stay the overpowering influence of their martyrdom. It was said that one of the victims, after death, had appeared to a brother monk, and had assured him that their souls were saved, since in the last extremity, in the midst of the fire and on the point of death, they had repented of their heresy, and the Virgin's intercession had wrought their pardon.*

But this "fable" was believed by no one. "The first blood that was shed in the Netherlands since the rise of Luther," as Brandt expresses himself, was of a kind with all that other "blood of the martyrs" which, from the times of the Fathers down, had ever proved "the seed of the Church." The keen-sighted Erasmus, not much in sympathy with martyrdom, wrote: "In Brussels they first burned two at the stake; and from that time on that city had marvellously favored Luther's teachings."*

"Luther himself gave these two martyrs their full meed of honor. "Your bonds," he exclaimed, "are my bonds, your dungeons are my dungeons, your fires my fires! We are all with you, and the Lord is at your head!"† He seemed filled with a solemn joy and holy gladness, that for that faith which he had been permitted to preach again in its purity, the Lord had raised up witnesses who shrunk not from the death of martyrdom in their maintenance of it. He wrote a hymn to commemorate the great event, and one of the stanzas has been thus translated:

> "Their ashes will not silent lie,
> But, scattered far and near,
> Stream, dungeon, bolt and grave defy—
> Their foeman's shame and fear.
> Those whom, in life, the tyrant's wrongs
> To silence could subdue,
> In death shall chant their joyous songs,
> Which in all languages and tongues,
> Shall fly the whole world through." ‡

"This hymn," says D'Aubigné, "was soon heard resounding throughout Germany and the Netherlands, in cities and the open country, and it everywhere increased the enthusiasm for the faith of these martyrs." ‖

Students for the Ministry.

BY REV. C. P. DITMARS.

WHY are there so few of the young men in our churches who enter the ministry? You may say "because they have not a call to the ministry;" but that will not fully answer the question. What constitutes a call to the ministry? It is of God; but does it not first of all have its root in a desire toward that work, and is not the desire often implanted and nurtured by a Christian father and mother, who have consecrated their child to the Lord.

A call to the ministry comes generally in answer to the prayers of parents who would willingly lend their sons to the Lord. And if parents to day had more of the spirit of pious Hannah, the Church would not cry for ministers; the perishing would not cry for missionaries. Take any class of young men in preparation for the ministry and ask the question, "Had you a praying father and mother, and did they consecrate you to this work?" The answer would come from four-fifths of them, "Yes." "What ever led you to choose the ministry as your work in life?" said one of the examining board to a young man just about to graduate from our Seminary. "My mother's consecration and my mother's prayers," came the quick response.

That is the key to the whole story in a large majority of cases. A mother's power over a child's whole life is almost unmeasured. Ample proof of this can be found, both in sacred and secular history. See how Hannah's prayer and consecration of Samuel to the Lord opened the way for his service in the Temple and his judgeship over Israel. See how our lamented Garfield gave nearly all the honor of his upward career as a statesman and a Christian to that mother who was the first to be saluted after he became President of the nation.

Keen intelligence, greatness and piety are most often the gift of a mother's love and care. They spring up and are nurtured under her early training. The child goes out bearing the impress of her heart and mind. He carries longest the sweet, patient tones of her voice. He feels continually the pleading power of her prayers. He cannot easily forget her anxious counsels. In the first ten or twelve years of the child's life she may shape that life for time and eternity. Oh, mothers, remember your power!

If you are Christian, your child ought to be Christian, too; and he will be, if you offer him to the Lord and train him for the Lord. "As long as he liveth he shall be lent to the Lord," has been the vow of many a mother since the days of pious Hannah. And its fulfilment has brought great glory to God, and much strength to His church in the world. It is on the spirit and consecration of the fathers and mothers of to-day, that the Church is to rest mainly for her future ministry. The power of a call from God usually moves through and in answer to a father's or mother's devoted counsels and prayers.

NISKAYUNA, N. Y.

---

* D'Aubigné, "Hist. de la Réform," Book X., Sec. 4, [illegible] Martelaarsboek,'. p. 90

* Brandt, Idem., p. 80.

† D'Aubigné.

Beggars of Holland and Grandees of Spain," Mears, p. 81.

‡ "Hist. de la Réfor." Book X., Sec. 4.

‖ Brandt, "Hist. der Reform," I., pp. 79, 80. He calls this a "fable,"

"Counting-out" Rhymes.

THOSE of us who have not forgotten the days and the plays of our childhood may still remember the rhymes with which, as children, we determined which one of our member was to be the leader or starter of the game in which we were about to engage.

Perhaps no one of these "counting-out" rhymes was more familiar than the doggerel beginning:

> "Aina, maina, mona, mike,
> Barcelona, bona, strike," etc.

Can you not recall the small finger pointed at each member of the little group about to play, while the rhyme was successively repeated until the last child was counted out with the decisive announcement, "now! you're it!"

Rhymes for this same purpose are used the world over by children of all nationalities.

A gentleman making a collection of these rhymes has found them existing in most of the known languages, although like the one to which we have referred, many of them are mere gibberish and untranslatable. Do any of the descendants of the Holland settlers bear in mind a rhyme of this kind in Dutch?

A lady born in Schiedam, Holland, has kindly furnished one used by the children there. If any of the rhymes formerly used by children in Dutch families in this country are still preserved in the memory of their descendants, we should be pleased to have such given through the columns of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Care should be taken in selecting only such as are "counting out" rhymes, and not mere nursery jingles.

GERTRUDE L. VANDERBILT.

"He's Coming To-morrow."

"THE night is far spent; the day is at hand."

My soul vibrated for a moment like a harp. Was it true? The night, the long night of the world's groping agony and blind desire, is it almost over? is the day at hand?

Again: "They shall see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, look up and rejoice, for your redemption is nigh."

Coming! The Son of Man really coming, coming into this world again with power and great glory? Will this really ever happen? Will this solid, commonplace earth see it? Will these skies brighten and flash, and will upturned faces in this city be watching to see Him coming?

So our minister preached in a solemn sermon; and for moments at times I felt a thrill of reality in hearing. But, as the well-dressed crowd passed down the aisle, my neighbor, Mr. Stockton, whispered to me not to forget the meeting of bank directors on Monday evening, and Mrs. Goldthwaite poured into my wife's ear a charge not to forget her party on Thursday; and my wife, as she came out, asked me if I had observed the extravagant toilet of Mrs. Pennyman.

"So absurd," she said, "when her income, I know, cannot be half what ours is! and I never think of sending to Paris for my things; I should look on it as morally wrong."

I spoke of the sermon. "Yes," said my wife, "what a sermon! so solemn. I wonder that all are not drawn to hear our rector. What could be more powerful than such discourses? My dear, by-the-by, don't forget to change Mary's opal ring for a diamond one. Dear me! the Christmas presents were all so on my mind that I was thinking of them every now and then in church; and that was so wrong of me!"

"My dear," said I, "sometimes it seems to me as if all our life were unreal. We go to church, and the things that we hear are either true or false. If they are true, what things they are! For instance, these Advent sermons. If we are looking for that coming we ought to feel and live differently from what we do! Do we really believe what we hear in church? or is it a dream?"

"I do believe," said my wife earnestly, (she is a good woman, my wife,) "yes, I do believe, but it is just as you say. O, dear! I feel as if I am very worldly—I have so many things to think of!" and she sighed.

So did I; for I knew that I, too, was very worldly. After a pause I said, "Suppose Christ should really come this Christmas, and it should be authoritatively announced that He would be here to-morrow?"

"I think," said my wife, "there would be some embarrassment on the part of our great men, legislators and chief councillors, in anticipation of a personal interview. Fancy a meeting of the city council to arrange a reception for the Lord Jesus Christ!"

"Perhaps," said I, "He would refuse all offers of the rich and great. Perhaps our fashionable churches would plead for His presence in vain. He would not be in palaces."

"O!" said my wife earnestly, "if I thought our money separates us from Him I would give it all—yes, all—might I only see Him."

She spoke from the bottom of her heart, and for a moment her face was glorified.

"You will see Him some day," said I, "and the money that we are willing to give up at a word from Him will not keep Him from us."

That evening the thoughts of the waking hours mirrored themselves in a dream.

I seemed to be out walking in the streets, and to be conscious of a strange, vague sense of something just declared, of which all were speaking with a suppressed air of mysterious voices.

There was a whispering stillness around. Groups of men stand at the corners of the street and discuss an impending something with suppressed voices.

I heard one say to another, "Really coming? What? to-morrow?" And the other said, "Yes, to-morrow; on Christmas day He will be here."

It was night. The stars were glittering down with a keen and frosty light; the shops glistened in their Christmas array; but the same sense of hushed expectancy pervaded everything. There seemed to be nothing doing; and each person looked wistfully on his neighbor as if to say, Have you heard?

Suddenly, as I walked, an angel-form was with me, gliding softly by my side. The face was solemn, serene and calm. Above the forehead was a pale, tremulous, phosphorous radiance of light, purer than any on earth—a light of a quality so different from that of the street lamps that my celestial attendant seemed to move in a sphere alone.

Yet, though I felt awe, I felt a sort of confiding love as I said, "Tell me, is it really true? Is Christ coming?"

"He is," said the angel. "To-morrow He will be here!"

"What joy!" I cried.

"Is it joy?" said the angel. "Alas, to many in this city it is only terror! Come with me."

In a moment I seemed to be standing with him in a parlor of one of the chief palaces of the city. A stout, florid, bald-headed man was seated at a table covered with papers, which he was sorting over with nervous anxiety, muttering to himself as he did so. On a sofa lay a sad-looking, delicate woman, her emaciated hands clasped over a little book. The room was, in all its appointments, a witness of boundless wealth. Gold and silver, and gems and foreign furniture, and costly pictures and articles of virtu—everything that money could buy—were heaped together; and yet the man himself seemed to me to have been neither elevated nor refined by the confluence of all these treasures. He seemed nervous and uneasy. He wiped the sweat from his brow and spoke:

"I don't know, wife, how you feel, but I don't like this news. I don't understand it. It puts a stop to everything that I know anything about."

"O John!" said the woman, turning toward him a face pale and fervent, and clasping her hands, "how can you say so?"

And as she spoke I could see breaking out above her head a tremulous light, like that above the brow of an angel.

"Well, Mary, it's the truth. I don't care if I say it. I don't want to meet—well, I wish He would put it off. What does He want of me? I'd be willing to make over—well, three millions, to found an hospital if He'd be satisfied and let me go on. Yes, I'd give three millions—to buy off from to-morrow."

"Is He not our best Friend?"

"Best Friend!" said the man, with a look of half fright, half anger. "Mary, you don't know what you're talking about? You know I always hated those things. There's no use in it; I can't see into them. In fact, I hate them."

She cast on him a look full of pity. "Cannot I make you see?" she said.

"No, indeed you can't. Why, look here," he added, pointing to the papers, "here is what stands for millions! To night it's mine; and to-morrow it will be all so much waste paper; and then what have I left? Do you think I can rejoice? I'd give half; I'd give—yes, the whole, not to have Him come these hundred years." She stretched out her thin hand toward him, but he pushed it back.

"Do you see?" said the angel to me solemnly; "between him and her there is a 'great gulf fixed.' They have lived in one house with that gulf between them for years! She cannot go to him; he cannot come to her. To-morrow she will rise to Christ as a dewdrop to the sun; and he will call to the mountains and rocks to fall on him—not because Christ hates him, but because he hates Christ."

Again the scene was changed! We stood together in a little low attic, lighted by one small lamp—how poor it was—a broken chair, a rickety table, a bed in the corner where the little ones were cuddling close to one another for warmth. Poor things! the air was so frosty that their breath congealed upon the bedclothes as they talked in soft, baby voices. "When mother comes she will bring us some supper," said they. "But I'm so cold!" said the little outsider. "Get in the middle, then," said the other two, "and we'll warm you. Mother promised she'd make a fire when she came in if that man would pay her." "What a bad man he is!" said the oldest boy; "he never pays mother if he can help it."

Just then the door opened and a pale, thin woman came in, laden with packages.

She laid all down, and came to her children's bed, clasping her hands in rapture.

"Joy! joy, children! O, joy, joy! Christ is coming. He will be here to-morrow."

Every little bird in the nest was up, and the little arms around the mother's neck; the children believed at once. They had heard of the good Jesus. He had been their mother's only friend through many a cold and hungry day, and they doubted not He was coming.

"O, mother! will He take us? He will, won't He?"

"Yes, my little ones," she said softly, smiling to herself; "He shall gather the lambs with His arms, and carry them in His bosom."

Suddenly again, as by the slide of a magic lantern, another scene was present.

We stood in a lonely room, where a woman was sitting with her head bowed forward upon her hands. Alone, forsaken, slandered, she was in bitterness of spirit. Hard, cruel tongues had spoken her name with vile assertions, and a thoughtless world had believed. There had been a babble of accusation, a crowd to rejoice in iniquity, and few to pity. She thought herself alone, and she spoke: "Judge me, O Lord! for I have walked in my integrity. I am as a monster unto many, but thou art my strong refuge."

In a moment the angel touched her. "My sister," he said, "be of good cheer. Christ will be here to-morrow."

She started up, with her hands clasped, her eyes bright, her whole form dilated, as she seemed to look into the heavens, and said with rapture:

"Come, Lord, and judge me; for thou knowest me altogether. Come, Son of Man, in thee have I trusted; let me never be confounded. O! for the judgment-seat of Christ!"

Again I stood in a brilliant room full of luxuries. Three or four fair women were standing pensively talking with each other. Their apartment was bestrewn with jewelry, laces, silks, velvets, and every fanciful elegance of fashion; but they looked troubled.

"This seems to me really awful," said one with a suppressed sigh. "What troubles me is, I know so little about it."

"Yes," said another, "and it puts a stop to everything! Of what use will all these be to-morrow."

There was a poor seamstress in the corner of the room, who now spoke. "We shall be ever with the Lord," she said.

"I'm sure I don't know what that can mean," said the first speaker, with a kind of shudder, "it seems rather fearful."

"Well," said the other, "it seems so sudden—when one never dreamed of such a thing—to change all at once from this to that other life."

"It is enough to be with Him," said the poor woman. "O, I have so longed for it!"

"The great gulf," again said the angel.

Then again we stood on the steps of a church. A band of clergymen were together. Episcopalian, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Old School and New School, all stood hand in hand.

"It's no matter now about these old issues," they said. "He is coming; He will settle all. Ordinations and ordinances, sacraments, creeds, are but the scaffolding of the edifice. They are the shadow; the substance is Christ." And hand in hand they turned their faces when the Christmas morning light began faintly glowing, and I heard them saying together, with one heart and voice:

"Come, Lord Jesus! come quickly."—Harriet Beecher Stowe, in Words and Weapons.

The Reading Room.

Holiday Books.

....“Little Lord Fauntleroy.” By Frances Hodgson Burnett. It is impossible not to be charmed with this delightful story. Written for children, and published as a serial in St. Nicholas,—that wonderful repository of good things for the little folks,—it deserves and is certain to receive the admiration of children of a larger growth and in a wider circle than the readers of that magazine. It is not only a beautiful story beautifully told, but its whole tone is fine and elevating, and, while never preaching, it shows the power and beauty of a simple, trustful, unselfish life, as no mere preaching could. Get it for your children, but be sure and read it yourself. It is generously and becomingly illustrated. (Scribners.)

....“Poems of Religious Sorrow, Comfort, Counsel, and Aspiration.” Selected by Francis J Child. This is the re-issue of a book published twenty years ago. The selections are made with great literary taste from the best of our modern poets, with a few verses drawn from older sources. It does not pretend to be an exhaustive collection, but brings together some of the finest poetic utterances under the lines proposed in the title. The book is printed in the clear type and on the heavy paper which so distinguish the Riverside Press when its best efforts are made. For a gift to those in sorrow few volumes could be more appropriate. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

....“Palermo,” by Alice Durand Field, author of “Christmas at Grey Castle,” is a neatly printed and attractive book of more than two hundred pages. It is a holiday volume, dedicated by its author to her sister, “who shares the Sicilian memories, and with whom they are associated forever.” The book treats of Christmas Eve, The Royal Mountain, Sicilian Vespers, The Holy Night, The Festival of Peace, La Favorita, The Mountain Pass, The Temple of Segreste, The Amphitheatre, Garaballi, The Festival of Santa Rosalia, and similar themes. It is a dainty volume, abounding in good thoughts elegantly expressed in prose and verse. We have only space for the following:

> “Comes the little gleaner maiden,
> From the hillside she hath sped,
> Nuts and almonds pile the basket
> Balanced on her crisp curled head.”

(G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

....“Blue Jackets of '61. A History of the Navy in the War of Secession.” This beautiful volume is well described in its title. It tells the story of the four years' service rendered by our gallant tars, from the bombardment of Fort Sumter down to the battle of Mobile Bay and the fall of Fort Fisher. The author, Mr. Willis J. Abbott, worthily represents the well-known family of American writers who have done so much for our popular literature. The illustrations, of which there are between sixty and seventy, are very graphic, and make this volume a very acceptable addition to the books appropriate for the holidays. (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

....“The Ivory King. A Popular History of the Elephant and His Allies.” By Charles Frederick Holder. While this handsome volume has a positive value as a popular history of “the true king of beasts,” it will be specially fascinating to young people who are fond of natural history, and not less interesting will it be to the manufacturers and users of articles of ivory. Eight hundred tons of tusks are annually used, to get which costs the life of nearly seventy five thousand elephants,—a rate of destruction which may soon extinguish the race and which calls for legal restrictions and guardianship to protect this greatest of living animals. The learned and philanthropic author has given us a book of facts “treating the animal in all its relations to man and the economic questions involved; in war, pageantry, sports and games, as a faithful laborer and servant, comrade and friend, its ancestral forms, structure and anatomy.” For scientific students he has appended a comprehensive Bibliography, embracing a list of works relating to the elephant. Numerous wood-cut illustrations enrich the volume. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“The Pearl Series,” neatly encased in a golden box, embrace six tiny volumes, bound in blue figured cloth, respectively entitled: “Reflection,” “Wit and Humor,” “Fancy,” “Faith, Hope and Charity,” “Love,” and the “Poets' Garden.” These pearls of poetry are designed to supplement the prose “Nutshell Series.” The original source of the collection was a private scrap-book. Selections were also made from Bryant's “Collection of Household Poetry,” Mills' “Gems of the Orient,” and Longfellow's “Poetry of Europe.” In “Wit and Humor” there are characteristic verses from Dr. Holmes, J. G. Saxe, and others. For a dainty holiday gift nothing can be found much prettier. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

....“The Christmas Country, and Other Tales.” A collection of stories written and translated by Mary J. Safford. A charming set of nineteen short stories from German, Icelandic, and other writers of fairy tales, together with the home-made sketches of the accomplished authoress. It is beautifully bound and printed and freely illustrated with wood cuts. (Thomas Y Crowell & Co.)

....“Boys' Book of Famous Rulers.” By Lydia Hoyt Farmer. Fifteen graphic biographical narratives of great rulers of the world, from Agamemnon and Cyrus the Great to Napoleon the First, with portraits and other illustrations. Just the book for young lads who want to learn more of the heroes who have founded and destroyed kingdoms and changed the currents of the world's history in their times. (Thomas Y. Crowell & Co.)

....“One Day in a Baby's Life,” adapted by Susan Coolidge from the French of M. Arnaud, illustrated in colors in the Grace Greenaway style, will furnish amusement and give delight to the little people for many hours. The pictures are humorous and artistic. F. B, the artist, will gain admirers by his work. The day is an eventful one and ends happily, as all such days should. (Roberts Brothers.)

....“What Katy Did Next.” By Susan Coolidge. Twelve years ago Miss Coolidge delighted her numerous youthful admirers by telling them of Katy Carr at home and school. In this pleasantly written book she follows her heroine across the sea and gives her experiences in London, Paris and Rome. A very plain hint is given on the last page that Katy's “next” will be a change of name, and we are sure the reader will look for a sequel. The book is well illustrated and clearly printed, and we hope it will be found in many hands on Christmas morning. (Roberts Brothers.)

....“Foreign Facts and Fancies” is a collection of sketches and stories, designed to illustrate old-world life and scenes. Among the writers, thirteen in number, are Rose Kingsley, Arthur Gilman, David Ker, Dr. S. W. Duffield, and Lucy C. Lillie And among the subjects are “Child Life in Venice,” “The Jackdaws of Kenilworth,” “The Princess Beatrice,” “The Alps and their Avalanches,” and “A School in the Faroe Islands.” The volume is attractively gotten up and illustrated, and is adapted to both young and old. It would make a pretty, though unpretentious, gift. (D. Lothrop & Co.)

....It goes without saying that a story by J. T. Trowbridge is sure to be, in a boy's opinion, capital. “The Little Master,” which has recently been laid upon our desk, is both wholesome and entertaining. It shows how mind may conquer mere brute force and manliness triumph over cowardice. Appearing as it does in a handsomely illustrated volume, it will be a favorite for the holiday season. (Lee & Shepard.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The Homiletic Review for October opens with a thoughtful and able paper on “The New Theology,” by M. Valentine, D.D., LL.D., who concludes that its drift is not toward a truer or more Scriptural system of the Christian doctrines. President John Bascom, of the University of Wisconsin, discusses, “Ought Prohibition to be Made a Political Question?” taking the affirmative and answering objections. “A Physiological View of Faith Cures,” by Prof. Archibald Cuthbertson, will interest many and is well worth reading. These are the leading articles in this well-filled number of a magazine always good.

....The Presbyterian Review for October opens with an exhaustive discussion by Prof. W. H. Green of the passage in Hosea 8: 12, (‘the great things of my law,”) and its testimony to the Pentateuch. The true sense of the difficult verse is set forth with learning, acuteness and candor. Prof. Doolittle contributes a conclusive and well-written paper on Instinct, and Dr. Erskine White writes with intelligence and insight on the Pecuniary Support of Churches. The “Note” on the Prophecy of Immanuel, Isaiah 7: 12, by Prof. Forbes, is a fine specimen of exegesis. There are full reports of the Assemblies of the Dutch, Canadian, Scotch and Irish bodies. The Reviews of Recent Publications are as usual able. Dr. A. A. Hodge skilfully dissects Archdeacon Farrar's History of Interpretation, and Dr. Patton performs the same office for Abbot's Scientific Theism and Smith's Spinoza, Prof. Warfield makes useful suggestions concerning the Supplement to Cremer's Lexicon, and Dr. Green with careful brevity gives account of Bartlett and Peters's Scriptures, Hebrew and Christian.

....The Church Review for October well states the causes of French Colonial Effort and Failure, and under the title of a Socialist's Plea for the Observance of Sunday, gives a clever analysis of Proudhon's celebrated essay on that subject. This paper is as excellent as it is timely. Other articles treat of the Marriage of a Deceased Wife's Sister, and of Divorce and the Marriage Relation in Recent Fiction. The latter is well conceived and strong. Contemporary Literature is carefully treated, though it is hard for many persons to see the excellence the critic finds in Gunsaulus's, “The Transfiguration of Christ.”

....The Lutheran Quarterly has for its first and longest article Dr. Koller's Holman Lecture on Invocation of the Saints Dr. Pick gives a translation of Mülhau's lecture on the question, “Have We the Original Text of Scripture?” and Dr. Richard learnedly discusses the Communion of Saints. Dr. Valentine's article, entitled “The Effort to Reconstruct History in the Interest of the General Council,” shows that the differences which divide and weaken the large Lutheran body still exist. We heartily wish they could be healed, or else consigned to oblivion. In the Notices of Books, the review after paying a high compliment to the author of “The Simplicity that Is in Christ,” justly adds, “Dr. Bacon has a constitutional fondness for that which is just the reverse of simplicity. He loves to entangle men in doctrinal confusion.”

Books Received.

G. P. Putnam's Sons: Chivalric Days and the Boys and Girls who Helped to Make Them. By E. S. Brooks. Illustrated. 8vo, pp. 308. $2.

American Tract Society: Dictionary of the Holy Bible, for General Use in the Study of the Scriptures. With Engravings, Maps and Tables. Revised and Enlarged Edition. 8vo, pp. 720. $2; also,

Her Christmas and Her Easter; or, The Light-Keeper's Daughter. By Rev. Edward A. Rand. Illustrated. 16mo, pp. 187. 90 cents.

Harper & Brothers: A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament. Being Grimm's Wilke's Clavis Novi Testamenti, Translated, Revised, and Enlarged by Joseph Henry Thayer, D.D. 4to, pp. 726. $6.50; also,

A Plain Man's Talk on the Labor Question. By Simon Newcomb, LL.D. 16mo, pp. 195. 60 cents; also,

Castle Nowhere: Lake Country Sketches. By Constance Fenimore Woolson. 16mo, pp. 386. $1; also, Silent Pete; or, The Stowaways. By James Otis. Illustrated. Square 16mo, pp. 192. $1.

Roberts Brothers: What Katy Did Next. By Susan Coolidge. With Illustrations by Jessie McDermot. 12mo, pp. 323. $1 50; also,

One Day in a Baby's Life. From the French of M. Arnaud, adapted by Susan Coolidge. Illustrated in Colors. Square 8vo, pp. 32. $1.50.

Presbyterian Board of Publication: The Westminster Question Book for 1887. 18mo, pp. 192. $12 per 100; by mail, 15 cents.

D. Lothrop & Co.: Woman in Sacred Song. A Library of Hymns, Religious Poems, and Sacred Music by Woman. Compiled and Edited by Eva Munson Smith. With an Introduction by Francis E. Willard. Illustrated. Tall 8vo, pp. 883.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: The Miraculous Element in the Gospels. A Course of Lectures on the “Ely Foundation,” Delivered in Union Theological Seminary. By Alexander Balmain Bruce, D.D. 8vo, pp. 391. $2.50.

Anson D. F. Randolph & Co.: The Wisdom of the Apocalypse. By J. H. McIlvaine, author of “The Wisdom of Holy Scriptures.” 8vo, pp. 420. $2.

Worthington Co.: Worthington's Annual: A Series of Interesting Stories, Biographies, Papers on Natural History for the Young. Illustrated with upwards of 300 Engravings by the Best Artists. 1887. Quarto, pp. 216. $1.50.

Chautauqua Press: An Outline Sketch of English Literature. By Henry A. Beers. 16mo, pp. 294. 60 cents; also,

Warren Hastings. By Lord Macaulay. 16mo, pp. 188. 40 cents; also,

Classic French Course in English. By William Cleaver Wilkinson. (The After-School Series.) 16mo, pp. 297. 60 cents; also,

Walks and Talks in the Geological Field. By Alexander Winchell, D.D. Large 12mo, pp. 329. $1; also, Sketches from English History. Selected and Edited with an Introduction. (From the Roman Conquest to the Revolution of 1688.) By Arthur M. Wheeler. Two Parts in One Volume. Large 12mo, pp. 372. $1.25.

Phillips & Hunt: Out of the Breakers. By Edward A. Rand. (Up-the-Ladder Club Series.) 12mo, pp. 336. $1.25; also,

Left in the Wilderness. By Mary A. Roe. 12mo, pp 235. $1; also,

A Little Silver Trumpet. By L. T. Meade. Illustrated by T. Pym. 12mo pp 243. $1; also,

Matter Life, Mind: Their Essence, Phenomena, and Relations, Examined with Reference to the Nature of Man, and the Problem of His Destiny. By H. H. Moore, D.D. 12mo, pp. 460. $1.50; also,

Two Thousand Miles Through the Heart of Mexico. By Rev. J. Hendrickson McCarty, D.D. 12mo, pp. 288. $1; also,

John Conscience, of Kingseal. By John M. Bamford. 12mo, pp. 226. 80 cents; also,

First Principles of Faith. By Marshall Randles. Large 12mo, pp, 308. $1.50; also,

Vagrant Verses. By Josephine Pollard. 16mo, pp. 216. $1.

Unbound Books and Pamphlets.

The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine. By Frank R. Stockton. 12mo, pp. 130. 50 cents. The Century Co.

Pocket Lesson Notes on International S. S. Lessons for Pastors, Parent and Sabbath-school Teachers. 30 cents; also.

Pocket Lesson Quarterly for Scholars. By Rev. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts. 5 cents. Including Lessons of Last Quarter of 1886. Funk & Wagnalls.

Annual Report of the Commissioner of Pensions for the Year Ended June 30th 1886. 8vo, pp. 7. Department of the Interior, Washington.

A Brief History of the Order of the Sons of Temperance. Paper Presented at the Philadelphia Centennial Conference. By R. Alder Temple. 8vo, pp. 14. National Temperance Society.

A Voyage to the Cape. By W. Clark Russell. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 99.) 16mo, pp. 233. 25 cents; also,

This Man's Wife. A Story of Woman's Faith. By George Manville Fenn. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 548.) 4to, pp. 80. 20 cents.

Macbeth. By William Shakespeare. With the “Historie of Macbeth, from Ralph Hollinshed's Chronicle of Scotland, 1577.” (Cassell's National Library, No. 59.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

Periodicals.

October.—Shoppell's Modern Houses, Grammar School, The Monthly Interpreter (Aug. to Oct.)

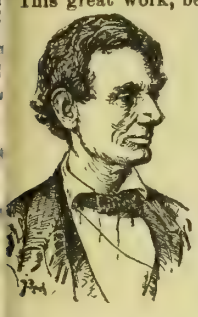
November.—American Agriculturist, The Popular Science Monthly, Harper's Monthly, St. Nicholas.

A GREAT ENTERPRISE.

The Century Magazine, with its enormous circulation (edition of November number is a quarter of a million) and great resources, has never undertaken a more important work than the one which will be its leading feature during the coming year. This is a history of our own country in its most critical time, as set forth in

THE LIFE OF LINCOLN,

BY HIS CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARIES, JOHN G. NICOLAY AND COL. JOHN HAY.



This great work, begun with the sanction of President Lincoln, and continued under the authority of his son, the Hon. Rob't T. Lincoln, is the only full and authoritative record of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Its authors were friends of Lincoln before his presidency; they were most intimately associated with him as private secretaries throughout his term of office, and to them were transferred upon Lincoln's death all his private papers. Here will be told the inside history of the civil war and of President Lincoln's administration,—important details of which have hitherto remained unrevealed, that they might first appear in this authentic history. By reason of the publication of this work, which has been followed with unflagging interest by a great audience, will occupy less space during the coming year, but will by no means be entirely omitted. Articles on Gettysburg, Chickamauga, Sherman's March, &c., with stories of naval engagements and prison life, will appear.

THE WAR SERIES.

NOVELS AND STORIES

include a novel by Frank R. Stockton, two novelettes by George W. Cable, stories by Mary Hallock Foote, "Uncle Remus," Edward Eggleston, and other American authors.

SPECIAL FEATURES

(with illustrations) include a series of articles on affairs in Russia and Siberia, by George Kennan, author of "Tent Life in Siberia," who has just returned from a most eventful visit to Siberian prisons; papers on the Labor Problem; English Cathedrals, by Mrs. Van Rensselaer; Dr. Eggleston's Religious Life in the American Colonies; Men and Women of Queen Anne's Reign, by Mrs. Oliphant, Clairvoyance, Spiritualism, Astrology, etc., by Rev. J. M. Buckley, D.D.; Astronomical papers, Articles on Bible History, etc.

THE NOVEMBER CENTURY.

Ready Nov. 1st. Edition, 250,000 Copies.

CONTAINS:

FIRST CHAPTERS OF THE LIFE OF LINCOLN,

Described above, including the editorial presentment and author's preface; with a new frontispiece portrait of Lincoln, and nineteen illustrations. This installment, entitled "Lincoln as Pioneer," gives the ancestry of the President, and the relation between the Lincoln family and Daniel Boone; also Lincoln's boyhood and early manhood, and a graphic account of the frontier States in the earlier days.

OLD CHELSEA.

By Dr. B. E. Martin. Describing a picturesque suburb of London, once the home of Queen Elizabeth, Nell Gwynn, George Eliot, Carlyle, and other famous characters; illustrated by Seymour Haden and Joseph Pennell.

MACHINE POLITICS IN NEW YORK.

BY THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Including chapters on "Heelers," "The Social Side," "The Liquor-Seller in Politics," "Boss Methods," etc., etc.

THE FATE OF A VOICE;

A STORY BY MARY HALLOCK FOOTE,

Author of "The Led-Horse Claim," "John Bodewin's Testimony," etc., with one full-page illustration by the author.

GEN. HOOKER'S APPOINTMENT AND REMOVAL.

An anonymous article by a gentleman who was at army headquarters in Washington at the time of the events described.

FIRST CHAPTERS OF STOCKTON'S NEW NOVEL.

This love-story of real life, "The Hundredth Man," is different from anything the author has yet undertaken. It will run through twelve numbers of The Century.

THE NEED OF TRADE SCHOOLS.

By Richard Auchmuty, founder of the New York Trade Schools, with illustrations.

GETTYSBURG. THE FIRST DAY'S BATTLE.

By Gen. Henry J. Hunt, Chief of Union Artillery, with Maps of the Gettysburg Campaign, by Gen. Doubleday, and numerous illustrations.

AN ART PAPER,

BY CHARLES WALDSTEIN,

On the Temple of Diana of the Ephesians, and other recent discoveries; in which the author identifies an ancient silver plate lately found in France as the work of the silversmiths of Ephesus, whose industry is described in the New Testament. Illustrated.

THE DEPARTMENTS

include editorials on "The American Militia," "The Congressional Balance-sheet," etc.; there are open letters on "A Siberian Tragedy," by George Kennan, "Time-Reckoning for the Twentieth Century," by Principal Grant, of Kingston, "Genius and Matrimony," "The Architectural League of New York," with short verse, a satire by Bill Nye, etc., in "Bric-a-Brac."

Subscription price, $4.00 a year, 35 cents a number. Dealers, postmasters, and the publishers take subscriptions. Send for our beautifully illustrated 24-page catalogue (free), containing full prospectus, etc. THE CENTURY CO., New York,

Now is the Time to Subscribe.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY

For Boys and Girls.

16 pp., large 8vo. Price, 5 cents a number. Subscription, $2.00 a year. Postage free to all subscribers in the United States and Canada.

A specimen copy will be sent free on application.

The Eighth Volume will begin with the Number issued November 2, 1886.

Harper's Young People has been called "the model of what a periodical for young readers ought to be," and the justice of this commendation is amply sustained by the large circulation it has attained both at home and in Great Britain. This success has been reached by methods that must commend themselves to the judgment of parents, no less than to the tastes of children—namely, by an earnest and well-sustained effort to provide the best and most attractive reading for young people at a low price. The illustrations are copious and of a conspicuously high standard of excellence.

Volume Eight will contain the latter half of the serial story by Kirk Munroe, now running, entitled "The Flamingo Feather," with illustrations by T. de Thulstrup; a new serial by Lucy C. Lillie, entitled "The Colonel's Money," illustrated by Frederic Dielman; to be followed by a serial story for boys.

The short stories will be contributed by William D. Howells, Frank R. Stockton, Louisa M. Alcott, H. C. Bunner, R. K. Munkittrick, Howard Pyle, John Habberton, W. O. Stoddard, Frank Converse, John R. Coryell, David Ker, Sophie Swett, Julia K. Hildreth, Sydney Dayre, Helen Hays, and others.

Poems, papers combining instruction with entertainment, and articles on sports and pastimes, will be contributed by the most popular and experienced writers.

SOME PRESS NOTICES.

The most attractive and elevating literary periodical in the world for boys and girls.—Rev. James A. Worden, D.D.

A charming weekly magazine that "puts a spirit of youth in everything."—George Parsons Lathrop, in the N. Y. Star.

It grows better and better with every year.—N. Y. Tribune.

A charming juvenile publication, fresh and delightful as ever. A delight and a treasure in thousands of happy homes.—Evangelist, N. Y.

Its standard is higher than that of any weekly publication for the young.—Boston Globe.

Safe, sparkling, and sunny—a real friend to the boys and girls. It entertains, instructs, and charms its readers.—Christian Intelligencer, N. Y.

A rare collection of valuable and instructive reading, with choice illustrations.—Observer, N. Y.

A model juvenile. A boy or girl can have no purer and brighter magazine.—Independent, N. Y.

The safest and best reading for children.... In every way deserving of its great success.—Churchman, N. Y.

Bright, sparkling, and brimming over with good things. No magazine of its kind has ever come into such boundless popularity.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

An inexhaustible source of entertainment.—Watchman, Boston.

The best paper for boys and girls.—Boston Journal.

A sort of necessity in juvenile life.—N. Y. Post.

As fresh and sparkling as the boys and girls for whom it is written.—Christian Advocate, N. Y.

Growing in years it but grows in grace.—Critic, N. Y.

Its tone, variety, and general excellence of literary workmanship are admirably sustained. ....We cannot commend it too highly.—Christian Union, N. Y.

The children's taste is being educated by such reading.—Examiner, N. Y.

If money is ever well laid out in supplying children with good reading, for a merely nominal price, it is certainly in subscribing for Harper's Young People.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Bound Volumes of Harper's Young People.

Volume VII. nearly ready. Volumes IV., V., and VI., price, $3.50 each. Volumes I., II., and III., out of print. The Volumes begin with the first Number issued in November.

HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

Per Year:

Postage free to all subscribers in the United States or Canada.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE	$4 00
HARPER'S WEEKLY	4 00
HARPER'S BAZAR	4 00
HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE	2 00
HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY (One Number a week for 52 weeks)	10 00
Lists sent free on application.
HARPER'S HANDY SERIES. (One Number a week for 52 weeks)	15 00
Lists sent free on application.

Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

When no time is specified, subscriptions will be begun with the current number.

☞ HARPER'S CATALOGUE, comprising the titles of between three and four thousand volumes, will be sent by mail on receipt of Ten Cents.

Published by HARPER & BROTHERS, N. Y.

THE MARQUIS OF PENALTA

(MARTA Y MARIA).

By DON ARMANDO PALACIO VALDES.

12mo. $1.50.

"The literature is delightful: full of charming humor, tender pathos, the liveliest sympathy with nature, the keenest knowledge of human nature, and a style whose charm makes itself felt through the shadows of a strange speech. It is the story of two sisters,—daughters of the chief family in a Spanish seaport city: Maria, who passes from the romance of literature to the romance of religion, and abandons home, father and lover to become the spouse of heaven; and Marta, who remains to console all these for her loss. We do not remember a character more finely studied than that of Maria. But Marta—Marta is delicious! Nothing could be lovelier than the portrayal of this girl's affection for her father and mother, and of the tenderness that insensibly grows up between her and her sister's lover, left step by step in the lurch by the intending bride of heaven.

"A sketch of the story gives no idea of its situations, or, what is more difficult and important, the atmosphere of reality in which it moves. The whole social life of the quiet town is skilfully suggested, and an abundance of figures pass before us, all graphically drawn, none touched with weakness or exaggeration."

T. Y. CROWELL & CO.,

13 Astor Place, New York.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s

NEW BOOKS.

Holy Tides.

By Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, author of "Bonnyborough," "The Gayworthys," etc. Square 16mo, beautifully printed and bound, 75 cents.

A tasteful book of thoughtful poetry, celebrating the "red-letter" days of the Church,—Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, Whitsunday, Trinity, and Easter.

Orient.

Being the Tenth Volume of Boston Monday Lectures, with Preludes on Current Events, and Five Appendices. By Joseph Cook. With a fine steel Portrait $1.50.

This book comprises six of the lectures given by Mr. Cook in 1883. They treat Palestine, Egypt, and the Future of Islam; Advanced Thought in India; Keshub Chunder Sen and Hindu Theism; Woman's Work for Woman in Asia; Japan, the Self-Reformed Hermit Nation; and Australia, the Pacific Ocean, and International Reform.

Ten Dollars Enough.

By Catherine Owen. 16mo. $1.00.

A household book of remarkable value. The writer tells a pleasant story, and weaves into it recipes and excellent directions for cooking and housekeeping. The story appeared serially in Good Housekeeping, and has received the unqualified commendation of many who have tested the recipes and followed the suggestions.

The Great Debate.

A full report of the memorable discussion at the meeting of the American Board at Des Moines. 8vo, paper, 25 cents.

 For sale by all booksellers. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston,

11 East 17th St., New York.

"My little boy has just learned to read. What series of books would you recommend which would take him along by slow degrees, interest him all the way, and prepare him for something better?

"Answer.—One series of books stands out and answers this question in all its conditions—books which have been read by two or three generations. A hundred thousand of our readers, at least, have guessed the name before we announce it to them:

THE ROLLO BOOKS,

Published by T. Y. CROWELL & CO., of New York." —Christian Advocate, N. Y.

THE CHEAPEST AND BEST

MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD!

Be WIDE AWAKE and SUBSCRIBE NOW!

Three Extra Numbers FREE!!

The success which has attended our offer of WIDE AWAKE to clubs at reduced prices has been so great that we have decided to give the former wholesale price TO EVERYBODY!!!

From this date subscriptions to

WIDE AWAKE

for 1887 will be received at the net price of only

$2.40 (former price, $3.00.)

The Publishers of WIDE AWAKE will send the three numbers, Sept., Oct. and Nov., FREE to every new subscriber remitting $2 40 for the yearly subscription BEFORE NOV. 15th, with a request for the extra numbers. This time will not be extended. The remittance must be sent direct to

D. Lothrop & Co. Publishers, Boston

NEW BOOKS!

The Crisis of Missions. Pierson. $1.25

That Quisset House. By Jennie M. Drinkwater Conklin. 12mo ... 1.50

Bible Warnings.. By the Rev. Richard Newton, D.D. 6 illustrations. 12mo 1.25

My Pearl. A Story by Alida W. Graves. 12mo 1.25

The Gillettes. By the Author of "Win and Wear." 16mo.

1 Dick the Captain....75c. 3 Jack, who Persevered.....75c.

2 Nan, the Missionary.75c. 4 Bert the Enterprising. ....75c.

The Slave Girl of Pompeii. Holt..... .60

Madge Hardwicke. Giberne... 1.00

Storm Signals. New sermons. Spurgeon..... 1.00

My Sermon Notes. III. Matthew to Acts. By Spurgeon..... 1.00

All of Grace. By Spurgeon..... .50

Hodge on Romans. 8vo. New edition..... 3.00

Dr. Hanna's Life of Christ. New edition. 3 vols..... 3.00

Fraser's Synoptical Lectures on the Books of the Bible. 3 vols..... 4.50

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.,

530 Broadway, New York.

 Any of the above sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

HAVE YOU READ THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF

REV. CHARLES G. FINNEY?

If not, send for a copy. "Every student of divinity, every man and woman that would be a practical Christian, should read that book." Price $1.75. Published by

A. S. BARNES & CO., 111 William St., N.Y.

FOR PRESENTS IN SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Beauty of the King Series.

Scripture Texts for One Month. Illustrated with four varieties of flowers in colors.

His Covenant. Paper, 10 cents.
His Good Promises. Paper, 10 cents.
His Loving Kindness. Paper, 10 cents.
His Testimonies. Paper, 10 cents.

Superior to cards. Please examine them at your Bookstore.

Sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price.

E. P. DUTTON & CO.,

PUBLISHERS,

31 West 23d Street, New York.

"The work of an elegant and appreciative writer, who has admirably succeeded in her object of presenting the characters described in a way to make them the objects of emulation by the reader. No intelligent youth can read it without having loftier aspirations and better aims in life, and learning that existence is 'not a play-day, but a thing of earnest activity.' We earnestly recommend the volume as one which every parent should put into the hands of their children."—Albany Press.

Girls Who Became Famous.

By MRS. SARAH K. BOLTON.

With Portraits. 12mo, $1.50.

Biographical Sketches of Harriet Beecher Stowe, George Eliot, Helen Hunt Jackson, Harriet Hosmer, Rosa Bonheur, Florence Nightingale, Maria Mitchell, and other eminent women.

Companion book to "Poor Boys Who Became Famous."

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,

13 Astor Place, New York.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

A Letter from Amoy.

THE following letter, recently received from one of our beloved missionaries, is published in "Aunt Marjorie's Corner" at the request of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

Our readers will observe the references to the Charlotte W. Duryee Bible School, and its aims and needs.

AMOY, CHINA, Aug. 13th, 1886.

It is now vacation; the women have all gone to their homes, and we are all resting more or less. The summer has been a cool one thus far, and we are getting on nicely. The heat here is much more enervating than at home.

Our trip to Australia was doubtless a good thing for my husband; he has had two or three slight attacks of his old trouble, but soon rallied again. He is not attempting to preach during this hot weather, but works a good deal in his study.

Miss Talmage went with Miss Maclagan to Foochow last month. Miss M. needed a change very much. She is getting better and we hope will return ready for work. They are both very much interested in the work of Miss (Dr.) Corey there. When we hear of the good work medical ladies do in other ports, it makes us more than ever anxious to have one here. It seems strange we cannot get one when others succeed so well.

During the months since the vacation we have had twenty women in the school, as many as fifteen at one time. Two, over sixty years old, we did not try to teach to read, but they learned some hymns and Bible stories, and returned to their homes cleaner and having a more intelligent idea of what a Christian should be.

Some of the women had great difficulty in learning the alphabet; they were a long time at it, shed many tears the first month, and often said they must go home, but only one gave up trying, so we have much encouragement. The one who gave up was not too old, but she was stupid; however, she learned the Scripture question book by rote, and could remember it pretty well. She could tell a number of Bible stories. She lives far away where there are very few Christian women. I hope she will make good use of the little she did learn.

One day, when we were reading in the Acts about the Athenians, she said people in her neighborhood were like that, for when she went home to her village after the services of the Sabbath, they would ask her what she had heard that was new.

I think all the women, perhaps we might make two exceptions, could tell their neighbors the principal facts in the life of our Lord, and they all seemed to know that salvation was obtained alone through Christ, and were trusting in Him.

They have child-like faith in prayer. It was interesting to watch them when studying, frequently stop to pray for help, and then go on with b, a, ba; b, ah, bah, again and again.

It is not so interesting to teach when a woman, after two or three weeks' drilling, cannot tell you that b and a is ba, but will call it de, or something as unlikely. Still, such women, after patient plodding, have learned to read, so we feel encouraged to teach as long as a woman can be induced to try.

Our request for an organ for this school has not yet been made public. We would like one very much. We are still using a small one borrowed from Mrs. Kip. Biso (the matron) has improved a good deal in her playing. I find the instrument very helpful. Old women are not generally noted for having good voices, and when we have a number down from the country stations where they have had no instruction, and, in fact, labor under the idea that noise is essential, you may imagine the music would not be very charming. M. E. TALMAGE.

Mrs. Talmage's letter is not given in full. We omit a tender reference to Dr. Van Cleef and an expression of thankfulness for his recovery, and we have not room for an account of Lama, a blind girl, who a great care to the missionaries, not because of her blindness only, but for the reason of her insanity. She has occasional lucid intervals, but they are rare, and she is often troublesome and violent, but is devotedly attached to her patient friends. Speaking of an offer of marriage which has been made for this blind and crazed girl, simply because owing to her infirmities it was supposed she could be had cheap, Mrs. Talmage observes, "at present girls are going for $150 and more." One such statement points the contrast, as a hundred essays could not, between the low estate of woman in China and her favored condition in America.

Æsthetic Culture for Boys.

NOW that vacation is over, and our boys and girls throng the streets on their way to and from school, it is only natural for us mothers to think of the accomplishments of the girls.

Amy must go on with the drawing she so much loves, while May ought to practise harder than ever now that Monsieur Pizzicato has returned from abroad with whole portfolios of new ideas, as well as music approved by the "Conservatory of Leipsic."

Well! so they must. Bless their hearts, every one of them. For what is lovelier than a lovely young girl whose dainty accomplishments are the pride and delight of the fond father, to say nothing of the satisfaction of mamma, whose quiet sacrifices are perhaps never known.

But there is one member of the family who is apt to be neglected. It is awkward, bashful Jack, or careless Harry, whom everybody snubs and calls rough and rude. Why, I have even heard semi-barbarous people say that boys from twelve to sixteen should be kept in a barrel and fed through the bung-hole till they had reached years of discretion, which, under those trying circumstances, one could hardly expect them to do very soon. Why not try æsthetic culture upon them, as well as the girls? Would we not soon see the refining influences blossoming forth in gentleness and good taste?

Under this culture even their outward appearance would improve. No more collars awry; shady hands, uncombed hair or unblacked boots.

Let Harry, who was punished for drawing pictures on his slate in school hours, feel that he has a right at the right time to draw as Amy does. A little competition will do them both good. And Jack, who has had "twenty lines" to write as punishment for whistling "Over the Garden Wall" while entering the class-room,—encourage him to join a "musical union." Let him get a dozen boys together, and go once or twice a week to a "choral society." A winter's lessons will teach him to "read at sight." When he is a young man he will never regret the ability he gained while a boy to sing correctly the song or hymn which will give pleasure to all.

At home or abroad, in society or in church work, this "voice culture" will always be an advantage. If the strumming of a banjo sometime call you to an out-of-the-way corner of the house, where bashful Jack, afraid of being laughed at, has, ostrich like, hidden himself away, take this as a good sign.

Let May's teacher encourage him in the beautiful study of music. Latin grammar is sometimes dry and arithmetic bothersome for boys as well as girls. Give them, then, a pleasant study for recreation. "Music hath charms to soothe a savage," so the poet says. If it really has power to charm the "children of the woods," certainly it ought to add grace and refinement to the boys of our own land. We have been told that when King David was a shepherd boy his sweet songs reached the ears of the old King Saul, who sent to have him play upon his "harp of many strings," to drive away the bad spirit which possessed his soul.

Give our boys pleasant work to do as recreation, and they will be happy. Encourage them to play or sing a song now and then for little home festivals. Applause will not hurt them in the least. You will be surprised to see how soon the trying age will disappear. For they, too, will possess the power to charm away the spirit of weariness from the hearts of friends, and add cheerfulness to the homes they love. J. S. K.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

A Reminiscence of the Adirondacks.

BY EMMA J. GRAY.

NOT far from the boundary line which separates Her Majesty's dominions from the United States, and situated on one of the highest of the Adirondack mountains, can be found the small village of Rogersfield. Here immense iron mines are located, and visitors are allowed to enter, and so learn of life and work far away from the earth's surface. The miners' homes are placed on the mountain-side, and to see this settlement of log-cabins is wonderful indeed; each so like the other, that did they not bear a number, your neighbor's cabin might easily be entered in mistake for your own. So steep is the mountain that the houses wear the appearance of being terraced, and the so-called streets dividing them seem as cleanly and inviting as do the homes themselves. Besides these you find the country store and two or three more pretentious houses, as, for instance, the homes of the manager and physician, also a small hotel where visitors and those more closely connected with the Chateaugay Iron Company, as well as the company themselves, can find a night's rest as they come to see how the work and their gains are progressing. There are also two churches. The Roman Catholic may be found on the heights, and a Methodist church, showing by its size and general appearance that not so many of Protestant faith can be found here. It is hard to believe that any lives can have so limited a horizon as do those of these poor people. For many of them have no thought of what is beyond their daily routine. They are born, marry, and die here. And yet their faces look cheerful, and perhaps their hearts are lighter than those of some living in luxuriant homes in our own city.

Passing through this settlement several times daily can be seen a stage, and, perhaps, in an obscure way, even these miners may think of what is beyond themselves. This stage during the season carries many a beautiful woman and handsome man as well as helpless invalid over a most romantic drive of three miles to the hotel "Ralphs," situated on the edge of the beautiful Upper Chateaugay Lake. Surely no drive could be taken so filled with the spicy fragrance of balsam and pine. And surely no road could wind in and out among such masses of wild aster, daisy and golden-rod. And no where else could your eyes rest on such banks of coral as the richness of bunchberry gives here. And you listen as you drive to the murmuring brooks flowing steadily on to the lake of which we have spoken. Thus, two styles of life exist only three miles apart. One, poverty and hard work: the other, the many-sided life of a hotel. For on its piazzas you will find travellers and students, clergymen and artists, the business man above reproach, and he who knows his way to the gaming-table. The religious and the irreligious all are here. In the grove under the pines hammocks swing. Perhaps in one is an invalid, having come to the Adirondack air, hoping so, to prolong life. In another a beautiful girl, having come hither as her outing from school life, and stretched on the grass by her side an athletic young fellow telling her of what we do at Yale. As evening comes on, more and more we see the many sides of those who make up this household. The broad piazzas are promenaded by the gay and bright, the young and old. The smudge-fire, meantime, keeping away the great annoyance of the Adirondack section, especially during July, the ever-vigilant mosquito and midget. Inside the lights burn brightly; you hear music of song and dance. Groups are sitting here and there at cards; others discussing what has been done to day, or the trip in prospect for to-morrow. Yes, we now are in another world than that which we have seen in the simple life of that which lies so close to this one, the miners'. Which is the better? God will weigh it in His balance by-and by.

The Upper Chateaugay Lake, on which Ralphs Hotel is situated, is four and one-half miles long, with an average width of about two miles, and is connected by what is called the Narrows, which is three miles long, with the Lower Chateaugay Lake, which is about two and one-half miles long. Daily you can take the steam-yacht "Adirondack," and thus make a trip of ten miles of navigable water; and all the way some new delight will meet your eye. The grand and everlasting mountains which edge the lake-side, or as you enter the Narrows and wind in and out much after the fashion of which Tennyson has written of the brook. Everywhere it is beautiful. If the lake is calm the reflections of an occasional cottage, the pines, and other variety of trees, and here and there a clump of wild flowers, all are given so vividly in these waters that nowhere, not even in the far-famed California, can be furnished better reflections. Many are the trips thus taken, and when with company congenial, surely none can tell of happier days. Some there are who enjoy pull at the oars. Numberless pretty and light boats, all in readiness for such, as well as paddles; and those who have never seen a canoe or sarenac-boat kept in motion by the skilled movement of a paddle in the hands of a beautiful woman, can form no conception of the poetical beauty which comes with the sight. Very light boats can always be found on this lake in the North woods, as guides can so easily carry them when necessity calls. Camping out and tramping parties require strange things at times. There is also to many a perfect joy in reclining in cushioned chairs and being rowed over these waters by some gay cavalier. Or, under the bewitching influence of moonlight, some prefer to drift along with only an occasional stroke of the oar to bring you safely home. Putting aside the boat-riding pleasure, another joy can be found on the water. At all hours, but particularly in the early morning after a comfortable breakfast, boats are starting out, each carrying in the stern a gentleman, unless, as is sometimes the case, he is accompanied by a lady, when she has the seat of honor. Also will be noticed fishing-poles, a box containing some straw and ice, indeed, all the pharaphanalia necessary for trout-fishing, while the good guide steadily and rapidly rows to the fishing quarter. Who can describe the expectation when the fisherman starts for the sport, or the enthusiasm which greets him at home-coming, when the beautiful speckled trout are being weighed and counted? Or the after delight when both fisherman and friends are merry over a trout supper? It is one of the things we must enjoy to fully appreciate, and having enjoyed can hardly find words enough to describe.

The woods extend for miles over the mountains dense and thick. This great wilderness of Northwestern New York is the happy hunting-ground. Here an occasional bear is yet found, while the deer-hunting is excellent, as well as a great variety of ground game—birds, large and small. Even the bald-headed eagle and the crane may be found here. Experienced guides and trained setters and pointers greatly assist those who engage in this sport. For trails are not always sufficiently defined to allow the inexperienced to go fearlessly onward. To some few has come the good fortune to have camps in the Adirondacks, so being independent of hotel life. Several such summer homes can be found on the edge of Lake Chateaugay. There is also an island in the centre of the lake, very romantic with its rocks, trees and shrubs, and not much larger than the club-house to be found thereon. It was my good fortune one day to visit there, and the views obtained from the piazzas and upper windows of this house are beautiful and grand beyond description. And so the many may know the sports found in an Adirondack summer. And the bracing air, full of the perfume of balsam and pine, gives good appetite, which added to good food and genial company, makes life indeed worth living. Many friendships, too, are formed in this happy holiday time, which could never have come to us in any other way. And hearts count more and yet more when the free life of the woods is shut out, and the busy world, with its numberless cares, temptations, joys and sorrows, is shut in.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The "Breaking Boy."

IT seemed that Geoff was the most unfortunate boy in the world, for he was nearly always in trouble. And yet he was not exactly a bad boy, for he did not wish to displease his mother and father, and was a great deal happier when they praised than when they blamed him. Sometimes, when he sat down to think, which was not often, he tried to find out the reason of his misfortune, and one day he thought he had it.

"I am too strong," he said. "That is what is the matter with me. As soon as I touch a thing it seems to break. Only to-day I took hold of a plate. I think it must have been cracked; but, at all events, it came in two in my hand, and of course I got the blame of breaking it. It must be because I am a great strong fellow. Fred is different; he would not have broken the plate if he had held it for an hour; but then he has no strength at all in his hands. Mother, the best thing you can do is starve me a little, and then, perhaps, you would not have to call me a breaking boy."

Before Geoff's mother could answer, his sister spoke.

"It is very well for you to try to dispose of the matter in that way," she said; "but surely you know that it is not your strength, but your awkwardness, which is in fault."

"I don't know. Let me prove it to you," said Geoff. "Look here, I take up this doll—"

Geoff was interrupted by a scream. His little sister Annie flew to the rescue of her favorite.

"O Geoff, put down that doll! I believe if you only look at her she will break. Now see, she is broken."

Annie began to cry, and poor Geoff looked sheepish. But he tried to comfort his little sister, and wished fervently that he had half a crown in his pocket at the moment to give her.

"I declare I only gently tried to straighten the doll's arms, and one of them must needs come out directly. It is too bad that dolls' arms should be made so soft and weak. If I had a doll, she should be strong."

"Nothing but an iron doll would do for you," said Annie resentfully; "and I believe you would contrive to break that somehow or other."

"Now don't be cross, Annie. A broken arm is not nearly as bad as a broken head. But is it not strange that I cannot touch a thing without breaking it?"

"That is not quite the case," said Geoff's mother. "You do not break everything that you touch, and I suppose it is only the fragile things that come to grief. But you need to practise gentleness, my boy. You have large and strong hands, and you use unnecessary force. Only this morning when you took my arm in the garden you seized it as if it were something that would slip away, or something heavy that needed all your power to retain it. If my arm had been soft, I am not sure that it also would not have been broken."

"O mother, I am sorry. Did I really hurt you?"

"A little, Geoff; but I did not mind it, and I only speak of it in the hope that you may be careful in future."

"I declare," said Nellie, "that if Geoff catches hold of my arm when we are at play, it is always black and blue for a day or two afterwards."

"Nonsense," said Geoff; but he looked very sorry and pained.

"I am sure, mother, something must be done," he said presently; "you must put me on short commons, and then perhaps I shall get thin and weak."

"But, my boy, I do not want you to get thin and weak. Strong hands are needed in this world, and I hope yours will do some good and useful work when you are a little older. You must try to cultivate a kindly heart and a thoughtful spirit, and then you will know in time how much force is needed to do or to hold things. I shall be glad when that time comes, for it is very expensive to have a breaking boy in the family."

Poor Geoff did try; but the next day he was even more unfortunate than he had been before—for this time he broke himself!

He was in an apple tree, having volunteered to go up and gather the apples; but, instead of taking care of himself, he went to work with all the energy and carelessness which he would have exhibited if he had been on firm ground, and the consequence was that he fell.

His mother and sisters ran to see what was the matter.

"Nothing much," said he, trying to speak cheerfully, "only this time I have broken my leg and my nose, and perhaps it will be a warning to me."

Poor Geoff could say no more, for a faintness came over him. They carried him indoors, and sent for the doctor, who soon set his broken leg and plastered his nose. He had to lie in bed several weeks, and during that time he learned several lessons in gentleness. His mother's touch was so soft that it soothed his pain. His father's hand rested so lightly upon him that it never hurt him. And his brothers and sisters, sorry for his suffering, set him a beautiful example. He had time to think, and he thought to some purpose; for when he again grew well and strong there was a great change manifested in him. He had been taught how to use his hands, and he is in a fair way of exhibiting in his own life that most beautiful mingling of strength and gentleness which helps to make a really noble and useful character.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

How They Made Out.

"I DON'T know," said the wife, Margaret, "how we shall make out, but we can't let the child starve." Margaret was the house-mother in a German home, where money was scarce and plain food was not plenty.

A stranger had come along the street, stopped at the door, and asked if he might have some supper with the family. He was watching the yellow-haired little girl who followed Margaret around, which made her speak the sentence with which this story commences.

"Then she isn't your own child?" asked the stranger.

"No." Margaret explained that she was the child of a poor neighbor who died a few weeks before, leaving nothing for the little girl, and no friends for her to go to. So they had to take her in.

"And can't you manage to keep her?" the stranger asked. "You have none of your own, I suppose."

"Oh, dear, yes!" and she laughed over his queer mistake. None of their own! Why, there were ten in all.

When supper was ready they all trooped in. What a little army of them! and how clean their faces were, their light hair neatly combed, and their patched and worn clothes looking as though each of them had been as careful of them as possible. At the supper-table each of them looked out for Gretchen; she had the largest potato carefully peeled by Margaret, the mother's name-child; and Melchior, the father's name-sake, put a bit of butter on it, though he ate none on his own. The stranger saw all this and a great deal more, though he seemed to be talking with the father and mother.

The next day a soldier in military dress rode up to the house and asked for the house-mother, and gave her a solemn-looking letter which made her tremble as she broke the seal. Oh, what do you think that letter said? Why, that the man who had taken supper with them the night before was so pleased with all the ten children, and with Gretchen besides, that he had decided to make each a present of $100, which would be paid to them each year while they lived. $1,100 a year, because a strange man who took supper with them was pleased with their kindness to him, and their unselfish care of the orphan Gretchen! That sounds like a "make-up" story, doesn't it? And yet it is true. The letter was signed Joseph, Emperor of Austria. And he was the stranger who had eaten potatoes with them the night before.

Ah! I wonder if you know what this makes me think of? Do you remember who laid aside His crown and His royal dress and left His throne and came to us—not simply to amuse Himself and give us pleasure, but to save our souls?

Some day we shall see Him with the royal dress blazing with jewels, the crown of gold on His head. Will He remember us then as those who received Him here? He is watching our actions, whether they are unselfish and loving, or hard and hateful. Is He getting a reward ready for us? The reward is not $100 a year; it is a home in the palace; a seat on the throne. It is to be introduced to His Father as brothers and sisters; it is to reign with Him forever and ever.—The Pansy.

FIVE SHILLINGS FOR A STEEL PEN.—Within the memory of many men still living, the steel pen was simply a curious toy, noticeable as an ingenious mechanical fad. The earliest form of the article was certainly not promising. A piece of sheet steel was bent into a tubular form and cut or filed away to imitate the shape of a quill pen, the junctions of the two edges forming the nib, which of course extended all up the back of the pen. These were known as early as 1812, but were regarded as articles to be given away as presents, and not for use. They were highly polished, perhaps gilt or silvered, and sold for as much as five shillings each. In 1825 Mr. James Perry took up the steel pen as a practical invention, and by indomitable energy overcame the difficulties in its construction and the objections to its use. He patented several varieties, and spared no expense to attain perfection. He paid five shillings per pen to the first workmen he employed.

Little Heads Together.

No. 1.

ENIGMA.

A sentence of 28 letters. Advice given in the fifth chapter of James.

4, 9, 15, 7, a period of time.
11, 14, 24, 26, a vegetable.
11, 20, 6, 23, 18, restrained.
3, 5, 21, 22, a journey.
17, 2, 27, 7, not distant.
10, 8, 14, forever.
12, 19, 14, a small hole.
28, 5, 21, 7, a pronoun.
1, 16, 25, to place.
11, 9, 13, a Turkish governor. UNCLE W.

No. 2.

TWO EASY WORD SQUARES.

I.—1. Expanded. 2. A heap. 3. A girl's name. 4. Neighboring.

II.—1. A number. 2. A thought. 3. Tidings. 4. Repose. E. M.

No. 3.

PI.

Lal mstastrere rea rome ksirb nad terp
Nath soeth hatt dunresndat na tar;
Sa tiltle raspselk nines remo tghirb
Htna wglogin lsoac htta vige meth gthil LEO.

Answers for October 6th.

Buried Cities.—Augusta, Helena, Bern, Herat, Teheran, Dover, Wheeling, Rio Janerio, Cairo, Paris, Bogota, Athens, Jackson, Lima.

PRIZES.

Two new books are offered as prizes for the months of November and December. One will be given for the best original puzzle, the other for the best list of answers to puzzles published during these two months. Address COUSIN LOIS, at this office.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Oct. 26th.

THE visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, east of the Rocky Mountains, has risen to the great total of 55 374 340 bushels, in creasing last week 1 515 801. Yet the quotations yesterday were: Wheat here for November delivery 85 7-8, in Chicago 74 7-8; corn here 46, in Chicago 35 7-8: oats here 32 3 4, in Chicago 25 7-8. More particularly, taking wheat as an example, prices yesterday were; No. 1 red 89; extra red, 87; No. 2 red, 85; No. 3 red 83; State white, 84; No 1 Northern, 91; No. 1 hard Duluth, 92 1-2 cents. Oats vary from 31 to 38 cents. The surplus of wheat in the country over home demand, and available for export until the next harvest, is reckoned at 187 000,000 bushels. The exports from July 1st to Oct. 1st, were 41,254 216 bushels. European markets yesterday were reported firm. ....The banks of this city reported for the week loans decreased $2,256.300, specie increased $500,000, legal tenders decreased $204 900, deposits reduced $2 222.100, surplus of reserved increased $850 625, making it $5,469,575. The average rate for money last week was 6 per cent, yesterday 5, prime commercial paper 6 to 7 per cent....The imports of merchandise at this port for the week were valued at $8,991,643, and exports at $6.067 603. During the week about $1,000 000 of specie was imported, and Sunday's steamers brought about $3,000,000....Foreign exchange yesterday sold for $4 80 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4 84 for demand for sterling....The Stock Market is strong and active....Cotton yesterday closed lower than a week ago, being quoted: Oct. 8 94-95; Nov. 8 92-98; Dec. 8 96-9 04. Hay and straw are dull and lower.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

There have been 150 suicides in the German army in 8 months.

SATURDAY, 23.—It is stated that the Powers have agreed upon a plan that will force Bulgaria to submit to Russia....The report is officially denied that an attempt has been made on the Czar's life, and that the Czar lately killed Baron Reuteur, one of his aides....The health of Emperor William is improving....The International Navagation Company have bought out the Inman Steamship Company, and a company is being organized at Liverpool to be called the Inman and International Steamship Company, Limited....A statue of General Thomas Francis Meagher is to be erected in Dublin, Ireland, his native city....More earthquake shocks felt in Charleston, Savannah, and other Southern localities. .. Captain R. W. Grace, commander of the "America" of the National Line, died Oct. 16th from a congestive chill brought on by forty two hours' exposure on the bridge in a storm. The steamer arrived at this port Friday with her flags at half mast....The National Council of Lutherans petition the Czar of Russia to grant the Lutherans of the Baltic provinces the same privileges they had under the Czar's father....The Tilden will case is to be pushed....Active preparations are being made for the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty on Thursday.

MONDAY, 25.—The Sultan of Turkey has ordered the Admiralty to expend £1,500,000 on men of war. The Cabinet Ministers oppose it on the ground of finances....It is believed that the Canadian steamer "Dominion" has foundered in Lake Superior ....The Earl of Iddesleigh, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Sir Lyon Playfair have been nominated for the rectorship of Edinburgh University....Mr. Scully, a large landowner in Tipperary, Ireland, has abated 25 per cent of the judicial rents ...The Central Labor Union have had printed and are selling the speeches of the condemned Chicago Anarchists, the proceeds to assist the prisoners. ..Mrs. Parsons breaks in the door of Central Hall at Orange, N. J., and indulges in one of her inflamatory speeches. ....A Washington, D. C., ring go into projects oppressive to "District" taxpayers. ....A man drowned in a lake in Central Park yesterday....There is a steady rise in iron and coal trades ...The saloons are now all closed in Atlanta, Ga., and the barrooms used for other business purposes.

TUESDAY, 26.—Mrs. A. T. Stewart died yesterday morning at her residence in this city of pneumonia, after an illness of two days. Her age was 83 years....The French delegation visited the Statue of Liberty yesterday, and were pleased. Bartholdi, the sculptor, Count de Lesseps, Admiral Jaareo and Gen. Pellissier are on the delegation ... Colossal statue of Schiller unveiled in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, yesterday.... C. Moore, of Monson, Me., because his child died, blew up the doctor's office ...Conflicting reports from Bulgaria. Austria will not tolerate Russian occupation.

The purest, sweetest and best Cod Liver Oil in the world, manufactured from fresh, healthly livers, upon the sea-shore. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in the market. Made by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

PIMPLES removed and the Skin made smooth by using Juniper Tar Soap, manufactured by Caswell Hazard & Co., New York

Sold by druggists.

Market Report.

Review of the New York Market for Butter, Cheese, etc. Reported by DAVID W. LEWIS & Co., Produce Commission Merchants, 49 Pearl St., New York.

Commission on Butter, Eggs, Poultry, etc., is five per cent; Flour, Grain, etc., 2½ per cent.

Marking-plates furnished when desired.

NEW YORK, October 23, 1886.

BUTTER.—Receipts for the week, 33,505 pks.; exports 1,600 pks.

Receipts continue heavy and prices are 1a2c. lower, with considerable stock accumulating and left over unsold. Finest creamery pails are freely offered at 28a29c., and anything off in quality is unsalable at any price. Fine October make dairy butter is best thing on the list and is wanted at 24a25c. We note sales of some entire dairies, firkins and tubs at 20a21a22c. Long held ice-house butter is very dull, and prices irregular and in buyer's favor. Market closes with large stocks of all kinds butter, very moderate trade, and prices weak and lower. We quote:

Fancy fresh creamery	28	@29
do dairy (selections)	25	@—
N. Y. State dairies entire, good to fine	20	@23
do do common to fair	15	@18
N. Y. State creamery firkins	20	@23
Western creamery, summer make	15	@20
Butter, poor to common	10	15

CHEESE.—Receipts for the week, 43,037 boxes; exports 23,476 boxes.

Our market about same as last week. Exporters bought more freely and prices are about steady. We quote:

Factory, colored, full cream, finest	11½	@11¾
" white, " "	11¼	@11½
" good to fine "	10	@11
" night milk skims	8	@ 9½
" skims	2	@ 6

EGGS.—Receipts for the week were 14,848 bbls.

Fresh stock sells well at 23a24c.; held ice-house stock dull at about 18a20c. Limed eggs were offered and some sales made at 17a18c. We quote:

Near-by marks, strictly fresh eggs, per doz.	23	@24
Western and Canada, " " "	20	@21

MARRIAGES.

ACKERMAN—HERRING.—Oct. 20, at the residence of the bride's parents, Montvale, N. J., by Rev. E. Lodewick, Freeman C. Ackerman to Adelia Herring, all of Montvale.

CHURCH—SAMMONS.—At the Reformed Church of Rosendale, Oct. 21, by Rev. M. N. Oliver, Walter Church to Miss Cora Sammons, all of Rosendale, N. Y.

HASBROUCK—PHINNEY.—At the house of the bride's parents, Wallkill, N. Y., on Wednesday, Oct 20, by Rev. P. K. Hageman, Abner Hasbrouck, of Bruynswick, N. Y., to Miss Mary Phinney, of Wallkill, N. Y.

STANSBURY—OVERBAUGH.—At the residence of the bride's father, Oct. 20, by the Rev. John S. Gardner, Charles H. Stansbury, of New York city, and Miss Ella L. Overbaugh, of Flatlands, L. I.

TRANTER—DUBOIS.—At the home of the bride, Oct. 20, by Rev. C. E. Lasher, Mr. Wm. H. Tranter, of Shawangunk, N. Y., and Miss Mary E. DuBois, of Gardiner, N. Y.

TEN BROECK—SLOVER.—At the home of the bride's mother, Glenville, N. Y., on Wednesday, Oct. 20, by Rev. Robert Dolg, Leonard W. Ten Broeck, of Scotia, to Melissa Slover, of Glenville.

DEATHS.

Obituary notices five cents per line (nine word to the line.) For subscribers we will insert fifteen lines free; all lines in excess of that number will be charged same as non-subscribers.

ALPAUGH.—At High Bridge, N. J., Oct. 14, after a short illness, at the residence of John Alpaugh, his son, Mr. William Alpaugh, aged 91 years.

He was for sixty years a member of the Reformed Church—served much of the time as an officer, and a reader of the INTELLIGENCER for about three-quarters of a century. The grace that sustained him in life's trials proved sufficient in his last hours. He was an earnest, exemplary, and active member of the Church militant, and has passed into the Church triumphant.

HUBBARD.—At Flatlands, L. I., on Oct. 6, in the 68th year of her age, C. Amelia Pearsall, widow of the late A. H. Hubbard.

A loving wife, a tender mother, a devoted Christian has entered into rest. The years of weakness and pain are ended. The strength and joy of life eternal have commenced.

LLOYD.—At Belleville, N. J., Oct. 22, in the 83d year of her age, Harriet Joralemon, widow of John C. Lloyd and mother of the Rev. Aaron Lloyd.

Mrs. Lloyd was a member of the Belleville Reformed Church for over 60 years. To those who knew her eulogy is superfluous. She grew old gracefully. "Found in the way of righteousness, her hoary head was a crown of glory." "As a shock of corn cometh in his season," so in the ripeness of a lovely Christian character she came to her "grave full of years." Without passing through painful or prolonged sickness, the natural quickly and gently gave way to the spiritual, and she went to her fathers in peace with God and much beloved by all about her.

VAN WYCK.—At Poughkeepsie, on Monday, Oct. 18, Theodorus J. Van Wyck, of New York city, in the 66th year of his age.

He was born of a pious and worthy ancestry, at Hopewell, Duchess Co., during the ministry of Dr. Thos. DeWitt. There his youth was spent with the exception of the period of school life at the Flushing Institute under the care of Dr. Muhlenberg. In early life he confessed Christ in the Reformed Dutch Church of Hopewell, in whose communion he remained until 1838, when he removed to the West, and was one of the originators of the Reformed Dutch church at Davenport, Iowa. In later years he transferred his connection to Brooklyn.

A large circle of friends and relatives are bereaved by his death. A wearisome illness preceded his departure, which he bore with the utmost patience and Christian resignation; and when the end came, it found him peaceful, and sustained by a bright hope of the immortal rest. C.

Notices and Acknowledgments

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING,
113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street,
Just east of Broadway, near William Street.
COME IN, REST, AND PRAY.
Stop 5, 10 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THE NORTH CLASSIS OF LONG ISLAND made the following appointments for the installation of Rev. J. C. Guenther as pastor of the German Evangelical St. Peter's Church, Brooklyn. The President to preside and read the form; Rev. G. D. Hulst or the Rev. J. U. Guenther to preach the sermon; Rev. C. D. F. Steinfuhrer or Rev. Franz Hartig to charge the pastor; Rev. J. M. Wagner or Rev. H. C. Berg to charge the people. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE, for the installation of the Rev. John Stillwell at Bloomingburgh, N. Y., on Nov. 10th, at two o'clock, P.M., appointed the President to preside and read the form, Rev. Dr. S. W. Mills or Rev. J. Hutchins to preach the sermon, and Elder De Witt to give the constitutional notice. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF PARAMUS has made the following arrangements for the installation of the Rev. John C. Van Deventer as pastor of the Church of Nyack, N. Y.: The Rev. D. M. Talmage, President of Classis, to preside and read the form; Professor W. V. V. Mabon, D.D., to be invited to preach the sermon, with the Rev. Vernon B. Carroll as his secundus.

THE CLASSIS OF RENSSELAER made the following appointments for the ordination and installation of Mr. George Zabriskie Collier, at Stuyvesant, N.Y., on Wednesday, Nov. 3d, at 2.30 P.M.: The Rev. Dr. F. N. Zabriskie to preach the sermon, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Campbell to charge the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Drury to charge the people, the President of Classis to preside and read the forms. S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE appointed the following supplies for vacant churches: Gilboa and Prattsville, November, Rev. D. K. Van Doren; January, Rev. J. G. Smart; March, Rev. P. Phelps, D.D. Schoharie Mt. and Central Bridge, October, Rev. J. G. Fagg; Dec. Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. W. A. Wurts; Sharon, October, Rev. J. G. Smart; Dec., Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev J. G. Fagg.

D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF ULSTER made the following appointments for the installation of Rev. W. Schmitz in the Church of Roxbury, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d: The President, Rev. Dr. Wortman, to preside and read the form; to charge the pastor, Rev B. C. Lippincott or Rev. S. T. Cole; to charge the people, Rev. Dr. Wortman or Rev. W. A. Shaw; to preach the sermon, Rev. Abram Lansing or Rev. J. H. Van Doren. S. C.

Woman's Board of Foreign Missions.

RECEIPTS FROM AUG. 10 TO OCT. 12, 1886.

Flatbush, Ulster Co., N.Y., $9.93; New Baltimore, N.Y., 15; 1st Albany, N.Y., 25; Mrs. W. B. Walker, in mem. Little Martha, 10; Chatham, N.Y., 19.10; Kiskatom Miss. and Tract Soc. 14.04; Little children, 4th Grand Rapids, Mich., 7; Tappan, N.Y. Aux., 6.32; Aux. Centreville, Athenia, N.J., 10.25; Married Women's Soc. Zeeland, Mich., 45; Caatsban, N. Y. Aux., 25; Hudson, N. Y. Aux., 55.40; Rev. John L. Stillwell, 25; Aux., Colt's Neck, N.J., 25; H. H., 5; Aux., Helderburg, N.Y., 30; Aux., Schraalenburgh, N.J., 15; Aux., Gravesend, L.I., 57.25; Aux., Newburgh, N.Y., 82.50, Aux., Hopewell, N.Y., 70.90; Three Ladies of Hopewell, 20; Aux., Utica,. N.Y., 60; Aux., 1st Tarrytown, N. Y., 44; Aux., South Brooklyn, L.I., 30; Aux., Niskayuna, N.Y., 15; Aux., Gibbsville, Wis., 40; Aux., Peekskill, N. Y. Mission Band, 10; Nellie Amerman, Mission Circle, 11; Gleaner receipts from Feb. 10 to Oct. 8, 1886, 43.99; Thankoffering, "J" 3; Aux., Readington, N.J., 40; Aux., Warwick, N.Y., 27; Aux., Fulton, Ill., 21.60; Aux., Easton, Pa., 26.75; Aux., 2d Tarrytown, N.Y., 50; Aux. Mahwah, N.Y., 30. Total, $1,054.93.

Parties wishing to remit will please do so by check, if possible, made payable to the Treasurer, or by registered letter, but not by Post-Office order.

MRS. PETER DONALD, Treasurer,
89 West 46th street, New York City.

Publisher's Department.

MRS. CHARLOTTE LISLE, OF CHICAGO, well known to the Western press, ascribes the cure of a dangerous cough, accompanied by bleeding at the lungs, to Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. "My cough," she says, "threatened to suffocate me... but a remedy has removed it."

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

If a cough disturbs your sleep, take Piso's Cure for Consumption and rest well.

Invalids should remember that the causes of sick and nervous headaches may be promptly removed by taking Ayer's Pills. These pills speedily correct irregularities of the stomach, liver, and bowels, and are the mildest and most reliable cathartic in use.

100 Doses One Dollar is inseparably connected with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and is true of no other medicine. A bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains 100 doses, and will last a month, while others will average to last not over a week. Use only Hood's Sarsaparilla.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall-st., N. Y.

SCROFULA

Humors,

Erysipelas,

Canker, and

Catarrh,

Can be cured by purifying the blood with

I do not believe that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has an equal as a remedy for Scrofulous Humors. It is pleasant to take, gives strength and vigor to the body, and produces a more permanent, lasting, result than any medicine I ever used.—E. Haines, No. Lindale, O.

I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in my family, for Scrofula, and know, if it is taken faithfully, it will thoroughly eradicate this terrible disease.—W. F. Fowler, M. D., Greenville, Tenn.

For forty years I have suffered with Erysipelas. I have tried all sorts of remedies for my complaint, but found no relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After taking ten bottles of this medicine I am completely cured.—Mary C. Amesbury, Rockport, Me.

I have suffered, for years, from Catarrh, which was so severe that it destroyed my appetite and weakened my system. After trying other remedies, and getting no relief, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, in a few months, was cured.—Susan L. Cook, 908 Albany st., Boston Highlands, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is superior to any blood purifier that I have ever tried. I have taken it for Scrofula, Canker, and Salt Rheum, and received much benefit from it. It is good, also, for a weak stomach.—Millie Jane Peirce, South Bradford, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Price $1; six bottles, $5.

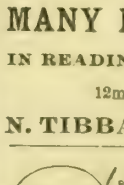
Useful for Everybody.

MANY MISTAKES MENDED

IN READING, WRITING and SPEAKING.

12mo. 320 pages. $1 by mail.

N. TIBBALS & SONS, New York



It stands to reason that a straight skilled drive at one point and one point only, gets there. Excellence in Ready Mixed Paints is our point. Anybody else can have all the other business for all of us. Try our $1.35 per gallon Ready Mixed Paint. If no dealer in your neighborhood, send to us direct. Dealers who do not sell these goods are requested to write for color cards, terms, &c. The best goods. The heaviest advertised of any in the market. Our agents fully protected. They are easy to sell. The F. J. Nash M'f'g. Co., Nyack, Rockland Co., N. Y

JAMES PYLE'S

O. K TRADE MARK

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.

Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS and particularly adapted to Warm Climates. No family, rich or poor, should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Church Decoration.

Church Furnishing.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

J. & R. LAMB,

59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS to LADIES.

Greatest Inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band or Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, or Webster's Dictionary. For full particulars address THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO., P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

---

8 Per Cent Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

MASON & HAMLIN

ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Piano-forte construction.

Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago. 46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

Glittering Gold Quartz

Just as taken from the Mines in the Rocky Mountains, made into beautiful Scarf pins. To quickly introduce, price only 33c., post paid. Address, H. H. TAMMEN, Mineralogist, DENVER, COLO. Send Stamp for large illstd. catalogue of Mineral Cabinets, Agate Novelties, Indian Relics, etc. Trade Supplied.

WHEATLET A NEW BREAKFAST FOOD.

Delicate, Delicious Superior to Cracked Wheat, Wheat Grits, or Oat Meal.

Cooks in 5 Minutes. Put up in cases of 30-2lb. pkgs, ½ bbls. and bbls. Ask your Grocer for it.

Absolutely the Best.

FRANKLIN MILLS CO., Lockport, N. Y., Mfrs. J. W. BEARDSLEY'S SONS, 179 West St., N.Y., Mill Agents. Send for circulars and price list.

A COPY OF OUR BOOK,

The Care and Feeding of Infants

Mailed free to any address; it contains advice and useful information for nursing mothers and invalids, and an analysis and description of

MELLIN'S FOOD.

DOLIBER, GOODALE & CO., Boston, Mass.

CURE FOR THE DEAF

PECK'S PATENT IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS Perfectly Restore the Hearing, and perform the work of the natural drum. Invisible, comfortable and always in position. All conversation and even whispers heard distinctly. Send for illustrated book with testimonials, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, New York. Mention this paper.

1886 MUSIC TEACHERS 1887

Teachers of Piano; Teachers of Organ; Teachers of Theory; Teachers of Choirs; Teachers of Music in Schools; Teachers of all Instruments; Trainers of the Singing Voice; Teachers of Classes;

Are all WELL AND FULLY provided for in the immense stock of Oliver Ditson & Co., which contains 500 books directly used in teaching, and 1500 other music books, all well compiled and useful. These are of their own publication, and they have, in addition, all the other noted books of the world. Also, pieces of Sheet Music almost without number.

Teachers of Music who cannot visit their stores in Boston, New York or Philadelphia, or that of Lyon & Healy in Chicago, their principal agents in the WEST, are cordially invited to call for and examine Ditson & Co.'s books in any reputable music store, or to correspond directly with Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston.

Lists and Catalogues cheerfully furnished to the profession, and all inquiries as to music and music books answered, and musical advice given by their army of employees, many of whom are well trained singers, players and composers. Send to, or call on

OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston.

Chas. H. Ditson & Co., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

New Music for Xmas.

Christmas Service No. 9 The Promised One. A superior and entirely new Service of Scripture and Song by Rev. Robert Lowry. The Selections are admirable, and the Songs have all been written for the present season. 16 pp. Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

Christmas Annual No. 17.—Contains beautiful Carols by favorite authors. An abundant supply of Songs for any Christmas Festival. Price, $3 per 100; 4c. each by Mail.

"Santa Claus' Home." Our New Christmas Cantata. By Dr. W. H. Doane. It is first-class in every particular. Splendid effects; easily rendered. Sent on receipt of 25 cents.

☞ A full Catalogue sent on request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y. Chicago House, 81 Randolph St.

FOR CHOIRS

A Low Priced Collection of Music.

IDEAL ANTHEMS

BY H. P. DANKS.

The great success of Mr. Danks' church music renders unnecessary any comment as to the merit of this collection. The Anthems are all entirely new and adapted to the wants of all denominations, as Services, Opening Pieces, Collection Pieces, etc., and available for Chorus or Quartet Choirs.

The pieces are from Easy to Medium Grade, with the organ part on separate staff, thus avoiding the necessity of the player's reading all the parts at once, as in the old style.

"IDEAL ANTHEMS" contains 64 pages, octavo size, handsomely bound in paper.

Price, 35 cents each by mail, postpaid; $3.60 a dozen by express, not prepaid.

☞ SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

PUBLISHED BY

THE JOHN CHURCH CO., CINCINNATI, O. And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.

WEBSTER'S Unabridged Dictionary.

Invaluable in every School and at every Fireside.

A Dictionary 118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings, Gazetteer of the World of 25,000 Titles, and a Biographical Dictionary of nearly 10,000 Noted Persons, All in one Book.

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

"OUR BABY'S First and Second Year."

By MARION HARLAND,

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,

REED & CARNRICK,

MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

See this "NOTES ON DECORATIVE ART," free for 4 cents postage, covering information on Tapestry, Lustra, Kensington, Oil and Mineral Painting. Regular lessons by mail. Painted and chromo designs to rent. Orders executed.

Art Agency, H. A. JOHNSON, 42 W. 22d St., N.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal equest. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers 805 Broadway, New York.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for

PLATFORM ECHOES

or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART.

By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted,—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞ Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

NEW BOOKS

BY THE

Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NOW READY.

THE PRESBYTERIAN DIGEST OF 1886

Embracing, with the contents of the edition of 1873, the Acts of the Assembly, from 1874 to 1885 inclusive, and an addendum of the Acts of the Assembly of 1886.

By the REV. W. E. MOORE, D.D.

8vo. Sheep. Price, $5.00, net.

Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates.

The False and the True Spiritualism.

By the REV. JOHN CHESTER, D.D.

16mo. Price, $1.15.

WOOD, HAY AND STUBBLE.

By KATE W. HAMILTON.

12mo. Price $1.25.

THE CHESTER COTERIE.

By KATE LIVINGSTON HAMILTON.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

Address orders to

JOHN A. BLACK, Business Sup't, 1334 CHESTNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.,

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry Finest Grade of Bells, CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c Send for Price and Catalogue. Address H. McSHANE & CO., Mention this paper. Baltimore, Md

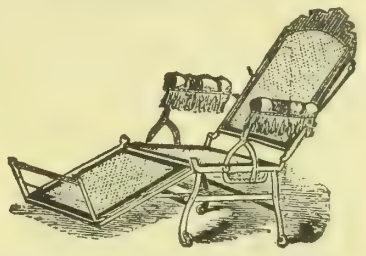
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY. Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free. VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY West Troy, N. Y. Bells, For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others

---

PLUNKETT'S Old Reliable Folding Chair.

Fifty changes of position.



Also, Comfort Folding Mantle Beds and Cribs.

PRICE $11, $12, and $13.

Send for circular.

112 West 14th Street, - New York.

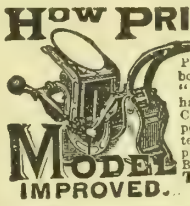
WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free. STAR WULVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS, a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

Address, DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

HOW PRINTING PAYS



MODEL IMPROVED.

"The Proof of the Pudding," &c. How richly it pays to own a Model Press is shown in a handsome little book, containing several hundred "proofs," from the 15,000 people who have Model Presses. Business men, Clergymen, Teachers, Boys, Girls, persons out of work,—everybody interested. A Press and Outfit complete, from $5.00 to $10.00 and up. Book mailed free. Address,

The Model Press Co., Limited, 913 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa

CATARRH SAMPLE TREATMENT FREE So great is our faith we can cure you, dear sufferer, we will mail enough to convince, free. B. S. LADERBACH & Co., Newark, N. J.

ATLANTIC

Mutual Insurance Co.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET

ORGANIZED 1842.

Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks.

And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued, bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL Insurance Co.

Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E.D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 8
of which for Inland Marine, $55,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims	553,171 9.
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus	1,358,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886.	$5,177,478 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Fund together equal $1,200,000.

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary

HOME INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

OFFICE, No. 119 BROADWAY.

Sixty-sixth Semi-Annual Statement, Showing the Condition of the Company on the 1st day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL	$3,000,000
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 0
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims	201,040 1
Net Surplus	1,3 9,241 71
Cash Assets	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS

Cash in Banks	$126,608 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate	748,300 00
United States Stocks (market value)	2,9 2,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value)	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value)	2:6 000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand	130,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886	10.,394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents	299,646 97
Real Estate	1,364,113 61
Total	$7,628,401 81

CHAS. J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P & Sec'y
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR. } Ass't Sec's

GEO. MATHER'S SONS, PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Lithographic and Plate Ink. Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

DEAFNESS Its causes, and a new and successful CURE at your own home, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists without benefit. Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others. Full particulars sent on application. T. S. PAGE, No. 41 West 31st St., New York City.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S STEEL PENS

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM the popular favorite for dressing the hair, Restoring color when gray, and preventing Dandruff. It cleanses the scalp, stops the hair falling, and is sure to please. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

---

25 CTS. PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS.

FLORENCE SILK MITTENS

This engraving shows the latest style of these goods. It is published as a protection for those ladies who wish to obtain mittens well-made from genuine FLORENCE KNITTING SILK. Whatever the design, all real Florence Silk Mittens are sold one pair in a box, bearing the brand "Florence" on one end. The pattern shown here is lined in back and wrist throughout with silk. They are perfect-fitting, and in cold climates are far more comfortable than any glove, are more durable and quite as elegant and fashionable as the best of gloves.

☞ Sold by all enterprising dealers, who can be supplied at our agency, No. 25 Green St., New York. Our latest book on knitting (1886 edition) contains over 100 valuable illustrated rules, including full instructions for this mitten. Mailed to any address on receipt of six cents in stamps,

NONOTUCK SILK CO., FLORENCE, MASS.

The Church.

Life's Autumn.

I HAVE no wit, no words, no tears;
My heart within me, like a stone,
Is numbed too much for hopes or fears;
Look right, look left, I dwell alone;
I lift mine eyes, but dimmed with grief,
No everlasting hills I see;
My heart is in the falling leaf;
O Jesus, quicken me!

My life is like a faded leaf,
My harvest dwindled to a husk;
Truly my life is void and brief
And tedious in the barren dusk.
My life is like a frozen thing,
No bud or greenness can I see.
Yet rise it shall—the sap of spring;
O Jesus, rise in me! —Christina Rosetti.

"Look Here, Upon this Picture, and On This."

DR. CUYLER'S late article in The Evangelist upon the subject of church attendance in New England, has served to "stir me up, by putting me in remembrance" of an interview which I had not long since with one of the grandest men I have ever known. He is nearing his ninety years of age, but his mind is as clear as a crystal, and his interest in every phase of the life of the world and the Church of to-day, is as eager as it is intelligent. I found that for the past few years he had been using his hours of leisure in writing out his reminiscences of the men and women and manners and customs of an age that is becoming ancient, if not dead, to the living. The material which this broad, keen observer of life has gathered, with his commentary thereon, will not fail to be most fascinating and profitable reading to the generation that will yet see it all in printed form.

A single page from this large volume of manuscript, supplemented by the writer's interjected notes as I read it over to him, presents a picture of Old New England that in the light of the present is most suggestive. The "meeting-house" of his father and of his own childhood, was as bare and bald both within and without as it could be. There was not a single line or tint of beauty from sill to ridge pole or from step to pulpit. There it stood upright on the treeless hilltop, in the unbroken glare of the summer's suns, and in the full sweep of the winter's winds. The mercury often in that region now marks a point of twenty and even thirty degrees below zero. It was as cold then, and the snow was far deeper. Within this meeting-house there was neither stove nor fireplace! Sometimes the boys carried into it from the near neighbors hot bricks wrapped in cloths to keep their mother's feet from freezing. But the tougher sex scorned all such indulgence. And there they all sat in such an arctic air as that through a service of prayer and sermon as severe as itself, the prayer often thirty and even forty minutes, and the sermon a full hour in length! And who "went to church" in those days? Well, everybody—everybody except infants and invalids. The benediction through, the mothers and sisters spent the noon-hour around the kitchen fires of the nearest homes, and the men and boys at the tavern near by. There was some flip drank at the latter place, but in neither gathering was the sermon discussed otherwise than with utmost reverence and assent. The nooning over, the afternoon service drew the full complement of worshippers again to the "meeting-house," and they again presented their very bodies a living sacrifice unto God.

Soon after this interview with this venerable man, "who has come down to us from a former generation," a grand representative of its heroic Christianity, I visited a new meeting house—no, the old name is gone—a new "church," erected not far away from the site of the old one. It stands in fairest proportions a very temple of God, with turrets and steeple in solid stone, ivy-clad, complete in beauty. Within the many-hued light from the pointed windows bathes the stately columns, waving arches, fretted vault, richly caparisoned pews, and many-piped organ, with a mellowed glory. Beyond this grand "auditorium"—for so they call it—are splendid suites of rooms: church parlors, Sunday-school and library rooms, a fully appointed kitchen and dining-hall—a hotel with all the modern improvements. The Sabbath came. The sweet-toned bell rung out over this typical New England village, falling upon one's very heart like an heavenly matin. With reverent soul and softened tread, we entered the church of our fathers. Courteous ushers, well gloved, elegant throughout, escorted us to the well furnished pew. The pealing organ driven by "a two horse water motor," kept in harmony the two singing men and the two singing women. It was a perfect thing in its way, and so we worshipped

"In notes, with many a winding bout
Of linked sweetness long drawn out.
. . . . . .
Untwisting all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony."

The Scripture reading was "on time," and ended "in time." The long prayer was cut down to modern dimensions. The sermon was kept within the fashionable limits, but it was strong, Scriptural, searching, the outpour of an honest, earnest, solicitous soul—the one really spiritual, worshipful, solemn thing in all the attractive service. Well, who went to this nineteenth century church? Full two-thirds of the pews were vacant on this perfect summer day. The fathers and the rising sons were at home lolling in the shade, picking at their Sunday newspapers. And the second service, called a "vesper service!" Well, I have no heart to describe this religious rose-water affair. I know what the great-souled parson thought of it all. I know, for he told me with tremulous sadness not unmingled with indignation. Well, well, good Dr. Cuyler has put me to thinking of all this, of the ancient Christian's reminiscence, of the old New England meeting-house, and my own experience in the new New England Gothic church. I ask myself, I ask you, Mr. Editor, What have we gained by all this strenuous effort, and this unlimited expenditure to make religion attractive? Have kitchen and parlor, have the high niceties of worship appealing to the æsthetic tastes, accomplished that success which is held forth as the justification and the very necessity for all this thing? Under all the "attractions" of religion, and the infinitely ingenious methods devised for coaxing the "unchurched masses" to the house of God, have we succeeded? Does this religion of the day, so courteous, so beguiling, so sugar coated throughout, does it "draw?" Does it fill the pews? Even if I have got an outsider in, have I got him by such a motive and appeal where I can long keep him in; or if I keep him in, is it possible to bring him on under such influences into the great solemnities of religion? Are we not, even in this poor success, simply training men and women and children to think that they are doing the Church a favor by attending it, and even God a favor in consenting to worship Him?—George B. Spalding, D.D., in The Evangelist.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Home Readings.

LESSON 6. FOURTH QUARTER.

M. The Sad Disciples.....Luke 24: 13–35.
T. The Affrighted Disciples.....Luke 24: 36–49.
W. The Eleven Slow to Believe.....Mark 16: 9–18.
T. Thomas Convinced.....John 20: 19–31.
F. Loving Without Seeing.....1 Pet. 1: 1–8.
S. Eye Witnesses.....Acts 10: 34–43.
S. Seen of Five Hundred.....1 Cor. 15: 1–8.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Nov. 7th.—"Thomas Convinced."—John 20: 19–31.

Golden Text.—"And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God."—JOHN 20: 28.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."—JOHN 20: 29.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS first Lord's day was a busy and exciting one with the lovers of Jesus. Disturbed at first by the report of the desecrated grave which Mary had brought, they were even more amazed when later in the morning she came with the news that she had seen the Lord, and that He had given her certain messages for His brethren. After this Jesus appeared also to Peter, and then to the two disciples who were on their way to Emmaus. By a common instinct of expectancy the little group gathered together that evening, perhaps in the very upper room where they had eaten the Passover with the Lord. At this evening assembly the events occurred which now claim our attention.

THE LESSON.

I. THE ASTONISHED DISCIPLES.—VS. 19–23.

V. 19.—"Then the same day at evening." The time was probably that of the evening sacrifice, or 3 P M. "The first day of the week." The repetition of this expression seems conclusive upon the question as to the day of our Lord's appearance to His disciples. "When the doors were shut, for fear of the Jews." The disciples might well fear lest the hatred of the Jews toward Jesus should also take violent form toward themselves. "Came Jesus and stood in the midst." The first impression made by these words is that Jesus appeared in the midst of the company without anyone seeing Him enter. How He entered the closed room is a needless inquiry for those who recognize His divinity. "Peace be unto you." While this was the ordinary friendly salutation of that day, yet we see how much more it meant upon the lips of the risen Redeemer. It was the conveyance of all the fruits of His atonement unto them for whom He had died. It was the Peace of God that passeth all understanding.

V. 20.—"He showed them His hands and His side." Their first impression had been that they saw a ghost, but the natural tones of the voice and the evidences now presented of a tangible, material body, served to prove the reality of His appearance and the identity of the body now before them with that which had suffered on the cross. "Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord." They now knew that their faith had not been in vain, that the triumph of His enemies had only been apparent and temporary.

V. 21.—"Then said Jesus unto them again, Peace be unto you." He would impart unto them freely of that which He expected them to bestow upon others in His name. "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." If He had been an ambassador of God, His disciples are no less His ambassadors. Their work was to be the carrying on of that which He had begun, the redemption of the world through His blood.

V. 22.—"He breathed on them, and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." As God had breathed the living soul into man's body, so the risen Lord breathes into these His disciples the vital principle of the new life. This gift of the Holy Ghost was midway between that by which they had been regenerated, and the Pentecostal gift whereby they were fitted for immediate duty.

V. 23.—"Whosesoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them." While the declaration of this verse does not warrant priestly absolution, for it was spoken to all the disciples, yet it expresses the authority with which Christ's people are permitted to declare the truth as it is in Jesus. The word preached from the pulpit, taught in the home or Sabbath-school, read in silence in the closet, is ever the savor of life or of death, unto souls.

II. THE DESPONDING THOMAS.—VS. 24–29.

V. 24.—"But Thomas, one of the twelve, was not with them when Jesus came." Thomas has often been called the sceptic or rationalist, but that analysis which views him rather as a pessimist, or one who constitutionally looks on the dark side, seems to me more just. The few glimpses which we have of his character justify this estimate. The death of Jesus had overwhelmed him, and had it not been for Jesus' patient care of this weak member of His flock, he would soon have been a complete outcast. He probably had retired within himself immediately after the crucifixion, avoiding even the presence of his former associates.

V. 25.—The other disciples, with true brotherly love, sought him out after their interview with Jesus, and sought to have him partake of the new view of life which His presence had given them. "We have seen the Lord." The testimony of so many witnesses ought to have been sufficient, but Thomas felt that the tidings were too good to be true. Even the other disciples had been slow to believe the testimony of individuals. "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails...." He would not trust even the evidence of his eyes. Touch must confirm sight before he would be satisfied.

V. 26.—"And after eight days again his disciples were within." This would be the next Lord's day, counting the first day and the last in the enumeration. It seems probable that at their first interview Jesus had made an appointment for this second meeting, and perhaps on that occasion He had authorized the change which the apostles evidently instituted from the seventh to the first day of the week. "And Thomas with him." If his belief had been as desperate as his words sounded, it is doubtful if he would have been present on this occasion. He wants to believe and hopes that his difficulties may be removed. "Then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst." His appearance coincided with the former one, so far as its conditions were concerned. There was the same caution against their enemies, and the same superiority on His part over mere material conditions. "Peace be with you." Whenever Jesus meets with His brethren He brings them His peace.

V. 27.—"Then said he to Thomas." The one who needed His attention the most was the one to whom He devoted Himself. Taking Thomas at his own position He accepted his bold challenge and incites him to test His appearance and the truth of the resurrection.

V. 28.—"And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God." It does not seem probable that Thomas actually examined the wounds of Jesus. His perfect knowledge of the heart of his disciple was sufficiently convincing, and from the depths of despondency and doubt he rose at once to the highest position of faith and confession yet attained by any disciple. It is from the lips of this doubter that Jesus hears for the first time the title God applied to Himself.

V. 29.—"Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed." These words, carrying a mild rebuke to Thomas, were an acknowledgement of the true faith of those who looked for His coming but died without the sight.

III. THE FIRST CONCLUSION OF THE GOSPEL.—VS. 30, 31.

It seems evident that John's first plan of the Gospel was complete at this point, and that these verses contain what he intended shall be its conclusion. The following chapter was probably added by his own hand before the original manuscript left his possession, with the possible exception of the two closing verses, which seem like the attestation of his friends to the genuineness of the manuscripts as they were sent forth from Ephesus.

V. 30.—"Many other signs truly did Jesus, which are not written in this book." Each evangelist proceeded on a principle of selection in dealing with the material at hand. The Gospels do not profess to give an exhaustive account of the words and works of Jesus.

V. 31.—"These are written that ye might believe." The intense practical aim of the writer is seen in these words. He has related those things which made the deepest impression on his own soul, in order that they may produce a similar effect upon all who should read them.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. In times of perplexity and expectation the association of Christians is of great value.

2. Enemies cannot keep Jesus from the assemblies of His friends.

3. Jesus has purchased Peace for us.

4. The preaching of the Gospel is to be with the power of God.

5. When we yield to hopelessness we endanger our souls.

6. Unnecessary absence from Christian gatherings entails loss.

7. Jesus has infinite patience with those who are weak in the faith.

8. Jesus is honored more by a faith that rests on His Word than by that which rests on His works.

The Evening Line.

When the bright sun in roses and in wine
Goes down to light another hemisphere,
While yet his glorious beauty lingers here,
We say, "The day has passed the evening line,"
Then comes that hour of all hours most divine,
The twilight hour before the stars appear;
The hour to sadness and to joy most dear,
When tears to smiles and smiles to tears incline.
'Tis then the winged soul, from earth-thoughts freed,
Essays to mount upon the shining air,
Breathes hope and aspiration everywhere,
And meets God's answer to its human need;
For He who so illumes a day's decline,
Can brighten life beyond the evening line!

—James Buckham, in The Advance.

A Story of Two Words.

"OH, if I were lucky enough to call this estate mine, I should be a happy fellow," said a young man. "And then?" said a friend. "Why, then I'd pull down the old house, and build a palace, have lots of prime fellows round me, keep the best wines, and the finest horses and dogs in the country." "And then?" "Then I'd hunt, and ride, and smoke, and drink, and dance, and keep open house, and enjoy life gloriously." "And then?" "Why, then, I suppose, like other people, I should grow old, and not care so much for these things." "And then?" "Why, then, I suppose, in the course of nature, I should leave all these pleasant things—and—well, yes—die!" "And then?" "Oh, bother your 'thens'! I must be off." Many years after, the friend was accosted with, "God bless you! I owe my happiness to you!" "How?" "By two words spoken in season long ago—'And then?'"—The Quiver.

A real man is a rare man. Most men are as much like other men, and as little like themselves, as they can be. Only now and then does a man appear to be himself, or wish to be himself; and such a man is always a man of mark, is always a man worthy of remark,—is always, in fact, a remarkable man; for a remarkable man is simply, as the term implies, a man worthy of a second note,—a man worthy of being marked and remarked.—S. S. Times.

Among the two hundred students at Lincoln University this year, are two Coreans, one of them a prince, fitting for missionary labor among their countrymen. There are also six young men from Siberia just arrived. Five of the ten sent here twelve years ago by the Presbytery of West Africa have returned, and one of them is now Moderator of the Presbytery that sent them, and they send the present six.

A New Phase of Darwinism.

A Development of Heredity; the Power of Faith; A Search for Purity; A Regeneration of Blood; The Saving Power of Purity.

ERASMUS DARWIN, the man of science, the poet, and the good physician, came to Litchfield, Staffordshire, England, fresh from the University of Edinburgh, about the year 1760, when he was not thirty years of age. He took an humble suite of rooms on a street that overlooked the silvery Trent, and at once entered upon practice, which in a remarkably short time, became extensive and lucrative. With professional popularity he gained social distinction among the young people of the town. In the shadow of the noble Cathedral he found friendship and association, such as had been denied the other great Litchfield man, Samuel Johnson, and such as had been given Litchfieldians like Gilbert Walmsley and Henry Hervey. There were young ladies of rank and wealth who smiled on him, and were willing to give their money and titles in exchange for his love, but he cared not. Marriage was far from his thoughts. His profession was his all. He had no time for love or pleasure.

In 1768 he was called upon one day by Thomas Chaffee, a wealthy brewer, who complained of a severe pain in his stomach. The doctor had been doing a great deal to stay the tide of intemperance that was cursing the borough, but his words had not weighed against the product of Chaffee's malt. Now a chance for an effective temperance lecture was at hand.

"Thomas," he said, "you have got a cancer. Your liquor caused it. I cannot cure you. You have committed suicide, but for God's sake stop your brewing before you commit unnumbered homicides."

Quite naturally such plain language displeased the brewer, and he went home enraged. His daughter Sinai, shared her father's anger when she heard of the young doctor's words, and having a wild spirit of her own, she forthwith called on Dr. Darwin to show her resentment. The outcome of the call was that the lady admired the physician's quiet courage of conviction and he reciprocated by admiring her championship of her father and his vocation.

The result was mutual love and a marriage engagement. In a few months Thomas Chaffee was dead of gastric cancer, and his daughter had shown her love for Dr. Darwin by selling the brewery, and by working hand in hand with him to diminish drunkenness. She would do anything for him, and she loved him with most beautiful strength and depth of affection.

But the doctor was too scientific to be a true lover. He was too much like his grandson. The girl pleased him well, but after a protracted engagement, he heartlessly broke it by arguing to himself and his fiancè that it was probable that she would inherit her father's terrible malady, and that such a probability would entail a burden of unhappiness on them both. Such cool reasoning was a dreadful blow to the orphan girl, and as nothing was left to bind her to her native town, she soon emigrated to America. Dr. Darwin removed from Litchfield to Derby, a little later, and won great fame as an author and a scientist, and had a home that might have been happy.

Sinai Chaffee could not forget her first love. Finding a home with relatives near Albany, she lived a quiet maiden life for many years, and never entered society. Amasa Converse went frequently from his home in Windsor, Massachusetts, to Albany, and when the next June came up the Hudson, there was a bloom of orange blossoms at the Van Ness mansion-house, and Chancellor John Lansing gave away the bride, the fair and gentle Sinai. Mr. Converse was a farmer, but he gave his wife a pleasant home among the Berkshire hills. When her first-born came, and they told her it was a son, she said "His name shall be Erasmus Darwin Converse."

The years passed happily. Afterward there were born two daughters, and then the mother died. On her dying bed she told her sister-in law of her early love.

"There is no cancer in my blood," she said, when the fury of fever had inflamed her veins; "but, Polly, I fear that my boy may some time suffer from the disease."

Polly only smiled at such an idea, but she did not forget it. Darwin Converse grew a stalwart and healthy lad, but he had his mother's gentle and retiring manner. His father married again and sent the boy away to school, where for a chum he had George Dana Eustis, and where he made the close acquaintance of William Cullen Bryant The poet was soon away to the city, but he left young Converse in Cummington, where for a quarter of a century they met every summer, and kept their friendship warm. Converse was a farmer, but he was a scholar and a philosopher, and his secluded life was never other than happy. Marrying a wife, and a successful life, he passed middle age and never knew a day of sickness. One autumn day in 1873, he drove from Cummington to Pittsfield, and, as was his custom, took dinner with his aunt, Mrs. Polly Pratt.

"Why do you wear a muffler?" she asked him.

"My throat pains me some," he said, "and so I bundle it up."

The old lady asked to see his ailing throat, and noticed on one of the tonsils a small scarlet spot

"Can it be—cancer?" she thought, remembering his mother's prophetic fears

The next time the father went to Pittsfield it was three months later, and it was to consult a physician about his throat. Dr. C. D. Mills examined him, and finding his system in prime condition, was inclined to treat him for an entirely local affection.

"Doctor," said the sage old aunt, "isn't it cancer?" and she told of the hereditary liability.

The next time that the doctor looked at the circumscribed, angry redness, he recognized the antecedent heredity, and knew the particular direction that the morbid action had taken. "Cancer," he said; and in his opinion coincided Dr. Wm. Warren Greene, Dr. Thomas Hun, Dr. A. N. Allen, and several other eminent surgeons. It was cancer, at the best terrible, but in this case made more terrible by its inaccessibility.

The prophecy, born of outraged love, was fulfilled; and while Charles Darwin was surprising the world with his brilliant theories, the son of his grandfather's wronged first love was feeling deathly pain as he breathed the keen Massachusetts air.

One day as the farmer read his paper, he chanced to see an item which told of a Philadelphia physician who was treating diseases with a compound form of oxygen. The farmer liked the idea, and in the summer he went to Philadelphia. Dreading lest he was to fall into the hands of a charlatan, he gave Dr. G. R. Starkey an assumed name, and showed him his throat. After an examination he said, "Doctor, if your treatment will purify my blood I want it." "The inhalation," answered the physician, "will do just this if you will give it time. It will render your system able to throw off the matter that causes the disease."

"I am a believer. Begin your treatment," was all the man could say.

Advantages were realized at once. The system that had began to totter under the burden of the terrible disease was speedily vitalized, and gradually the throat lesion began to assume the appearance of healthy healing. "My throat is well," he was soon able to say, and with the exception of a cicatricial spot in place of the ulcer he never suffered further inconvenience. Of course the physicians had to admit that he was cured, though Dr. Mills was inclined to doubt.

Alonzo Morse, a worthy citizen of Vineland, N. J., was a cousin of Mr. Converse, and had a cancer at the inner canthus of his left eye. He was induced to try the Treatment, and was cured, as hundreds of reputable citizens of Vineland and Dalton, Mass., can testify. Said Mr. Morse to a reporter, "That Philadelphia doctor saved my life, and I am positive that there is no other physician who can cure cancer."

This is but one of a hundred singular, chronic cases whose relief and final cure has made their friends view it as almost a miracle

The above testimonial is published—not to claim for the Compound Oxygen a cure of any specific disease, but, as a marked illustration of the way it cures all afflictions. The process is that of revitalizing the physical organism, so that it is restored to a state of natural health. Now, it is to be well noted that this revitalization is not an artificial supply of a given amount of vitality, which is to be soon exhausted, thus leaving the system in the same condition in which it was; but it puts the organs whose functions it is to generate vitality, in a state of full health. This testimonial was written by the well-known writer, "Rev. M. C. Cogswell," without our suggestion or knowledge and sent to us. We have kept it two years, and have taken pains to establish its authenticity. Being satisfied on that point, we allow it to go forth not for the purpose of soliciting cases of cancer for treatment. We have never seen a case of cancer thoroughly cured by Compound Oxygen, but we have seen enough of its effects in cancerous cases to be convinced that many of them might be cured if taken in time.

In corroboration of this statement we give the following account of a case sent to us by the patient, an estimable lady of Millersberg, Ohio.

August 31, 1886.

"I think you have said in some of your circulars that you did not claim that the Compound Oxygen would 'perform surgical operations or cure cancer.' I think I can now say that it has cured what would have been cancer two years ago had it not been treated according to your directions. While using the Oxygen by inhalation, I also bathed the sore, or rather covered it with a cloth saturated with inhaler water, at morning and at night, as directed, since it became worse through neglect of the treatment last spring and am happy to say that I regard it as cured, although I still apply the water. The itching and gnawing sensation is gone, the last vestige of scab has disappeared and there is only a small discolored depression (very slight) left to tell of the trouble now. I have used nothing for it whatever except your treatment, so the cure can be ascribed to no bing else.

The Compound Oxygen has now received a world-wide reputation for its efficiency in curing chronic diseases. The afflicted will find facts and testimonials greatly to their interest in the Treatise on Compound Oxygen, and their publications on various diseases, which are all sent free upon application, addressed to Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

One of the Best Tonics.

Dr. A Atkinson, Prof. Materia Medica and Dermatology, in College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., says: "It makes a pleasant drink, and is one of our best tonics in the shape of the phosphates in soluble form."

Catarrh Cured

Catarrh is a very prevalent disease, with distressing and offensive symptoms. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives ready relief and speedy cure, from the fact it acts through the blood, and thus reaches every part of the system.

"I suffered with catarrh fifteen years. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am not troubled any with catarrh, and my general health is much better." I. W. Lillis, Postal Clerk Chicago & St. Louis Railroad.

"I suffered with catarrh 6 or 8 years; tried many wonderful cures, inhalers, etc., spending nearly one hundred dollars without benefit. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was greatly improved." M. A. Abbey, Worcester, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. Thompson, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. Barrington, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

The Physician's Favorite!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

☞ It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.

☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY

FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000 000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
President Merchants' Bank,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6%, 7%, 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. Perkins, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. Perkins, Secretary.
PAID UP CAPITAL, $250,000.00.
The Choicest 1st Mortgage Farm Loans, also the Company's Ten Year Debentures, based upon its paid up Capital and Assets of over $650,000. No Losses. 11 years' Experience with absolute satisfaction to over 1500 Investors. Send for circulars, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City & Albany. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

A BIG OFFER. To introduce them, we will Give away 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 23.. St., N. Y.

Arnold, Constable & Co

AUTUMN NOVELTIES
AT RETAIL.

An extensive stock of choice styles of Striped, Fancy Figured Brocades, Moire Antiques, Moire Francais, Fleur de Soie, Faille Francais Gold and Silver Effects, etc., suitable for Street or Evening Wear. Also, a fine assortment of the leading makes in

BLACK SILKS.

FRENCH SILK HOSIERY.

Fall Novelties—Fancy, Vertical Stripes and Plain Solid Colored. Misses' Ribbed Wool, Spun Silk and Balbriggan Hose.

Ladies' Colored Silk Underwear (Pink, Sky, Chalk and Scarlet).

CHILDREN'S Silk Vests and Pantalettes. Also, Ribbed Silk and Silk and Wool Mixtures.

Broadway & 19th st.

NEW YORK.

Solid Silver
Exclusively.

TRADE (W STERLING) MARK.

Whiting M'f'g Co.,
Silversmiths,
Union Square and 16th St.

James McCreery & Co.

display this week a special shipment of rich Plush and Wool Fabrics for the Fall and Winter Season.

A very large stock of Black Silks in the newest and most approved weaves are now on exhibition.

Special notice is given of a great sale in their Linen Department. Fine Bleached Table Damasks will be offered at 50 cts., 65 cts., 75 cts., 85 cts., and $1 per yard, also a great variety of fine Table-cloths, Napkins, Towels, etc., at a large discount from regular prices.

Mail orders receive prompt attention.

Broadway & 11th St.,
New York.

A MILLION
BOOKS
RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.
ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.
LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.
LEGGAT BROTHERS
CHAMBERS STREET,
3d door West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

ORIENTAL DEPARTMENT.

W. & J. SLOANE

Invite attention to their new collection of

PERSIAN, INDIA AND TURKEY CARPETS

in choice designs and colorings. Among the latter will be found Oushak, Ghiordes, Bahndure, Kirman, Sivas, and the new quality known as Afghan, which possesses all the lustre and sheen of the Antique Carpet.

The attention of connoisseurs is especially called to a very fine assortment of small Antique Rugs.

Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts
NEW YORK.

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years will be sent free on application to the Equitable Mortgage Co., 208 B'way, N.Y.

CARPETS.

ALL THE LATEST NOVELTIES

From the Oldest and Most Celebrated Looms of Europe and America in Royal Wiltons, Axminsters, Moquettes, etc., in Choice and Exclusive Designs, we are now Offering at the Lowest Prices Ever Known for Fine and Reliable Goods.

RARE BARGAINS.

VELVET CARPETS.

500 pcs. Best Quality New Designs, Just Received and Placed on Sale at Less than Manufacturers' Cost of Production.

1,000 pcs. Best Body Brussels and All-Wool Extra Super Ingrains at Equally Low Figures.

INGRAIN ART SQUARES, DRUGGETS, RUGS, AND MATS AT LESS THAN AUCTION PRICES.

UPHOLSTERY

For Furniture Coverings and Draperies in the Finest Imported Fabrics, at Fabulously Low Prices.

500 Pairs Chenille Curtains at $12; worth $16.

1,000 Pairs Lace Curtains (Taped Edge) at $2; worth $3.

Window Shades [a Specialty.]

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,
Sixth Avenue and 13th Street, New York.

R. H. MACY & CO.,

14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.

GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

OUR PRICES
ALWAYS THE LOWEST.

Attention is Directed to Our Large and Attractive Stock of

FALL GOODS

All the Novelties in

Suits and Cloaks

AND

Hats and Bonnets.

The Most Approved Makes of
BLACK AND COLORED SILKS,

SATINS, VELVETS & PLUSHES

Hosiery, Underwear, and Gloves

For Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

DRESS GOODS

In the Newest Styles and Colorings.

We are Sole Agents for the U. S. of the Celebrated Red Star Brand o Wonderful Wearing

VELVETEENS,

Noted for its Rich Color and Close Resemblance to Silk Velvet. 39 Shades. Price, 74 cents. To Prevent Imitations a Red Star is Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

Mail Orders Carefully Executed.

R. H. MACY & CO.

WASTE
EMBROIDERY SILK.

Our Factory Ends of Embroidery Silk are known far and wide, and are in great demand. Price, 40 cents per box. Club orders of ten boxes get one extra. Crazy Stitches in each package. One dozen applique-flowers and figures, only 50 cents. Send Postal Note.

The Brainerd & Armstrong Co.,
69 Broadway, N. Y. 621 Market St., Phila.

Unique and Tasteful Designs
IN THOROUGHLY WELL MADE
FURNITURE
AT Moderate Prices.

Warren Ward & Co.,
Designers and Manufacturers,
6 & 8 E. 20th St., New York.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

The Great Church LIGHT.
FRINK'S Patent Reflectors give the Most Powerful, the Softest, Cheapest and the Best Light known for Churches, Stores, Show Windows, Parlors, Banks, Offices, Picture Galleries, Theatres, Depots, etc. New and elegant designs. Send size of room. Get circular and estimate. A liberal discount to churches and the trade. I. P. FRINK, 551 Pearl Street, N. Y.

J. B. WATKINS LAND MORTGAGE CO.

16 years perfect success, 12,531 Mortgages negotiated, aggregating $8,369,200
All the Interest and Principal paid on day of maturity to amount of 5,135,820

We have decided to place ourselves on a plane above every competitor. Hereafter every mortgage that we negotiate will bear our full legal

UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE OF BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST,

Interest 6 per cent, payable as in the past, by half yearly coupons, at the

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE IN NEW YORK.

Assets to the value of nearly a MILLION DOLLARS are pledged by our guarantee.

SEND FOR PAMPHLET CONTAINING FACTS AND FIGURES, FORMS, AND 450 TESTIMONIALS

Our Law Department will collect Bonds and other securities in all the Western States for individuals and corporations

Address J. B. WATKINS L. M. CO., Lawrence, Kansas,
Or HENRY DICKINSON, New York Manager, 243 Broadway.

RIDLEYS'
NEW BUILDING

Grand St., New York,

which covers 125 feet of our Grand St. front, being a 5-story iron-front structure, so increases our

SELLING SPACE

that we can promise greater comfort to the shopping public than any other house in the city.

Assortments the Largest,
Prices the Lowest.

This statement is honest and correct, and therefore can be relied on, and a visit be safely and profitably made.

Dress Goods.

All the Latest Fall and Winter Novelties, in all Grades to the Finest.

6-4 All-Wool Fancy Scotch Cheviot Suitings, 93c.; elsewhere, $1.35.

6-4 All-Wool Fancy Silk Check and Stripes, $1.39; elsewhere, $1 75.

6-4 All-Wool Mixture and Checks, 85c.; elsewhere, $1.25.

6-4 All-Wool Camel's Hair Homespuns, 49c.; elsewhere, 70c.

4-4 All-Wool Tricots (Grays), 39c. yard.

46-inch All-Wool French Beatrice Cloth, 59c.; worth $1.25.

46-inch All-Wool French Cashmeres, 74c.; worth $1.

36-inch All-Wool French Cashmeres, 50c.; worth 70c.

40-inch All-Wool French Serges, 59c.; worth 75c.

IMPORTED NOVELTIES.

Silk Stripe Novelties, 35c.; worth 50c.

All-Wool French Striped Combination, 69c.; worth $1.

All-Wool Scotch Tufted Combination, 95c.; worth $1.25.

42-inch All-Wool Heather Mixtures, 49c.; worth 65c.

42-inch All-Wool Camel's Hair Stripes, 95c.; worth $1.25.

PLUSH COMBINATIONS.

Fancy Stripes, Checks, and Plaids at $2.25, $2.50, and $2.75 a yard.

Plain, to match, at $1.25 a yard.

MILLINERY NOVELTIES

in Silks, Velvets, Satins, Ribbons, Fancy Feathers, Flowers.

TRIMMED AND UNTRIMMED HATS.

An excess of over 3,000 Trimmed Hats and Bonnets now on display in our Millinery Parlors, trimmed equal to the best, and at prices showing fully a one-third saving.

China and Art Department. The largest and best stocked in the city.

50 New Designs and Decorations in Tea and Dinner Sets.

PRICES THE LOWEST THROUGHOUT THE HOUSE.

Orders by Mail

Receive Prompt and Accurate Attention.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,
309, 311, 313 to 321 Grand St.,
56 to 70 ALLEN, 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST., N.Y.

KNABE
PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
WILLIAM KNABE & CO.,
Nos. 204 and 206 West Baltimore Street, Baltimore. No. 112 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer.

Een-dracht maakt macht.

VOL. LVII.—No. 44. WHOLE No. 2936. NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1886. $2.65 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. No. 48 CHURCH STREET.

EDITORS: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

THE SABBATH-SCHOOL INSTITUTE to be held next week in the Collegiate Church on Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street promises to furnish more of the knowledge and convictions acquired by experience than any other series of meetings of the kind ever held in this vicinity. A glance at the list of speakers, to be found on another page, will satisfy any one that information of the highest value will be conveyed to those present in the most agreeable way. The topics to be treated have been wisely selected. The sessions ought to attract a large attendance.

SOCIALISM does not vary essentially from communism. The wage-earners' movement in this country is tending to socialism, because so many emigrants from the continent of Europe are found among our handicraftsmen. There are one or two prime objections to the socialistic theory. One is, it is not worked out in detail. Even Marx wrote only volume first of his system. Another is that it aims to put an end to all private ownership of property. Another is that it makes the State the employer, and not an individual or corporation. Would not such a system take away all incentive to thrift, enterprise and invention? Everybody is to work and is to receive the same pay, and nobody is to own any property. This is gravely and deliberately written in books.

THE REVISION.—Not long since, Prof. Henry M. Harman, LL.D., of Dickinson College, read a paper before the Methodist Preachers' Meeting in Philadelphia, on the Revised English Bible, taking up in detail many passages and canvassing the changes made. His general conclusion agrees with that of many impartial scholars.

He gave it as his opinion, based upon a very careful examination, that the revised edition was a very great improvement on the authorized translation, and should be introduced in its stead as rapidly and widely as possible. But the professor thought that the Revised Versions of both the Old and the New Testaments were susceptible of further improvement, and that a revision of the revision by a competent committee might be found necessary before the revised Bible would go into general use.

The only, and apparently insuperable, difficulty about the second revision is to determine who shall make it, and under what auspices and at whose expense it shall be done. A self-appointed committee would hardly command the confidence of the churches, and still less would a committee constituted by some one denomination.

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE, held last week in Brooklyn, of which we furnish in this issue as full a report as our four extra pages will allow, equalled any previous Conference in the thoughtfulness, directness and ability of the papers and addresses presented. There was no "beating about the bush," but a single eye to the most forcible presentation of facts and thoughts strictly pertinent to the several subjects assigned. The devout, spiritual glow did not rise to the white heat as at Fonda last year, yet the seasons of prayer were refreshing and inspiriting, and what lack in this respect there may have been as compared with other conferences, was amply made up in the instructive and stimulating character of the papers, addresses and discussions. The storm, perhaps, had something to do with dampening the spiritual ardor of the people, as it certainly had in diminishing the number in attendance. Yet the attendance was good, there being about one hundred and sixty delegates from the Classes enrolled, including the ladies, who, with others, not delegates, but interested in the Missions of our Church, made very fair congregations. The hearts of all indited the prayer that the quickening influence of the meetings might be felt in every part of the Church and results appear in enlarged contributions to the cause.

THE PAPER by Mr. Wyckoff, on another page, relating to Christian education in India, is clear, comprehensive and important.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who has had years of experience in conducting a Sabbath school, and has been a successful superintendent and teacher, prepared a paper for the recent Convention of the King's County Sabbath School Union, on the Necessary and Unnecessary Work of the Sunday-School Teacher. It has been divided into three parts. The first precedes the exposition of the lesson in this number, to be followed by the other parts in successive numbers. It deserves the attention of those engaged in Sabbath-school work. The Union considered it one of the most important parts of a useful convention.

THE CALL to prayer on next Sabbath for the blessing of God upon missions to the heathen invites a notice of the progress which has been made in awakening a right Christian spirit in the Church and in establishing Christian institutions among the nations. About one hundred years have passed since William Carey, the shoemaker, and minister to a small Baptist church at Moulton, England, began his importunate entreaties to his brethren to undertake a mission to the heathen. A Mr. Sutcliff, in 1784, at a meeting at Nottingham of the association to which Carey belonged, secured the adoption of a resolution to set apart an hour on the first Monday evening of every month, "for extraordinary prayer for the revival of religion and for the extending of Christ's kingdom in the world." This gave to Carey, who had been making rude maps of the world and meditating upon the spiritual destitution of the nations, opportunities to plead that missionaries should be sent to declare the Gospel to the peoples sitting in gross darkness. He was regarded as a visionary, his scheme as wild and impracticable. Almost no man ventured to sustain him publicly. Carey was ordained in 1787, and at about this time published "An Inquiry into the Obligation of Christians to Use Means for the Conversion of the Heathen." In 1788 he became pastor of a church at Leicester, and his desire for the spread of the Gospel became more intense and habitual. In 1792 he preached a sermon before the association at Nottingham, on Isaiah 54: 2–3, when he made the memorable two divisions, "(1) Expect great things from God. (2.) Attempt great things for God," which resulted in the formation of a missionary society. In 1793 he sailed for India with a Mr. Thomas, a surgeon. Carey's wife had refused to accompany him, and yielded only to importunate solicitations. The captain of the first ship on which they embarked refused to take them because they had no license from the East India Company, and returned them to the shore. They found passage afterward on a Danish East Indiaman. Arriving in India, such obstacles were encountered that Carey and Thomas accepted the superintendence of two indigo factories. The East India Company vigorously opposed their endeavors to evangelize the natives. When their reports and those of the brethren sent to be their colaborers were received in England, a few years later, they were made the subjects of merciless ridicule by the Rev. Sydney Smith, the celebrated wit and humorist, in the Edinburgh Review, which was becoming the highest literary authority in Great Britain, by virtue of its independent and intelligent criticism of books and public men. Such was the seemingly insignificant beginning of English and American missions to the heathen. The Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge and that for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts had existed for some time, but both confined their work almost entirely to British colonists and had made no distinct effort to evangelize the native population. How great the change in the mind and activity of the Church and in the condition of the nations, since Carey, about a hundred years ago, gave the first true impulse in Great Britain to the endeavor to win the world to Christ!

The Statue of Liberty.

THE ceremonies of last Thursday inaugurating the Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World express much more than the friendship existing between the people of France and the citizens of the United States. The graceful and colossal figure was paid for by men of all classes in France. It represents the sum of popular contributions. The pedestal is the gift of the people of the United States. Men of wealth gave the first one hundred thousand dollars to provide a becoming foundation, and there the subscriptions rested, and it seemed as though a disgraceful failure was to be the outcome of that first endeavor. But the World sagaciously carried the matter into the shops and homes of the people, and how they were stirred and with what enthusiasm they poured in their gifts of pennies and dollars is one of the most engaging chapters in the history of the undertaking. The grand statue, therefore, has been erected by the people of France and of the United States. It represents the gifts of men, women and children, and of all social grades.

But Bartholdi's beautiful and impressive conception, so admirably executed, the position it has, the ceremonies by which it has been given and received, will reach and move the hearts of multitudes of men in many countries. The distinguished company of gentlemen present as the representatives of France, the host of notable Americans crowding Bedlow's Island, the presence of the President of the United States and his Cabinet, attest the hold this symbol has upon the hearts of men. It embodies the aspiration of men the world over. The story of the statue will go swiftly around the earth. The newspapers will give a record of what has been done, and everybody will read it. Where no such means of communication exist the fame of the majestic image will travel from mouth to mouth and penetrate the most secluded hamlets. For the desire of thousands of thousands of men of every nation is embodied in the grand figure.

We think of this to-day more than of the expression of the continued sympathy of France, or the interest manifested by our own citizens, or the great proportions of the statue, exceeding, it is said, those of any other figure made by man in any age. The liberty we have, which is apparently firmly and forever established here, is the longing of a multitude of men of every nation and tongue under the whole heaven. It is a longing for such a representative free government as ours, respected and feared though its army is but the skeleton of an army and though its navy consists of officers without ships; a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people," in which a man is a man, which can afford to trust in the patriotism and courage and devotion of its citizens; a government which gives every man a fair chance, encourages invention, enterprise and originality, and secures to every man the rewards of his industry. This free government, so flexible and so strong, is the desire of men everywhere, and the homage of the nations will be paid to the graceful and majestic image in which Mr. Bartholdi has embodied this aspiration.

But American institutions are the result of American character, and that character is the fruit of the Protestant Reformation. The constitutional freedom we enjoy was shaped by circumstances indeed, but no circumstances could have produced it if the American character had not existed. That belief and practice was begotten of the truth of the Bible. It never has and never will come from any other source. It alone will preserve these institutions of freedom. This liberty has enlightened the world and will continue to do so as long as the genuine American character shall be maintained. Will the nations see this as they look upon us and will they learn it? Some day they will. Days of gloom, and conflict, and suffering, and despair, may intervene, but the time is coming when a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people" shall be established, through the power of the Gospel of the Son of God, over the whole earth.

A POOR SUBSTITUTE.—The modern deniers of the immortality of the soul propose to substitute in its place a sort of immortality of the race. What they say, as in the well-known words of George Eliot, is in substance, "We shall not live, but others will; therefore let us so act as to exalt their lives, and thus perpetuate our influence." But a continuity of mortal beings is not immortality—it is rather an endless procession of the dying. It is the word, death, drawn out and emphasized to the last letter. No matter how successful we may be in improving individual life and the collective life, the improvement brings no redemption. Rather it makes the contrast between life and death more horrible. The improbability of the race is no remedy for the mortality of the individual. It is hard to see how any could cherish such an opinion after looking upon the mortal remains of one dearly honored and beloved.

MUSIC AS A LANGUAGE OF RELIGION.—Under this title the Rev. J. Vila Blake has an article in the Christian Register, from which we make the following savory extract. The "White" referred to in the concluding sentences is the late Richard Grant White, who wrote a good deal about music, and generally in a sensible way:

It is thought, and the thought breeds many works, that, if words from the psalms or some hymn be set to any melody of like metre, sacred music is attained. Conversely, it is thought that if any Biblical poetry or prophecy be set by a composer with what mystery of his art he pleases, with runs and trills and turns and florid figures, sacred music is attained. Both these are wretched errors. For, if a composer be not touched and stirred by religious thoughts and feelings, how can he write music having the power of religious conveyance? One may paste a label of food on a poison, but the stomach is harmed. So one may call worldly made music a prayer, and the ears take it innocently; but the heart is hurt. No church of my pastoring will ever have sung in it the so-called prayer from Rossini's "Moses in Egypt," because I know it to be no more a humble uplooking than if one were to recite a chivalric speech from Scott's "Lady of the Lake." Haydn wrote in the beginning of his scores In nomine Domini or Soli Deo Gloria, and at the end Laus Deo; and, if he met with a difficulty in composing, he would leave his instrument and run over his rosary. He said, "The infinite goodness of the Divine nature inspires me with such confidence and joy that I could have written even a miserere in tempo allegro." How can it be that a composer so coming to his task must not impart a subtle quality to the music, emanating from such a state of mind, and that the quality will be religion in the music as first it was in the composer's soul? When White says that "in the diatonic scale there are no strictly pious intervals," it is foolish trifling. So there are no pious letters in the alphabet, either Hebrew or Roman; but they combine in David's psalms and in the English thereof.

"Old Colony" Papers.

"THAT NOBLE ANIMAL, THE HORSE."

I.

THE horse has had things pretty much his own way this summer. Judging from the space accorded to him in the newspapers, one would judge that he was of more interest to the reading public than any other subject, always excepting crime and scandal. It ought, therefore, to be a popular thing to have something to say about him, even though from a somewhat different point of view.

I have been reading the book of the prophet Zechariah,—a splendid pageant and procession of coming events culminating in the glory of the Latter Day, the City of God come down from heaven. And in the throng and glitter of those streets the seer discovers one startling and cl macteric effect. On the bells of the horses, on the tinkling ornaments of the harness, as the chariots flash and rattle by, he observes an inscription (which, surely he cannot mistake, for it is precisely the same that gleams from the diadem of the high priest!), "HOLINESS TO THE LORD." There can be only one conclusion to be drawn. The day is coming when the very horses in the street shall be as sacred to the Lord's use as the foremost ecclesiastic in the temple, and the most immaterial part of their trappings as the hallowed ensign of his divine commission. In other words, there is to be a reign of universal and complete holiness on earth. There is a time coming when all life, and the commonest details of life, shall wear a heavenly aspect, and have a sacramental significance. There shall be a state of things in which the distinction of sacred and secular shall become obsolete, not because holy things have been secularized, but because all worldly things have been sanctified.

It will help us to grasp the startling and sweeping character of this prediction, when we remember that to the Jewish mind horses were identified with the most abhorrent heathenism, and their employment was a profanation. They were associated with the land of Egypt and the house of bondage. And the laws of Moses had discouraged their introduction, lest traffic with the great horse mart of the world should entangle the people of God once more with its fascinating and corrupting idolatries. Their general use had only come in under Solomon, whose pride and luxury overleaped so many of Israel's early safeguards and simplicities.

It is a fair question whether some law of human nature may not lie back of this local enactment and police regulation. Has there ever been a time when evil and ignoble associations did not cling to the horse, however good and "noble" a beast he may be in himself? Certain things seem to be magnetized for certain moral abuses. I need only mention money, wine, cards, dice, dancing, and theatrical amusements. And "horse flesh" would seem to have an affinity for whatsoever things are dishonest, untruthful and of bad report. I am sure that I do not want to saddle this poor beast of burden with a needless load of shame, and every one knows that a parson's or a deacon's horse is the emblem of sobriety, and a doctor's horse is beautiful upon the mountains and carries blessings all around the town. But somehow iron filings never clung to a loadstone with more tenacity than are all the elements of roguery, vulgarity and dissipation attracted to "that noble animal, the horse."

There would almost seem to be an infection in his touch and atmosphere. Men who are unblemished in their other dealings will acquire a bad odor in this. "Jockeying" is a perfectly harmless word in its original and literal sense, but we need not be told what by dint of bitter experience has come to be its first significance. We all know what idea is conveyed by being told that a person is "horsey." The trial of speed, which has its legitimate uses, has more and more swept after it a train of the most demoralizing evils, and the race-course is the arena where the world and the flesh and the devil run neck and neck for the prize of the soul.

Is it not, then, an almost overpowering vision—the day when a horse-trade shall be as safe a venture as the purchase of a pound of beef, and when trotting shall be as religious a proceeding as the exercises of a prayer-meeting?

When this prophecy was spoken, the chief use of horses among the Jews was military,—either ridden by the cavalry, or driven before the chariots of war. Zechariah himself, speaking in the name of the Lord, thus predicts a period of peace: "I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle-bow shall be cut off,"—the horse being evidently here the symbol, if not the synonym, of war. This remains one of its unhallowed associations. We can still thoroughly appreciate the stirring picture of the war-horse, in the book of Job: his neck clothed with thunder, and the glory of his nostrils terrible; pawing in the valley, swallowing the ground with fierceness and rage, rejoicing in his strength, and mocking at fear; smelling the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains and the shoutings, and saying among the trumpets, Ha, ha! Is not that the incarnated spirit of War?

And to think that the Prince of Peace shall yet lay his subduing hand upon that neck of thunder, and that He who was meek and lowly of heart shall place an unresisted yoke upon that proud and furious form—in the day when men shall not only beat their swords into ploughshares, but shall write upon the bells of their horses, which were meant to strike terror into the hearts of their foes, "Holiness to the Lord;" and the war-horse, his occupation gone, shall exist only as a sculptured memory in Job's sublime poem.

When the traffic in horses has become a holy calling, then may we look for the sanctification of all Trade. When the Augean stables of commerce are cleansed, we need not fear for the warehouse, the counting room, or the work-shop.

It is not my aim to conceal the fact that with us (in clear distinction from the ancient Jew) this animal, however sinned against and sinned with, is identified with the most useful and honorable occupations. What was formerly reserved almost exclusively for the mule or the ox is now done mainly, and in some parts of the country entirely, by the horse. He patiently and powerfully drags the cart through the city streets, and is the sine qua non of agriculture. Even the Jews used the trampling of his quick and pelting hoofs for a threshing machine. We plough, and reap, and gather into barns, with his help. He is still the emblem of strength, even in this age of iron and engines, as he was in Bible days and lands,—Jeremiah using the words "horse" and "strength" interchangeably. Not less is he the very image of utility.

And thus all Service shall become sanctified with the dedication of the horse to God—service in its lowest form, namely, that of the brute creation. How much more the higher ministries of man to man! No more involuntary servitude, which did not all pass away with the abolition of slavery; no eye-service, as men-pleasers but all as conscious and supreme service of the Lord Christ. Then shall be fulfilled the prayer of the quaint and pious Herbert:

> "Teach me, my God and King,
> In all things Thee to see,
> And what I do in anything
> To do it as for Thee."

And shall come to pass his vision:

> "A servant with this clause
> Makes drudgery divine;
> Who sweeps a room as for thy cause
> Makes that and the action fine."

But the sanctification of service has two sides. There is always the served, as well as the servant. If holiness be upon the horses, we may be sure it will be upon, and within, those who drive them; and all men shall be priests and a holy nation.

There is a striking and an almost mystical identification between the horse and his rider, so that the ancients imagined a being which constituted the living link between the two races. The centaur might readily be suggested by the horseman's dexterous management and firmness of seat, and by the apparent oneness of will in man and beast, which are observed in the movements of cavalry or the exploits of the ring. And in the high calling of God they are not divided. A holy consecration and a divine subjection shall impart to the horse and the horseman of the latter day a vital and flexible oneness, more beautiful than a poet's fancy and more enduring than statues of bronze.

Then too shall all thoughtless, selfish, and cruel abuses cease in the treatment of our dumb dependents. "Holiness to the Lord" shall be upon them, and it shall be as if God said, "Do my anointed no harm!" One will no more think of over driving or under-feeding, or of laying excessive burdens or wanton blows and stripes upon his horse, than he would think of defacing his Bible or despoiling his mother's grave. Not the bells only, but the bridles and the reins and the whip, the fly-net in summer and the blanket in winter, and the vehicle with its load, shall be holiness to the Lord.

The Mohonk Conference.

ON the second day of the Conference, after receiving information from various quarters, the following resolutions, reported by the Business Committee, were adopted, a half-a-dozen members voting against the fourth:

Resolved That the public and private utterances of President Cleveland, expressing his interest in securing justice, education, and ultimately citizenship, for the Indians, and such wise and courageous acts of the present Administration as the revoking of the order opening to white settlers the Crow Creek Reservation and the ejectment from Indian lands of illegal occupants and armed intruders, have the unqualified approval of this conference.

Resolved That the efficiency of the Indian service depends almost entirely upon the personal fitness and experience of the instructors, agents, teachers and subordinates who are brought into immediate and personal relations with the Indians.

Resolved, That under previous Administrations the uncertain tenure of place on the part of Indian agents has interfered materially with the work of civilizing the Indians.

Resolved, That since this Conference is credibly informed that within the last two years new appointments of agents have been made at about four-fifths of the agencies, while very generally changes have been made in subordinates and teachers, and that since many of the most experienced men in the service have thus been lost, the friends of the Indians must regard with solicitude the con inuance of a system of appointment and removal which has not shown itself under either party or under any Administration adapted to secure the bes results.

Resolved, That this Conference earnestly recommends the immediate application of the principles of civil service reform to the entire Indian service, with such extension or modification of the present laws and rules as may be necessary to secure the end in view.

At the last session the same committee reported a summary of the results reached. It was unanimously adopted and is as follows·

1. The discussions of the Conference have led us to a clearer recognition of a few principles which we believe furnish the key to the solution of the Indian problem. The application and enforcement of these principles by the immediate passage of the Dawes Land in Severalty bill, the Sioux Reservation bill, and the bill for extending law over all Indians, would at once do more for the cause of the Indians than can be done in years without such legislation.

2. It is our conviction that the duties of citizenship are of such a nature that they can only be learned by example and practice, and we believe that quicker and surer progress in industry, education and morality will be secured by giving citizenship first, than by making citizenship depend upon the attainment of any standard of education and conduct; and we therefore urge upon Congress the necessity of ceasing to treat the Indians as incapable of bearing responsibilities and the advantage of compelling them to undertake the same responsibilities that we impose upon all other human beings competent to distinguish right and wrong.

3. The uncivilized tribe enforces no law. The tribal relation dwarfs family life and weakens family ties. The reservation shuts off the Indians from civilization, and rations distributed unearned tend to pauperize them. Therefore we are convinced that the sooner family ties and family homesteads replace tribal relations and unsettled herding upon the reservation, the better. Give to every Indian family a home, where needful, with a protected title.

4. The opening of large parts of our great reservations to actual white settlers, by the sale, in the interest of the Indians and with their consent, of lands remaining after all Indians have received ample allotments of land in severalty, we believe can be accomplished by the proposed legislation now before Congress, with justice to the Indian and with advantage alike to him and to the whites.

5. While these results will follow the proposed legislation, we believe that the great work of education, general, industrial, and moral and religious, should be pressed forward, both by the government and the religious societies, with unflagging zeal, with larger expenditure of money and of teaching force, at schools in the East and in the day schools and the boarding schools on the reservations, and with greater hope and confidence as we see such encouraging results as have been reported to us here.

6. We believe that the agency system in some form must be temporarily continued; and since the efficiency of our Indian service depends almost entirely upon the personal fitness and the experience of the inspectors, agents, teachers and subordinates who come into immediate and personal relations with the Indians, we have declared our conviction for these and for other reasons elsewhere stated that the principle of civil service reform should be at once applied to our Indian service.

7. We thankfully express our conviction that each year sees a quickening of the public conscience in matters touching justice for the Indian, and a deepening public sentiment in favor of the full protection of his rights by law, and we invite all good citizens to join us in our efforts to protect, to civilize and to Christianize the Indians.

Andover on Trial.

THE Rev. J. W. Wellman, D.D., of Malden, Mass., a member of the Board of Trustees of the Andover Theological Seminary; the Rev. H. M. Dexter, D.D., editor of the Congregationalist, of the class of 1844; the Rev. O. T. Lanphear, D.D., of Beverly, Mass., of the class of 1848, and Prof. J. J. Blaisdell, D.D, of Beloit College, Wisconsin, the last three declaring that they represent other alumni, presented charges to the Board of Visitors of Andover Seminary, on July 6th, and renewed them on July 23d, against Profs. Egbert C. Smyth, D.D., Wm. J. Tucker, D.D., J. Wesley Churchill, George Harris and Edward Y. Hincks. The professors are accused of violating, by their teachings, the conditions of the "Constitution" of the Seminary, signed in 1807, of the "Additional Statutes" of 1808, and of the "Statutes of the Associate Foundation," also of 1808. The hearing began on Monday of last week. The charges are that the professors named have taught substantially as follows:

1. That the Bible is not the only perfect rule of faith and practice, but is fallible and untrustworthy even in some of its religious teachings.

2. That Christ, in the days of His humiliation, was merely a finite being—limited in all His attributes, capacities and attainments.

3. That no man has power or capacity to repent without knowledge of the historic Christ.

4. That mankind, save as instructed in a knowledge of the historic Christ, are not sinners, or if they are, not of such sinfulness as to be in danger of being lost.

5. That no man can be lost without having had knowledge of Christ.

6. That the atonement of Christ consists essentially and chiefly in His becoming identified with the human race through His incarnation; in order that, by His union with men, He might endow them with the power to repent, and thus impart to them an augmented value in the view of God, and so propitiate God to men and men to God.

7. That the Trinity is modal, and not personal.

8. That the work of the Holy Spirit is mainly limited to natural methods and within historic Christianity.

9. That without the knowledge of the historic Christ men do not deserve the punishment of the law, and that therefore their salvation is not "wholly of grace."

10. That faith ought to be scientific and natural, rather than Scriptural.

11. That there is and will be probation after death for all men who have not in this world had knowledge of the historic Christ.

12. That this hypothetical belief in probation after death should be brought to the front, exalted and made central in theology and in the beliefs of men.

13. That Christian missions are not to be supported and conducted on the ground that men who know not Christ are in danger of perishing forever, and must perish forever unless saved in this life.

14. That a system of physical and metaphysical philosophy is true, which by fair inference neutralizes the Christian doctrine as taught in the creed of the seminary

15. That there is a "New Theology better than the Old," which we apprehend is not in harmony with the creed, but fatally opposed to the same.

16. That the said professors hold and teach many things which cannot be reconciled with that orthodox and consistent Calvinism which the statutes require of them, and to which they stand publicly committed, and that in repeated instances these professors have broken solemn promises made when they subscribed the creed.

In the preliminary hearing before the Board of Visitors, conducted in the United States Hotel, Boston, on Monday of last week, the question then under discussion being the jurisdiction of the Board, Judge E. Rockwood Hoar and Judge Asa French appeared for the complainants, and ex-Governor Gaston, Prof. S. E. Baldwin and Prof. Dwight, of the Columbia College Law School, N. Y., were counsel for the professors.

On Tuesday the Visitors decided unanimously that they "had original jurisdiction over the charges against the professors; that no proceedings are pending before the Board of Trustees for the same alleged offences and that the complaints are rightly before the Board, by its permission and authority. But we deem it proper that the charges should be amended so as to proceed against the respondents individually and separately, and that such charges as are indefinite should be made plain." It was voted that the complainants compl with the foregoing order on or before November 8th.

A Valuable History.

"THE HUGUENOTS AND HENRY OF NAVARRE." By Henry M. Baird.

The work which Prof. Baird began so well in "The Rise of the Huguenots" is here carried on from the death of Charles the Ninth to the assassination of Henry the Fourth, in 1610. Two closely printed volumes contain the results of the historian's research. We have read them with the highest pleasure. The style is that of simple narrative, with little endeavor to do more than present the most prominent facts to the reader. Perhaps the author errs in not introducing more of those romantic incidents with which Macaulay and Motley light up their pages now and then. But the material is so great that condensation becomes a necessity, and we may remember how few years other historians really embraced.

The story of the Huguenot struggle is that of a movement toward religious and civil liberty. The Roman Catholic hierarchy of the sixteenth century were pledged to the one maxim, "Submission or Death," and Pope, bishops and priests fought against peace on any terms but the complete subjection of the laity to the dogmas of the Vatican. Out of this struggle arose the call for the rights of the common people. The "new religion," as it was termed, found its chief conquests among the peasants and workmen, and the armies which followed Henry of Navarre were educated more and more in popular rights. Prof. Baird has set the great leader of the Huguenots, who secured for France during two generations a measure of religious liberty, in his true light. He was more the civil leader than the religious. He neither exemplified the virtues of his followers in his life nor held to their religious convictions. He had personal characteristics which attracted men and held them for a time, such as intrepid courage, sociability and cheerful endurance. He was a born soldier. But he was at the same time sarcastic, licentious and fickle. The historian sums up the testimony in the last pages of the history and pronounces the first Bourbon "an enigma to his contemporaries, scarcely less an enigma to succeeding generations." In spite of this, posterity owes him a debt of gratitude as the leader of truth and the contender for righteousness in Church and State during the troublous years in France preceding the Edict of Nantes. The Roman Catholic party certainly should never denounce Henry the Fourth. He shines as the moon among stars when we compare him with the leaders of the persecuting and treacherous faith of Rome. Especially when we turn to the man whom priest and Cardinal in later days called "Louis the Great," the descendants of Huguenots have little cause to be ashamed of Henry of Navarre.

We congratulate all reflective readers that such a work as that of Prof. Baird is offered to them. We hope for its wide circulation. One thing in conclusion we gladly note, that historical criticism establishes the "white plume" story at Ivry. But far beyond this, history tells of the great battle between Biblical faith and superstitious error only to establish the truth that the latter, when most strongly entrenched, cannot hope to endure. The battle still rages but the poor "successor of Peter" need never hope for another Catharine and another Guise to rule France. We are taught by such a book as this to look for the time when that which is now the "old religion" of God's Word shall become so predominant that men will wonder that its truth was ever doubted. Pope, priests and nuns have no legitimate children. May the day soon dawn when their followers will end with the death of the last of the superstitious leaders. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

Religious Interest at Guttenberg, N. J.

GOD in His great mercy has been pleased to visit Guttenberg with a gracious outpouring of His blessed Spirit, and nine persons have united with the church by profession of faith, two by letter from another church, and four are to be taken in next communion upon the profession of their faith. Many hearts have been touched by the loving spirit of the dear Master, and backsliders reclaimed, and the hearts of God's dear children greatly revived. The dark clouds which have overhung the church for so long a time seem to be wearing a silver lining, and it is the fervent hope and prayer of all the church that they will very soon entirely disappear. Old dissentions are being forgotten and forgiven, and tender brotherly Christian feelings springing up in all hearts toward their fellows, making the old church aglow with the love of God. We are humbling ourselves before God, and He is exalting us. Pray for us. A.

Another New Church Probably.

THE committee, appointed by the Classis of Illinois to visit Chicago and inquire as to the feasibility of organizing an English speaking church, have received many assurances that such an enterprise will meet with success. A meeting of those interested was called for the 26th ult. The attendance was unexpectedly large. Great interest was expressed, and a petition for organization received a number of signatures. The committee have appointed services for several Sabbaths that the prospects may be more exactly known. COM.

A Woman's Hour at the Conference.

THE hour allotted to the Woman's Executive Committee of Domestic Missions at the Missionary Conference on the afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 27th, was much too short a time. Notwithstanding the inclement weather Dr. Gulick's pleasant church was well filled. Miss Cornelia Anderson, vice-president, presided. After singing a hymn and a short time spent in earnest sentence-prayers, the roll was called and delegates from thirty Classes responded. A paper was then read by the president, Mrs. P. D. Van Cleef, composed of extracts from letters written by our missionaries, giving information of deep interest from various parts of the mission field, and all breathed the same spirit—earnest zeal in the cause and patient endurance of hardships.

The lot of one missionary is cast among a rough and ignorant people, roads in a dreadful condition, yet he supplies two churches, travels eight miles to prayer-meeting and fifteen to a funeral. In a place of four hundred inhabitants the church is full, and the Sabbath-school numbers thirty scholars. Another place, started with tents and dugouts, has now three churches. Still another missionary supplies two churches seventy-seven miles apart.

Mrs. Isaac J. Greenwood followed with a paper also composed of extracts of letters showing the needs of the field. Men, earnest men, were needed in one place; two hundred dollars to prepare a church for the winter season in another. Many parsonages were needed, and libraries. One place desired a "minister all to themselves;" the Northwestern Academy needed bedding, and some places were in need of everything.

The question, "How to meet these needs and how to carry on missionary societies," was most ably answered in an address by Mrs. E. B. Horton, associate corresponding secretary. The "stay at homes" were to be stirred up; seek to find out what can be done in the cause and do it. A missionary society should be formed in each one of our five hundred churches for work. The thousands of emigrants flooding our Western country must be converted; and to accomplish this, united and individual effort is needed. Societies rise or fall, according to the enthusiastic energy of their leaders. Give regularly, and send gifts through the Board. Don't scatter your shot. R. S.

....NEW YORK.—THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER will learn with true regret that the old church at Fourth street and Lafayette place is to be abandoned and the site rented for business purposes. Thus another of our old landmarks is to be sacrificed to mammon. The church which listened to the eloquence of so many noble men must be shut up. How much better our Episcopal brethren do; they maintain St. John's, St. George's and old Trinity, and we tore down the North and now the Middle. It is too bad. "CHESTY."

....BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Mr. A. J. Beekman, for many years an officer in the First Reformed Church, and who has been a member for a longer time than any living male member, who received many facts from General Johnson, has compiled an abstract of the history of the church from about 1656 to the present year and published it in a pamphlet. The record is brief but comprehensive, and very interesting. It is preceded by a well-executed engraving of the church and lecture-room, recently sold and taken down. Many of the Dutch families on Long Island and in New Jersey will read these annals with a great deal of pleasure. From the partial list of families supposed to have attended the church about 1810 to 1820, given on the 11th page, we infer that no earlier list of members is in existence.

....THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE met in the church at Cuddebackville, Oct. 19th and 20th. The Classical sermon was preached by Rev. Goyn Talmage, D.D., from Ps. 18: 28.

The various recommendations of General Synod to the Classes were noted and approved.

Rev. John Stillwell was received from the Classis of Paramus, and arrangements were made for his installation as pastor of the Church of Bloomingburgh on Nov. 10th, 2 P.M.

Religious exercises of a very interesting character were held in the evening. The subject for consideration was "Infant baptism and the training of the young." S. C.

....THE CLASSIS OF GREENE held an adjourned meeting in the Church of Athens on Oct. 19th, at 7 o'clock, for the ordination of Mr. William Bancroft Hill, and to install him as pastor of the church. Rev. B. B. Staats, the President of Classis, conducted the exercises, and read the usual charges to minister and people. The act of consecration, by the laying on of the hands of the Presbytery, presented a solemn scene, witnessed by the large and silent congregation, filling every part of the sanctuary. The ministers of the different denominations of the village were also present to enjoy the occasion. Devotional services were led in part by Rev. Dr. Van Slyke. By invitation of Classis, the Rev. H. van DerWert, the late pastor, preached the sermon from the text in Ephesians 6: 18-19. The pulpit and other parts of the church were tastefully and richly ornamented with flowers and evergreens. In the rear of the pulpit the words of Scripture, "Go preach my Gospel," were embowered in evergreens, surrounded with the leaves of autumn. This was evidently the skilful handiwork of the ladies. They also have the credit of furnishing the very agreeable social entertainment at the parsonage previous to the public services. It was all that eye and palate and heart could wish. It brought together in closer union brethren of the Methodist, Lutheran, Baptist, Episcopal and Reformed churches. A delightful oneness of the spirit of Christ prevailed. Rev. Mr. Hill enters upon his pastoral work with bright hopes of success. COM.

....THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE will hold a missionary convention on Nov. 11th at Schoharie. There will be a meeting of the ladies from the several churches at 10.30 A.M., to be addressed by Mrs. D. K. Bartlett of Albany.

At 2.30 P.M. Rev. W. R. Davis, D.D., will present the cause of Foreign Missions, and Rev. J. W. Beardslee, D.D., of West Troy, that of Domestic Missions.

At 7 P.M. Rev. E. S. Booth, of the Japan Mission, will make an address. There will be opportunity for discussion at each session, entertainment will be provided for delegates and others from the churches of the Classis.

REV. J. G. FAGG, Chairman of Committee.

....WESTERN ITEMS.—The Classis of Iowa organized recently two new churches in Dakota, one in Campbell County and the other in Emmons county. Both these churches are in new settlements....Rev. J. P. DeJonge, of Noord Holland, Mich., declines the call of the First Church of Grand Haven....Rev. G. Niemeyer, of Vriesland, Mich., has accepted the call to Cleveland, O....Rev. J. Huizinga, of Holland, Neb., celebrated on 17th of Oct. the 10th anniversary of his pastorate of that church....During the months of August and September the churches in the Synod of Chicago contributed to the Board of Foreign Missions $758.51

The Theological Seminary in India.

THE question was proposed at the Missionary Conference: What steps are being taken for setting on foot the Theological Seminary in India authorized by the last General Synod, and which seems to be so necessary at the present juncture? To which the Rev. Dr. Jacob Chamberlain replied:

For years the Arcot Mission has been seeking to take a forward step in educating young converts for the native ministry. Again and again have we asked that we might have a man sent out specially for that work. Our missionary force was too small to spare one of our number for that work alone, but now we have been re-enforced. Our General Synod in its session saw so clearly the pressing necessity for the educating and sending forth of native Pauls and Barnabases and Timothys at once into the field, that by unanimous vote it directed the Arcot Mission to set apart one of its number, freed from all other work, to give his whole time and strength to the raising up of a native ministry so soon as practicable and authorized the raising of an endowment of $50,000 to found the new theological seminary in the Arcot Mission.

The Arcot Mission has at once responded by unanimously voting to set apart Rev. W. W. Scudder, D.D., as its first professor of theology so soon as my own return next spring shall relieve him of the charge of the Telugu field, provided that the funds are raised. The Foreign Board, in accordance with the action of the Synod, has adopted a plan for the raising and using of the proposed endowment of $50,000.

This plan includes the founding of two native professorships of $10,000 each, each professorship to be named by the donor thereof, and fifteen scholarships of , each scholarship to be named by its donor.

These sums are to be invested by the Board and the interest alone applied to the support of the two native professors and fifteen native theological students. These sums are not to be raised by contributions of the churches, for they are all needed for the evangelistic work of the missions They are to be raised by individual gifts of men or women of means.

What a noble monument can one raise to a departed friend or erect for himself, by thus founding a scholarship that shall once every four years send out a native minister into the whitening harvest field, by founding a professorship for educating a succession of reapers until God's harvests are all gathered in.

The Board have directed me to shoulder the burden of raising at once this $50,000. It is a task from which I naturally shrink, but I dare not decline to undertake it, for this training of a native ministry must be pressed and that at once, if India is to be evangelized, and I shall undertake to raise the money. I expect to encounter obstacles. I shall be glad to meet with many checks in this effort. I hope they will be checks for $2 000 or $10,000 each. Already one elect lady has consecrated, within the last ten days, $5,000 to this purpose to found a lasting, fruit-bearing memorial to her noble husband just entered into the rest above. Who will found the next memorial to the memory of a departed son, or daughter, or husband, or wife, or father, or mother, or who will now build his own monument that shall be more lasting and more observed than any ever reared in Greenwood or Woodlawn.

I shall be glad to receive any communication and to answer any enquiries on this subject. This endowment is going to be raised.

Rev. E. W. Bentley, D.D.

THE Consistory of the Church of Ellenville has received with sorrowful concern the intelligence of the death of their former pastor, the Rev. E. W. Bentley, D.D. Endeared to them by long and faithful years of service, the close of his useful life awakens memories of a relationship the most sacred and tender.

His natural gifts and eminent attainments, all sanctified and devoted to the service of his Master, gained for him not only in the church where he ministered, but also in the community where he lived, a place of honor, reverence and esteem which will endure while memory lasts.

We remember with joy the good which it was permitted him to do amongst us, and now that the Lord has called him to go up higher we can only weep with those that weep in our loss, while we rejoice at his great gain.

With affectionate sympathy we commend his bereaved wife and household to the God of all comfort.

JOHN HUTCHINS, President.

Adopted October 26th, 1886.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION held its weekly meeting on Monday morning at the Synod Rooms, 34 Vesey street. A large number of ministers was present and listened with interest to an able, suggestive and sparkling paper by the Rev. I. W. Gowen, on "The Development of the Prayer-meeting." Next Monday the Rev. W. W. Clark will read a paper on "Bible Readings and How to Prepare Them," which subject will be discussed by the Association. All ministers of the Reformed Church are cordially invited to attend.

...ROCKY HILL, N. J.—The year 1886 has been one of prosperity, both spiritual and temporal, to the Reformed Church. During the year there has been added to the church on confession of faith forty persons. The congregation has also built a nice fence about their church property and re-painted the parsonage.

....Kerhonkson, N. Y.—The Mission Band finds that it will be necessary to send clematis and bitter sweet bunches by express. The price, instead of 50 cents per bunch, will, therefore, be 30 cents per pound of bitter sweet or one-half pound of clematis. The children have also some thistle pompons at 15 cents each, postpaid. The Band has also, as announced in September, cat-tails at 30, 40 and 50 cents per dozen, sent by express. Grasses and white balsam at 30 cents per bunch. Send order to Rev. W. B. Darrach, Kerhonkson, Ulster Co., New York.

Loans Desired.

I HAVE been requested to endeavor to obtain the following loans: For First Church of Holland, Mich., and for the Second Church of Kalamazoo, Mich., $3,000 each, at 5 per cent, on first mortgage to run ten years on each church property. One thousand dollars has boen remitted to the First Church, Holland, and of the remaining, $5,000 in all, it is believed that another $1,000 is secured. If any persons are willing to take part in these loans, they are requested to communicate with the undersigned. These churches prefer the manly and independent course of obtaining loans to that of soliciting gifts. But gifts will be acceptable and can be remitted to Mr. A. M. Kanters, Holland, Mich., or to the Rev. A. Vennema, Kalamazoo, Mich.

John M. Ferris,
Office of The Christian Intelligencer.

A SUNDAY-SCHOOL INSTITUTE is to be held, under the auspices of the New York Sunday-School Association in the Collegiate Church, Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street, beginning on Monday evening, Nov. 8th, and continuing every afternoon and evening until Friday evening. The evening sessions will begin at eight o'clock, those of the afternoon at three o'clock. The subjects and speakers will be as follows: Monday evening, The Word Itself. The Value of the Old Testament, Rev. H. Sanders; The New Testament Rooted in the Old, Prof. W. H. Thompson, M.D.

Tuesday afternoon, The Word Illumined, By the Use of the Imagination, Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D.D.; By Illustrations, Ralph Wells; By Blackboard and Object Lessons, Rev. J. L. Hulbert, D.D. Evening, The Word Studied; In the Home, Rev. W. S. Ranisford; In the Teachers' Meeting, Rev. A. E. Kittredge, D.D.; By Means of Lesson Helps, Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D.D.

Wednesday afternoon, The Teacher at Work; School Opened, Ralph Wells; Primaries Taught, Mrs. W. F. Crafts; School Reviewed, Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D.D. Evening, The Workers, The Teacher; Work Outside of the School, Ralph Wells; Work Inside of the School other than Teaching, Frank A. Ferris; Mistakes Common, both in and out of the Class, James L. Hughes.

Thursday afternoon—The Workers, Officers: The Superintendent as an Organizer, Rev. J. L. Hulburt, D.D.; The Library, Chas. P. Cheney; The Secretary, Franklin Allen. Evening, The Workers, Music: The Music, What? Rev. A. F. Schauffler, D.D.; How to Sing Better, H. R. Palmer, Mus. Doc.; Service of Song Exemplified, Frank A. Ferris and H. R. Palmer.

Friday afternoon.—Aggressive Work. How to Cultivate a Missionary Spirit, Rev. Arthur Mitchell, D.D.; How to Inculcate Temperance, Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D. Evening, The Future: The Relation of Theological Seminaries to Sunday-School Work, Rev. Prof. Roswell D. Hitchcock, D.D.; How to Promote the Growth of Converts, Rev. William Ormiston, D.D.; Closing Words, Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D.

The General Outlook.

...The Mohammedans and Hindoos of Delhi, in India, have fallen out, and so grievous have been the differences that riots have ensued, and three men were killed. The immediate cause of the bloodshed was the profaning of the Jumna Musjeed, or great Mosque, by a Hindoo sectarian leader, who tied a small pig in a painful posture within the sacred edifice, so that it squealed with all its might. This enraged the Mohammedans, and they at once assaulted the Hindoos. It is further said that at Bombay a society has been organized to propagate hostility to Mohammedanism and to inculcate a general knowledge of the true Hindoo religion. Hitherto, the Mohammedans and Hindoos have joined together to persecute Christian converts. Now that Herod and Pilate are at open war the followers of Christ may have rest.

....The Italian Minister of Worship is preparing a bill on the reorganization of ecclesiastical property. It is stated that the measure will render it illegal to receive new subjects in either monasteries or convents in the kingdom of Italy. Inquiries have been ordered to be made as to the number, condition, and establishments of the Jesuits, with a view, it is believed, to the expulsion of the members of that body. Legal proceedings have been taken against the superior of a convent in Milan, where some girls took the veil recently, and the Minister of Justice has already expelled the Jesuits from San Gaetano, and taken possession of their temporalities, on the ground that there have been grave irregularities in the exercise of their ministry. Unfortunately, England affords an asylum to the priests who are sent out of other lands as being enemies of the State; and there is, therefore, reason to fear that this threatened action on the part of the Italian Government will result in a further flock of plotting Jesuits being cast upon our shores.—The Christian.

....The bishops of the Episcopal Church, in accordance with a memorial presented to them in 1853, with regard to promoting union among all evangelical churches in the United States, and recently repeated, issued last month a Declaration, in which it is said:

"That this Church does not seek to absorb other communions, but rather, cooperating with them on the basis of a common Faith and Order, to discountenance schism, to heal the wounds of the body of Christ, and to promote the charity which is the chief of Christian graces and the visible manifestation of Christ to the world."

These parts of Christian belief are accounted essential to such a union:

"(I.) The Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the revealed Word of God:

"(II.) The Nicene Creed as the sufficient statement of the Christian Faith:

"(III.) The two sacraments—Baptism and the Supper of the Lord, ministered with unfailing use of Christ's words of institution, and of the elements ordained by Him:

"(IV.) The Historic Episcopate locally adapted in the methods of its administration to the varying needs of the nations and peoples called of God into the unity of His Church."

...At the Episcopal Convention Dr. McVicar hit the nail squarely on the head when he said, "It is not those bodies that have assumed the proudest name that have done the noblest work. Our church, I am sorry to say, stands far below several others in numbers and work in this country. Notwithstanding which we are asked to declare ourselves the only church in America." It is somewhat suggestive that Dr. Phillips Brooks should declare himself a disbeliever in the doctrine of apostolic succession upon the floor of the Convention.

....In regard to city evangelization the recent National Council of the Congregational Churches, held in Chicago, adopted the following:

Whereas, Our cities have become the centres and sources of many perils; and

Whereas, The supply of Protestant churches for large city populations is only from one-tenth to one-twentieth part as great as for the whole country; and

Whereas, The work of planting churches is at first far more expensive in the city than elsewhere, and at the same time soonest productive of results in Christian work and benefaction; therefore

Resolved, That in no way can we better meet the burning question of municipal, national and world-wide evangelism than by putting at once not less than $100,000 into the work of establishing churches and chapels in our large cities and other influential centres of population, or in aiding churches in such centres already in the border-land of self-support.

Resolved, That this Council most earnestly urges upon the attention of persons of means in our churches and congregations the immediate contribution to that object, in sums ranging from $100 to $1,000 or more, each subscription not collectable until at least the sum of $100,000 is fully realized, to be known as the National Council Exigency Loan Fund.

It was announced that twelve persons had promised $1,000 each toward the proposed fund.

....The Lutheran Observer says: "The Allentown almanac figures out 4,009 pastors, 7,104 congregations, and 947,144 communicants for the Lutheran Church of all "sorts and conditions" in this country. As heretofore, it counts in the statistics of the German Iowa and the Norwegian Augustana Synod with the General Council, though without right or reason.

....Among the colored people the Lutheran Missouri Synod supports three flourishing mission stations in the city of New Orleans. Their three church buildings are fully paid for. A fourth mission station is contemplated. Congregations, parochial and Sunday-schools are prospering. The work was begun in the year 1880.

....Mr. William Guthrie, a member of Tinkling Spring Presbyterian Church, Va., who died September 20th, aged about 90 years, has left an estate worth $20,000 to the Home and Foreign Missions of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

....The Unitarian Conference at Saratoga pledged $11,000 to help rebuild the Church in Charleston, S.C., destroyed by the earthquake.

....It is estimated that as many as 1,500 Jews leave the Synagogue for the Church of Christ every year.

....Mr. George Sturge, a member of the Society of Friends in England, is paying in ten instalments, $5,000 to the English Presbyterian China Mission.

....The last report of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association makes the startling assertion that 75 per cent of the young men of this country are never seen inside of any church; that only 15 per cent. of them can be called regular church-goers, and that but 5 per cent are communicants.

....The statement is made that the Parsees have had three large and thirty-three smaller fire temples in Bombay, India, and that they have just instituted another. They use 1,001 pieces of fuel, sixteen different kinds, to obtain the sacred fire, which is thenceforward fed with sandal wood. The process of getting this fire, with attendant ceremonies, costs about $12,000.

....There is a memorial church in the Himalayas, for which Mr. George Stuart, of Philadelphia, furnished the idea and a good share of the money, and Mr. John Wanamaker the bell, and George W. Childs the clock, and Mr. Thomas F. Blakemore the marble memorial tablet, inscribed with the name of the missionary pastor's dead daughter. The bell and clock are described as "the most magnificent in India."

...The corner stone of the new Young Men's Christian Association building of Albany, N. Y., was laid with appropriate ceremonies on September 20th. The building was erected by Mr. James D. Jermain at a cost of $65,000; the cost of the site, about $40,000, being raised by subscription.

... At a Universalist Convention in New England "they had no cheering reports to make of rapid growth in numbers or influence as an organized body, but they were full of enthusiasm over the approximation of other denominations to their liberal views, and prophesied that many Congregational pastors would become essentially one with them.

News of the Week.

Wednesday, Oct. 27.—Bishop Gregg, of Cork, Ireland, counsels the clergymen of his diocese not to allow prejudice to prevent the acceptance of any just change likely to benefit Ireland....King Mevanga ordered the massacre of native Christians of Uganda, Africa, because a Christian lad, the King's page, refused to commit an abominable crime. Many were tortured, mutilated and speared, and thirty-two were burned alive together....General Von Moltke was 86 years old yesterday; he is still hale and hearty....Fourteen moonlighters arrested in Ireland. Four others awaiting trial for firing on the police....A messenger in charge of the express car of the St. Louis and San Francisco express train was bound and gagged by a desperado, and the safe robbed of about $50,000. ..The French guests were formally welcomed last night at the Academy of Music ...Superintendent of Foreign Mails, N. M. Bell, submits his annual report, and defends Mr. Vilas' course. ....The Board of Visitors at Andover decide that they have jurisdiction in the theological dispute....The Chicago General (Episcopal) Convention decide that no canon is necessary on the subject of marriage and divorce; the prayer book revisionists shorten the evening service.

Thursday, 28 —The Bartholdi Statue unvailed. The French guests accorded the freedom of the city, and tendered a reception by the Union League Club....Prominent Mexicans propose a dictatorship to replace the presidency of Mexico....Under the edict of Minister von Boetticher, Germany, requiring emigrants for America to be examined, out of 7,000 examined in the quarter ending September 30th, 452 were found to be paupers, and not allowed to emigrate....By agreement of this country with Spain, discriminating duties are abolished. ....A state of siege proclaimed at Sophia. General Kaulbars warns the Regency that if the conspirators against Prince Alexander be punished, the Russian Government will have recourse to extreme measures....Lord Randolph Churchill declares that the fortunes of the Irish were no longer a subject for sport and play....The brig "John Sherwood," Captain Price, wrecked off Chadwick, N. J....No trace yet found of the Adams express robber ...Delgado and three associates shot for their attempted invasion of Honduras....Three hundred Mormon immigrants land at Philadelphia from Liverpool.

Friday, 29.—The occupation of Bulgaria apparently begun by two Russian ships entering the port of Varna ...The Nationalists attempt to secure the election of representatives of their views in the Senate, and to obtain a share in the government of Dublin University....A German diplomat loses $1,000,000 by Bourse speculations. ....Returns for the four weeks ending Sept. 25th, of the cholera in Japan, give a total of 34,908 cases and 23,774 deaths. ....The Fifty-second Annual Convention of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity is in session with the chapter at Madison University. ....A passenger train on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, derailed near Rio, Wis. Thirteen lives lost....The funeral of Mrs. Cornelia M. Stewart took place yesterday. Services held at both the house and the Cathedral at Garden City. The body was placed in the crypt in the Cathedral, where the body of her husband, Alexander T. Stewart, is supposed to be. ....The diary of Bishop Hannington is published....His brother denies that Theodore Bronson committed suicide; it was accidental he says.

Saturday, 30.—General Kaulbars sends a protest to the Bulgarian government against the proclamation of the state of siege....Robert E. Sproule was hanged yesterday in the jail yard at Victoria, B.C., for the murder of Thomas H. Keating in June, 1885....The Earl of Strafford is dead. He was eighty years old....The steamship "Pavonia," Cunard Line, ran ashore off Duxbury, Mass....Count De Lesseps, M. Bartholdi, and the rest of the French delegation, entertained at the Chamber of Commerce.

(Continued on page sixteen.)

Our Contributors.

Thy Dead so Dear.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN BY LYDIA M. MILLARD.

THY dead so dear! Oh, bury them
So deep within Thy breast,
That they, though dead, abide with thee
Till thou art called to rest.

Then in thine heart, like angels pure,
These dear ones may arise.
O'er life's rough paths untiring, sure,
Lead on their steadfast eyes.

Oh, bury thou thine own life too,
In other hearts so deep,
That all its beauty blossom new,
Though thou in dust may sleep.

Martyrs of Holland.

BY REV. DANIEL VAN PELT.

II. Henry of Zutphen.

THE Prior of the Monastery in Antwerp which furnished the two proto-martyrs of the Reformation was, as we have already mentioned, Henry of Zutphen. This city then, memorable for the massacre which left scarce one soul alive in it, and which was the first of the series of similar outrages culminating in the siege and sack of Haarlem; the city which has become known in the annals of English chivalry and literature by the mortal wounding of Sir Philip Sidney in its defence;—this same place is to be noted also for having been the birthplace of the first native of the Provinces constituting the Dutch Republic, whose name was added to "the noble army of martyrs" during the Reformation. Here, in this now so beautiful town, whose flowery quays reflect themselves in the swift waters of the Yssel; beneath the shadow of St. Walburg Church, of noble proportions and with lofty steeple,—here Henry must have received those earliest religious impressions which determined him to devote his life to God. Aye, perhaps in that very chapel,—with low and vaulted ceiling, with rude wooden benches and steep, slanting reading-desks, to which are chained monkish manuscript books and the earliest printed books; here in this quaint library of St. Walburg, Henry of Zutphen may have studied, his fingers may have leafed through the very books shown to the visitor, still fastened by their grim chains.

History, however, makes no mention of him till he is found at Antwerp, the Prior of an Augustinian Monastery, the successor, very probably, of the one who had been arrested and led to Brussels in 1521. When in October, 1522, the Monastery was invaded by the authorities, the monks arrested and the buildings demolished, Henry, their Prior, and three young monks, as we have seen, were the only ones who remained firm. They were accordingly conveyed to Brussels and there imprisoned. The crown of martyrdom for Henry, however, was reserved for another occasion. We learn from a letter, written by Luther in December of the same year, that he was rescued by a heroic effort on the part of the women of Brussels.*

So narrow an escape from a certain and frightful death did not in the least impede his ardent labors in the spread of a purer Gospel. We find him in Antwerp for more than a year after his imprisonment. But in 1524 he received an urgent call to labor in a field at quite a distance from the commercial metropolis of the Netherlands. It was beyond the limits of the personal possessions of the Emperor and within a country where his grand title was by no means accompanied by as absolute a sway as in the Provinces. The call came from the city of Bremen, in the north of Germany. His preaching here met with remarkable success; in a short time "the whole city reformed itself according to the rule of the holy Gospel, and even rejected with scorn the priests and monks."† The Bishop of Bremen naturally was incensed at this turn of affairs. He sought to intimidate Henry by threats of Papal and Imperial Edicts, and by assemblies of his numerous clergy. But it was of no avail. As for the bishop's command, the bold Reformer knew it to be his duty to obey God rather than man; and when they threatened violence to his person, he was protected by the town magistrates, who were of his party.

In the midst of this successful work there came another call. The pastor of a flock of adherents of the Reformed faith in the towns or villages of Meldorf and Ditmarsum, at some distance from the city of Bremen, but within the jurisdiction of its bishop, urged him to come to his assistance, to proclaim in these regions the Word of God, free from the burdensome traditions of the Papal Anti-Christ. Henry of Zutphen saw in this the finger of the Lord, and, though his friends of Bremen were reluctant to part with him, he cheerfully heeded the call. The Bremen brethren saw him go with many misgivings, for they were aware of the turbulence of the Ditmarsum peasantry.

On the first Monday of December, 1524, Henry arrived upon his new field of labor. But even before he had found an opportunity to preach, there was already in active operation a determined opposition to him. The Prior of a monastery of Jacobin Brethren made himself most conspicuous in their hostile movements. He first appealed to the rural authorities of the district, and he had no difficulty in gaining over these simple and unlearned people. They forbade the pastor of Meldorf and Ditmarsum, on pain of the severest penalties, to let Henry preach. It may readily be imagined, however, that no attention was paid to this order, either by the pastor or Henry. The latter preached with great power, for several days twice each day. At once there was evident a marked influence for good among the people; and they began to suspect that what priests and monks had said to excite them against this holy man had been nothing but lies.

The Prior of the Jacobins, perceiving that his previous efforts had failed, now resorted to more direct means of destroying the earnest preacher. He induced the inmates of another monastery in the neighborhood, that of the Grey Friars, to join him in an endeavor to crush the heretic; a project which was but too welcome in this quarter. It was decided that it would be best to make a secret night attack, seize upon the pastor of Meldorf and Henry, and burn the latter at the stake before the people who had been carried away by his preaching could know what had happened. To this end a number of peasants were gathered together, endeavors were made to arouse them to the proper degree of fanatical hatred against this enemy of the Church, and then they were informed of the enterprise and directed to aid in carrying it into effect. Finding that mere exhortation and priestly authority could not rouse them to the requisite pitch of excitement, a liberal quanity of beer was divided among them. Thus reinforced, and in this frame of mind, they reached Meldorf about midnight, and made a violent assault upon the pastor's residence. The house was sacked and pillaged, the inmates direly maltreated; but the main object of their fury being Henry of Zutphen, the others were allowed to escape. They dragged him half-naked from his bed, tied his hands upon his back, struck him with sticks, pricked him with their weapons, and forced him to walk barefoot over the icy ground from Meldorf to Ditmarsum. There they confined him during the remainder of the night in a cellar in a priest's house, under custody of a party of drunken and insulting peasants. An officer of the law came to him and inquired whether he desired to be sent to the Bishop of Bremen, or would prefer to receive his punishment in Ditmarsum? Henry replied with calm dignity: "If I have done or taught anything that is unworthy of a Christian, you may take the punishment upon yourself." This was accepted as an expression of his desire to be put to death in Ditmarsum.

At about eight o'clock on the next morning, December 10th, 1524, a party of peasants, directed and encouraged by the Jacobin Prior and aided by a number of Grey friars, tore Henry from his place of confinement and dragged him to the market-place. It was fully determined to burn him alive, and the preparations for the execution were soon completed. As he stood awaiting his doom, his murderers observed the superfluous formality of pronouncing his sentence. A magistrate, in the hearing of the mob, spoke to about the following effect: "This evil-doer has preached against the Mother of God and against Christian faith; for which cause I condemn and deliver him to the death by fire, in the name of my gracious lord, the Bishop of Bremen." Henry replied: "I have not done this; but, O Lord, Thy will be done;" then lifting his eyes heavenward he prayed: "Lord, forgive them, for they know not what they do; to Thy name alone be the glory, O heavenly Father!" A Grey friar now approached him to receive his confession; but Henry met him with the gentle query: "My brother, have I ever done you any evil?" The monk giving a negative answer, the Reformer continued: "Why, then, should I confess to you, or ask you to forgive me?" The friar was non-plussed, and quickly withdrew among the crowd.

The martyrdom was not delayed a moment longer. It began with an indiscriminate attack from all sides and with all sorts of instruments; one struck Henry upon the head with the flat of a sword, another gave him a blow with a hammer. The faggots of the pile could not be gotten to take fire, which was at once ascribed to the devil's agency. When at last the flames sprung up, Henry was lashed to a ladder; he meanwhile witnessing for Christ while they extended him upon it. To stop his discourse, some struck him upon the lips with clenched fist; one man stepped violently upon his chest, while the fellow who was tying his neck to a rung of the ladder gave so hard a twist to the rope that the poor victim was nearly strangled, a mishap which would have been a mercy to him under the circumstances. The ladder was now raised to an erect position, and a soldier's pike was placed against a rung to support it. But the pike slipped from its position and the martyr fell with all his weight upon the sharp point, which passed through Henry's body, the ladder with its burden falling at the same time clear of the fire. As even yet life was not extinct, and the flames seemed to refuse to touch the victim, one of the murderers beat upon his exhausted breast with a hammer till the breath left it, and he was no longer seen to move. The corpse was then thrown upon the smouldering embers; but as it was not consumed by these, the next day the hands and feet were burned, and the scorched body deposited in a grave, upon which the infuriated mob danced in a frenzy of inhuman glee.*

Thus expired Henry of Zutphen, the first native of Dutch soil who suffered for his Master when the persecutions of the Reformation began to rage. The details of the martyrdom are almost too revolting for recital. Yet it may be wholesome to look upon what deeds have been done in the name of religion. It was not only death which stared the Reformers in the face. Their sincerity and hardihood in the faith were confronted with death in its most excruciating, prolonged and horrific forms; restricted sometimes by no laws, human or divine. That they endured unto this bitter, bitter end, in spite of all, is to us for an example, and was to them the earnest of the crown of life.

* D'Aubigné, "Hist. de la Réform," Book X., Sec. 4.
† "Groot Martelaarsboek," p. 92.

Missionary Education in India.

BY THE REV. JOHN H. WYCKOFF.

NO question has elicited more discussion among missionaries in India than this: "What place should education occupy in mission work?" Two methods have been adopted. The one is, to make education subordinate to the great work of preaching, and establish schools only in such communities as have been proselyted to the Christian faith. This is called the "preaching method." The other plan is, to make schools the chief means of evangelization, by imparting in them a Christian education, principally through the medium of English. This has been styled the "educational method."

THE DUFF PLAN.

The founder of the educational method was Dr. Duff, who arrived at Calcutta in 1830. Finding that but few converts had been gathered by the missionaries from among the high caste Hindus, Duff conceived the idea of reaching this class through the medium of an English school. Hundreds of youth flocked to his school, moved by a desire to learn English, and so popular did the institution become that similar schools were opened by the Scotch in nearly all the large towns, and the educational method soon became an established form of missionary labor. It is to be regretted that Duff and his colleagues, in the first enthusiasm of success, should have unduly exalted the value of their educational work, to the disparagement of other modes of labor. The "preaching method" was declared to be unsuited to the peculiar condition of Hindu society. Missionaries, it was said, could not learn the vernaculars so as to preach acceptably; and even when they did learn them, the Hindus could not understand their message. Education was held to be essential to prepare the way for evangelistic work.

THE PREACHING METHOD.

The effect was to force the preaching missionaries to assume the defensive, and thence followed a sharp controversy on the relative merits of the two methods, which lasted throughout many years. Rev. Dr. John Scudder, the honored pioneer missionary of the Reformed Church in India, was an earnest advocate of the "preaching method;" and the principle upon which the Arcot Mission was founded, was a strong protest against the assumptions of the educational brethren. The mission, in its constitutional rules, disclaimed that "any educational or other preparative human instrumentality" was needed to bring the Hindus into a condition of fitness to receive the truth; and "believing that the way to the triumphs of Christianity could most effectually be prepared by its public proclamation," resolved not only to make the preaching of the Gospel in the vernaculars their chief work, but also to limit education to the children of proselytes, and that in their own tongue, English being rigidly excluded from all their schools.

* "Groot Martelaarsboek," pp. 92–94.

The Deputation from the American Board to India in 1856 likewise had no sympathy with the educational method, and closed nearly every school in their mission that had been established for the heathen, greatly to the grief of many of their missionaries.

THE COMBINATION.

Such extreme positions could not, of course, be long maintained by either side, and it is not a matter of surprise that during the last thirty years both parties have considerably modified their views: the preaching missionaries having gradually opened their schools to the heathen and introduced the study of English; while the educational missionaries frankly acknowledge that education is only one among the many Christian agencies that are to be employed.

That this vexed question is now settled, at least so far as India is concerned, may be seen from the following significant resolution, passed unanimously by the Bangalore Missionary Conference in 1879:

"This Conference desires to express its full appreciation of the value of high class christian education as a missionary agency, and its hope that the friends of India Missions will sympathize with this equally with other branches of evangelistic work in this country.

"The native Church in India needs at present, and will still more need in the future, men of superior education to occupy positions of trust and responsibility as pastors, evangelists and leading members of the community, such as can only be supplied by our high class Christian institutions.

"Those missionaries who are engaged in vernacular work desire especially to bear testimony to the powerful effect in favor of Christianity which these institutions are exercising throughout the country, and to record their high regard for the educational work as a necessary part of the work of the Christian Church in India.

"This Conference feels bound to place on record its conviction that these two great branches of Christian work are indispensable complements of one another, and would earnestly hope that they will be so regarded by the Christian Church, and that both will meet with continued and hearty support."

THE SCHOOLS AND SCHOLARS.

Missionary schools, like those of government, are divided into elementary or vernacular; middle schools or high vernacular; and colleges in which the curriculum prescribed by the University is followed, the education being given in English. These are distinctively Christian schools, the Bible being taught for an hour each day.

The total number of pupils in mission institutions, according to the Report of the Calcutta Conference in 1881, was 234,759, including 65,761 girls. Probably as many as four-fifths of these are children of heathen parents, the remaining one-fifth being Christians.

What has been the effect of Christian education upon these two classes?

EFFECT ON HIGH CASTE MEN.

In the first place, although the number of Hindus converted through the instrumentality of schools has not been large, yet they have been chiefly from the higher castes, and consequently men of considerable influence. Christian education has thus added to the native Church some of its brightest ornaments. Satthianádan of Madras, Sheshadrai of Bombay, Banarjea of Calcutta, and scores of other distinguished members of the native Christian community, are the fruits of mission schools. Bishop Caldwell, of Tinnevelly, who has given nearly his whole life to vernacular work, has recently made the statement that during his forty years' experience as a missionary he has not known of a single educated Hindu to be converted except through the medium of schools. Although this might not be said of every part of India, yet there is no doubt that the number of baptisms of high caste Hindus resulting from Christian education has been greater than those resulting from all other agencies together.

THE GENERAL RESULTS.

But direct conversions form but a small part of the real good effected among the heathen by Christian schools. It is by the indirect results produced that their value is to be chiefly measured. Let it be noted that the students who attend these institutions are nearly all of the higher classes. Brahmins, as well as other Hindus, patronize missionary schools, and often as many as one-third of all the pupils are of this class. Several hundred young men, belonging to the most influential families, are those brought daily in contact with the missionary, and in addition to secular studies receive systematic instruction in the Word of God. It would be strange indeed if such schools produced no good results. That the young men trained in them are better morally and spiritually than those educated in merely secular colleges cannot admit of a doubt. True, the majority of them are restrained by social ties from declaring themselves Christians openly,—and when we consider what it costs a high caste youth to become a Christian, need we wonder that so few take the step,—but few men pass through the whole course in a mission school without forming a warm attachment to the missionary and becoming impressed with the power of Christianity.

PREJUDICES REMOVED.

Thousands of mission-educated young men are now scattered in the different provinces, many of them occupying positions of trust. Their influence in favor of Christianity, even while outwardly heathen, is by no means small, and the very fact of their remaining heathen increases their influence. They are gradually breaking down prejudice against missionaries in the communities where they reside, and are helping to create a public feeling in favor of religious liberty. Trained to correct ideas of the truth, they often remove the strange misconceptions their friends and neighbors have formed concerning the Gospel. In not a few instances they have prepared the way for the missionary to establish other Christian agencies, by disabusing the people of the false suspicions they have entertained of his motives. Says an experienced missionary: "It is scarcely too much to say that but for them, girls' schools and Zenana teaching would still have no existence."

THE VILLAGE DAY SCHOOLS.

We believe, also, we are not wrong in asserting that the more kindly reception that the Gospel has been receiving in rural towns and villages during the last few years is largely due to the influence of Christian schools, which have enlisted the sympathy of the Hindus. There is scarcely a vernacular missionary who cannot relate instances where he or his native preachers have secured a friendly hearing in a village through the assistance of one of these mission-taught young men. True, sceptical principles have found their way into Hindu society through the medium of English schools, but the good principles unmeasurably exceed the bad, and the light that is ever being diffused is shedding beneficent results.

A LARGE INGATHERING ANTICIPATED.

Moreover, what with the gradual relaxation of caste on the one hand, and the rapidly increasing influence of the native Christian community on the other—thus making it easier for a high caste Hindu to change his religion—may we not hope that ere long many of these mission-school graduates will become identified with the Christian Church? Rev. P. Rajagopaul, probably the ablest native preacher in Madras, and a convert of the Free Church of Scotland institution, in forecasting the future of men educated in mission schools, says: "Judging from the past many of them will live as they now do, false to their convictions, or, as the Scriptures express it, 'twice dead, plucked up by the root.' I believe, however, a goodly number of them who have the Word of God stored in their hearts and memories will be found ready to join the Christian Church when the great general break-up takes place, to which the present intellectual and moral fermentation is tending. I believe when that day comes, for come it must, baptisms among the higher classes and their families will be of frequent and ordinary occurrence. Can such a hope be deemed wild or chimerical in the face of the triumphs of Christianity within the last twenty-five years in this country and elsewhere?"

THE SCHOOLS AND THE CHURCHES.

But if the results of missionary education among the heathen have been great, much more marked has been its effect upon the native Church. Educational establishments for Christian children in the shape of day-schools and boarding-schools, form an important part of every well organized mission. Through these institutions an educated Christian community is being gradually raised up. The change effected in a single generation in the social and intellectual condition of degraded low-caste Hindus, through the influence of Christian education, is something marvellous. The Shanars of Tinnevelly, who, at the commencement of the Church mission amongst them, were unable to pronounce the very first words of the Lord's prayer in their own language, viz, Paramandalangalil yirukkira yengal pitavai—our father which art in heaven, which they would insist upon saying—Panaimarattil yirukkira yengal puravai—O dove, who art in the palmyra tree, are now educated to such an extent as to be English scholars, while the women surpass the Brahmin females in intelligence and refinement. The same good work is being done among the more degraded Pariahs, Pallis and Madigas of other districts. The mission census of 1881 showed that 674 native ordained pastors, 2,988 lay preachers, 4,345 Christian teachers, male, and 1 944 Christian teachers, female, are employed by the various societies. This represents only a part of the educated Christian community, hundreds of whom are engaged in other employments. Every year scores of young persons of both sexes pass the government teachers' certificate examinations, and take their share in the education of the masses, not only in mission, but also in government, municipal and local fund schools.

THE CHRISTIANS IN THE UNIVERSITIES.

In higher education the native Christians likewise take a fair place. The number of Christians matriculated at the Madras University alone last year was 271; while there were 51 candidates for First Arts, and 22 candidates for Bachelor of Arts degree. The percentage of passes in the Matriculation and B. A. examinations obtained by Christians was larger than that attained by any other class; while in the F. A. examination they were surpassed only by the Brahmins. Of 140 young men who obtained the B. A. degree at Madras in 1884, 14 were native Christians, one of whom occupied the second place in the list; while the same rank was awarded to another in the list of 23 successful candidates in the examination for Bachelor of Laws.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOLS.

In the matter of female education, the native Christians, as might be expected, stand far ahead of every other class. Government is obliged to depend very largely upon Christian female agency to extend education among native women. The great majority of pupils in female normal schools, as well as teachers in Government and Hindu girls' schools, are daughters of native converts. The only two native school inspectresses employed by the government in Southern India are both Christian ladies, one of whom was educated in England at government expense.

TESTIMONY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

The Madras government, in its last census report, gives the following testimony to the beneficial results of missionary education: "The native Christian community has been recruited very largely from the outcaste races and inferior castes of Hindus, and nothing can be more gratifying than to see what education has done for this despised section of the people. The native Christians constitute only about one-sixtieth part of the population, but in the last fifteen years they have furnished about one-twelfth of the successful candidates for the university entrance examination, a result that cannot but be extremely gratifying to the laborers in Christian missions, and which shows also what may be done in the improvement of the status of the inferior castes of Hindus."

It would be interesting to pursue this subject farther and show the influence that the native Church is beginning to exert upon the heathen masses. But this would carry us beyond the scope of the question we are discussing. Enough has been said to prove that Christian education is silently working a moral and social revolution among the Hindus. Encouraged by what has already been accomplished, let the home Church redouble her efforts, and help to hasten the coming of the Redeemer's kingdom in India.

BOUNDBROOK, N. J.

THE VETERAN OF OHIO.—We have had an interview with a resident of Delaware, Ohio, who, with a party of friends, drove from that town a month or two ago to visit Mr. Robert Cratty, now in his 103d year. They found the old gentleman alone at his farm house, occupied in reading the Bible. He was reading without spectacles, was well and active, and looking no older than many men of 65 years.

The Missionary Conference.

SIXTH GENERAL MEETING.

THE Conference met in the Twelfth Street Church, Brooklyn, Tuesday, Oct. 26th, at 10.30 A. M. Though at the hour of opening the audience was small, before the close of the session the main floor of the church was well filled with delegates and friends interested in the cause of missions. The appropriate motto was tastefully wrought in yellow letters on the walnut panelling back of the pulpit, "Christ is Our Peace," and upon the platform, either side of the desk, a collection of potted plants and cut flowers was arranged so as to produce a pleasant effect.

Promptly at half past ten the Conference was called to order by the Rev. Alfred J. Hutton, Chairman of the Committee of the General Synod on Arrangements, and the exercises commenced with singing hymn 11 of the "Hymns of the Church," the collection used throughout the sessions. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Crispell, another hymn was sung, which was followed by the reading of the Scripture selections: John 16: 7–15; 20: 19–22; Acts 2; 16–21, bearing upon the subject named for prayer, "The Presence and Power of the Holy Spirit." The Rev. Mr. Hutton, remarking on the subject, said in substance:

The presence and power of the Holy Spirit are as important now as they were on the Day of Pentecost. The power in this Conference must be Divine, and this is granted in answer to prayer. Prayer has been made in the churches for this Conference, that it might be blessed and be a blessing through the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. Let this be our prayer in this opening hour and through all the sessions. The Holy Spirit is already here according to promise. We do not have to wait, as they waited of old in Jerusalem, for His coming. He is always present with God's people when they meet in His name to pray and plan and provide for the progress of His cause. The evidence of the Holy Spirit's presence and power does not necessarily consist in large numbers and much excitement, but rather in the nature of the thought, discussion and action which it is its province to inspire.

During the hour other stirring remarks were made by Rev. Drs. David Cole and Jacob Chamberlain, and prayer was offered by Rev. Drs. H. N. Cobb, D. Cole, J. M. Dickson, C. L. Wells, and Rev. Charles H. Pool.

After the prayer-meeting the Conference was organized by the selection of Rev. Dr. J. Howard Suydam, of Jersey City, as President, and the Rev. Charles H. Pool, of Raritan, N. J., as Clerk.

On motion, committees were appointed as follows:

On Foreign Missions.—Rev. J. P. Searle, Rev. W. W. Knox and Elder Ten Eyck Sutphen.

On Domestic Missions.—Rev. R. Brokaw, Rev. P. H. Milliken and Elder C. C. Moore, to which should be referred such papers and reports as might be presented before the Conference and require its action.

Lunch was served in the lecture room of the church.

At 1.30 P. M. the ladies, of whom there was a large representation present, held a meeting in the interest of foreign missions in the church, continuing one hour. Mrs. G. L. Vanderbilt, of Flatbush, L. I., presided. The attendance was large. Fifty-six delegates answered to the roll call of the Classes. A paper was read on "Medical Missions: The Ministry of Woman to Her Sex in Heathen Lands." Mrs. Crispell, of Spring Valley, N. Y., on "God's Method in Evangelizing the World." The salient points were the wisdom and the beneficence of God's method, as especially illustrated in Woman's Work for Woman.

At 2.30 the Conference reassembled, sang hymn 740, and were led in prayer by Rev. J. Paschal Strong. Rev. C. I. Shepard read Isaiah, chapter 60, after which the pastor of the Twelfth Street Church, Rev. U. D. Gulick, welcomed the Conference in a hearty and neat address. He said, in part: It is no idle or empty word that I speak when I bid you welcome. It becomes my duty, as the pastor of this church, and it is certainly my great pleasure to look in your faces and bid you welcome in behalf of this church, of the churches of this city and of this Classis. The Saxon word "Welcome" is significant; "well come." You have well come to consider a question, than which none can be greater. This is emphatically a missionary age, and upon the mission banners everywhere the most conspicuous motto is, "This World for Christ." Let us catch something of the spirit of the Conferences of the past and rekindle our enthusiasm and zeal in this blessed cause; then will the results of this Convention be felt in all the length and breadth of our Church. The forces of sin are mighty and terrific to-day, but the Gospel of the kingdom of Christ is a mightier force; is making itself, as such, everywhere felt, and shall finally triumph. In our cities, throughout the country and beyond the seas, the same precious Gospel is doing its loving, saving work.

We shall be glad to do all we can for your comfort while you sojourn with us. Our families are ready to receive you cordially and heartily.

The President, Dr. Suydam, responded happily to the pastor's address of welcome, and then for about ten minutes he thrilled the large audience with a speech directly upon the work before the Convention, urging the importance of concentration, co-operation and enlargement.

Hymn 721 was sung, and then a paper was read on Foreign Missions by the Corresponding Secretary, Dr. H. N. Cobb, which was referred to the Committee, and the following resolution, offered by Dr. Isaac Hartley, was adopted: That this Conference instruct the Committee on Foreign Mission Papers to devise a practical plan by which the Board shall be relieved from the necessity of borrowing monies to meet the deficiencies of the Board during the summer months.

Dr. Cobb's paper was in substance as follows:

In settling down to the work of this Conference, I have a question to ask: "Are we a Missionary Church?" We ought to be. We are bound by our Lord's command, by our evangelical character and our orthodox faith. If we are evangelical, that very character binds us to missionary service; to be evangelical is to be evangelistic. Men of so-called "liberal views" may be, perhaps, excused if they "let the heathen wait," but we cannot be indifferent to their condition and their destiny if we are honest. We believe in the helpless, fallen, guilty state of all mankind, ourselves included; that Christ died for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world; that as He came to seek and save the lost, He sends us to the lost. From 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 of lost human souls depend on us for all their knowledge of His great salvation. The logical necessity of our position makes us missionaries to them even against our will. The living power of the faith that is in us, should make us willing missionaries to all whom we can reach. As there is no real obedience to Christ's command where there is no orthodoxy, so there is no real orthodoxy where there is not obedience.

We are equally bound by our history, in connection with the missionary work, to be a Missionary Church. God has permitted us to be associated with its very beginnings, to the heathen nations of this country, to China and Japan. In the years of civil war we led all churches in the United States but the Moravians, in our gifts for missions.

All these things show how fully we are committed to this work—imperatively bound to be a Missionary Church. And this, thank God, we are, and by that fact we are bound more strongly still.

We have more missionaries in the field to-day, or in commission, than ever before—23 men and 28 women, of whom 8 are single, actively engaged, and two young men and one young woman under appointment, the latter to the Isaac Ferris Seminary, of the former, one to India and the other, a physician, to China.

The Amoy Mission has now five men, for the first time in fifteen years. When Dr. Otte reaches the field the way will be open to establish the interior station so long needed and desired.

The station at Nagasaki again has three men and the prospect is bright for the establishment of the Steele Memorial School for young men and the Jonathan Sturges Seminary for girls, for both of which a building fund is provided.

The work of Christian female education in Japan has assumed such importance, and the success of the Isaac Ferris Seminary has been so conspicuous and is so generally admitted, that plans have been formed for enlarging still further its capacity for usefulness, and have met the approval of the mission and the Board. The plans embrace the raising of $12,000 for the purchase of land and the erection of buildings sufficient to accommodate 200 pupils. For the funds necessary no appeal will be made to the churches, but to benevolent individuals.

In the Arcot Mission Dr. Wm. W. Scudder has been set apart to the work of theological instruction, according to the suggestion of the last General Synod, and Dr. Chamberlain is authorized to seek an endowment fund of $50,000 for a theological school from individuals who have the means, as recommended by the Synod.

Plans have been formed for the union of the Christian College and Union Theological School at Tokyo under one management and in one locality, in the native city. It is hoped that a charter may be obtained from the government and the institution grow into a Christian University.

We need not fear that the work of education is assuming undue proportions. The actual work of evangelizing the nations to whom we send missionaries, cannot be done by missionaries alone. It must, in the main, depend on converted natives, trained to the work. No service we can render the rising churches or the heathen peoples of the East is more important, therefore, than this, if we desire the permanence and prosperity of the churches or the widest possible dissemination of the truth. We ought to be doing the same thing in China.

It is plain that the support of this large number of missionaries and the development of these schools must make increasing demands upon our liberality. And such is the fact. Look back only five years. Within that period the number of our missionaries has increased from 33 (15 men and 18 women) to 51 (23 men and 28 women), or 54 1-2 per cent. The number of native helpers from 147 to 196, or 27 1-4 per cent; the number of churches from 31 to 41, or 32 per cent; of communicants from 2,357 to 3,362, or nearly 43 per cent; of higher schools and seminaries from 4 to 11, or 175 per cent; and of their pupils from 126 to 637, or nearly 400 per cent. The amount appropriated for the year 1881, was $60,747. The amount for this year, 1886, was $81,960. The average receipts of the last five years have been $74,188, of the previous five years, $68,370. But the latter period includes the year 1880–81, when, in the effort to remove a debt of $40,000, the income reached the sum, altogether unparalleled in our experience, of $92,984—unparalleled save in that memorable year when a single member of the Church removed the crushing anxiety of the Board and relieved its treasury of overwhelming debt by the princely gift of $56,500. If the year 1881 be dropped from the account, the average of the five years immediately preceding that special effort will be found to be $62,642. This, as a more just index of a general intent and average effort of the church, shows an advance of almost $12,000, or nearly 20 per cent in the average gifts of the last five years.

It is proper to say these things that we may all know—that the Church may be assured—that we are not putting our money into a losing business, and may be encouraged to advance still further.

If we are still to be a missionary church, worthy of the name, we must make still greater efforts and even sacrifices. The present rate of giving does not equal the present rate of spending, and cannot be stretched to cover it. The true way is not to curtail, but to go resolutely forward.

And here two suggestions are offered: First, that we resolve to raise this year the $100,000 of which we have been talking, and second, that we resolve to reform all defective or vicious methods. The ability of the Church to give $100,000 this year, and every year, for our missions, cannot be questioned. We have given more than once in the past at a rate higher than that now needed to produce $100,000. The Moravians are not a rich nor numerous Church. They have but 20,000 communicants—one-fourth as many as ourselves. Yet they can give an annual missionary contribution of $240,000, or $12 per member. And shall we shrink before $100,000?

As for defective methods, there are surely such that fail to enlist the sympathy and co-operation of all—that throw the responsibility on, or leave the privilege to, a few and overlook the many. All ought to share, and all need to share it even more than it needs them. They need the spiritual uplift and the unselfish outlook that come from a sense of partnership with Christ in His redeeming work.

Methods are also defective that fail to enlist the Sabbath-schools. It is an ominous fact that only a few more than 200 out of nearly 700 contributed last year. The future prosperity of the work depends upon the training of these children to be interested and to give.

And that is certainly a vicious method which leaves the financial work of the year practically untouched for six months, and the great bulk of it to be done in 60 or 120 days. In five months the Board has expended about $35,000. It has received only about $14,000. The rest it has had to borrow. The vices of this method are many. It is wasteful, making necessary large payments for interest, that if saved would nearly support another missionary or about 20 native helpers, or 30 children in the schools.

It is a perversion of trust. The loans are made upon what is called the Security Fund. But these funds were not given for any such purpose. They were given for special emergencies or extra work that might not wisely, at the time, be included in the appropriations; such as providing houses for our missionaries, by which a saving of house-rent might be effected, or enlarging the Isaac Ferris Seminary. Yet the Board is compelled every year to use them in the other way. The method is perilous to the credit of the Board, to the interests of the work and the honor of the Church.

The "Crisis of Missions" is upon us. The signs of promise were never more inspiring. The progress of the great work was never wider or more rapid than now. It is a critical time for all the churches and their missions, of great privilege and weighty responsibility. It is a crisis, also, with our own missions. We have advanced as far as we can or dare under present conditions. The conditions must change or the work stop substantially where it is. Yet to stop where we are, when His command is upon us and every voice of His Providence invites us forward, what is it but treason to our Lord and to the souls to whom He sends us and has given us such abundant access?

Rev. Dr. C. L. Wells read a deeply interesting paper on "The Woman's Board of Foreign Missions," prepared by Mrs. Gertrude L. Vanderbilt. It was listened to with profound attention, and evidently interested every one present. It stated that the women of the Reformed Church organized their Society in 1875. Since then it had slowly but surely made advancement. Fears concerning it had been disappointed and hopes fulfilled. It has not diverted, as was by some feared, from the income by regular channels of the Church Boards. The zeal of the women has not abated, as was feared by some, but increased more and more, as results show, especially in the amounts paid during successive years into the treasury. The returns of each succeeding year in which collections have been given by the Auxiliaries, and through other sources to the Treasurer of the Woman's Board, are as follows: 1875, $2,891; 1876, $3,825; 1877, $4,599; 1878, $7,086; 1879, $8,455; 1880, $8,888; 1881, $8,678; 1882, $10,915; 1883, $10,919; 1884, $12,050; 1885, $15,019; 1886, $16,000; making a total of $109,325.

The sum of $5,500 has been annually pledged for the support of three seminaries—one at Amoy, China; one at Yokohama, Japan; and one at Chittoor, India; together with the two caste girls' schools at Vellore. There had been paid in during the last year for the girls' school at Nagasaki $5,000. In 1881 the sum of $2,000 was given to erect a school building at Kolongsu for the school previously held at Amoy. The sum of $900 was appropriated for the use of Mrs. Talmage to erect a small building at Kolongsu for the benefit of the native women. This has been called the Charlotte W. Duryee Bible School, in memory of the late beloved Foreign Corresponding Secretary. For the enlargement of the Ferris Seminary at Yokohama $2,500 were given in 1884. Other moneys had been appropriated.

The first year 19 Auxiliaries were formed, now there are 200. The number of life members, constituted such by the payment of $25 by one person at one time, has regularly increased. The number to date is 350.

The girls' school at Amoy, which was the first school for native girls in China, is doing a great work for the uplifting of the women of that great empire. The children there not only gain some education, but they become Christians under the influence in which they are placed, and going out among their heathen sisters they must in turn spread a knowledge of that same Saviour of whom they have themselves learned.

The native Christian women are also setting an example of unbinding their feet, so that this may be the first blow to that cruel custom which causes such untold agony to the women of that land.

The schools in India no longer meet with the opposition of former years, but even prominent officials are present at the examinations. Last year 23 girls passed the tests of the government examination, while officials, both native and foreign, were in attendance to offer their congratulations on the improvement of the scholars.

Zenana work has been successfully undertaken at Vellore, and high caste families have been visited and have received instruction in the Bible as well as on secular subjects.

At Yokohama the Ferris Seminary for girls presents an imposing appearance to vessels entering the harbor. It can be seen from a great distance, as it stands upon a bluff, and attracts much attention for the completeness of all its appointments. The course of instruction is highly appreciated by the Japanese, and the number of those taking advantage of the opportunities for obtaining an education increases constantly. Last year 20 of the pupils were communicants; 12 are the daughters of Christian households.

We have thus rapidly sketched the work of the Woman's Board—a work full of interest to those engaged in it. The beginning is small indeed, but the far-reaching results can only be known in eternity.

The Rev. Dr. Chamberlain says, speaking of the hymns he had translated into the Telegu language, that after a day spent in speaking and singing and he had gone to rest for the night, he could hear in the distance the people in the villages singing the hymns he had taught them. The refrain would come softly to him through the trees, in the silence of the night, as they sang,

"Thy refuge would I seek, blessed Jesus, blessed Jesus," or,

"My only hope art Thou. On Thee alone I call."

So when the night shall come to us, the night in which there shall be no more work, may not our weary eyelids close the more gently if we know that through these instrumentalies our heathen sisters will be singing as we sleep,

"Thy refuge would I seek, blessed Jesus, blessed Jesus."

The hymn, "On the Mountain Top Appearing," was sung, in which the large congregation heartily joined, when the Rev. E. G. Read, of Somerville, N. J., addressed the Conference on "The Sunday-school and Missions." He spoke without notes, his speech bristling with points and producing a fine effect. He said in part, The period of romance in missions is past; it is now a time of organization, a time of prodigious effort, a time when to make the work move forward aggressively and prosperously large sums of money must be given and expended from year to year. To meet the demands of the work the churches must raise more money. Hitherto only a minority of our churches and members are earnestly interested. In many of our churches it is difficult to raise the apportionments. A crisis seems to have come. Churches are turning to the children in the Sabbath-schools, and now we behold something like a children's crusade in connection with missions. The Sabbath-school is recognized as an important factor in the growing cause. There is danger, however, of the benevolence of the schools embracing too many objects, too many local, general charities.

Churches and Sabbath-schools should first provide for their own. If our own people do not sustain our missions, who will? General benevolences need the help of the Sabbath-school less than our missions do. Frankly, I say, the missionary work in the Reformed Church is imperative, and needs the help of the children. We have a total enrollment in our schools of 96,535. One penny a week from each the year through will aggregate over $50,000.

Children are easily interested in the work. He illustrated by allusion to the building of the missionary ship, "The Morning Star," with the contributions of the children. He never in his life knew of a school whose officers and teachers were interested in a good work in which the children did not become interested. Is there anything more material than that parents should encourage children to take up this work of evangelizing this world when they are forced to relinquish it. The generations to come will achieve results far exceeding all that has yet been reached. There is need of special qualifications. More devotedness and earnestness and zeal is necessary in order to accomplish better results. Greater liberality is needed. Let us pray that God will give our children grace to exceed and grant them the missionary spirit, and may they be better specimens of Christians than we are. Let us also hope that they may be so imbued with the spirit of the Master that they may be the hope of the days to come.

An hour, by the programme, was set apart for discussion. A large portion of the time was occupied in considering whether the papers submitted should be printed in full, no definite conclusion being reached. Several of the delegates urged more earnest efforts to engage the Sabbath schools in an intelligent and earnest support of the missionary work, and pressed the necessity of enlisting the children in order to keep alive a true missionary spirit.

TUESDAY EVENING, 7.30.—There was a large audience in attendance. Fifteen minutes were occupied with a song-service, led by the large and efficient choir of the 12th Street Church. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. W. Knox, of Bayonne, N. J.; after which Dr. Suydam, the President, introduced the Rev. Eugene S. Booth, Principal of Isaac Ferris Seminary, Yokohama, Japan, who spoke as follows:

The broad plans, now formulating in the consciousness of the Christian Church for the preparation of the time when Christ shall enter upon His inheritance, make the question, "Shall the present generation witness the regeneration of an empire?" a practical one. This question demands the attention of every lover of true progress, because in the first place the circumstances which a careless observer might call fortuitous coincidences, but which we, as God's people, must regard as the leadings of Divine omnipotence, have given it that practicability, and, in the second place, because we see in Japan the promise of a realization of an affirmative answer to the question.

But what the new-born thing will be like depends upon the help it shall receive from the Christian Church.

The speaker here gave a general view of the location, size and history of the country, of the character of the people and their government till the opening of the country to foreign commerce about thirty years ago.

Since that time the old empire has thrown off the yoke of feudalism and the emperor has resumed the government de facto, destroyed numerous principalities, levied an army and built a navy; constructed dry docks equal to the requirements of the largest steamers, erected machine shops, forges and foundries, railroads and telegraph lines, established schools in which English, French and German are taught; sent more than a thousand of her best young men abroad to study the laws, habits, manufactures, governments and religions of other countries.

In 1872 the first Protestant Church was established with eleven members. In 1873 the public notices against Christianity were withdrawn, but not repealed. The Department of Religion was abolished in 1877 and the Shinto priests awarded a pension that shall cease in 1897. Buddhism, also, with its 296,000 shrines and 248,000 priests, was disestablished, its revenues diverted to the State, and Christians enabled to bury their dead without molestation. Into all this great change Christian thought and influence have entered as a necessary part of the regime.

But the time is rapidly approaching when an epoch will be created in the history of that nation. The nation has passed its school days of boyhood and arrived at that critical period where it is plunged headlong into the vortex of skepticisim; a danger so common to youth of promising power.

Thus far the process of regeneration has been one of development by evolution. But there is one thing lacking. Before reaching maturity, young, inexperienced Japan needs to be awakened to a Christian moral consciousness. This cannot be evolved by a Japanese any more than it can by us. It must be involved or rolled into the heart, the mental fiber of Japan, from some source outside of itself before it can be again evolved. And this awakening to a Christian moral consciousness can only come from that source which God in His wisdom and grace has ordained it shall come, namely, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, sent thither by His people. It was shown that this had not been adequately done. The speaker went on to say,

There are openings now in Japan which, if occupied and the forces now working augmented, the present generation may witness in God's good providence the glorious spectacle of a Christian people off the shores of the mighty Continent of Asia with its teeming millions.

The opportunities are these: (1.) Japan will inaugurate her majority in 1890, twenty-two years after the Restoration, by convening a House of Representatives. The unrevealed possibilities hidden in the issue of that event are tremendous. In all circles, consequently, there is a feeling of unrest, a looking for safe anchorage ground. The only safety is a true religious sentiment—faith in Christ. (2.) Attention is turned to the civilization of the West. And the Japanese need to be taught that the root and sap of Western civilization is Christianity. (3.) There is a general but honest endeavor being made at social reform. This reaches the home life. It means the elevation of woman. And the Japanese of the highest intelligence and influence are appealing to the missionaries to help them. They look for the power of Christianity here. Shall they be disappointed?

The condition of women in Japan was here referred to, and the religious teachings and influences which had made them what they are, spoken of at some length. The influences now at work are inadequate of themselves to accomplish the desired result, that is, the regeneration of Japan in the present generation; but they are capable of being augmented if Christian people will take hold of this matter with intelligent enthusiasm.

The present agencies are: (1.) A young, vigorous, energetic church, numbering 13,000 members and growing at the rate of 500 per month. (2.) Theological schools with above 100 devoted, intelligent Christian young men preparing for the Gospel ministry. (3.) The circulation of the Scriptures and other Christian literature. (4.) Preparatory schools and colleges in which there are from 1,000 to 1,500 boys preparing for the duties of Christian citizenship. (5.) Female seminaries where there are an equal number of girls preparing to become teachers, and to grace and adorn Christian homes. (6.) The blessed influence of the Holy Spirit, the evidence of whose power is seen in every agency here enumerated.

To bring to pass the condition desired, the Church of Christ needs consecration, concentration and cooperation.

The next address was by Rev. Wm. I. Chamberlain, son of Dr. Jacob Chamberlain, under appointment for his father's field, Madanapalle, Arcot Mission, India. He is a very fluent and rapid speaker, and held the close attention of the audience by a constant flow of eloquence. His subject was: "Missions, the Great Work of the Church and the Glory of the Age." In concluding he expressed, in a few happily chosen words, the joy and satisfaction that it gave young men to accept the commission of the Church to go to work in missions.

The congregation rose and sang "Praise Ye Jehovah's Name." The President, introducing the next speaker, Dr. Jacob Chamberlain, said: "Happy is the father that has such a son, and happy is the son that has such a father." Dr. Chamberlain spoke for a full half hour to the delight of every one present. His address will be published in full hereafter.

The session closed with the hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name!" and the benediction.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 27.—The Conference met at 9 o'clock A. M. The first half hour was spent in devotional exercises, conducted by Rev. Chas. S. Wright, of Jersey City. At the close of the prayer-meeting it was announced that the President, Dr. J. H. Suydam, could not be present until noon, whereupon the Rev. Dr. Jacob Chamberlain, by the vote of the Conference, presided. At first the congregation was small, on account of the storm, but by continuous arrivals before the close of the session the body of the church was well filled.

The general subject for this session was Domestic Missions. The first paper was read by Dr. Jacob West, Secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions. It was carefully prepared and presented considerations on the field, its needs, and the present status of the work, as follows:

We greet you with thanksgiving as the Missionary Conference returns to refresh and quicken us with your sympathies and wise counsels. You are as glad to be here. From you shall be handed down the sacred torch of this celestial fire to the humblest member of our Church, until we are melted together and become one living mass of vitalized energy in the prosecution of our heaven-appointed task. This process of assimilation is as essential in the spiritual body as in the physical, and we never can succeed until that mystical process is complete. The thoughtful head, the alert eye, the willing hands and the eager feet are languishing and halting for the nourishment which is to be gathered upon a thousand fields and which a throbbing heart is waiting to send in rich vitalized blood to the very extremity with every pulsation. We need a baptism of the Holy Spirit which shall go to every rootlet of this Tree of Life, which shall be "for the healing of the nations." We need it because of the time in which we live. We need it because of the land in which we live. This land is to furnish the men and the means for the world's conversion to the Lord Christ. Who does not feel that the silent, potent, radiant example of free, prosperous, enlightened America, as the exponent of Christian truth, is the mightiest influence in the world's civilization today! Yet, is the Church awake to this momentous truth? Are the societies who take care of and foster the work of home evangelization amply and heartily supported? Are they supplied with means which, expended at the right time, shall produce one hundred per cent for any number of years for the maintenance of the work in every land? They are in debt. Almost every one without exception is in debt.

I give extracts from a fragment of paper picked up after a missionary meeting, which had formed the synopsis of a speaker's remarks. "There are 15,000,000 foreigners in the United States. Many of these are as degraded as any heathen. In 1880 the foreign born were only thirteen per cent of the population, yet they furnished 19 per cent of the convicts in the penitentiaries and 43 per cent of the inmates of the workhouses and houses of correction.

"In some of the mining districts of this country, out of a population of 1,200 only 40 can be found who even profess Christianity.

"Hundreds of children can be found in one State who have never heard the name of God, except in oaths.

"In some of the lumbering States there is a population of thousands entirely cut off from all religious teaching.

"One town has one hundred liquor saloons and not one church.

"It is not uncommon for home missionaries to find people who have not heard a sermon in years."

And these societies burdened with debt! What can the Church be thinking of, thus to imperil the hope of the heathen in Pagan lands, not to speak of the priceless interests imperilled here! Let the high resolve be made before Him who gave Himself for us, This debt shall be paid.

Our own work is not the task which your Board of Domestic Missions has set. It is not what the Woman's Executive Committee has planned. The task is appointed us of God. The field lies before us, as the child born in your house looks to you for shelter, sustenance and care. The General Synod commands us to take care of the helpless one. The Classes, from an intimate knowledge of a field, conscientiously recommend us to make a definite appropriation for its support, and the Board prayerfully considers whether the five loaves and two fishes will feed the five thousand, or in what other way the miracle can be repeated. Shall it be in cutting down the pittance named for the missionary to still smaller figures?

Under such circumstances we have come to have under our care 110 missions. At the East, with 47 missionaries, 54 missions; at the West, with 46 missionaries, 56 missions, or a band of 93 missionaries in the field, whose average support costs each $283.30. They have under their charge 4,979 families, and minister to 6,910 church members. They have received on confession of faith 667 souls, and on certificate 411, an aggregate of 1,078. They report 95 Sabbath-schools, with an attendance of 10,635, among whom 117 conversions are reported. Six churches have become self-supporting during the year. Seven church buildings have been completed or are approaching it, and nine parsonages have been built or improved.

For the maintenance of this work the Church gave last year $32,210.13, and to the Church Building Fund $12,212.55, or a total of $44,422.68. It was the deliberate judgment of the General Synod, now twice uttered, that this Board needed, and the Church could easily raise, $60,000. This sum was apportioned among the Classes, and by them among the churches. It was kindly received and heroically attempted, and they fell short of this goodly sum $15,557.32. It is the want of just this amount which hangs like an incubus upon us.

In the Classis of Iowa (and Dakota) eight churches and nearly as many parsonages, for shelterless people, are wanted.

In the Classis of Grand River, the Fourth and Fifth churches of Grand Rapids, the latter newly organized, and both very promising, need immediate help. We cannot help them.

In the Classis of Holland, the First Church of Holland needs prompt and generous aid. We dare not even borrow for them.

In the Classis of Michigan, the congregation of young people, composing the Second Church of Kalamazoo, of surprising growth and interest, will be turned into the street in February by the expiring of their lease. They must have immediate and adequate aid.

In the Classis of Wisconsin, the Church of Baileyville needs to be built, and the parsonage, reared with great self-sacrifice and now reduced to ashes, needs to be rebuilt. Pella, Nebraska, asks for a little help to build the church, and Philadelphia, Kansas, whose sod church is ruined, entreats your assistance to obtain shelter for the altar and the people.

In the name of the Great Head of the Church, shall these ask in vain? What is the use of expecting Church extension if we do not make use of the means to extend it?

Relying upon the faithfulness of a good people who have never yet deceived or forsaken us, and because it was the judgment of the highest judicature of the Church that we needed it, we have anticipated about one-half of the amount which the Church did not raise last year. We have obligations matured and due to the amount of $8,000, and the most urgent calls for nearly $20,000 more, which, if the people of God will furnish it, we guarantee will return within five years twenty per cent in income for our general church work.

The paper closed with the statement that in regard to the matter of the co-operation of denominations on mission fields, "while nothing has been definitely settled, great progress has been made toward a substantial agreement in regard to the principle of non-interference."

An excellent and interesting paper on "The Woman's Executive Committee and their Work" was next read by Mrs. Edmund B. Horton. This paper was received with much favor.

It began with an outline of the history of the Committee. The Domestic Missionary Convention held in Newark in 1882 urged an organization similar to that of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, therefore the Committee was formed. It found its work in providing homes for the missionaries and their families. A Vice-President was chosen for each of the Particular Synods and a committee of two for each of the thirty-three Classes. In May, 1884, the Committee reported 63 auxiliaries, in 1885 it reported 107, the present year 138, a gain of 31; but the contributions for the last year amounted to over $6,000, about one-half more than the receipts of the previous year. During the four years nine parsonages have been built and six others enlarged and repaired. Some of these buildings in the larger towns would be creditable to Eastern villages, but the majority had been plain. The congregations, being poor, have given little money, but have bestowed their labor. In some instances all the work has been performed by the members of the church, the pastor working with the people.

A number of incidents were related of the hardships endured by the missionaries from the want of a suitable home. Sod houses were described, with roofs consisting of saplings laid across the ridge-pole, covered with corn-stalks, then with prairie grass, and finally with a layer of sods, and which when it rains leak mud. But the day of sod houses is over, for the Committee is providing suitable homes. Still the winters are severe, fuel is dear, and often the occupant can afford to warm only one room, which serves for kitchen, dining-room, study, parlor, and often for sleeping-room as well. There the pastor must prepare his sermons, the children live and the wife perform her duties, all under restraint.

As an illustration of what is endured the following is selected:

"One of our missionaries, whose entire house was only 11 feet by 16—one room on the ground floor, with a low, unfinished attic above, wrote, asking that a small addition might be made to his parsonage—just one room—that his wife, who was ill, might be removed from the noise of the children and the odor of cooking.

"All monies in the treasury had been pledged to other objects before his request had been received, and nothing could be done for him then. So time went by and the mother lay on her bed in one corner of the overcrowded living-room, watched her little children while they played, all unconscious of her sufferings, while the father, nurse and physician and servant, each in turn, did all that man could do through the long and weary days; and at night, when the children were sleeping, and his poor wife often feigning sleep that he might be relieved from watching, he would sit down to his studies, to prepare the sermon that must be ready for each Sunday—since how could he disappoint his people, who would come five, ten, twenty miles even, to hear the Word of God preached in their own dear mother-tongue. Yet he did a wonderful work among his people at that time. He lived so close to the Lord that his soul caught a glow of the heavenly brightness, and his words had a pathos and power which none could resist.

"At last he wrote to us, in his quaint foreign way, that the dear wife had gone to her rest and there was room 'too much' in the little home. He told of his great sorrow, but said he hid it deep in his heart, that he might comfort the children and the poor people who had loved her so."

This is but one instance. In the West twenty-eight churches are without parsonages. The missionaries are compelled to take from their small salaries, for house rent, the money sorely needed to provide the common necessaries of life. Some of them have left comfortable homes and good charges that they may engage in this work, so essential in new settlements. Some of them have two charges, from ten to seventy miles apart. They drive ten miles to hold prayer-meetings, go any distance to attend funerals. They deserve all honor and a fair remuneration.

Care is needed and is used in making appropriations, for, except in the case of the Hollanders, the people of a settlement emigrate again and the village is nearly forsaken. When appeals are made a number of churches respond by sending gifts to one locality which has especially won their attention. So one pastor receives a superabundance and others are left in want. The Woman's Committee gathers information and conveys it to the auxiliaries, and gifts are wisely directed and distributed.

The Committee has also given largely to the fund for church buildings. The churches at Grand Rapids, Sioux Falls, Salem, Centreville, Harrison, and at other places, are partly their work. But to provide parsonages is the special work constantly in view, and that this may be adequately performed the paper concluded with an appeal for generous gifts, the fruit of self-denial, and with an expression of a confident belief that "there are countless unwritten histories of heroic self-denial that gifts may be cast into the treasury of the Lord,—of fervent, unceasing, prevailing prayer; of silent, unsung, unhonored work, that the Lord knows of, and that shall not fail of a rich reward in the day when He maketh up His jewels."

After singing "Hail to the Lord's Anointed," forty-five minutes were devoted to the "Question Drawer." Two questions had been submitted to Secretary Dr. H. N. Cobb:

1. Will it not further the interests of our mission work to have these Conferences oftener? Dr. Cobb favored five annual Conferences, one General, and one in each of the four Particular Synods.

2. Would it be possible to send an agent to the churches that do not contribute, with a view to securing a collection from each church? Ans. The end proposed is certainly desirable, and this is already done in part. The advance that has been made in reducing the number of non-contributing churches is largely due to the services of the Missionary Agents in the Classes.

Secretary Dr. Jacob West was asked and answered questions as follows: (1.) How much money is appropriated each year in distinctively new enterprises? Ans. It varies; depending upon the importance of the fields, and the money available. Recently, there has been an overwhelming number of applications. (2.) Why can we not have some enthusiastic home missionary to go among the churches and arouse the people? Ans. We have no unemployed missionaries, and none that can be spared from their fields. (3.) What summary of the needs, etc., of the work is available to our membership? Ans. The published reports; have prepared a card with condensed information soon to be sent out. We purpose in the future to improve in this respect, and to keep the churches informed.

Several questions of a somewhat miscellaneous character were answered by Drs. Cole and Wells; when Dr. Chamberlain replied to two questions: (1.) Will not the co-operative union proposed in the foreign fields have an unfavorable reflex influence on our churches at home in their gifts? Ans. No. The large hearted givers, even the small hearted givers, will be more ready to fight the devil than to fight other Presbyterians.

The second question and answer will be found on page four.

"Wake the Song of Jubilee" was sung by the audience standing, when the Rev. James Demarest, Jr., D.D., delivered an address on "The Opportunity and Obligation of our Church," which was worthy of the appreciation with which it was received. After indicating in detail the power of the causes which have prevented the growth of the Church in the past, such as the tenacious adherence to the Dutch language after the English language had become the language of the country; the limitations imposed by the control of the Church by the Church in the Netherlands and the struggle to throw off that yoke, involving a fierce conflict of parties in this country, nearly rending the Church asunder; the tendency to confine evangelizing efforts to the Dutch and their descendants; a strange apathy which allowed opportunities to pass unimproved; the surrender to other denominations of congregations gathered in Kentucky and Canada, because so distant from the centre of the Church, Dr. Demarest said, we have still preserved a separate autonomy, have a goodly share of wealth and power, have a goodly record for zeal and devotion and success in the work of foreign missions, and have an honorable name for catholicity of spirit. Now the reflex influence of our work abroad is arousing increased attention to the work at home. The fact that these Conferences, held at first solely in the interest of foreign missions, now give the half of their time to home missions, and the formation of a Woman's Executive Committee of Domestic Missions, indicates this increased zeal in the work in our own land.

Where, then, shall we find our field? The older communities, neglected in the past, have no use for us now. But the nation has not ceased to grow. A new country in the West is opening for our entrance and calls to us for help. A heterogeneous population, cut adrift from old ties, loosed from restraints, is waiting for the moulding hand of Christian nurture to fashion it into the symmetry of a Christian commonwealth.

A particular line of effort calls for us there. Immigrants have come and still come from the Netherlands; they especially appeal to our sympathies and affection. Many are godly men and women, and thank God when they find the arms of the old mother Church extended to welcome them. Others need to be met by evangelizing efforts. This constant inflow from the Fatherland is sufficient to tax the resources of our home mission treasury.

This field has proved a fruitful one. The principal gains in the West, during a generation, have been made among the Hollanders. Four Classes, enjoying a good degree of prosperity and steadily increasing in strength and in the number of their churches, are the result of our labor. Of the eleven new churches reported by the Domestic Board to the last General Synod, nine are composed of Hollanders, and most of them in the new Classis of Iowa. Now the young people are becoming Americanized rapidly and asking for church services in the English language. The time has come for us to give special attention to this transition. The appeal of the new church at Kalamazoo ought to meet a generous response. We can do no better work for our Church in the West than to encourage all such efforts by abundant moral and material aid.

The Reformed Church is also adapted to successful work outside of the particular field indicated. Men want the bread of life; even bad men suffer sometimes from a soul-hunger which nothing can satisfy but the provisions of grace. Our Church can meet this need. She has preserved in its heavenly purity the Gospel committed to her. There is nothing in her customs or polity to repel men; on the contrary, there is much to attract. "Republican in government, she accords well with the institutions of the country; semi-liturgical in usage, she meets a growing feeling in our time in favor of a more worshipful tone in the services of the sanctuary; sound in the faith and of a stability that is not carried about with every wind of doctrine, she offers the repose of steadfast conviction to the doubting unrest of the age; of a catholic spirit that embraces all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in the bonds of a common brotherhood, she echoes the prayer of the Master that all His people may be one, and in her superiority to mere denominationalism points the way to a common unity. A Church so characterized is certainly adapted to do the Lord's work among any and all people. Let her go forward, then, into the new West, where she is so sorely needed to evangelize the fast gathering millions.

"Thus prosecuting her work, she shall become not an inconsiderable factor in determining the character of the Church of the future—that American Church which is being inquired for already. She has been likened to the heavy artillery in the Lord's army, which moves slowly but does effective work. I would rather liken her to the orange ray of the prism which, mingling with all the rest, shall lend essential help to constitute the white light with which the great Church of Christ is illumining the land. This ray cannot be spared out of the blending of that varied but united testimony for the truth which it is the mission of Christ's Church to bear. The truth colored by the individual peculiarity of each separate communion, and these several colorings blent in one—thus shall the American Church of the future bear her testimony and diffuse her light; and we of the Reformed (Dutch) Church must see to it that the orange ray be not wanting to make the light complete."

Afternoon.—A bountiful lunch was served in the lecture-room, as on the previous day, of which about two hundred partook. From 1.30 to 2.30 the ladies again held a meeting in the church. At 2.30 the afternoon session opened with reading the Scriptures and singing "My Country, 'tis of Thee." Dr. Suydam having returned, presided, and introduced the Rev. Dr. Denis Wortman, who read a masterly and powerful paper on "The Immediate Evangelization of America."

After a pleasing introduction, he said: "Our motto is, 'Christ for America, America for Christ,' and by and by this consummation must be, shall be reached. But shall it be after alternating triumphs and defeats, with bloody Bull-Runs, Shilohs, Vicksburgs, Antietams, Gettysburgs, or with one sure straight march down through the Wilderness to one signal Appomatox decisive ending of the struggle? Fortunately it is not too late for us to determine upon victory; and yet it is not a moment too early for us to lay out our plans and enter upon our campaign. . . . One thing is certain, with all our equipment of wealth, of talent, of culture, of truth and of the Spirit of God, there can be no question of the full conquest of all this land for Christ; only we must not spare our energies or wealth, nor delay one fatal year the stern seizing of our opportunity—to-day is the day of salvation!"

Dr. Wortman went on to speak of the great political and religious crisis confronting us in this country, and brought out many interesting facts: "Already three-quarters of the people of the land of the Puritans are foreign born or of a foreign parentage; already the land of the Hollander and Huguenot is seven-tenths the same; one third of the whole white population of the nation is of this class, and sixteen of our largest cities are already under their control. Last year more immigrants came from Germany alone (90,000) than the full membership of our Reformed Church. There landed at the port of New York alone, in the years 1880 to 1884 inclusive, 1,220,552 immigrants from Bohemia, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Hungary, Sweden and Russia. In 1871–1880 inclusive, 2,944,695 men, women and children came to our shores, a very few of them people of culture, morality, religion, but the vast bulk of them dwarfed by ignorance, alienated from the Church by papal exactions or cowered by stupendous superstitions, impoverished by privations, angered by unjust rule against government and law of any kind at all. . . . Verily, we must own that all this comes about in the providence of God; verily, we are to be thankful that while we are sending the Bible to distant lands the work seems too slow to the Redeemer and He sends His, yes, His millions of benighted here; here to labor more hopefully in our industries, to grow more normally in the midst of our freedom, to be ministered to of our charities, to spend their lives in the close vicinity of our Sabbath-schools and our churches, where every one of us can be a missionary, where with ordinary zeal and sacrifice they may be led in large and rejoicing flocks into the fold, and where the honor and reward of doing it are ours, or ours the peril and reproach of failure." This is but an extract from this grand, soul-stirring address.

The next speaker was the Rev. Herman C. Berg, who delivered an extemporaneous address, full of fire and bristling with telling points, on "How Best to Secure the Self-Support of Mission Churches." He grouped his thoughts under the general heads, 1. Enrich the Boards. 2. Strike out Beneficiary as used in relation to theological students receiving help from the Church. Let the Church recognize the fact that when a young man enters upon his studies he is already in the service of the Church. 3. Locate aptly. Do not fly over immense distances in the matter of establishing self-supporting churches. It is possible to found a church too soon. 4. Look carefully after the ministers, consistories, and Sabbath-schools. Don't put a novice in the position of elder or deacon, especially of elder. The Sabbath-school is an important factor in securing and keeping self-supporting churches.

After singing the hymn "Shine on Our Land, Jehovah, Shine," the Rev. W. W. Clark delivered a stirring address on "City Evangelization," which is reserved for separate publication.

So much time was occupied by the papers and addresses that discussions upon them were very limited, and much that was said was irrelevant to the subjects presented and to the general subject of missions.

At the conclusion of the addresses in the afternoon the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond offered the following resolution, which, after considerable discussion, was adopted:

That it is the sense of this Conference that every church receiving aid from the Board of Domestic Missions should receive smaller appropriations each year, save in case of exceptional loss or calamity, that ultimate self-support may be attained.

Evening, 7.30.—After singing and prayer the Committee on Foreign Missions reported in substance the following resolutions, which were adopted:

1. That the Conference acknowledges with profound gratitude the faithfulness of Almighty God to His gracious promises, evidenced in the progress made in all our mission fields during the past year.

2. That we urge upon our churches the necessity of unceasing prayer for the continuance of this progress, and especially enlarged grace for ourselves that we may rightly embrace our opportunities, faithfully to employ the means that are ours, and thus secure the blessings of the Church God is so willing to bestow.

3. We heartily endorse the standard for contributions to foreign missions repeatedly set before us by the General Synod in the call for $100,000 per year, regarding this sum as neither beyond the ability of the Reformed Church in giving, or its obligation in virtue of the work to be done, and we hereby pledge ourselves as delegates to do our utmost within the Classes we represent to secure the full amount.

4. That we desire to place on record our high appreciation of the wisdom shown by the Board of Foreign Missions in the policy it has adopted to awaken a wider and deeper interest throughout the Church in its work.

5. That we pledge to the Board our cordial support in future, pursuing this policy as respects the system of conventions—annual, district and Classical—the employment of Classical Missionary Agents, and the apportionment of its needs among the Classes, as a rule adapted to develop and guide the liberality of our churches.

6. That we urge the several members of this Conference to the earnest discharge of the responsibility assumed in the above pledge in the Classes from which they are delegated.

7. In view of the fact that so large a proportion of the annual gifts of the Church to the Board are not received until the closing months of the financial year, and the consequent necessity of borrowing money to meet the expenses of the previous months, and of paying interest thereon, we urge all church consistories to forward contributions to the treasurer of the Board as soon as they are received by them.

That we urge our churches to take up monthly or quarterly collections for this cause, and so distribute their gifts over the year; or, in cases where, in the judgment of pastor and consistory, the annual collection is still expedient, it be taken early in the year.

That we urge the Classes to empower their respective missionary agents to attend to the carrying out of the above suggestions as far as possible.

8. That we congratulate the Woman's Board upon the splendid and increasing results of its vigor and efficiency, and its growing constituency, and hoping that it may soon be represented by its auxiliaries in every one of our churches, we recommend it anew to the attention of pastors and congregations.

9. That we endorse the action of the last General Synod, looking toward co-operative effort with sister churches in mission fields.

10. While welcoming their increasing interest and enlarged gifts, we recognize among the children of the Church an undeveloped power in mission work.

11. Seeing in them the future givers and laborers in this department of Church life, resolved that we urge upon pastors and officers, through more thorough organization and the adoption of practical methods, to develop a missionary spirit among them.

12. That we emphasize the resolution of the General Synod, found upon page 79 of the Minutes, recommending "that at least one session of Sabbath-schools in each quarter be devoted to the consideration of missions.

13. We request the committee who will arrange for the next annual Missionary Conference to secure a paper on the methods for awakening an interest in mission work among the young.

14. That the Board be requested to publish and circulate as widely as possible the paper read before this Conference by the Corresponding Secretary, that from the Woman's Board, and the address of the Rev. E. G. Read.

The Committee on Domestic Missions reported on the papers referred to them, recommending the following resolutions, which were adopted:

1. That this Conference reaffirms the action of the last General Synod in recommending that there be $60,000 contributed by the churches for the work of domestic missions this year.

2. That we urge pastors and Sunday-school superintendents to strict loyalty in directing contributions into the channels of our own Boards.

3. That we suggest to the Board of Domestic Missions the wisdom of using the Mission Gleaner as a vehicle for disseminating information in regard to their work.

4. That we heartily endorse the efforts made by the Woman's Executive Committee in providing homes for pastors.

The Rev. W. W. Knox offered a resolution which was adopted, and is as follows:

That we accord the Board of Domestic Missions our sincere sympathy in their needs and our hearty co-operation in their work.

On motion, it was resolved that the papers read be referred to the Board of Domestic Missions, and they be requested to have printed such or so much of them as in their judgment will be helpful to the interests of their work.

The Rev. Dr. James M. Dickson addressed the Conference on the magnificence of our extreme Western country, which he had visited during the summer vacation. The President, Dr. J. H. Suydam, followed with a few closing remarks.

The Rev. Dr. J. B. Drury offered the following, which was adopted by a hearty and unanimous vote:

Resolved, That the hearty thanks of this Conference be extended to the Twelfth Street Church for the use of their commodious edifice and their hospitable welcome to the members of the Conference to their homes; and also to the Church on the Heights and the First Church of Brooklyn, for the provision of the daily lunches, whereby so convenient an opportunity for refreshment not only, but for social converse, has been afforded.

The Conference closed with the doxology and benediction.

Bible Study

AT NORTHFIELD, MT. HERMON AND YALE.

During the present month Rev. Wm. W. Clark, of Staten Island, has been doing a good work at Northfield, Mass., in connection with Mr. Moody's two schools. As Bible instruction forms a most important part in the curriculum of these institutions, Mr. Moody arranged to have Mr. Clark give a series of Bible lectures at each school, or twenty-four during his eight days' visit. The young ladies' seminary numbers about 225 scholars and teachers, and the special services here were opened by Mr. Moody, who appeared to enjoy the Bible lessons quite as well as any of the pupils. At the Mt. Hermon school for boys, across the river, the enthusiasm in the Bible readings was a marked feature. Most of the students and teachers took copious notes, which in many cases were afterwards written out in full.

The majority of the 210 pupils here are earnest, active Christians, many of them preparing for the ministry, missionary and other evangelistic work. A consecrated body of young men who ere long will make their mark in the Lord's service. At his room Mr. Clark would receive a succession of visits from the young men who wanted light on Bible themes or advice in the matter of Christian work.

Altogether, the work at both institutions was greatly blessed, and the students will not soon forget these profitable hours spent in the study of God's Word.

During his visit at Northfield Mr. Clark received several appeals from the Christian men at Yale College to visit them at New Haven and give them a start in the study of the Scriptures. Accordingly, on a Friday evening, he took the university prayer-meeting, held in the large and beautiful hall of the new Y. M. C. A. building, just erected by the Marquand estate. In one hour he gave, by request, an outline of Bible study, setting forth the special truths in many of the Old Testament books, the characteristic differences of the four Gospels and a synopsis of a few epistles. Such was the interest manifested that he devoted two hours on Saturday morning in arranging with a committee a course of Bible study to be pursued during the coming year. He also promised to spend a week with them at an early date and give two or three lectures a day.

Charleston, S. C.—Many of our readers will be gratified to know that the Rev. Dr. Vedder has obtained the $6,000 needed to repair the Church of the Huguenots, at Charleston, S. C., which was seriously damaged by the earthquake. The prompt and generous response to his earnest appeals, and indeed to all the appeals in behalf of the afflicted city, is sufficient proof of the existence of a true Christian sympathy.

The Reading Room.

Our Book-Shelves.

....“THE CRISIS OF MISSIONS; Or, the Voice out of the Cloud.” By Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. No recent American preacher and writer has given so much of time and thought and work to the cause of Foreign Missions as the author of this fresh volume of facts and proofs of the veritable “crisis” at which the world's evangelization has now arrived. The crisis which he treats of as having already come, is “a combination of grand opportunity and great responsibility; the hour when the chance of glorious success and the risk of awful failure confront each other; the turning point of history and destiny.” The evidences of the crisis are the facts of the work as it now is; and these are marshalled by Dr. Pierson with consummate skill and power. His pages glow with enthusiastic earnestness and his suggestions for meeting the crisis are practically wise and in line with the developments of the service in our own time. For ministers, for the Monthly Concert of Prayer, for reading in small missionary meetings and committees of the women's societies in our own and other churches, and for family use and Sunday-school libraries, we know of no better hand-book on its great themes than this. (Robert Carter & Bros.)

....“ANCIENT CITIES FROM THE DAWN TO THE DAYLIGHT,” by Dr. William Burnet Wright of the Berkeley Street Church of Boston, is a descriptive and historical account of the principal world cities associated with the Bible. The series comprises, Ur, Nineveh and Babylon, Memphis and Alexandria, Damascus and Susa, Petra and Tyre, Athens and Rome, Jerusalem, and the New Jerusalem. Without pretending to be erudite, the book gives evidence of careful and accurate study, with the faculty of sifting out of the dust-heap of ages the most enduring facts, and presenting them in graphic and life-like style. We have not seen a volume for many a day from which we could gather as much historical information in such a delightful way. The general reader will be interested, and the lover of the Bible will find it a valuable adjunct to his student's library. (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

....“THE AGE OF ELECTRICITY. From Amber-Soul to Telephone.” By Park Benjamin, Ph.D. In clear sentences Dr. Benjamin narrates the successive discoveries of the properties of electricity and magnetism, and of the methods by which they can be produced and by which magnetic energy can be transformed into electrical energy, and of the inventions by which these mighty forces have been made the obedient servants of man, making also a liberal and intelligent use of the engraver's skill to elucidate the processes and the machinery described in the text. He has had in mind the large body of intelligent persons who desire to understand these discoveries and inventions, and to have a fair knowledge of the nature of the tremendous and often fearful force which has been brought into subjection to the will of man. His endeavor has been made to make himself understood by such persons, and he has succeeded. It must not be inferred from this opinion, however, that the book in all its parts can be apprehended without thoughtful attention. It is not a novel. The dynamo and the electric light, electro motors, electrolysis and its chemical work—used in electrotyping, the telegraph, the telephone, the induction coil, and the use of electricity in medicine, war, railways, etc., are carefully described. The illustrations are numerous and helpful. It is especially important that the sixth and seventh chapters be mastered. Give time to them. Read them two or three times if necessary, until thoroughly understood. The author has not omitted to add an excellent index. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

....“SOCIAL PROBLEMS.” By M. J. Savage. The preface tells us that these essays were delivered as sermons, which otherwise we should not have known, for no Scripture is quoted in the volume save a few verses from Genesis, which are described as “the Jew's dream of the original condition of man.” The author has much to say about religion, but all it amounts to in his view is an ethical system, and his speculations are crude and worthless. On social questions he often writes sensibly though not profoundly, and his views of common school education are very good. He says that good as the system is, it sacrifices the true interest of the great majority for a partial benefit to the few. All the education the State has a right to give is simply what is required to fit children to be good citizens. Public money for public ends. (Geo. H. Ellis.)

....“THE INFLUENCE OF CLOTHING ON HEALTH.” By Frederick Treves, F.R.C.S., English Surgeon to and Lecturer on Anatomy at the London Hospital. With Illustrations. The publishers have done well in reproducing in this country this practical and valuable little book on sanitary clothing. The author treats of the materials, value, warmth and properties of clothes worn by both sexes, in the light of fashions, common sense, hygeine, climate and other conditions of life. Such books have a constant value in the household—for prevention and cure of many maladies and for the comfort, decency and elegance of personal and domestic apparel. (Cassell & Co.)

....“SILENT PETE.” By James Otis. The story of the two “stowaways” coming from New Orleans to New York has already been read by thousands of youthful readers as it has been told in Harper's Young People. It is here printed in book form and added to the “Young People's Series.” Few of its companion volumes equal it in its charming simplicity and pathetic power. There is a stratum of low life in New York in which the newsboys and their companions are found, which Mr. Otis seems able to describe without offence to morality and yet with the greatest truthfulness. The young musician and his rougher friend are characters which have their counterparts in our streets to call forth the sympathy and help of all Christian people. (Harper & Brothers.)

....Messrs. Harper & Brothers are publishing in a series of neatly-printed volumes some of the tales which have appeared from time to time in Harper's Young People. It is perhaps sufficient praise for these stories to say that they have found their way into this carefully edited journal. “INTO UNKNOWN SEAS; Or, the Cruise of Two Sailor Boys,” by David Ker, one of this series, is a narrative of adventure which carries the imagination to strange sights and places, and will doubtless be fascinating to the lads and the lasses too.

....“DORA.” By Alfred Tennyson. Illustrated. A beautiful edition of this very beautiful poem. The illustrations themselves tell the pathetic story of paternal severity, and of bitter relentings over the fruit it bears. They are some fifteen in number, skilfully drawn and engraved by W. L. Taylor, under the supervision of George T. Andrew. The print and pictures display perfectly on the superfine card leaves, all elegantly bound in gray cloth, with cover-design delicately traced in gilt and colors. Given to a friend, it will be valued as a precious souvenir. (Lee & Shepard.)

....“WORTHINGTON'S ANNUAL, 1887,” excels its predecessors, which is saying a great deal. The full-page pictures in alternate tints, by what is claimed to be a new process, for which a patent has been applied for, are very attractive and will be greatly enjoyed. They are numerous, beautiful, graceful, natural and spirited. The text includes verses, stories, short biographies, papers on natural history, and brief articles on a variety of topics. The moral and religious tone of the book is excellent. The tendency of the volume will be to make the young folks observant, thoughtful, good and happy. It is a very handsome gift book. (Worthington & Co.)

Our Library Table.

Periodicals, Serials and Notes.

....The most noteworthy feature of Harper's Magazine for November is George P. Lathrop's account of “The Literary Movement in New York,” showing conclusively how the “literary centre” has moved from Boston to this city. An interesting set of portraits are given. Other illustrated articles of value are “Our Coast-Guard,” by Lieut. Ross, and W. H. Gibson's charming “Plea for the Grassy Road.” Madame Adam gives an interesting glimpse of Parisian life and celebrities in “How I Formed My Salon.” “Halloween” is treated from all points of view, traditional, superstitious, romantic, and anecdotal. “The Tragic Story of Binns,” by Harriet Prescott Spofford, is capital. The solid work is put in by Joseph Nimmo, Jr., on “The American Cowboy;” A. H. D. Ackland, on “Coöperation Among English Workingmen;” Edwin de Leon, on “The Tragedy of the Mouffetich;” and Col. Higginson, in “Hints on Speech-making.” We commend the six points in the latter article as eminently sensible and practical. We are glad to see the “Easy Chair's” commendation of a tendency to revive the memory of old times in New York. What better service could Mr. Curtis himself do than to give us a volume of such reminiscences and researches? It would surely be one of the most delightful of books.

...The Atlantic for November contains a most varied assortment of excellent articles. Henry James finished his Nihilistic novel in the last number, and the serials of Mr. Bishop and Miss Murfrees bid fair to end in the next. There are two psychological stories, “The Peckster Professorship” and “The Blindman's World,” both of which are intensely interesting. Perhaps the leading article in the number is Percival Lowell's “A Korean Coup D'Etat,” giving the detailed history of the retreat of a little band of Japanese from Söul to the coast, after the progressionist party of Korea had failed to overthrow the pro-Chinese faction. It reads like pages of the Anabasis of Xenophon. We cannot mention all the good things of this number, but call special attention to the superior character of the paragraphs in the “Contributors' Club.”

... The Reformed Quarterly opens with a thoughful article by Dr. Apple on The Objective in Christianity. The Rev. Theo. Appel continues his trustworthy and instructive chapters on the Beginnings of the Theological Seminary. Prof. Stahr contributes an admirable paper on the Scope of Science, and Dr. Rupp a very bad one on the Limit of Probation, teaching a probation after death in certain cases. We are glad to see a caveat of the editors against being responsible for this utterance. The closing article by Dr. Weiser is a weak argument against Calvinistic foreordination, which the writer seems quite unable to understand.

....The New Englander for October has first a neat summary of the life and character of Joel Barlow, and last an interesting paper on the Thomist and Scotist view-point in relation to Satisfaction, a novel presentation of familiar truth.

....Christian Thought contains President Welch's anniversary address on the accord between Philosophy and Faith, and a very instructive paper on Schools in the Turkish Empire, by the Rev. Jas. F. Riggs. Pres. Bascom has an article on the Gains and Losses of Faith from Science, which is more forcible than the author is wont to give.

....The Baptist Quarterly hardly needs the apology made for it by the editors. It has a fresh and suggestive article on the Millennium, by the Rev. G. A. Cleveland, a discriminating criticism of Browning, by Prof. Gilmore, some lively Suggestions from the Dates of the New Testament Books, by Wayland Hoyt, and Dr. McArthur's views on the Services of the Church, in which he advocates responsive readings and the Salutation. The reviews of current literature are, as usual, careful and helpful. The Homiletic Department is weak. Fancy a sermon on the phrase “in Christ,” which makes it mean dwelling, (1.) in Christ's biography, (2.) in His angle of vision, (3.) in the current of His purposes! What a studied evasion of the Apostle's profound thought!

BOOKS RECEIVED.

Robert Carter & Bros: Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans. By Charles Hodge, D.D., LL.D. New Edition. 8vo, pp. 716. $3.

The Christian Literature Company, Buffalo, N.Y.: A Select Library of the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church. Edited by Philip Schaff, D.D. Volume 1. The Confessions and Letters of St. Augustin. With a Sketch of His Life and Work. Tall 8vo, pp. 619. $3.

E. B. Treat: Shots at Sundry Targets. By T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D. With Portrait. 8vo, pp. 656.

Charles Scribner's Sons: Messianic Prophecy, The Prediction of the Fulfilment of Redemption through the Messiah: A Critical Study of the Messianic Passages of the Old Testament in the Order of Their Development. By Prof. Charles Augustus Briggs, D.D. 8vo, pp. 519. $3.50; also,

Our Arctic Province: Alaska and the Seal Islands. By Henry W. Elliott. Illustrated by Many Drawings from Nature and Maps. 8vo, pp. 465. $4.50; also,

The Buchholz Family: Sketches of Berlin Life. By Julius Stinde. Translated, from the 49th German edition, by L. Dora Schmitz. 12mo, pp. 232. $1.25.

Macmillan & Co.: The Princess Casamassima. A Novel. By Henry James. 12mo, pp. 596. $1.75; also,

Sir Percival. A Story of the Past and of the Present. By J. H. Shorthouse. 12mo, pp, 300. $1; also,

A Modern Telemachus. By Charlotte M. Yonge. 12mo, pp. 254. $1.50.

A. C. Armstrong & Son: From Pole to Pole. A Tale of the Sea. By Gordon Stables. With Twelve Illustrations. 12mo, pp. 388. $1.50.

James R. Barnett & Co.: Americans in Rome; or, Paul Errington and His Struggles. A Novel. By Ray Aster. 8vo, pp. 308.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.: Applied Christianity: Moral Aspects of Social Questions. By Washington Gladden. 12mo, pp. 320. $1.25; also,

Beckonings for Every Day: A Calendar of Thought. Arranged by Lucy Larcom. 16mo. pp. 225. $1.25; also,

The Madonna of the Tube. By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps. With Forty-three Original Illustrations by Ross Turner and George H. Clements. 8vo, pp. 94. $1.50; also,

Ten Dollars Enough. Keeping House Well on Ten Dollars a Week; How It Has Been Done; How It May Be Done Again. By Catherine Owen. 12mo, pp. 279. $1.

D. Lothrop & Co.: Hester, and Other New England Stories. By Margaret Sidney. 12mo, pp, 287. $1.25.

UNBOUND BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

In Scorn of Consequence; or, My Brother's Keeper. A Novel. By Theodora Corrie. (Harper's Handy Series, No. 100.) 16mo, pp. 191. 25 cents.

Paston Carew, Millionaire and Miser. A Novel. By Mrs. E. Lynn Linton. (Harper's Franklin Square Library, No. 549.) 4to, pp. 77. 20 cents.

Early Australian Voyages. Pelsart. Tasman. Dampier. By John Pinkerton. (Cassell's National Library, Vol. 1, No. 40.) 18mo, pp. 192. 10 cents.

Christian Union and the Protestant Episcopal Church. By Joseph M. Clarke, D.D. 16mo, pp. 79. 25 cents.

Necrological Report Presented to the Alumni Association of Princeton Theological Seminary at its Annual Meeting, May 4th, 1886.

PERIODICALS.

October.—The Lutheran Church Review.

November.—The Domestic Monthly, The Forum, Magazine of American History, The Pulpit Treasury, Wide Awake, Outing, Brooklyn Magazine, Lippincott's Magazine, The Century, The English Illustrated Magazine.

Colgate & Co's CASHMERE BOUQUET PERFUME

For the Handkerchief

THIS EXQUISITE PERFUME CLINGS WITH REMARKABLE TENACITY TO ALL WOVEN FABRICS

Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s
NEW BOOKS.

The Madonna of the Tubs.

By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of "The Gates Ajar," "Beyond the Gates," etc. With forty-three full-page and smaller illustrations, including figure, landscape, and marine subjects, by Rose Turner and George H. Clements. 12mo, tastefully bound. $1.50.

A touching story, admirable pictures, and tasteful mechanical execution make this a very attractive, yet inexpensive, gift-book.

Applied Christianity.

By Washington Gladden, author of "The Lord's Prayer," etc. Uniform with "The Lord's Prayer." $1.25.

CONTENTS: Christianity and Wealth; Is Labor a Commodity? The Strength and Weakness of Socialism; Is It Peace or War? The Laborers and the Churches; Three Dangers; Christianity and Social Science; Christianity and Popular Amusement; Christianity and Popular Education.

This is a peculiarly timely and significant book. It discusses with great ability and singular candor some of the most important questions which agitate modern society and imperatively demand serious consideration.

The Lord's Prayer.

By Washington Gladden. New Edition. $1.00.

Beckonings for Every Day.

A Calendar of Thought. Arranged by Lucy Larcom, editor of "Breathings of the Better Life," etc. $1.00.

Miss Larcom has here gathered, from a very wide range of authors, passages of special value for help, suggestion, encouragement, and consolation.

Calendars for 1887.

Eight Calendars for 1887, selected from the Writings of

BROWNING,	LONGFELLOW,
EMERSON,	LOWELL,
HAWTHORNE,	MRS. WHITNEY,
HOLMES,	WHITTIER.

All except the Whitney Calendar have portraits and other artistic designs drawn from the author's residences, or from characters or incidents in their writings. Printed in colors. Price, 50 cents each.

 For sale by all booksellers. Sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price by the Publishers,

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston,
11 EAST 17TH ST., NEW YORK.

"Mrs. Farmer's style is crisp and entertaining, and she writes like a true hero-worshipper, giving her story a color of enthusiasm and romance it would not otherwise possess. Such a book for young people is worth a score of 'blood and thunder' fictions; it is a volume worthy a place in the library of every boy and girl."—WASHINGTON POST.

The Boys' Book of Famous Rulers.
BY LYDIA HOYT FARMER.

Lives of Agamemnon, Julius Cæsar, Charlemagne, Frederick the Great, Richard Cœur de Lion, Robert Bruce, Napoleon,

And other heroes of historic fame.

Fully Illustrated with Portraits and Numerous Engravings.

12mo, price $1.50.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & CO.,
13 ASTOR PLACE, NEW YORK.

HAVE YOU READ THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF
REV. CHARLES G. FINNEY?

If not, send for a copy. "Every student of divinity, every man and woman that would be a practical Christian, should read that book." Price $1.75. Published by

A. S. BARNES & CO., 111 William St., N.Y.

WHEATLET
A NEW BREAKFAST
FOOD.

Delicate, Delicious, Superior to Cracked Wheat, Wheat Grits, or Oat Meal. Cooks in 5 Minutes. Put up in cases of 30-2lb. pkgs., ½ bbls. and bbls. Ask your Grocer for it.

Absolutely the Best.

FRANKLIN MILLS CO., Lockport, N. Y., Mfrs.
J. W. BEARDSLEY'S SONS, 179 West St., N. Y., Mill Agents. Send for circulars and price list.

HODGE ON ROMANS.

Unabridged, 8vo, new edition.....$3.00

"We know of no more satisfactory commentary on Romans; none that so fairly and fully and clearly exhibits the outlines of its arguments; none that so justly apprehends its doctrines; none more rich in logical inference and practical application, than that of Dr. Hodge."—St. Louis Presbyterian.

Hodge on Romans. Abridged, 12mo..... 1.75
Hodge on Ephesians. 12mo.... 1.75
Hodge on Corinthians. 2 vols. 3.50
Hodge, Dr. A. A., Outlines of Theology. 8vo. New edition.. 3.00
The Crisis of Missions. By the Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D.D. 16mo 1.25
Henry's Commentary on the Bible. 3 vols., 4to, cloth.....10.00
Another edition in 5 vols., 4to, cloth..15.00
Still another edition, 9 vols., 8vo, cloth.20.00

Persons desiring to purchase this Commentary can have a circular sent them without charge, giving a specimen page from each of these editions, by sending us their address.

"King of Bible explorers yet."—Cuyler.
"First among the mighty, for general usefulness, we are bound to mention Matthew Henry."—Spurgeon.
"Sparkles with jewels of wisdom and incisive humor."—Rev. Dr. W. M. Taylor.

Ryle on the Gospels. 7 vols....10.50
Kitto's Bible Illustrations. 8 vols..... 7.00
Dr. Hanna's Life of Christ. 3 vols..... 3.00
Fraser's Synoptical Lectures on the Books of the Bible. 2 vols..... 4.50

ROBERT CARTER & BROS.,
530 Broadway, New York.

 Any of the above, except Henry's Commentary, sent by mail, postage prepaid, on receipt of the price.

ANTHEMS OF PRAISE.

All Choirs that need a new Anthem Book are invited to examine L. O. Emerson's newest collection, just published.

Anthems of Praise,

(Price $1 or $9 per dozen), is a book of Octavo form and good appearance, and contains Seventy-four Anthems on its 208 pages. Mr. Emerson's admirable selections, arrangements and compositions occupy about one-half the space, and a number of our best church music writers occupy the rest. Please examine.

Dow's Responses and Sentences,

(Price of the book, 80 cts., or $7.20 per doz.) serve very well for short opening pieces, and are most convenient things to have ready for singing as responses or short sentences, where such are needed.

Send for a Catalogue of Ditson & Co.'s Octavo Editions, which comprise Choruses, Part-Songs, Glees, Quartets, Selections from the Great Master Works (such as the Oratorios, etc.), Anthems, Te Deums, Glorias, Christmas Carols, other Sacred Pieces, and a variety of Miscellaneous Selections. These Octavo Publications range in price from Five to Twenty Cents each, and are universally popular.

Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston.
C. H. DITSON & Co., 867 Broadway, New York

"OUR BABY'S
First and Second Year."
By MARION HARLAND.

With other valuable information—48-page book—sent free, on receipt of two-cent stamp. Address,

REED & CARNRICK,
MERCANTILE EXCHANGE BUILDING, New York.

OUR New Catalogue of Books for family, Sunday-school, ministers, students, or teachers' Library will be sent free to any address on receipt of a postal request. Address PHILLIPS & HUNT, Publishers, 805 Broadway, New York.

SCRIBNER'S IMPORTANT NEW BOOKS.

The Messianic Prophecy.
The Prediction of the Fulfillment of Redemption Through the Messiah. By Charles Augustus Briggs, D.D., Professor in the Union Theological Seminary. 1 vol., 8vo., $2.50.

Dr. Briggs, who gives us in this book a critical study of the Messianic prophecies of the Old Testament in the order of their development, belongs to that influential group of religious scholars and thinkers who approach the Bible and all religious themes in a thoroughly progressive spirit. This book is the result of profound study and high scholarship, and is sure to attract universal attention among Biblical scholars.

The Beginnings of Christianity.
With a View of the State of the Roman World at the Birth of Christ. By Prof. George P. Fisher. Crown 8vo. New edition. $2.50.

This new edition of one of Prof. Fisher's most important books is issued in a uniform style and price with his "History of the Reformation" and "The Grounds of Theistic and Christian Belief." The New York Examiner says: "The volume is not a dry repetition of well-known facts. It bears the mark of original research. Every page glows with freshness of material and choiceness of diction."

Our Arctic Province, Alaska, and the Seal Islands.
By Henry W. Elliott. Illustrated by drawings from nature, by the author, and maps. 1 vol., 8vo., $4.50.

During the past few years everything relating to Alaska has been regarded with increased interest, and Mr. Elliott's book comes at the time it is most needed. The author spent six or seven years in studying the country and its people, traveling from the most southerly point of the province to the most northerly, along the coast, and among the islands extending nearly 3,000 miles to the west. His treatment of the seal interests is particularly full, and just now of especial moment.

The Huguenots and Henry of Navarre.
By Prof. Henry M. Baird, Author of the "History of the Rise of the Huguenots of France." 2 vols., 8vo, with maps, $5.

George Bancroft says: "The subject of the volume is of the utmost importance, and it is treated by the author with research and care, worthy of his high reputation."

A History of Greek Literature:
FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE DEATH OF DEMOSTHENES. By Frank Byron Jevons, M.A., Tutor in the University of Durham. 1 vol., crown 8vo, $2.50.

"Beyond all question the best history of Greek literature that has hitherto been published."—[London Spectator.

The Buchholz Family:
Sketches of Berlin Life. By Julius Stinde. Translated from the Forty-ninth Edition of the German by L. Dora Schmitz. Crown 8vo, $1.25.

A book which has attracted extraordinary and well-merited attention first in Germany, where the faithfulness of its pictures of social life was keenly appreciated, and then in England. This admirable edition will introduce a most charming book to American readers.

"Our author has singled out one tiny group for study of an almost scientific accuracy and thoroughness, and has then fused his observations into such a living picture as only a true artist can create.'—[Blackwood's Magazine.

The Age of Electricity.
From Amber-Soul to Telephone. By Park Benjamin, Ph.D. Illustrated. 1 vol., 12mo, $2.

THE BOOK BUYER for November contains a new full-page portrait of Dr. Timothy Dwight, the new President of Yale College; some practical suggestions for book plates, illustrated; reviews of new books, illustrated; an entertaining London letter; literary news and notes, etc. 48 pages. It will be sent free as a sample to any one mentioning this paper. $1.00. a year.

CHAS. SCRIBNER'S SONS, Publishers,
743-745 Broadway, New York.

New Books.

Along River and Road in Fuh-Kien.
Edwin J. Dukes. Graphic sketches of travel in that strange and wonderful country whose destiny is becoming so linked in with our own. 12mo. 352 pp. With map and 20 illustrations. $1.25.

Scenes in Southern India.
Mrs. Murray Mitchell. Notes of a tour through a region little known in America, picturing the people and their singular life and the changes wrought by many years of missionary labor. 12mo. 372 pp. With map and 19 illustrations. $1.50.

Jottings from the Pacific.
W. Wyatt Gill, B.A. Views of the South Sea Islands, their novel scenery and products, and the happy contrast between heathen and Christian life. 12mo. 304 pp. With 15 illustrations. $1.10.

Her Christmas and Her Easter.
A story of life in a New England seaport. Full of incident, and helpful to our young people who are in earnest. 12mo. 187 pp. 4 cuts. 90 cents.

Foxwood Boys at School.
A delightful story for boys and the friends of boys. As interesting as a novel, but true to life and wholesome. 12mo. 267 pp. 4 cuts. $1.

"Concerning them which are asleep."
By the late Dr. J. O. Means, of Boston. A most beautiful and comforting book for those who mourn. Square 24mo. 24 pp. In envelope, 25 cts.

Passion Flowers.
Rev. C. S. Hageman, D.D. A beautiful devotional manual, with designs in color, a text and a poetical extract on each page illustrating our Lord's atoning work. 24mo. 64 pp. Cloth gilt, 50 cts.

Voices.
Contains 64 pages (32 in colors), every alternate page being with poetical allusion to the preceding text. Size, 3¾ by 5½ ins. Ribbon-tied. 30 cts.

Choices.
Contains 64 pages (32 in colors), every alternate page being with poetical allusion to the preceding text. Size, 3¾ by 5½ ins. Ribbon-tied. 30 cts.

American Tract Society,
150 Nassau Street, New York; 54 Bromfield St., Boston; 1512 Chestnut St., Philadelphia; 93 State St., Rochester; 153 Wabash Av., Chicago.

X-MAS MUSIC
FOR 1886.

Christmas Selections,
Containing new and beautiful carols, preceded by an interesting and instructive Responsive Service. 16 Pages. Printed in colors. Price 5 cts. each, or 50 cts. a dozen by mail postpaid; $4 a hundred by express not prepaid.

Peace on Earth.
A Christmas Service by J. E. HALL, Consisting of Responsive Readings and Recitations, throughout, which are interspersed new and appropriate songs prepared especially for this Service. Price same as for "Christmas Selections."

The WAIFS' CHRISTMAS
A NEW CHRISTMAS CANTATA By
CLARA LOUISE BURNHAM and GEO. F. ROOT,

Illustrating the true spirit in which Christmas should be observed—that is the spirit of kindliness and good will to all. Price 50 cts. each by mail postpaid; $3 a dozen by express not prepaid.

Send for our complete list of Christmas Music.

PUBLISHED BY
THE JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
And 19 East 16th Street, New York City.
For Sale by all Music and Book Dealers.

Lesson Helps and Illustrated Papers
OF THE
Presbyterian Board of Publication
FOR 1887.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Westminster Question Book
REDUCED
From $15 to $12 per 100, net.
Sent by mail for 15 cents per copy.

WESTMINSTER QUESTION BOOK, at $12.00 per 100 copies.
WESTMINSTER TEACHER, to schools, at 50 cts. per copy for a year.
WESTMINSTER QUARTERLY, for advanced scholars, at $12.00 per 100 for a year.
WESTMINSTER PRIMARY QUARTERLY, by Mrs. G. R. Alden ("Pansy"), to schools at $8.00 per 100 for a year.
WESTMINSTER LESSON LEAF, WESTMINSTER PRIMARY LESSONS, WESTMINSTER GERMAN LEAF, to schools at $5.00 per 100 copies for a year.

ILLUSTRATED PAPERS.

FORWARD,
formerly issued as a monthly of 16 pages, is now published as an illustrated Semi-monthly paper of 12 pages. School subscriptions, to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year.....$15 00
Twice " " " 30 00

THE SABBATH-SCHOOL VISITOR,
School subscriptions to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year.....$10 00
Twice " " " 20 00

THE MORNING STAR,
School subscriptions, to one address,
Once a month, 100 copies, per year .....$ 5 00
Twice " " " 10 00

THE SUNBEAM,
School subscriptions, to one address, 100 copies, per year, $20.00.

Samples of Periodicals sent free on application.

Orders and money should be addressed to

JOHN A. BLACK, Publisher of Periodicals,
1334 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.,

Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St, New York, N. Y.

New Music for Xmas.

Christmas Service No. 9. The Promised One.
A superior and entirely new service of Scripture and Song by Rev. Robert Lowry. The Selections are admirable, and the Songs have all been written for the present season. 16 pp.
Price, $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.

Christmas Annual No. 17.
—Contains beautiful Carols by favorite authors. An abundant supply of Songs for any Christmas Festival.
Price, $3 per 100; 4c. each by Mail.

"Santa Claus' Home."
"Our New Christmas Cantata. By Dr. W. H. Doane. It is first-class in every particular. Splendid effects; easily rendered.
Sent on receipt of 25 cents.

☞ A full Catalogue sent on request.

BIGLOW & MAIN, 76 East Ninth St., N. Y.
Chicago House, 81 Randolph St.

The Home.

AUNT MARJORIE'S CORNER

How Much Have You Gained?

MINGLED with the words of welcome after our summer separation, we have all asked and answered this query—How much have you gained?

We have been away from home for rest and change, expecting to be benefited, and are pleased when we can say, I've gained three, four, or five pounds, as the case may be. Sometimes, though, there is the opposite to state, not having gained at all, and one naturally thinks the place didn't agree with us, or we didn't have a good time; something must have been wrong.

This idea of gaining seems uppermost in our minds during vacation. You hear it on all sides, "I must live out-of-doors these two weeks and gain all I can." "A month ago I could row only a mile, to-day I rowed five; I must be stronger." "I can walk ever so much farther than when I first came," remarks another. Their tones emphasizing their satisfaction at what they had accomplished.

A certain merry six who were intent on making the most of their holiday, went to the mill twice and often three times a day to be weighed, and laughingly compared notes, delighting in each additional half pound.

It is a fact that at a celebrated health resort they have a weighing evening once a week, and the invalids rejoice or commiserate with one another as the circumstances require.

Over a sentence in a letter received this summer I've thought many times. "You don't say whether you've gained or not, but I shall tell it by your face." The writer meant it only physically, but there lies a deeper meaning with its lesson. Let us pause and ask ourselves honestly, "What have I gained this summer?"

From our good times what have we kept that will help us? Are we the better for those new acquaintances whose lives crossed ours one day? All the beautiful pleasuring times of rides, excursions, rambles, books read, letters received and answered, twilight strolls and quiet talks, have we made them helps—stepping-stones—to higher things?

God has given us all these to enjoy, and has meant we should gain the best out of them all. Just as exercise, sunshine and fresh air have conduced to bodily improvement, so God has intended our happy hours to have developed, strengthened and stimulated our lives and characters.

Did we exert our influence and try in every way and with all our might to gain that which should help us and enlarge our Christian lives? Were we as anxious that our heart-life should grow as that our weight should increase?

If we have come home not one whit the gainer, then we have lost not only time but a vast deal more.

Our faces are expressive, and they and our lives are answering this question of "How much."

The command is, "add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly love, charity."

Dear readers of "Aunt Marjorie's Corner," what have we gained, and how can we use it to further God's work in our respective places?

PROFIT AND LOSS.

Autumn Colors.

THE russet has more variety than any other single color of our autumn. Russet of maple is one thing, of oak another, of elm still another. Russet of cherry is of one shade, and different from russet of apple. Russet of linden is rarely unmixed; it is mottled. Russets of pines vary among themselves—the tamarix, the pine, the hemlock. Then there comes a day when all the landscape is russet-clothed, but in infinite relief of shades. There is the brown of corn in the stack, brown of buckwheat, brown of decaying stubble, brown of fresh-turned autumnal ploughing, and changing under the passing harrow as plush changes under a pass of the hand, till the field is regularly and prettily belted. There is one shade of brown on the forest to the east, another under the western sky. There is brown in the near view which is entirely different from the brown in the distant.

The present autumn has this peculiarity: it is the day of older trees. Saplings are for once left far behind in the race for beauty, by the gnarled old fellows which were saplings when this Republic was born, if not before that. Now an old tree can do one thing that a young one never can. It can change to that unspeakable yellow which is like nothing else in all pigments. An aged maple will gather up during the summer the yellow of the morning and evening twilights, will store itself with what is vaguely called the "golden" ray, and then suddenly bursts forth in late October with all these twilights on its head. Standing underneath the boughs on a cloudy day, even, and with the incipient chill as of November in the air, you yet look up and have the sense of August warmth.

Old trees are capable of maroon, and that, too, which is very pertinacious. Younger growths may assume this warm color for a day or two, but they seem incapable of holding it, and soon lapse into rust and blotch. The mixed brown and red which we name maroon, is wonderfully striking on a hillside in the brilliant light of noon during early November. As the sun declines you lose the proper angle for the delicate sheen. On taking an individual oak leaf in my hand, its red brown polish was so pronounced that I have been unable to explain why the whole forest did not fairly flash. Doubtless the infinite variation of visual angles prevents; whereas grasses and grain, each spear bending the same arc to you as they bow before the wind, will flash almost prismatic at times. I know of no color on the American forest, except maroon, that glistens. The green, to be sure, flashes after rains, but that is a different thing from the burnished aspect to which I am calling attention.—Emily Haynes, in N. Y. Evening Post.

Home Courtesies.

"I AM one of those whose lot in life has been to go out into an unfriendly world at an early age; and of nearly twenty families in which I made my home in the course of about nine years, there were only three that could be designated as happy families; and the cause of trouble was not so much the lack of love as the lack of care to manifest it." The closing words of this sentence give the fruitful source of family alienations, of heartaches innumerable, of sad faces and gloomy home circles. "Not so much the lack of love as the lack of care to manifest it." Not more than three happy families in twenty! and the cause so easily remedied! In the "small courtesies of life" what power resides! In a look, a word, a tone, how much of happiness or disquietude may be communicated! Let us all think of it, and take the lesson home to our own lives.

Let the Boys Help.

WHY is it that the boys are allowed to sit around a house doing nothing, while their overworked mother is struggling against nature and fate to do about half the work?

Only the other day we saw three large, able-bodied boys lounging about the house, not knowing what to do with themselves, while their mother, tired and pale, was trying to do the work for a large family and company alone. Not a boy's work to help about the house? Why not? Is there anything about washing dishes that will injure him or which he cannot learn to do well, or about making beds, or sweeping, or setting the table, or washing or ironing, or cooking a plain meal of victuals? On the contrary, there is much to benefit him in such work, the most important of which is the idea that it isn't manly to let the "weaker vessel" carry all the burdens, when it is possible for strong young hands to help. Most boys would gladly help in the house if they were asked to do so, and were taught how to do the work properly. Many a smart boy wants to help his tired mother, but doesn't know how beyond bringing in the wood and the water, and shoveling a path through the snow. This done, she tells him to go and play while she plods wearily on. Not a boy's work? For shame! It is a positive harm to a boy's moral character to allow him to think it right to be idle while his mother is staggering under her burdens. Let the boys help, and those who can't get help "for love or money," as they often write to us, will see their troubles disappear.—Phila. Methodist.

Economical Breakfast Dishes.

NO. 1. An economical breakfast dish is made by saving all the little bits left from steak and veal, chopping them as fine as possible, and adding one or two slices of chopped fat pork, or bacon, which must be thoroughly cooked first, as a precaution against trichinæ. Season with pepper, salt, savory, and thyme, and fry without adding any butter or fat till it is quite dry and brown.

No. 2. Chop mutton, veal or beef as fine as for hash; fry for a few moments in salt-pork drippings. Take from the fire, and, in the same frying-pan, make a rich cream gravy, if cream is a possibility; if it is not, use milk, thickening it with corn-starch, and adding a generous lump of butter. Pour half of the gravy into a pan over the fire, thin it with hot water, dip in it slices of well-browned toast; lay the moistened toast upon a flat dish and set it in a warm place. Into the thick cream gravy (or its imitation) put the minced meat; cook it five minutes, then spread it upon the toast.

No. 3. DANISH MEAT CAKES.—Mince raw, lean beef as fine as possible. Unless it is almost impalpably fine, the dish will not be a success, and, where a kitchen is not provided with a sausage cutter, it is best to have it chopped at a pork shop. When it is fine enough, pound it with a potato-masher, season with salt and pepper, and to two pounds of beef add two well-beaten eggs and one cup of cracker-dust, or sifted bread crumbs; moisten with soup-stock, or water, if no stock is at hand; mould with the hands into cakes an inch thick and fry in very little butter. In spite of the mode of cooking, these cakes are relished, and eaten with impunity by dyspeptics. If properly made, they are very nice indeed.

No. 4. If you have some cold mashed potato, steam it, or warm in the oven in a covered pan, and, when it is hot, whip it up with a well-beaten egg. Put some hot, well-seasoned minced meat into a flat, oval dish, heap it up into a mound and surround it with a slim wall of the mashed potato. Make the potato smooth with a spoon; wash it over with a quill, or a broad bladed knife dipped in beaten egg; take a very hot stove-lid (unless you have a glazing iron) and hold it over the potato till the egg-coating turns a beautiful golden brown.

No. 5. HASHED MUTTON.—Cut up the lean meat from cold leg, or joint, into uniform-sized pieces, and remove every particle of skin or fat. The parts too poor to use for hash may go into the soup-kettle. Melt in a stew-pan one ounce of butter; add a dessert-spoonful of flour, a pinch each of salt and pepper, and half a teaspoonful of finely-chopped onion. Stir together for three minutes. Then add two cups of soup-stock, a few drops of Worcestershire sauce, and a teaspoonful of tomato catsup. Stir all together till boiling, then set away to cool before adding to the meat; if this is neglected, the latter will be hard. When cold, add the mutton, put the stew-pan on the fire again and let the contents heat, but not boil. Mutton hash carefully made in this way is a very different dish from the stuff commonly known as such.

No. 6. BREAKFAST LAMB.—Boil a breast of lamb slowly until it is quite tender, and boil the water down after the meat is taken out, till there is but little of it left. When the lamb is cold, cut it into oyster-sized pieces, and dip each piece into melted butter or olive oil, then into a mixture of vinegar, mustard, salt and peper. Let them stand all night, then, in the morning, dip each piece into beaten egg, then into bread crumbs, then into egg again, and fry in hot fat like doughnuts. Serve with a gravy made of the boiled-down soup thickened with flour and seasoned with celery or parsley.—Good Cheer.

CHILDREN'S PORTFOLIO.

The Lion.

"The lion is come up from his thicket."—JEREMIAH 4:7.

ROSA BONHEUR has painted a picture called "Lions at Home." An engraving of it is hanging in our hall. The lion and the lioness, with their three cubs, form a very happy and contented family circle. They are all quietly resting, securely hidden in their dwelling place by a cactus thicket.

In the days of the prophets there were many lions in the land of Palestine. When the prophet Nahum asked his question, "Where is the dwelling of the lions and the feeding-place of the young lions, where the lion, the old lion (or the lioness) walked, and the lion's whelp, and none made them afraid?" any boy or girl would have answered, "Deep in the forests are their dens, and there they roam and seek their prey."

Ask the question in Palestine to-day, "Do you know where?" and you may hear an echo from the rocks and hills replying, "Nowhere!" The vast forests have been cut down, and all the lions have been driven away. The people, therefore, have no cause to fear that the lion will come up out of the forest from his thicket and slay them, as he slew some of those who lived when Jeremiah wrote these words, for he has truly forsaken his covert (or hiding-place) to return to it no more.

The lion fears man, and man fears the lion. They are always uneasy when in each other's society; indeed, they do not even like to look each other in the face. Now and then we hear of a pet lion, but something generally happens, if it is kept long enough, to prove it to be a dangerous companion. I read of one belonging to a gentleman which came to his side one day and licked his hand with its rough tongue till it drew blood. Then its whole manner changed at once, and the gentleman saved his life by discharging with his other hand a loaded pistol which was fortunately close by him. Lions are afraid of fire, you know, so the flash and report of a gun or pistol will greatly terrify them, and, of course, the bullet will wound or kill. So whenever a man is in danger of meeting a lion it is well for him to be well provided with firearms.

The lion would always prefer to hide in some secret place, and then pounce unexpectedly upon a man instead of meeting him face to face. That great and good missionary, Dr. Livingstone, tells us how he felt when attacked by a lion in Africa: "I saw the lion just in the act of springing on me. I was upon a little height; he caught my shoulder as he sprang, and we both came to the ground below together. Growling horribly close to my ear, he shook me as a terrier-dog does a rat. The shock produced a stupor similar to that which seems to be felt by a mouse after the first shake of the cat. It caused a sort of dreaminess, in which there was no sense of pain or feeling of terror, though I was quite conscious of all that was happening. This peculiar state is probably produced in all animals killed by the carnivora (flesh-eating beasts), and, if so, is a merciful provision by our benevolent Creator for lessening the pain of death." I am glad to know this, not only for the sake of the beasts of the forest, and the sheep of the flock, but for the sake of the women who go to wells outside of villages for water, and little children who stray away from their homes, and are sometimes met by a man-eating, a woman-eating, a child-eating lion; perhaps an old lion perishing for want of prey—hungry lions generally attack people.

Have you ever heard a lion roar? I heard one the other afternoon in Central Park. I wondered, when I first heard him, where that terrible sound came from, and I walked to and fro in the Zoological Garden until I found out. Then I went up to the iron-barred cage, where the captured king of the forest was sending forth his voice in tones which rolled along like thunder. Perhaps he was crying out:

"O for a lodge in some vast wilderness"

Perhaps he was hungry, and expressing his belief that

"Hunger is the best seasoning for meat."

Perhaps he was angry because we were looking at him, but if so, he had no need to say to us:

"Come not within the measure of my wrath!"

Whatever was the matter, he did indeed roar!

The prophet Amos asks: "Will a lion roar in the forest when he hath no prey? Will a young lion cry out of his den if he have taken nothing?" There are several words in Hebrew to describe the lion's roar. The word here used is expressive of the roar I heard,—that of a full-grown lion seeking prey. Another word is used to express his sudden exclamation of delight as he springs upon his prey; another word, his angry growl when he fears it may escape, and another still, the cry or yell of very young lions just past being cubs. You will find many verses in the books of the Old Testament in which these different roars are mentioned. They are generally heard at night. The psalmist says:

"Thou makest dark—tis night—
'Mid settling shadows brown,
Wild beasts with eyeballs flashing light
The forest trample down.

"Young lions roar for prey,
And food from Thee require;
But when the sun arises, they
Back to their dens retire."

I do not know what hour of the day it was when that young lion roared against Samson—as he went with his father and mother to Timnath. You remember that God gave Samson strength to rend him, as he would have rent a kid. After a time Samson passed that way again, and found a swarm of bees and honey in the carcass of the lion, so he put forth a riddle: "Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness." No one could guess its meaning, so Samson told it: "What is sweeter than honey? and what is stronger than a lion?" King Solomon says, in the Book of Proverbs, "that the lion is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any." He has several names in Hebrew; one signifies, The Strong One, and his strength is indeed terrible; yet David, the shepherd boy of Bethlehem, told this beautiful story about himself to King Saul: "Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there came a lion and a bear and took a lamb out of the flock. Thy servant slew both the lion and the bear." Then David added: "The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear, he will deliver me out of the hand of this Philistine," and taking his sling and five smooth stones from the brook, this young David went forth to meet and to slay the mighty giant, Goliath, in the name of the Lord of Hosts. Of course, Goliath was vanquished. He may have been one of those men of whom the Bible speaks, with faces like the faces of lions, and hearts like the hearts of lions, and teeth like the teeth of lions, but the shepherd boy destroyed him more easily, I believe, than Benaiah, that mighty man of valor, destroyed those two lion-like men of Moab, and that lion which he found in the midst of a pit on a snowy day.

St. Paul, the Apostle, wrote long after: "The Lord delivered me out of the mouth of the lion." I wonder when, and where, and how, and whether the Apostle meant a live lion like one of those in the den where Daniel received no hurt; God having sent His angel there to shut those lions' mouths. It may have been a wild beast with which Paul had fought to save his life; but I am more inclined to think he was referring to the cruel Emperor Nero. We read in Proverbs: "As a roaring lion and as a raging bear, so is a wicked ruler among the people," and that emperor was indeed like a ravening and a roaring lion.

In the Bible the enemies of God's people are often compared to lions. When David prayed: "Save me from the lion's mouth!" he had an enemy which he feared more than he feared the lion which took the lamb from his father's flock. "Save me," he prayed, "lest he tear my soul like a lion, rending it in pieces, while there is none to deliver." Indeed, he seems to have had many enemies. As I read his words about them, and remember how our Lord Jesus Christ, who was called the son of David, was afflicted by the wicked, it seems as if David is referring also to the lions which would seek to destroy our dear Redeemer—the Lamb of God: "Rescue my soul from their destructions, my darling, (my only one,) from the lions." "They gaped upon me with their mouths (opened their mouths against me), as a ravening and a roaring lion." "Like as a lion that is greedy of his prey, and as it were a young lion lurking in secret places."

If you and I should hear a cry some day: "There is a lion in the streets!" how frightened we would be; especially if we, or our friends, or the people whom we saw, were in danger of being slain. How we would hasten to seek protection, and beg them to do the same! It might be a strong lion, a stout lion, a great lion, a fierce lion, a bold lion, a roaring lion, a ravening lion; but, after all, boys and girls, neither you nor I nor they would have nearly so much reason to fear it as that dreadful, destroying, devouring lion concerning which Peter the Apostle says: "Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour, whom resist, steadfast in the faith." Steadfast in that faith which subdued lions—is trusting in God for deliverance. Let us pray to our Father in Heaven, as Jesus has taught us, to deliver us from this evil one, and to preserve us unto His heavenly kingdom. "No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast—but the redeemed shall walk there."

E. S. C.

Alice's Potatoes.

"MAY not I, too, do something for the poor families?"

The question was put by little Alice, who had been listening to the appeal of the Bible distributer for money to give Bibles to the destitute.

"Oh, yes," answered papa, with a playful twinkle in his eye, "I will give my little teaser all the money she will earn by digging potatoes at a cent a hill."

The next morning Dr. Day, Alice's father, was engaged in preparing medicines for his patients in the office, and had quite forgotten his promise of the day before. Not so Alice, who, as soon as breakfast was over, stole into the garden, and with her trowel in hand began to dig potatoes in good earnest. She came in at dinner-time, her cheeks all aglow with healthy exercise.

"What makes my little pet look so happy, I wonder?" asked papa.

"Because," said Alice, "I have earned forty cents for the Bible-man to-day. Those potatoes, you know," she added, seeing her father's perplexed face.

"What, you haven't been in that hot garden all the morning!" cried the doctor.

"Indeed I have, papa, and now I want the forty cents to run over and pay the Bible-man."

"When, half an hour later, Alice returned, her father took her into his lap, and said:

"I am glad, Allie, that you have so soon learned the lesson that 'it is more blessed to give than to receive.' We are always happy when we are working hard for others, and happiest of all when we are working for Jesus too."—Child's Paper.

Children's Sayings.

A CERTAIN little girl is very quick with an answer. She has a roguish uncle, who loves dearly to tease her. One night, he suddenly blew out a lamp.

"Why, where did the light go?" he asked, opening his eyes wide at Edna.

"It goed out, be course," answered the little one, promptly.

One afternoon Julie went to the pond with Aunt Belle, to find some cat's-tails. They were not very plenty, and Aunt Belle began to despair; but pretty soon Julie's bright eyes discovered a bunch of very small ones. She gave a little cry of delight.

"O auntie, I've found some!" she cried. "Some kitten's tails, auntie!"

"I'm 'fraid of the dark!" said Baby, snuggling up to mamma one night.

"Why?' asked mamma.

"'Cause it comes so close to me."—Youth's Companion.

WHALES do not spout water. They spout vapor or breath. When a whale spouts, his "spout hole," as whalers call it, is always above water. The enormous volume of the whale's breath, expelled suddenly into the different temperature of the air, causes the white, bush-like vapor to remain suspended for a moment—like the steam from a locomotive. The only time a whale spouts liquid, is when he has been mortally pierced by a lance, and then he spouts warm blood. The sound of a whale's spouting is like the roar of a locomotive blowing off steam.

GRACE had very curly hair and it was a great trial to her to have it combed. One day during this process she was crying and making a greater disturbance than usual, when her mother said: "What will the neighbors say when they hear you making such a noise?" Pausing amid her weepings, she said in broken tones: "They'll say, 'Why don't that woman spank that child?'"

Little Heads Together.

No. 1.

ENIGMA.

I am composed of 25 letters.
My 8, 15, 19, 17, 3, is a set of steps.
My 23, 5, 11, 6, 20, 24, is to make an onset.
My 22, 10, 14, 16, is a number
My 18, 7, 12, 22, 21, 9, is the name of a bird.
My 4, 2, 11, 13, 25, is an article of furniture.
My 20, 16, 1, is to acquire.
My 5, 11, 17, 9, is to stop.
My whole should be found in every household.

No. 2.

SQUARE WORD.

1. To supply a defect. 2 A lord's estate in lands. 3. To invest. 4. Names of things. 5. Clothing. V.

No. 3.

BEHEADINGS.

1. I am a circular frame turning on an axis.
Behead me and I am a part of the foot.
Behead me again and I am a fish resembling a snake.
2. I am a home for animals.
Behead me and I am a piece of household furniture.
Behead me again and I mean capable of doing.
3. I am a certain kind of coat.
Behead me and I am an insect.
Behead me again and I am a river in England.
Behead me again and I am to employ.

NELLIE LEFFERTS.

Answers to Puzzles of October 13th.

No. 1.—Walk as children of light.

No. 2.—

1.	2.
H	N
D A Y	C A P
H A V E N	N A T A L
Y E T	P A R
N	E

No. 3.—The letter A.

Correct answers from J. M. D., Currytown, N. Y., Lewis D and Jennie Labagh.

PRIZES.

Two new books are offered as prizes for the months of November and December. One will be given for the best original puzzle, the other for the best list of answers to puzzles published in these two months. Address COUSIN LOIS, office of THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER.

Sonnet to the Goddess of Liberty.

BY THE REV. EDWARD J. RUNK, A.M.

FRATERNAL concord of republics strong
United in poetic flame of thought.
And deathless diadem rejoicing sought
To crown their friendship through the ages long.
On granite base secure they wisely placed
A massive goddess with a hand of flame
Outstretched to greet the world in Freedom's name,
On isle that ceaseless sea and city faced.
With martial throngs and booming cannon's roar,
Paeans and winged words from silver lips,
The great men of the nations trod the shore,
Where Liberty salutes the swift-sped ships
In Gallia's name enlighting evermore
Who seeks Columbia, freed from tyrants' ships.

Mr. Bartholdi's Goddess.

AT the conclusion of the Franco-Prussian war, M. Bartholdi, a French artist, visited this country to report upon a suitable gift from France to the American Republic. The result was the conception of a colossal Goddess of Liberty, draped in classic robes, with right arm outstretched bearing aloft a brilliant torch, and left arm clasping a tablet inscribed with the memorable date, July IV., 1776, while from the crowned head, with seven projecting horn-rays, lights should flash as jewels of a deathless diadem.

In 1874 an appeal was made to the French people for funds to execute the elaborate design; in 1877 Congress authorized the acceptance and inauguration of the statue; July 4th, 1884, the completed work was formally presented to the American Minister in Paris, and was transported eleven months later to New York, where it arrived June 17th, 1885. Meanwhile, the Americans were not idle, but through committees, private subscription, and journalistic enterprise, notably that of the New York World, raised funds to erect a suitable pedestal upon the island of Mr. Bedlow, which had been selected by General Sherman in accordance with M. Bartholdi's preference.

General Charles P. Stone and Mr. David H. King, Jr., built the pedestal, eighty-nine feet high from the ground and one hundred and forty-nine feet above high water. The base is sixty-two feet square, the top forty-three and one-half. Then they put up the copper Goddess, with her iron spinal column.

Thus the brazen image was set upon the island of Mr. Bedlow, and it was determined that on Thursday, October 28th, 1886, there should be the sound of sackbut and psaltery, of cannon and steam-whistles, and that a vast multitude, from the President in the White House unto the gamin from the gutter, should be gathered together to glorify the Goddess of Liberty.

Twenty thousand men assembled along Fifth avenue above the Worth monument, and poured their numbers in stately review past the President, the Governor of the State and the French guests, who surveyed the scene from a stand at the monument. There were United States troops and marines, New York national guardsmen, Grand Army of the Republic men, firemen, society men, collegians and others—a mighty host. It was a cloudy, drizzling day, but the procession proceeded down Broadway and under the World's arch until the head arrived at the Battery. Then the President and all others in authority, together with many others not in authority, including the beloved children of France, took shipping, and moved across the North River to the island of Mr. Bedlow. A stately marine procession of two hundred vessels had circulated upon the river around the naval guard anchored at the island, and many craft gathered there, with crowding hulls and shrieking whistles. The North Atlantic squadron and the battery on the island welcomed the President as he arrived with a thundering salute, and when the illustrious company had gathered on the rostra at the feet of the brazen Goddess, the exercises began; but not until General Schofield had long implored silence of the vociferous tug boats and steamers.

The Rev. Dr. Storrs read a very elegant prayer in English; then Count Ferdinand de Lesseps spoke energetically in French in behalf of the Franco-American Union, which had built the Goddess. Our grand old Roman Senator Evarts presented the statue to the President in sentences of sweet English, long drawn out. And then and there a string was pulled, the French tri-color veil vanished from the thirteen feet high countenance of the Goddess, and she began officially to illumine the world with the light of her face.

Then arose a mighty shout. The people, illustrious and non-illustrious, the tug-boats and the ferry-boats, the yachts and the river-boats, the battery ashore and the broadsides on the men-of-war conspired to make a joyful noise, which culminated in a musical outburst from the accomplished Gilmore with dulcimer, sackbut, psaltery and all kinds of music.

Then stood forth our noble President to accept the colossal maid in behalf of the nation, which he did with most appropriate sentiments and diction, set forth with clear tones and engaging gestures. M. Lefaivre, the French Minister Plenipotentiary, followed with a short address, and, after more Gilmorean music, the orator of the day, the Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, made the commemorative address, which fired all hearts and elicited vast applause from land and sea.

We sang "Old Hundred," and received Bishop Potter's blessing, and another blessing from the batteries as the President left the island—a national salute. The yards of the men-of-war were manned; the pink flashes from the roaring guns illumined the clouds of smoke and the deepening dusk, and one by one the vessels slipped away.

But the statue was not illuminated, the fireworks were postponed until Monday, November 1st, and the programme passed on to a dinner to the French guests at Delmonico's and a reception at the Chamber of Commerce on Friday, when, with many others we shook hands with the veteran Count de Lesseps and wished him every success.

Thus the Goddess of Liberty has been set up, standing one hundred and fifty-one feet above her granite and concrete three hundred thousand dollar foot-stool, and three hundred above the mighty main, weighing four hundred thousand pounds, and costing herself forty thousand and, with all the trouble she caused, two hundred thousand dollars. Long may this five hundred thousand dollar Goddess stand and blaze as a brazen and luminous invitation to the world to rise, come, and shine in Liberty. Long may the Goddess stand, with arm untired and torch unquenched to bind France as Europe and the United States as America in generous alliance for the good of humanity in the cause of freedom, a perpetual encouragement of light, irreducible to ashes.

Yet from the image we soar to the reality, from the historic and political to the eternal and spiritual; and we see one as the Son of Man, of no overpowering colossal size, nor of matter destructible, who says and shines as truth: "I am the Light of the world," "Every one that committeth sin is the bond-servant of sin." "If, therefore, the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." This is the God of Liberty, who enlightens the world.

E. J. RUNK.

Financial.

TUESDAY, Nov. 2d.

THE bank statement for the week showed loans decreased $153,200, specie increased $851,800, legal tenders decreased $200,900, deposits increased $494,000, and $929,100 added to the surplus of reserve, making $6,398,675. For money on call the rate is 5 to 6 per cent. The import of specie for the week amounted to $3,025,255. National bank currency was reduced in October $1,978,332. The silver dollar is worth 77 1-2 cents as bullion. For interest and dividends on securities about 20 millions of dollars were due yesterday. The national debt was reduced about 13 millions in October. Another call for $10,000,000 3 per cents, to mature Dec. 1st, has been made. The $1 silver certificates have been called in, because the paper proved unserviceable....The imports of merchandise at this port for the week were valued at $8,415,904, and the exports at $6,804,607. Foreign exchange sold yesterday for $4.80 1-2 for 60 day bills and $4.84 for demand for sterling.... The Stock Exchange continues strong and was buoyant yesterday....The visible supply of wheat in the United States and Canada, east of the Pacific slope, was reported yesterday to be 56,152,991 bushels, an increase for the week of 878,651 bushels, with a small increase in oats, rye and barley, and a decrease of 337,520 bushels of corn. The Liverpool stock of wheat is 3,574,562 bushels less than at this time last year. Quotations yesterday were: Wheat here 84 1-4, in Chicago 73 1-2; corn here 45 3-4, in Chicago 36 1-8; oats here 32 5-8, in Chicago 26. Cotton closed at: Nov. 8 89-90; Dec. 8.94-95; Jan. 9.3-4; Feb. 9.11-12. Hay in large supply. Choice timothy 80 to 85 cents. No. 1, 75, clover mixed 55 to 60; long rye straw 60 to 65, oat 35 to 45, wheat 25 to 35.

News of the Week.

(Continued from page five.)

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, J. D. C. Atkins, makes his annual report....Mrs. Stewart's will, read last evening, is expected to be filed for probate to-day....Theatre opened at Tuxedo Park, N. Y....Timothy Stevens, of Boston, Mass., and Judge Simson, of Berlin, Germany, are dead.

MONDAY, NOV. 1—Dr. Otto Arendt, leader of the silver party in the German Parliament, delivered an address before the German Athenæum Club of London, on the present position of the currency question in Germany and England....M. Stambuloff opened the Sobranje at Tiruova yesterday in presence of all the Regents and the members of the Cabinet. Speeches were made in favor of Bulgarian independence....The plotters against Prince Alexander have been released....Revolution in the State of Zacatecas, Mexico, crushed. All the leaders captured....Seven native villages destroyed by volcanic eruption on the island of Niapu in the Tonga group of the Friendly Islands....Ex-Minister James Russell Lowell to be married to Dowager Lady Lyttleton, widow of the late Lord Lyttleton ...A heartless Mexican murders his wife and step-daughter in a passenger car....The French Government receives but little encouragement from Turkey in its agitation against the British in Egypt....Prince Napoleon and his secretary are now in Washington, D. C. ... Slight earthquake shocks felt yesterday in Columbia and Charleston, S. C. Shortly after the shock a spring of clear, pure water appeared in the Custom House yard, and runs at the rate of a gallon a minute. ....Two women arrested in Oneida County, N. Y., as highway robbers....A fire causing the loss of nearly a quarter of a million of dollars, and probably several lives, occurred early yesterday morning in the Knight & Leonard building, East Madison street, Chicago....Henry Ward Beecher and Mrs. Beecher arrived home yesterday by the "Etruria."

TUESDAY, 2.—Surveyor Beattie was shot in the hand and the hip, in his office in the Custom House, yesterday noon, by Louis Bieral, a discharged inspector. Bieral was arrested. Mr. Beattie is expected to recover. ....The chief cook of the Astor House restaurant was shot last evening by an angry waiter, who immediately after fled to the steps of a basement store and shot himself dead. The cook's wounds are not serious. ....Six thousand men in beef slaughtering houses in Chicago struck against ten hours yesterday. Five hundred pork packers struck in East St. Louis....The dead by railroad crash at Rio, Wis., number 14 so far.... The Statue of Liberty was lighted electrically last night and the display of fire works was made to thousands of spectators on boats, the docks and roofs of buildings around the harbor....England calls conference of powers about Bulgaria ...Severe floods in Italy....Heavy monsoon rains in India....One hundred heavy shocks of earthquake on Island of Ninafou, Tonga group, on Sept. 10th, and active volcano thrown up 300 feet above a lake 2,000 feet deep.

INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It is not a mere stimulant like the extracts of beef, but contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties; is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, over work, or acute disease; particularly when resulting from pulmonary complaints. Caswell, Hazard & Co., Proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

MARRIAGES.

DAVIS—TEN EYCK.—On Oct. 27, at the residence of James K. Ten Eyck, near Storm Ridge, N. Y., by the Rev. Wm. W. Schomp, Frank Davis, of Stone Ridge, and Gertrude Ten Eyck, daughter of James K. Ten Eyck.

HANSEN—DANIELS.—At Gardiner, N. Y., Oct. 24, by Rev. P. K. Hageman, Charles J. Hansen and Annie N. Daniels, both of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

LYONS—CARUTHERS.—At South Bend, Ind., Oct. 14, by Rev. N. D. Williamson, Mr. John S. Lyons and Miss Phebe Caruthers.

WARNER—BRADT.—At Niskayuna parsonage, Oct. 27, by Rev. C. P. Ditmars, William M. Warner to Antonette Bradt, all of Niskayuna, N. Y.

DEATHS.

HASBROUCK.—At the residence of his son, Josiah, at High Falls, N. Y., Severyn Hasbrouck, on Oct. 20, in the 78th year of his age.

Notices and Acknowledgments.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.—Evangelical but not denominational. Prints in 147 languages in aid of foreign missions; grants religious reading to the needy; sends colporters to millions in our highways and hedges, and to the immigrants in Castle Garden and elsewhere. This work depends wholly on charitable gifts. Donations and legacies are earnestly solicited. A summary of the sixtieth year mailed free. O. R. Kingsbury, Treasurer, 150 Nassau street, New York.

FULTON STREET DAILY NOON PRAYER-MEETING, 113 Fulton Street, and 58 Ann Street, Just east of Broadway, near William Street. COME IN, REST, AND PRAY. Stop 5, 10, 15 or 20 minutes, or the hour, as your time permits.

THE CLASSIS OF ORANGE, for the installation of the Rev. John Stillwell at Bloomingburgh, N. Y., on Nov. 10th, at two o'clock P. M., appointed the President to preside and read the form, Rev. Dr. S. W. Mills or Rev. J. Hutchins to preach the sermon, and Elder De Witt to give the constitutional notice.
S. C

THE CLASSIS OF SCHOHARIE appointed the following supplies for vacant churches: Gilboa and Prattsville, November, Rev. D. K. Van Doren; January, Rev. J. G. Smart; March, Rev. P. Phelps, D.D. Schoharie Mt. and Central Bridge, October, Rev. J. G. Fagg; Dec. Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. W. A. Wurts; Sharon, October, Rev. J. G. Smart; Dec. Rev. E. Miller; Feb., Rev. J. G. Fagg.
D. K. VAN DOREN, S. C.

THE CLASSIS OF SCHENECTADY will meet in special session in the Second Reformed Church of Schenectady, N. Y., on Monday, Nov. 8th, at 2 o'clock P.M., for the examination of the licentiate, E. J. Blekkink, and arranging for his ordination and installation over the Church of Lisha's Kill.
C. P. DITMARS, S. C.

BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.—The Board will meet in regular session at Synod's Rooms on Wednesday, Nov. 10th, at 3 P.M. Classical Missionary Agents are cordially invited and urged to be present, according to recommendation of General Synod. The appropriations for 1887 will be presented for adoption. HENRY N. COBB, Cor. Sec.

Publisher's Department.

DON'T SUFFER COLD TO ACCUMULATE on cold until your throat and lungs are in a state of chronic inflammation. Attack the first symptoms of pulmonary irritation with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar and achieve an easy victory. Sold by all Druggists at 25c., 50c. and $1.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap heals and beautifies, 25c.
German Corn Remover kills Corns, Bunions, 25c.
Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye—Black & Brown, 50c.
Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 Minute, 25c.

To relieve headache, correct disorders of the stomach and increase the appetite, and for the cure of liver complaint, use Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They are perfectly safe to take, and invariably promote a healthy action of the digestive and assimilative organs.

Sick Headache. Thousands who have suffered intensely with sick headache say that Hood's Sarsaparilla has completely cured them. One gentleman thus relieved, writes: "Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." Sold by all druggists. 100 doses $1.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a snuff. 50c.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall st., N.Y.

The Appetite

May be increased, the Digestive organs strengthened, and the Bowels regulated, by taking Ayer's Pills. These Pills are purely vegetable in their composition. They contain neither calomel nor any other dangerous drug, and may be taken with perfect safety by persons of all ages.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, became greatly debilitated, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time my digestion and appetite my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

IMPROVED

I was troubled, for over a year, with Loss of Appetite, and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored. —C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and, at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—Philip Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but gave me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B.

Ayer's Pills,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

CHOICEST FOODS IN THE WORLD.

A. B. C. STEAM COOKED CRUSHED WHITE OATS.

A.B.C. Wheat, A.B.C. Barley, A.B.C. Maize
Hulled, Steam-cooked, Desiccated.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

American Breakfast Cereals.

Made from the Finest Grains. All Impurities Removed. Prepared for the table in ten minutes. Ask for A. B. C. Brand only. (Registered Trade Mark.)
PATENTED.
For sale by all Grocers. Send for circulars, etc., to THE CEREALS M'F'G CO., 83 Murray Street, N. Y. (Incorporated 1875.)

Absolute uniformity cannot be had unless the goods go from the manufacturer to the consumer ready to use. If the customer has got to add something, different customers will add different things, some of them of poor quality, all at a high price at retail. Try our $1.35 per gallon Ready Mixed Paint. If no dealer in your neighborhood, send to us direct. Dealers who do not sell these goods are requested to write for color cards, terms, &c. The best goods. The heaviest advertised of any in the market. Our agents fully protected. They are easy to sell. The F. J. Nash M'f'g. Co., Nyack, Rockland Co., N. Y.

A Welcome Holiday GIFT.

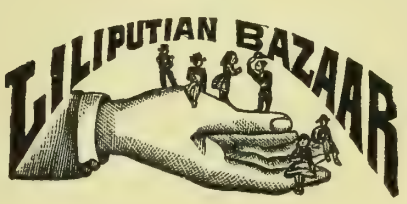
There is NOTHING that can be obtained, for the outlay, more useful ornamental and acceptable to wife, mother, or daughter, than one of these world-renowned sewing machines:—

WILLCOX & GIBBS
AUTOMATIC

MACHINES
All bear this
Medallion Trade-Mark
{Needles form W, and G is the Machine.}
Absence of this Trade-Mark stamps a Machine as counterfeit. Imitators dare not put this Medallion on Machines.

Ours are the only Machines that can be used with
NO RISK TO HEALTH.
Unequalled for
LIGHTNESS OF RUNNING
AND
STRENGTH & BEAUTY OF WORK.
Willcox & Gibbs S. M. Co., 658 Broadway, N.Y.
SEND FOR ILLUSTRATED LIST.

The ECONOMICAL outfitting of CHILDREN is as much a feature of the



as the furnishing of the GREATEST VARIETY and BEST STYLES of everything, from HATS TO SHOES.

We commence with OVERCOATS and SUITS for BOYS and YOUTHS, and SUITS and COATS for MISSES AND GIRLS, at the lowest prices that garments, economical at any price, can be made for and keep all grades up to the very finest.

At the Lowest Prices.

Mail orders have careful and prompt attention.

BEST & CO.,

60 and 62 West 23d St., N. Y.

Unique and Tasteful Designs

IN THOROUGHLY WELL MADE

FURNITURE

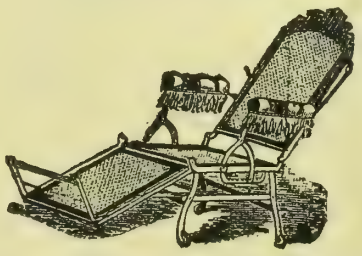
AT

Moderate Prices.

Warren Ward & Co.,
Designers and Manufacturers,
6 & 8 E. 20th St., New York.

PLUNKETT'S
Old Reliable Folding Chair.

Fifty changes of position.



Also, Comfort Folding Mantle Beds and Cribs.
PRICE $11, $12, $13.
Send for circular.
112 West 14th Street, - New York.

DEAFNESS Its causes, and a new and successful CURE at your own home, by one who was deaf twenty-eight years. Treated by most of the noted specialists without benefit, Cured himself in three months, and since then hundreds of others. Full particulars sent on application. T. S. PAGE, No. 41 West 31st St., New York City

CURE for the DEAF by PECK'S PAT. IMPROVED CUSHIONED EAR DRUMS. Whispers heard distinctly. Comfortable, invisible. Illustrated book & proofs, FREE. Address or call on F. HISCOX 353 Broadway, N. Y. Name this paper.

RIDLEYS'

Grand St., New York.

NEW BUILDING

The Outgrowth of a Store 12 by 30 feet in 1849, until now the selling space covers nearly or 211,000 Square Feet, Surface Measure.

FIVE ACRES,

Fronting 200 Feet on Grand St., with 180 on Allen and Orchard Sts., respectively.

The Largest Retail House

in this or neighboring cities.

BARGAINS

in Flannels, Feathers, Velvets, and Sealskins Purchased at

TRADE SALES

During the Past Week at Large Concessions in Prices.

FLANNELS.

450 pieces of the Standard F. & C. and C. & S. Twilled Flannels in Red, Blue, and Gray, the regular price throughout the city being 50c..... } 37½c. per yard.

¾ All-Wool Red Twilled Flannels
At 16c. 25c. 28c. 31c.
Worth 25c. 31c. 35c. 39c. a Yard.

¾ All-Wool Red Twilled Flannel Medicated at 35c. a yard, worth 42½c.; at 40c., worth 50c.
4-4 All-Wool Shaker Flannels, 45c. and 50c.; worth 56c. and 63c.

EVERY NOVELTY IN DRESS GOODS.

VELVETS.

125 pieces Two-Toned Brocade Velvets, all the Latest Combinations, at $1.89 a yard; fully worth $3.50.
400 pieces Moleskin Plushes, 79c., 89c., $1.23, and $1.64
Stripe Silk Velvets, all Leading Combinations, 69c., 94c., $1.19, and $1.50 a yard.
Plain Silk Velvets, all colors, 74c., 89c., 93c., $1.23, $1.50.
128 pieces Pure Dye English Corduroys, all colors, 49c., and 58c.
3,000 pieces Velveteens, in 40 Shades and Blacks, at 25c., 49c., 69c., to $1.15 a yard.

Ladies' Suits.

A class of goods which cannot be excelled for quality, while the prices cannot be approached in this city. They will show a gratifying saving.

In Sealskins we are displaying handsome lines of Sacques, Newmarkets, and Paletots at about

50 PER CENT.

Less Than Regular Sale Prices.

MILLINERY.

The Display in our Millinery Parlor of over 3,000 Fully Trimmed Hats is unsurpassed. The Style and Quality of trimming equal the best, while the prices will show a saving of one-third to one-half over prices usually paid.

LOW PRICES

Will Prevail Throughout Our Entire Establishment.

FASHION MAGAZINE.

Winter and Holiday Number now in Press and will be ready in a few days. Single Copies, 15 cents.

Orders by Mail

Accurately Attended To.

EDW. RIDLEY & SONS,

309, 311, 313 to 321 Grand St.,
56 to 70 ALLEN, 59 to 65 ORCHARD ST., N.Y.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS
OF THE
Presbyterian Board of Publication.

NEW EDITION
OF
WHAT IS PRESBYTERIAN LAW?

REVISED AND ENLARGED.

Containing all the changes introduced into our system by the adoption of the new book of discipline.

BY REV. J. ASPINWALL HODGE, D.D.
12mo. Price, $1.75.

The Presbyterian Digest OF 1886.

BY REV. W. E. MOORE, D.D.
8vo, Sheep. Price, $5.00 net.

Earthly Watchers at the Heavenly Gates.

The False and the True Spiritualism.

BY REV. JOHN CHESTER, D.D.,
Pastor of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C.

Showing in the form of a popular narrative, the absurdity of the vulgar Spiritualism of our day, and the nobleness of true Bible Spiritualism, inasmuch as the Scriptures answer all proper enquiries concerning the state of the dead.

16mo. Price, $1.15.

Talks by the Seashore.

Tells of the strange creatures that dwell in the great waters.

16mo. Illustrated. Price, $1.25.

Address orders to
JOHN A. BLACK, Business Superintendent,
1334 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Or, Ward & Drummond, 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS
Demorest's Monthly.

Containing Stories, Poems and other Literary attractions, combining Artistic, Scientific and Household matters. Illustrated with Original Steel Engravings, Photogravures, Oil Pictures, and fine Woodcuts, making it the Model Magazine of America.

We also propose to give considerable attention to the Grand PROHIBITION Party movement as one of the most important and live moral issues of the day.

Each number contains an order, entitling the holder to the selection of any pattern illustrated in the fashion department in that number, in any of the sizes manufactured, making patterns during the year of the value of over three dollars.

Send twenty cents for the current number with Pattern Coupon and you will certainly subscribe Two Dollars for a year and get ten times its value.

W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, PUBLISHER,
17 E. 14 St., New York.
Sold by all Newsdealers and Postmasters.

MASON & HAMLIN
ORGANS.

Highest Honors at all Great World's Exhibitions for nineteen years. 100 styles, $22 to $900. For Cash, Easy Payments, or Rented. Catalogue, 46 pp., 4to, free.

PIANOS.

The Improved Method of Stringing, introduced and perfected by MASON & HAMLIN, is conceded by competent judges to constitute a radical advance in Pianoforte construction.

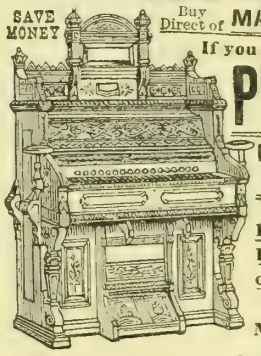
Do not require one-quarter as much tuning as Pianos generally. Descriptive Catalogue by mail.

ORGAN & PIANO CO

154 Tremont St., Boston. 149 Wabash Ave., Chicago.
46 E. 14th St. (Union Sq.), N. Y.

BEETHOVEN

SAVE MONEY Buy Direct of MANUFACTURER



If you wish a PIANO or ORGAN WRITE US.

Largest Factory IN THE WORLD.

REMIT BY
Draft, Money Order, Registered Letter, or Express only.

SIX National Banks as references.

$29.75 for a Good Organ and Stool.
$49.63 " " Better " " "
$68.75 " the Best " " "
Catalogue and Particulars sent FREE by BEETHOVEN
PIANO ORGAN CO.
WASHINGTON, WARREN CO. N.J.

A BIG OFFER. To introduce them, we will Give away 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 23 ... St., N.Y.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

The Necessary and Unnecessary Work of the Sunday-School Teacher.

BY GERTRUDE L. VANDERBILT.

(A Paper read at the Ninth Convention of the Kings County Sunday School Union, N. Y.)

PART I.

IF the Sunday school teacher is not in this present age familiar with the duties of the position, there is surely no valid excuse to be offered for the want of knowledge. In these days of conventions, Sunday-school newspapers, Chautauqua schools and lesson-helps there is so much assistance of every kind afforded that it seems like a work of supererogation to offer new suggestions, and perhaps, presumption to intimate that such may be necessary. And yet the Sunday-school work is one so full of interest to those engaged in it, that a friendly interchange of thought and opinion is never wholly without good results. This must be my excuse for adding a few words, from my own long experience, to what shall be so much more ably said by those who have kindly come to assist us in making this Convention profitable in its results.

I would divide the work which the teacher is called upon to perform into two distinct divisions—that which is necessary and that which is unnecessary. While insisting upon the necessity of the careful performance of certain duties, I am glad to have this opportunity of calling attention to the burdens which are, I think, unnecessarily laid upon the Sunday-school teacher.

We will refer first to those duties, the neglect of which makes the distinction between the faithful and conscientious, and the indifferent and worldly teacher.

To know the lesson for the day before coming to the class, to be ready by reason of thorough study and constant prayer to communicate the truths it contains, is the most important preparation a teacher can make. The various helps offered for the study of the international series leave the teacher without excuse if not familiar with all the lessons to be drawn from the text. When the teacher comes with the knowledge thus gained, and after a week of daily prayer for God's blessing upon the class, then there is no mere form of words taught, but the very spirit of the Gospel is communicated. Heart to heart, mind to mind, the teacher impresses spiritual life upon the dormant energy of the child. It is as when Elisha brought life to the son of the Shunamite woman. The child was not awakened by the cold staff of a formal messenger. But when eye to eye, lip to lip the true phophet came into close contact with the sleeping boy, then the child "waxed warm" and new life was evoked within him. The teacher thoroughly acquainted with the lesson and imbued with an ardent desire to impart a new and spiritual life into the child is not a mere formal messenger, but the prophet calling up the better life. Such teaching is not a mere form of words, for the heart as well as the memory is engaged; a life lesson is given, not a mere form of words acquired. The teacher's superficial knowledge of the lesson, mere book-question and book-answer, can only give a superficial knowledge to the class; the mind may be taught but the heart is not awakened and such teaching only swells the number of such as "know their duty, but they do it not."

Next to a thorough familiarity with the lesson an efficient teacher should have a personal acquaintance with, and an affection for the members of the class. There is nothing which secures the confidence of the scholar more readily than the consciousness of personal interest existing between teacher and taught. The feeling that it would pain teacher to hear of faults, and please teacher to hear of good conduct is an incentive to well doing.

"I'd like to jump over the fence an' git some er them apples, but I'm feard teacher might hear 'bout it," was the excuse Benny gave for not stealing.

Yes, love will sometimes keep a child from sinning where the moral law would be powerless to restrain. But if Benny's reasons for honesty do not reach higher under continued instruction, there has not been much good attained, for in that case love to the teacher has only been the proverbial "ounce of prevention" which, in such circumstances, reverses the proverb and is not equal to "the pound of cure." Every superintendent can testify to the affection of scholars for their teacher from the experience of trying to change scholars from one class to another; almost always they prefer to remain with the teacher to whom they are accustomed. This affection, if properly used, may be a powerful factor for good between a conscientious and affectionate teacher and the class.

Punctuality in attendance is another qualification which is exceedingly desirable in a teacher. To be present when convenient to come, and to be absent at the slightest excuse, is trifling with the highest interests of the class. A teacher who is not punctual can never have a class punctual. We sometimes wonder that the teacher can expect the class to be punctual under such circumstances. What various excuses we hear from absentees—the weather is too warm, or too cold; it is too muddy, or too dusty; visitors, or visits to pay. These excuses do not seem to us insurmountable, but like the bean-stalk of Jack in the nursery tale, it is astonishing to what an immense size they rapidly grow.

On the other hand, what a blessing to the school are the punctual teachers, those who are never absent when it is possible to be present, and who can be relied upon through the cold of the winter, or the heat of the summer. They stand like Bartholdi's Statue, firm and strong to hold up the light to the entrance of a safe harbor.

The duties of the teacher are not exclusively confined to the class in school; there are means of work throughout the week which serve as a preparation for the Sabbath. No teacher can become acquainted with the class without personal visitation. Go to the home of the scholar, see the child as a member of the household, become acquainted with the parents. Knowing the influences acting upon its daily life, the child may be better understood. There may be more forebearance required, or, perhaps less, but there can scarcely be a just measure of the child's requirements unless there is some knowledge of the circumstances and conditions of its home life.

May we not add, in this connection, that there is a much higher ideal of attainment before the Sunday-school teacher of to-day, than was formerly recognized as requisite for the work. Those of us who have grown old in the Sunday-school, may remember a time when it was thought that to be a member of the church was a sufficient qualification for being accepted as a teacher. The whole work in the school consisted in asking the printed question and listening to the memorized answer recited too often in an indifferent and perfunctory manner, and heard without explanation or application.

The teacher of to-day comes before the class with all the preparation which the present age supplies, and with a fuller knowledge of the requirements and possibilities presented. Thus there is a wide field opened and entered upon by the faithful ones who have the spiritual growth of the children warmly at heart.

Home Readings.

LESSON 7. FOURTH QUARTER.

M. The Call of Peter ..... Luke 5 : 1-17.
T. Peter on the Sea ..... Matt. 14 : 22-36.
W. Peter on the Mount ..... Luke 9 : 28-36.
T. Peter's Confession ..... Matt. 16 : 13-23.
F. Peter's Denial ..... Mark 14 : 66-72.
S. Peter Restored ..... John 21 : 1-19.
S. Peter at Pentecost ..... Acts 2 : 14-36.

—From the Westminster Question Book.

International Sunday-School Lesson.

BY REV. JOHN C. VAN DEVENTER.

Nov. 14th.—"Peter Restored."—John 21 : 4-19.

Golden Text.—"He saith unto him, Feed my lambs."—JOHN 21 : 15.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—"If ye love me keep my commandments."—JOHN 14 : 15.

INTRODUCTION.

ON the day of His first appearance to His disciples the Lord had directed them to a certain mountain in Galilee where He would meet them, and it is there that, in all probability, He showed Himself to 500 brethren at once. After the events considered in the two preceding lessons the disciples went into the northern province to await the appointed time. During this period of waiting, with nothing especial to occupy them, it was natural that they should turn to their old employment for a season. It is not necessary to suppose that when Peter said, "I go a fishing," he meant that he proposed to return permanently to his worldly occupation and to give up his apostolic commission. Entering one of the little fishing boats on the lake, they spent the night in unrequited toil. It was after this wearisome and discouraging night of labor that Jesus appeared to them, bringing success in things temporal, and blessings in things spiritual.

THE LESSON.

I. THE DRAUGHT OF FISHES.—VS. 4-11.

V. 4.—"But when morning was now come." After the darkness, light; after failure, success. "Jesus stood on the shore; but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus." The appearances of Jesus after the resurrection were unheralded and mysterious.

V. 5.—"Children, have ye any meat?" This question, which seems to our minds to immediately reveal the Master, did not arouse in the minds of the disciples a single suspicion as to the identity of the stranger. "They answered him No." They took the inquiry as one of friendly interest on the part of this man, and told Him of their failure.

V. 6.—"Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find." Even this direction failed to cause them to suspect that the LORD was speaking with them, because it is often possible for persons on the shore to see indications of a shoal of fishes which would not be noticed by those on board a ship. "They cast, therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes." In a few moments failure had been changed into great success, because they had wrought under the command and with the blessing of Christ. As by an object lesson Jesus was repeating to them His saying, "Without me ye can do nothing."

V. 7.—"Therefore, that disciple whom Jesus loved, saith unto Peter, It is the Lord." John appears to have had a peculiar power of discernment. He was so in sympathy with Jesus that he penetrated His disguise sooner than any of the others. "Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him (for he was naked) and did cast himself into the sea." If John was quick to recognize, Peter was prompt to act. And this verse well illustrates and contrasts the dispositions of the two disciples.

V. 8.—"And the other disciples came in a little ship....dragging the net with fishes." The load had been so great that they did not have strength to lift the net out of the water into the boat, so they towed it along behind their vessel until they reached the beach.

V. 9.—"They saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread." Their surprise was continually deepening. They probably thought that they were to have the opportunity to share their provision with the Master, and to invite Him to their morning meal, but instead, they find preparations already made for their entertainment by Jesus as their host.

V. 10.—"Jesus saith unto them, bring of the fish which ye have now taken." Although He had provided the meal, yet He honored the labors of His disciples by having a part of their own supply upon His table. Although sufficient in Himself for the work of salvation, He has graciously made us workers together with Him.

V. 11.—"Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, a hundred and fifty and three." Some have seen in the number of the fishes a symbolic reference to the success of the Gospel in the world, but such an inference is not necessary. It was the most natural thing in the world for the fishers to count the contents of their net, and we may have here simply the statement of the number found without any occult symbolism. "Yet was not the net broken." As God had preserved the clothing of the Israelites in the wilderness, so He placed His hand under the sorely strained net of the fishermen and kept it from breaking. Even so does He often help and prosper His servants in the business of this life.

II. THE WAYSIDE MEAL.—VS. 12-14

V. 12.—"Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine." Literally, breakfast. He thus assumed the position of host or head of the household. "None of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou?" Their curiosity was doubtless great to press inquiries concerning His person and place of sojourn during the intervals between His infrequent manifestations, but a holy awe restrained all questioning. They were satisfied that this was the Lord, and they satisfied themselves with this knowledge.

V. 14.—"Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise." By the draught of fishes Jesus showed Himself interested in the work of His people, and now shows that He enters into sympathy with us in our home life, in short that He is with us always.

V. 14.—"This is now the third time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples." That is to say the third time that He had appeared to any considerable number at once; it was the seventh appearance to one or more of His friends.

III. THE LOVE OF PETER.—VS. 15-19

V. 15.—"Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?" Peter had doubtless received the assurance of forgiveness in private, but he was to be publicly restored to the confidence and favor of the Lord. Peter had boasted that, though all should forsake Jesus, he would remain faithful, hence Jesus asks him whether he still considers his love greater than that of his companions. "Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee." Three things are to be noticed in this answer: First, Peter waives the comparison between himself and his brethren; second, he uses a word of less emphatic meaning as descriptive of his love; third, he throws himself upon the knowledge of Jesus, and not upon his own protestations. "Feed my lambs." He was to prove his love by service, while Jesus proved His confidence by permitting him to serve.

V. 16.—Immediately Jesus repeats His question, omitting, however, the comparison with others. Peter's answer remains the same. He has no proof to offer, and can only open his heart to his Lord. "Feed my sheep." This has a fuller meaning than the first charge, for it is literally, "shepherd my sheep," or as some say, tend, my sheeplings. The sheep need more than fodder, and the shepherd has a variety of responsibilities.

V. 17.—"He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" Now, Jesus puts His question upon the plane of Peter's answers. Each time He has brought the test down to a lower level, until Peter, feeling as if the Lord doubted him even yet, answers with tenderness, and with sad remembrance of how well he had deserved the doubt, "Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee" "He saith unto him, feed my sheep." The threefold denial had been followed by a thrice repeated confession and three solemn charges to fresh duty and greater faithfulness. The scene in the palace, and this by the seashore, made an ineffaceable impression upon the mind and heart of Jesus.

V. 18.—In this verse Jesus gives to Peter an intimation of prolonged life, "When thou shalt be old," and of a death of violence and suffering.

V. 19.—"This spake he signifying by what death he should glorify God." It will be seen by this expression that the Christian may glorify God by his death as well as by his life, and that enemies of God defeat themselves when they seek to blot out the remembrance of His name from the earth by deeds of violence. "He saith unto him, Follow me." This has been taken to be a command to imitate Christ throughout life, but the context seems to imply, rather, that Jesus wished for a further interview with Peter by himself, and that they walked together a little in advance of the others.

LESSONS FOR TO-DAY.

1. Where human effort fails Christ's blessing gives success.

2. The workmen of Christ should labor under His direction.

3. We should recognize Christ in the blessing of life.

4. Christ makes the wants of His servants His care.

5. Jesus seeks to restore those who have yielded to temptation.

6. Jesus knows our hearts, whether we love Him or not.

7. He has work for all who love Him.

8. We can glorify Him wherever He places us in His Providence.

The Dirge of the Leaves.

As the leaves are falling, falling,
On the meadow and the lawn,
Hear them in the twilight calling,
Hear them in the frosty dawn—
Farewell, summer, in whose morning
We put on our primal green,
Now in gold and crimson burning,
Quivering in the autumn sheen.

As the leaves are falling, falling,
Seem thay pensive thus to say—
(While the tinted meadow palling),
Farewell, summer, for decay
Sends us to the earth to molder
'Neath our dwelling on the bough;
Dimmer are the suns, and colder
Is the breeze that fans us now.

As the leaves are falling, falling,
Cometh, too, a triumph tone,
As of stricken heroes calling
After final victory won.
Saith it: Mortal, can your story
Witness, at the closing strife,
On your shroud a brighter glory
Than the fairest hues of life?

—E. W. B. Canning.

A Touching Incident.

A VERY touching incident occurred at Gouverneur Hospital, New York city, last week. Little Annie Ashpurvis was sent by her parents, who live at No. 36 Hester street, to the cellar for some fire-wood. The child, who was but six years old, took a lighted lamp in her hand, and while descending the stairs, her foot slipped and she fell, breaking the lamp, and the flames of the burning fluid soon eveloped her entire body. As soon as the surgeon was called, the little sufferer was wrapped in what is known as a "Stokes prepared sheet," and driven in an ambulance to the hospital. The child was put on a soft cot, and the house surgeon did all he could to alleviate her suffering, but it was impossible to save her life. Under the influence she soon fell asleep. Thus breathing for some hours. Her face was so swollen, she could not open her eyes. About half past two in the morning, she showed signs of returning consciousness. The watchful nurse asked her would she take a drink. She distinctly answered "Yes."

In a moment the House Surgeon Aspell was beside her cot. He felt the pulse, but shook his head and turned to go away. As he did so the little creature moved her body. She turned half around. The dim light of a candle shone on the blackened face. The swollen lips pursed out, and in a clear, sweet voice the dying child began to sing the hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee." The doctor and nurse stood transfixed. The other patients in the silent, darkened ward leaned on their elbows, and drank in the sweet melody. The first verse completed, she gradually sank back on her pillow. Her strength began to fail, and with it her voice, and only the humming like distant music of the air of the hymn could be heard. How sweet, yet weird, that humming sounded. The candle lent its meagre light, the big clock in the corner told out its seconds as the sweet little soul passed out to its Maker. The humming ceased. All was over. The doctor turned away; his handkerchief sought his eyes. The nurse gazed into the flame of the candle. She seemed to read the history of the little one's death there. She heaved a sigh, and no doubt offered a prayer. The remains were buried Friday from the hospital. The coffin was strewn with flowers, offerings of her little schoolmates, with whom the dead child had been a great favorite.—The Evangelist.

....Christ is the best of paymasters. He borrowed Peter's boat to preach from, and at the close of the sermon gave him such a draught of fishes as he had not had before. —George C. Needham.

CLAREMONT COLONY

Offers great inducements. Send for free illustrated circulars and maps. J. F. Mancha, Claremont, Va.

DYSPEPSIA

Causes its victims to be miserable, hopeless, confused, and depressed in mind, very irritable, languid, and drowsy. It is a disease which does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven just the required remedy in hundreds of cases.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for dyspepsia, from which I have suffered two years. I tried many other medicines, but none proved so satisfactory as Hood's Sarsaparilla." THOMAS COOK, Brush Electric Light Co., New York City.

Sick Headache

"For the past two years I have been afflicted with severe headaches and dyspepsia. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have found great relief. I cheerfully recommend it to all." MRS. E. F. ANNABLE, New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mary C. Smith, Cambridgeport, Mass., was a sufferer from dyspepsia and sick headache. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla and found it the best remedy she ever used.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

THE BEST POLISH FOR Cold and Silverware.

PRODUCES greatest brilliancy.
REQUIRES least labor.
IS HARMLESS in every respect.
Sold everywhere, and sent, post-paid, on receipt of 15 cents in stamps.
SEE THAT FULL NAME ELECTRO-SILICON IS ON EACH BOX.
Send address, mention this paper, and receive
A TRIAL SAMPLE FREE.
THE ELECTRO SILICON CO., 72 John St., New York.

The Physician's Favorite!

A predigested, non-irritating, easily assimilated food indicated in all weak and inflamed conditions of the digestive organs, either in infants or adults.

☞ It has been the positive means of saving many lives, having been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical, of all Prepared Foods.

150 MEALS for an Infant for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists, 25c., 50c., $1.

☞ A valuable pamphlet on "The Nutrition of Infants and Invalids," sent free on application.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

7% FARM LOANS!

SECURED BY

FIRST MORTGAGES ON IMPROVED FARMS.

TWELVE YEARS in the business. Over $1,000 000 invested during this time. References: My old customers in all sections of the United States. If you have money in savings bank or lying idle, send to me for circular containing full information, letters from my old customers, references, a NEW MAP OF DAKOTA, all sent free on application. Address

E. P. GATES,
PRESIDENT MERCHANTS' BANK,
Grand Forks, Dakota.

6% 7% 8%

The American Investment Company, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, incorporated, with a paid-up capital of $500,000, with branches at Huron and Mitchell, Dakota, offer First Mortgage Farm Loans in Iowa, Minn., Dakota, and Neb., both Principal and Interest Guaranteed. Also 6 per cent. Debenture Bonds (obligations of the Company), running 10 years, secured by Mortgage loans deposited with the Mercantile Trust Co., N. Y. It also issues Demand Certificates of Deposit at 5 per cent. interest. Write for pamphlet and references.

Home Office, Emmetsburg, Iowa.
E. S. Ormsby, Pres., 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

INVEST Through the Sound and Reliable
WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE CO.
F. M. PERKINS, President. LAWRENCE, KAN. L. H. PERKINS, Secretary.
PAID UP CAPITAL, $250,000.00.

The Choicest 1st Mortgage Farm Loans, also the Company's Ten Year Debentures, based upon its paid up Capital and Assets of over $650,000. No Losses. 11 years' Experience with absolute satisfaction to over 1600 Investors. Send for circulars, forms and full information. Branch Offices in N. Y. City & Albany. N. Y. Office, 137 B'way, C. C. Hine & Son, Agts.

Church Decoration.

Church Furnishing.

DESIGNS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

J. & R. LAMB,

59 CARMINE ST., N. Y.

BELLS.

McShane Bell Foundry
Finest Grade of Bells,
CHIMES AND PEALS for CHURCHES, &c
Send for Price and Catalogue. Address
H. McSHANE & CO.,
Baltimore, Md

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Fire Alarms, Farms, etc. FULLY WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

MENEELY & COMPANY,
West Troy, N. Y. Bells,
For Churches, Schools, etc., also Chimes and Peals. For more than half a century noted for superiority over all others.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest inducements ever offered. Now's your time to get up orders for our celebrated Teas and Coffees, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band or Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, or Webster's Dictionary. For full particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 5643. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

GEO. MATHER'S SONS,
PRINTING INK

Manufacturers. Superior Black and Colored Ink. Lithographic and Plate Ink, Varnishes, etc. 60 John street, New York.

The Intelligencer is printed with our ink.

ATLANTIC
Mutual Insurance Co.
NEW YORK OFFICE, 51 WALL STREET
ORGANIZED 1842,
Insures against Marine and Inland Navigation Risks,
And will issue Policies making Loss payable in England.

Assets for the Security of its Policies are more than TEN MILLION DOLLARS.

The profits of the Company revert to the assured and are divided annually, upon the Premiums terminated during the year, Certificates for which are issued bearing interest in accordance with its Charter.

J. D. JONES, President.
CHARLES DENNIS, Vice President.
W. H. H. MOORE, 2d Vice Pres't.
A. A. RAVEN, 3d Vice Pres't.
J. H. CHAPMAN, Secretary.

CONTINENTAL
Insurance Co.
Continental Buildings
100 BROADWAY, NEW YORK,
Cor. COURT and MONTAGUE STS., BROOKLYN
106 BROADWAY, BROOKLYN, E. D.

Insures against loss by Fire at reasonable rates.

Reserve for re-insurance	$2,265,427 80
of which for Inland Marine, $5,969 52
Reserve ample for all other claims.....	553,971 20
Capital paid in cash	1,000,000 00
Net surplus.....	1,353,879 85
Total Cash Assets, Jan. 1, 1886....	$3,177,473 99

This Company conducts its business under the restrictions of the New York Safety Fund Law. The two Safety Funds together equal $1,000 0 0,

H. H. LAMPORT, President.
CYRUS PECK, Secretary.

HOME
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW YORK.
OFFICE, No. 19 BROADWAY.

Sixty-Sixth Semi-Annual Statement.
Showing the Condition of the Company on the first day of July, 1886.

CASH CAPITAL.....	$3,000,000 00
Reserve Premium Fund	2,938,020 00
Reserve for Unpaid Losses and Claims..	80,040 10
Net surplus	1,319,341 71
Cash Assets.....	$7,628,401 81

SUMMARY OF ASSETS.

Cash in Banks.....	$126,608 99
Bonds and Mortgages, being first lien on Real Estate.....	743,300 00
United States Stocks (market value). ..	2,912,697 50
Bank and Railroad Stocks and Bonds (market value).....	1,733,640 00
State and City Bonds (market value) ...	236,000 00
Loans on Stocks, payable on demand....	13,000 00
Interest due on 1st July, 1886.....	12,394 74
Premiums uncollected and in hands of Agents.....	299,646 97
Real Estate.....	1,34 4,113 61
Total.....	$7,628,401 81

CHARLES J. MARTIN, President.
D. A. HEALD, Vice-President.
J. H. WASHBURN, V. P. & Sec'y.
T. B. GREENE, W. L. BIGELOW, E. G. SNOW, JR. } Ass't. Sec's.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for
PLATFORM ECHOES
or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART
By John B. Gough.

His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted.—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. ☞ Distance no hindrance, as we give Extra Terms and Pay Freights. Write for circulars to WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

JOSEPH GILLOTT'S
STEEL PENS
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD
GOLD MEDAL PARIS EXPOSITION—1878.

WE WANT YOU! a live energetic man or woman needing profitable employment to represent us in every county. Salary $75 per month and expenses, or a large commission on sales if preferred. Goods staple. Every one buys. Outfit and particulars Free.
STANDARD SILVERWARE CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

FACE, HANDS, FEET,
and all their imperfections, including Facial Development, Superfluous Hair, Birth Marks, Moles, Warts, Moth, Freckles Red Nose, Acne, Blk Heads, Scars, Pitting and their treatment. Dr. John H. Woodbury, 37 N. Pearl St., ALBANY, N.Y. Est'b'd 1870. Send 10c. for book

Are You CONSUMPTIVE.
Have you Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Indigestion? Use PARKER'S TONIC without delay. It has cured many of the worst cases and is the best remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs, and diseases arising from impure blood and exhaustion. Often saves life. Cures when everything else fails. Gives new life and strength to the aged and infirm. $1, at Druggists.

HINDERCORNS.
The safest, surest and best cure for Corns, Bunions, &c. Stops all pain. Ensures comfort to the feet. Never fails to cure. 15 cents at Druggists. Hiscox & Co., N. Y.

Arnold, Constable & Co

Paris and City-Made Costumes
At Very Attractive Prices.

Choice Selected Novelties, Walking and Carriage Suits. Dinner, Reception and Evening Dresses. Opera Cloaks and Street Wraps, Jackets, etc.

NEW STYLES
By Last Steamer.

Fancy Plushes and Velvets, suitable for Street, Evening Wear and Cloakings. Also, a choice assortment of Plain, Black and Colored Lyons Velvets for Dresses and Trimmings.

Broadway & 19th st.
NEW YORK.

Solid Silver
Exclusively.

TRADE MARK.

Whiting M'f'g Co.,
Silversmiths,
Union Square and 16th St.

EQUITABLE
Mortgage Company.,
SIX AND SEVEN PER CENT
FARM Mortgages & Municipal BONDS in Kansas, Missouri & Nebraska
PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST
GUARANTEED.
Capital, $600,000.00.

A pamphlet containing information concerning the history of Farm Mortgages for the past twenty-five years sent free on application.

OFFICES:
NEW YORK, 208 B'way, Evening Post Bl'dg.
CHARLES N. FOWLER, V.
BOSTON, 28 Court Street.
H. H. FITCH, Manager.
PHILADELPHIA, 112 South Fourth Street.
CHAS. BENJ. WILKINSON, Manag
KANSAS CITY, Mo.
JOHN AVERY, General Manager.

---

8 Per Cent.
Choice Farm Loans Negotiated by the Potter County Bank, Gettysburg, Dakota.

Estey Organs
Pianos

To those who are using the ESTEY ORGAN no word of praise or commendation is needed. The ESTEY PIANO is just as thoroughly made, and is guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as the Organ has.
ESTEY ORGAN CO., Brattleboro, Vt.

ANGLO-INDIAN ART CARPETS.

The new Anglo-Indian Art Carpet, made in one piece without any seam or join whatever, with fringed border complete, in all the new colors and in a variety of sizes. No making required, and the price is almost the same as an ordinary yard-wide carpet.
Manufactured expressly for

W. & J. SLOANE
Broadway, 18th and 19th Sts
NEW YORK.

FURS. FURS. FURS.
The Old Established House of
F. BOOSS & BRO.,
449 BROADWAY,
OFFER FOR THE SEASON THE LARGEST AND MOST COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF Furs and Fur-Lined Garments
EVER BEFORE DISPLAYED IN THE CITY.
F. BOOSS & BRO. make all their own goods. Therefore, if you buy direct of the manufacturer you will SAVE MONEY.
Lowest Prices Possible
WITH WELL MADE, DURABLE, AND ELEGANT GARMENTS.

Sealskin Paletots, $150 and upwards.
Sealskin Newmarkets, $150 and upwards.
Sealskin Sacques, $75 and upwards.
Sealskin Wraps, $75 and upwards.
Sealskin Visites, $75 and upwards.
Sealskin Jackets, $65 and upwards.

NOVELTIES IN PERSIAN LAMB WALKING JACKETS, WRAPS, AND MUFFS ALSO, A COMPLETE LINE OF SEAL PLUSH GARMENTS.

SILK DOLMANS AND CIRCULARS,
MINK, ERMINE, AND SIBERIAN SQUIRREL LINED.
GENTLEMEN'S FUR OVERCOATS,
CLOTH COATS, FUR LINED ALSO, CAPS, COLLARS, AND GLOVES.
Coachmen's Capes, Collars, Gloves. Sleigh Robes.
NO GARMENTS ARE SOLD UNLESS PRONOUNCED A PERFECT AND GRACEFUL FIT.

F. BOOSS & BRO.,
449 BROADWAY,
AND 26 MERCER ST., NEAR GRAND.
N. B.—All the Broadway cars pass our door.

R. H. MACY & CO.,
14TH STREET, SIXTH AVE., AND 13TH STREET NEW YORK.
GRAND CENTRAL FANCY AND DRY GOODS ESTABLISHMENT.

OUR PRICES
ALWAYS THE LOWEST.

Attention is Directed to Our Large and Attractive Stock of
FALL GOODS
All the Novelties in Suits and Cloaks
AND
Hats and Bonnets.
The Most Approved Makes of
BLACK AND COLORED SILKS,
SATINS, VELVETS & PLUSHES

Hosiery, Underwear, and Gloves
For Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children.

DRESS GOODS
In the Newest Styles and Colorings.

We are Sole Agents for the U. S. of the Celebrated Red Star Brand o Wonderful Wearing
VELVETEENS,
Noted for its Rich Color and Close Resemblance to Silk Velvet. 39 Shades. Price, 74 cents. To Prevent Imitations a Red Star is Stamped on the Back of Every Second Yard.

Mail Orders Carefully Executed.
R. H. MACY & CO.

ROYAL WILTON
CARPETS.
Celebrated English Makes, in Novel and Exclusive Designs, our own importation, just received and placed on sale at exceedingly attractive prices.

GREAT SPECIAL SALE.
WILTON VELVETS.

Having just purchased the entire balance of a manufacturer's stock, we offer the most superb line of Velvets ever shown at about one-half their actual value.

1,000 pcs. Best Body Brussels and Extra Super Ingrains, this Season's styles, at prices that cannot be excelled.

UPHOLSTERY
50 pieces Silk Brocatelles, at $4 50; worth $6.50 per yard.
100 pieces Mohair Plush at $1; worth $1.50 per yard.
800 Pairs Chenille Curtains at $10; worth $14 per pair.
500 Pairs Lace Curtains at $3.50; worth $5 per pair.
Window Shades [a Specialty.]

SHEPPARD KNAPP & CO.,
Sixth Avenue and 13th Street, New York.

ENTERPRISE MEAT CHOPPERS.
BEST IN THE WORLD.
GUARANTEED TO CHOP, NOT GRIND THE MEAT.

FOR CHOPPING SAUSAGE MEAT, MINCE MEAT, HAMBURG STEAK FOR DYSPEPTICS. BEEF TEA FOR INVALIDS. &C.

Farm and Fireside says:
"It is the only Meat Chopper we ever saw that we would give house room. It has proven such a very useful machine that we want our readers to enjoy its benefits with us."

No. 10 Chops 1 pound per minute. Price, $3.00.
12 Chops 1 pound per minute. Price, $2.50.
22 Chops 2 pounds per minute Price, $4.00.
32 Chops 3 pounds per minute Price, $6.00.

American Agriculturist says:
"We have given this Meat Chopper a thorough trial with most satisfactory results. They excel anything of the kind made in either hemisphere."

Send for Catalogue. No. 10 Family Size, Price, $3
ENTERPRISE M'F'G CO., PHILADELPHIA, P

India Shawls.

Probably the last opportunity for procuring an India Shawl for a fraction of its cost.—There are few, if any, left in India; there are only a few (and those not the best) in London. Virtually all there are in existence to supply the present or any future want, are in the hands of a few merchants. The prices are so low that those who have made them all their lives have been driven to other kinds of labor, and in the natural course of events will not return to making shawls until the prices of ten years ago prevail again.

We have a surplus which we will sell at present as follows:

$700	Shawls	for	$375
500	"	"	275
300	"	"	150
200	"	"	100
175	"	"	85

When these are gone there will be no more to be had at anything like these prices.

Lord & Taylor,
UP-TOWN STORE, Broadway & Twentieth Street;
DOWN-TOWN STORE, Grand & Chrystie Streets, New York.

FALL & WINTER DRESS GOODS
James McCreery & Co.
Offer among their large assortment of Fall and Winter Dress Goods the following special lines:

A large stock of Wool Serges, 42 inches wide, at 65 cents per yard. Two lines of Stripe and Check Cheviots at 80 cents per yard; also, a full assortment of Fall Colorings in Heavy-Weight Camel's Hair Beatrice Cloths, at $1 per yard, well worth $1.50.

Orders by mail from any part of the country will receive careful and prompt attention. Mention this paper.

Broadway, cor. 11th St., N. Y.

A MILLION
BOOKS
RARE, CURIOUS, CURRENT. IN STOCK.
ALMOST GIVEN AWAY.
Libraries Supplied Cheaper than at any Book Store in the World.
LIBRARIES AND BOOKS BOUGHT.
MAMMOTH CATALOGUE FREE.
LEGGAT BROTHERS
81 CHAMBERS STREET,
do d3ro West of City Hall Park. NEW YORK.

SCROLL SAWS
Fancy Woods, Designs, Saw Blades, and materials for Scroll Sawing. Fleetwood and Dexter Machines. First-class Tool Chests. Send for Circular.
J. T. PRATT & CO.,
53 FULTON ST., NEW YORK.

KNABE
PIANOFORTES.
UNEQUALLED IN
Tone, Touch, Workmanship and Durability.
KNABE & CO.,
Baltimore Street,
Avenue, N. Y.

The Christian Intelligencer

Een-dracht maakt macht.

Vol. LVII.—No. 45. Whole No. 2937. | NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1886. | $2.65 a Year in Advance. No. 48 Church Street.

Editors: Rev. JOHN M. FERRIS, D.D. Rev. N. H. VAN ARSDALE.
Associate Editor: MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

A WEEK OF PRAYER for the blessing of God upon the Young Men's Christian Associations begins on next Sabbath. The associations are becoming a powerful agency to lead young men to God and to preserve them from the temptations to which they are especially exposed. There are 1,071 of them in the United States, with 140,000 members. Five hundred and ninety-two associations report young men's Bible classes, 555 young men's prayer-meetings. But the Church is called to look out beyond this country and to plead for Divine favor for the 2,301 associations in other lands. If these more than 3,000 organized bodies of young men full of life and force should receive a baptism of the Holy Spirit, should be endowed richly with the gifts of Divine grace, what a mighty power they would be in the world not only at the present time, but for years to come. Is it not wise to remember them in the pulpit, the prayer-meeting, at the family altar and in our private devotions?

EDUCATION.—In the course of President Dwight's admirable article, in the Forum for November, on "How I Was Educated," he makes this remark, which, we think, must commend itself to the approval of every intelligent and thoughtful observer: "But I cannot help feeling, in view of my own college course, and of all that I have seen since then, that the great defect of the past and the present education lies in the want of personal and individual intercourse between the teacher and his pupil—immediate contact of the mind of the former with the mind of the latter—in such a degree as is to be desired for the pupil's highest inspiration." But one may well ask how this can possibly be attained in institutions like Yale, where the students number some five hundred or more, and where accordingly they scarcely see a professor till they enter the junior year, and even then are apt to be lost in the crowd. It is only a college whose students do not exceed two hundred that can afford the requisite facilities for a close contact of the teacher with his pupil. Such contact compensates for many deficiencies in other things, but the lack of it cannot be compensated by anything else. The American pupils of Tholuck, who were so many and so distinguished, all set most store upon the companionship he allowed them to have with him. It was not so much what he taught as the charm of his inspiration and personality which influenced them so deeply and permanently.

OUR BRANCH of the Reformed Church has before it, at home and abroad, such opportunities for effective and legitimate service as it has not enjoyed for years past. The diligent and hearty improvement of these opportunities will lead to others still more desirable and more numerous, and by providing promptly, intelligently and liberally for those now existing, from them will be received help for a proper development of those which will flow out of them. "For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath." These words of our Lord and Prophet, of Him who rules and rewards and with whom are the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, are pertinent to the position of our Church to-day, for they were spoken immediately after the parable of the sower on one occasion, and as a conclusion of the parable of the talents on another. They address us to-day with special force. Our work in heathen lands is widening and advancing with rapidity. The seed sown in the past is here germinating and sending up vigorous and promising shoots, which if properly cared for will soon bear blossoms and fruit, and there it is bearing fruit such as we have prayed and hoped for. Everything that we have instituted is growing, schools, churches, theological classes. At home, both at the East and West, new fields are opening, new churches are organized, and the appeals to our generosity exceed those of a number of previous years. Educational institutions also are pleading for a larger income to enable them to meet the demands actually made upon them. By prompt giving now we shall soon have more and have abundance. It is giving that is called for. Nothing else will answer. There is sterling piety on these new fields, and admirable methods of work are carried forward with intelligent energy; the one thing lacking is money. To give that is our part just now. It should be done with rejoicing.

THE END of social order and legal regulations has not begun because Mr. George received nearly seventy thousand votes a week ago, or because Mr. Powderly very unwisely affirmed his allegiance to the platform on which Mr. George stood. Mr. George's vote was only one-third of the votes cast, and it remains to be seen whether it can be much increased. Socialism has been a political party in Germany for almost if not quite a generation and has not yet obtained possession of the government, and, what is more to the point, has not secured the votes of a majority of the wage-earners. Our English cousins, after they heard of the election last week in this city, began to sell their American securities; a very unwise thing to do if they had a desire to hold them, and especially so as they had just succeeded only with great difficulty in inducing the socialists of London to forego a parade on the Lord Mayor's Day,—in fact, a procession to follow immediately after that of the Lord Mayor. There may be trouble with the socialists in this country, but it is not likely to become serious. The wage earners who have one hundred millions of dollars in the savings banks, those who own the houses they live in, those who have bought a few bonds, those who have loaned money on mortgages, will not advocate the theories of Mr. George or the communists. A large number of workingmen voted against the labor candidate, so called, and would do it again. This land is neither Germany nor Great Britain. Our constitutions and laws have endured a series of severe tests, and will endure this one. Mr. George said, indeed, in one of his singular speeches, that the United States are on the eve of a French Revolution; but he was just as mistaken in that as he is in the theories of his books. The workingmen have real grievances, but they will see that to promote a socialistic revolution is not the way to remove them. The only real strength communism has among us it has from the large inflow of men who do not understand the American State or the American Church. The longer their residence among us, the more they will find out how mistaken they are. And workingmen will find out that the best counsel they can find anywhere is to be found in the words of the Bible and especially in the words of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and that the best and most powerful instrument to right all wrongs is the Word of God. It is for the Church to teach that Word by precept and example, and to teach diligently and prayerfully, and to live according to the Word carefully and conscientiously. It is for Christian people to acquaint themselves with the condition of the wage-earners, to sympathize with them, to give them good counsel, to strive to remove the evils that oppress them, and to do to others as they would have others do to them. It is a time for the faithful observance of the Golden Rule, and such faithfulness will be as efficacious as it has always been.

The Immigration Once More.

UNDER the title "Unwelcome Guests," the London Christian World, of September 30th, described a company of people in words Americans who love their country may well consider seriously. It said:

Some two months ago a party of men, women and children, to the number of one hundred, described as Greek gipsies, were landed in London. Having been ejected from the Millwall Docks, they settled upon some waste land at Poplar, but their filthy habits and the annoyance they caused by begging soon made them an intolerable nuisance. From London they were conveyed to Liverpool, with the view of shipping them to America, as their burning desire was to roam about the United States. So dirty, however, were they, that no shipping company would accept them as passengers, for if they did they would have had nobody to keep them company. Even Paddy, who is not too particular, refused to sail with the Greek gipsies. Some of them were then sent from Hull to Hamburg, in the hope that they might be conveyed to New York by a German line. But they were not allowed to land at Hamburg and were sent back to Hull, where they still are, whilst the remainder of the party are in Liverpool. They resolutely refuse to return to Greece, being bent upon reaching the land of the Stars and Stripes. But the puzzle is how to get them there. Their money will soon be gone, and then they will become chargeable to the ratepayers. The Greek government has been appealed to, but the Greek Consul-General says that most of them are not Greeks, but Serbs and Roumanians, who wander freely over Eastern Europe. They are tinkers and coppersmiths by trade, but we fear that, even if their habits were not objectionable, they would not have much chance of earning a living in this country whilst our own unemployed hold up such a forest of idle hands. Some of them have Greek passports, but, according to the Greek Consul-General, these were given to them in order to enable them to pass through Greece on their way Westward. It is pretty clear that Greece, having once got rid of them, does not want them back again.

Such an addition to our population is at least not desirable. If it is possible to send such people back to the land they came from, it would be wise to do so.

After his return from Europe, late last summer, Mr. Chauncey Depew said to the representative of a daily newspaper, who wished to obtain the impressions he had brought back with him, that one of the facts which had chiefly arrested his attention was that the anarchists and communists of the Continent, being stoutly resisted at every step, thwarted by the governments and the people, being repressed with severity and having little political power, were turning their faces toward the United States and were coming to this country in increasing numbers, for they believed it to be a free field where they could work out their schemes without hindrance and effect their desire to destroy all private property. It is plain to all that Mr. Depew is right. He is competent to form an opinion on such a matter and his words should have weight with us. Evidence enough has been furnished during the past two or three years that communism is increasing its strength among us. The election of the past week in this city will increase the expectations of European socialists and tend to invite larger numbers to transfer their efforts to this country. Their aim is to overturn the government and the existing social order, to deprive every man of his property, to substitute a collective for individual ownership. We speak by the card and not from conjecture or from the hysterical imaginations which fear inspires.

For years the immigration was from Great Britain. It respected the Sabbath and the Church, assailed none of our institutions, supplied laborers much needed, and fell in kindly with all our ways. Political life was corrupted by emigration from Ireland, which habitually voted for the most unprincipled candidates for office; but that was manageable and could be and was overcome when it carried its schemes to an extreme length. Many of the emigrants from Europe, however, of a few years past have come to us to overturn nearly everything we prize, everything we have secured at a great cost of thought and effort; have come to be, not our fellow citizens, but our masters; not to learn the duties of citizenship in a true republic, but to impose upon us the wild and unjust theories which they have formed under formal State churches and oppressive governments. They are godless, sceptics, liberty to them is license to do as they please; the Sabbath is a holiday, not a holy day; a free Church is a conspiracy against freedom of action, a restraint upon their atheistic unrighteousness not to be tolerated. To them nothing is sacred; a man of virtue, thriftiness, industry and piety, is in their view an enemy of his fellows, deserving only to be stripped of all he possesses and to be hurled in disgrace from the esteem and honor he has attained. Such men have come and are coming to these shores by thousands, and wait to-day only for a favorable opportunity to accomplish their unrighteous and destructive schemes.

A few weeks ago a body of workingmen struck and refused to work because their employers insisted on taking apprentices into their shops. Strikes have repeatedly occurred in other trades for the same reason. American lads are not to be allowed to learn mechanical trades except in very limited numbers, lest the labor market should be overstocked. But a few years ago in rural towns it was common to see four or five lads in the carpenter shop and in other shops. That day is over. The trades are closed against American lads, except the very limited number allowed by the workingmen. But European operatives can come by the thousands and crowd the labor market. The American boy is excluded from the shop, the foreign mechanic is welcomed.

The national land office reports that during the last civil year, ending on June 30th, over twenty millions of acres of the public lands were sold, that the average sales for a few years have been twenty millions of acres a year, and that there are about two hundred millions of acres of public lands remaining in the possession of the nation. In ten years, therefore, the national domain will be disposed of. A large part will become the property of emigrants from Continental Europe who have contributed nothing toward the making of the Republic, who have not the shadow of a claim upon the national property. In ten years more there will be no public lands, no cheap lands, for the sons of American farmers. The children of those who have made this country what it is will have been deprived of their patrimony.

We are all the children of emigrants indeed, but we have acquired rights. We have a right to the institutions we have founded and maintained at great cost. We have a right to the fruit of the self-sacrifice and toil and carefulness and sagacity of our fathers and of ourselves. No men of other lands have a right to swarm here and take our acquisitions from us.

Is it not time to "put a tariff on Castle Garden," to tax every immigrant family or individual, coming here to live, one hundred or two hundred dollars a head and so put a check upon the immigration? Has not the immigration reached a point and assumed a character when a restraint upon the inflow has become necessary, when what was once largely a blessing has become almost a curse?

THE ELECTION on Tuesday of last week was an uncommonly earnest one on all sides This city has its keg of human powder and a pretty large one, ready to explode from a spark. Yet, although a very large proportion of the population was doing its best in the triangular contest and was incited by a confident hope of success, the struggle was conducted under a supreme determination to obey the law and preserve order. At present it seems to have been one of the fairest political contests ever conducted in the city, as it certainly was one of the most orderly. For the best of reasons we can entertain great expectations for a body of voters exhibiting such self-restraint, such regard for the common weal, rendering such a voluntary and cheerful obedience to social and legal regulations. The population here is heterogenous, has come from all lands, and often causes great anxiety in good and patriotic men; but when it is seen behaving with the decorum of the last election and with unfailing regard for all that depends on good order we may reasonably believe that it has in it a character which can be wrought upon for the attainment of the best ends.

"Old Colony" Papers.

THAT NOBLE ANIMAL, THE HORSE.

II.

PROBABLY we do not associate horses with travelling, in this age of steam, quite so much as in Bible times or even in the stage coach days of our fathers. Though the horse might be "a vain thing for safety," he was a great thing for speed. Habakkuk speaks of the Assyrian horses as "swifter than leopards." The rich and great would travel post in old times, with relays of horses. In royal progresses, the fleetest steeds were laid under contribution. Every beast in the land was, for the time, the king's. In this way I understand the Saviour's requisition of the colt upon His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. It was designed to be a royal progress, and an assertion of His royal prerogative.

And the day is coming when all travel shall be sanctified. It shall be a royal progress of Jesus and His disciples. It shall not desecrate the Sabbath, even under pretence of drawing people to hear preaching. It shall not be on railroads whose every sleeper is rotten with fraud, and every rail rusted with robbery. The summer tourist shall not leave his religion at home, nor lose, like Robinson Crusoe, his reckoning of Sundays. "The wayfaring man" in Europe, and even in Paris, shall no longer be worse than "a fool" to err in the way which seemed so clear and so narrow in his own country and in his father's house. The disciple shall also be as his Lord, who "went about doing good."

But this "holiness to the Lord" shall be on the bells of the horses. Harness, in ancient times, was by no means as simple a contrivance as with us. Among other things, the collar terminated in a bell under the horse's or mule's neck, and sometimes there seem to have been lesser appendages which gave forth a tinkling sound. And when these trifling and almost superfluous details of the trappings of the horses which men drive are classed among consecrated things, can anything be added to imply a universal sanctification of heart and life? It shall not be a surface-spread of holiness, however extensive, but one that is vertical as well as lateral, apparent in every ring and ray as we cut downward into the life of men.

The bells of the horses stand for the ornamental element of life. They were primarily appended for the same purpose as tassels, plumes and embroidery, and silver and gold platings. The only other mention of bells in Scripture is in connection with the high priest's ephod, whose long border was hung with small golden bells alternating with carved and colored pomegranates. These latter had, of course, other uses and meanings, but were mainly a matter of adornment. And now the inspired announcement is made, that the tinkling ornaments of a horse's bridle shall yet be on a level of sanctity with those blessed bells, whose soft and sacred sound seemed to the pious Hebrew's ear like the distant footfalls of a God. The whole movement of life shall be a priestly progress. Its very fringes and faintest echoes shall be as when a nation of priests pass within the holy of holies.

God is the author of beauty, and its king. He beautifies the place of His sanctuary, and offers Himself as a "diadem of beauty" to His people. But beyond all the brightness of His heavens and His earth, beyond all the charms of form and color with which He has inspired art to embellish the handiwork of man, there is an ornament of grace and a beauty of holiness, without which no man can please Him. And the time is coming when, like a bride adorned for her husband, the whole world shall stand thus arrayed before Him.

There is no higher form of art than music, howbeit none so common and popular; and alas! none so desecrated. The arts of ornament and design still wait their inscription, "holiness to the Lord," but though for the most part without God they are rarely, and only in secret and illicit ways, unclean. Whereas musical art, while an indispensable aid to religion, is also the most serviceable medium of ribaldry, licentiousness, and unbelief. Even when music is professedly the handmaid of the Lord, she is too apt to be a Martha rather than a Mary. She sings with an averted eye and a distracted heart, as unto man and not to God, and with the thought of receiving praise more than of rendering it. Too often is she prostituted to the filling of the Church's coffers, like her of whom it is recorded: "It came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel met us who brought her masters much gain!" But the day is coming when a greater than Paul, "being grieved," shall turn and say to the spirit of worldliness which possesses our church music, and which supposes that gain is godliness, "I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her."

The modern, and with us the main, association of horse's bells is with merriment and pleasure-seeking. The immediate suggestion to our minds is some scene like the following: A winter night, the heavens one glory of moonlight, and the earth one glare of snow; a cavalcade of sleighs gliding swiftly over the smooth roads, filled with gay and singing parties of the young, who were buried to the chin in furs, and drawn by horses that dash on as if in hearty sympathy with the mirth and gladness which they bear; and above the shout and song which make the roads ring, above the grinding of the snow and the trampling of hoofs, and yet as an underlying and interpreting melody, sounds the shrill and incessant chime of the bells of the horses!

I suppose there are worse things in this world than sleigh-rides, and that there will be a place for them in the millenial age. But I am sure they will be all the gladder, and will not be viewed with such grave suspicion by the parent and pastor, and by all who are zealous for God and solicitous for the young, when upon these bells of the horses also shall be "holiness unto the Lord." And so of all the pleasuring and conviviality, concerning which the wise man was tempted to cry out: "I said of laughter, it is mad; and of mirth, what doeth it?" Whereas now it is seldom that God is in all the thoughts of the pleasure seeker and the merry-maker, then His name shall be upon the very jingling accompaniments of their social festivities.

Yes, not church bells alone and convent bells and altar bells shall be accounted sacred, and invested with a holy calling, but all bells shall be baptized of the spirit of holiness, and blessed of God. The door-bell shall be the medium of a sincere and sanctified fellowship, and of a "hospitality without grudging;" and the dinner-bell shall be as the chimes which call us to the Lord's table. Man's whole life shall be one sweet symphony, keyed upon the song which the shepherds heard at Bethlehem; and, as it flows on in the light of God, it shall throw off a spray of holy harmonies like a peal of bells.

Religion shall be no secret thing. Consecration shall be of the outer life, as well as of the inner. There shall be no pretence of holiness, a mere plating of the harness, a religion which flaunts before men in caparisoned steeds drawn up at church-doors, a sounding of the trumpet or bell before one as the hypocrites do, no mechanical or ritualistic holiness—like that of Queen Helena, who sought to fulfil this prophecy by fastening bits of the cross to the tinkling ornaments of her bridle rein. And on the other hand there shall be no pretence of a holiness which does not set apart, nor of a priesthood of believers which does not make them a peculiar people, clothing them with the garment of an avowed dedication, and causing them to go in and out before all men with the sweet savor and sound of a perpetual confession.

For, what is inscribed is made evident. And the testimony is full and clear as it extends to the minutest details, and finds expression in its faintest and commonest utterances. What then shall be the golden harmonies of that Day, when there shall be upon the bells of the horses

HOLINESS TO THE LORD!

F. N. ZABRISKIE.

October 20th, 1886.

The Departing Swallows.

NOT yet, dear swallows, do not gather yet!
A little longer stay;
For at your flight the glory of the year
Will fade and pass away.

With what delight we hailed your sudden coming
A few bright months ago!
A happy crowd on rapid wings disporting
In evening's golden glow—

White breasts that caught the gleam of vanished sunshine,
And flashed it back to earth—
Dark wings that sped like arrows through the ether—
Cries of exulting mirth.

For ye were heralds of the glorious summer.
In regal pomp she came;
And Flora lit for her a million torches
Of many-colored flame.

But now a breath comes sighing through the arden;
The roses drop their leaves;
The poppy falls apart, and freckled lily;
The scarlet salvia grieves.

For life is waning, waning. Cruel winter
Behind the keen blue sky
Stands waiting. And the swallows know, and gather,
And form their troops to fly.

Good-by, dear swallows, little summer friends!
Cold falls the autumn rain.
Follow the sunshine! but, some happy day,
Come back, come back again!

—Mary E. Atkinson, in The Congregationalist

Thayer's Lexicon of the New Testament.

THIS handsome quarto from the press of the Messrs. Harpers is an important and very welcome addition to the resources of the student of sacred literature. All scholars have felt for years that just such a work was greatly needed.

In the year 1850 Dr. Robinson issued the last edition of his New Testament Lexicon, which at once took rank as a standard, both in Britain and this country. It accurately represented the best scholarship of that period. The learning, the insight and the judgment of its distinguished author gave it a value which it is not likely to lose. His opinion on vexed questions will always be quoted with respect. Yet it is quite impossible that a dictionary issued thirty-six years ago should answer the needs of the student in our own day. Those years have been marked by intense activity in every branch of New Testament study. Several new uncial manuscripts, some of them of great value, and a number of cursives, have been brought to light and collated, and much the same may be said of the most important versions, so that the aids for settling the Greek text have been vastly increased. A large variety of critical commentaries has appeared in Europe and America, which contribute in no small degree to the better understanding of the Greek Scriptures. So, too, in sacred geography, in archæology and in all the ground usually covered by a Bible dictionary, a decided advance has been made since the last generation. Now a proper Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament should represent to those who consult it the chief result of all this progress. And this is what Professor Thayer has aimed to do, and to a large extent has done.

The title page declares his volume to be a translation of Grimm's Wilke's Clavis Novi Testamenti, revised and enlarged. Grimm's Lexicon has for years been regarded as the best one existing, and it is certainly desirable to have his work reproduced in English as it is here. And yet we would prefer a volume based on Grimm which should give only Professor Thayer's own views, for the reason that Grimm, although studiously avoiding dogmatic bias, could not well escape showing in some degree the rationalism that he holds. For example, (p. 636,) the sense in which the phrase Son of God is applied to the Saviour is explained in entire consistency with the Arian hypothesis; the phrase "I am crucified with Christ," (p. 608), is said to mean, "By his death on the cross I am become utterly estranged from my former habit of feeling and action," which is unspeakably below the true sense of the words; in the article upon pneuma we are told, "In some pass. the Holy Spirit is rhetorically represented as a Person, where the qualifying adverb states what is not true either as a dogma or as exegesis; in a case where Luke differs from Matthew (p. 582) we are told that it was caused by his "ignorance;" the vexed utterance "baptized for the dead" is explained (p. 94) as meaning "on behalf of the dead, i.e., to promote their eternal salvation by undergoing baptism in their stead," which reverses the whole teaching of Scripture on the subject of the means of salvation. (In the article on huper (p. 639) we find a dozen of instances cited in which this preposition not only can, but must, have the signification concerning.) It is not pleasant to find ineptitudes like these in a volume which must be put into the hands of young students, for there is nothing else to take its place.

The additions made by the translator are valuable. All the variations of text, as noted by different editors, from Griesbach to Westcott and Hort are given with due fulness and accuracy, as are also the noteworthy renderings of the Authorized Version and the recent Revision. One very useful feature is the occasional discussion of synonyms, a fine example of which is given on p. 286, in relation to thelo and boulomai. The same may be said of the references to grammatical authorities and to eminent commentators. On p. 304 Dr. Thayer confirms Grimm's denial of the ecbatic force of hina, notwithstanding the common charge of purism brought against those who, like Meyer, insist upon the telic sense everywhere. In the article on proginosko we have Rom 8: 29 explained as meaning "whom he (God) foreknew, sc. that they would love him." If the author or the editor would consult Cremer's Bib. Theol. Lexicon they would find a far more profound and satisfying view of the word, viz., that it denotes the union between God and the objects of His sovereign grace which is implied in His decree of salvation and accordingly is already in existence before its accomplishment. Certainly any view is better than that which makes God's action depend upon something outside of himself and not subject to His control. On p. 63 we find under apokrino the meaning "to begin to speak, but always where something has preceded (either said or done) to which the remarks refer." The statement made here is undoubtedly correct, but if so, then the verb retains its usual signification, to answer, and in no wise means to begin to speak. And to translate it in that way, would only obscure the sense and mislead the reader.

The appendix to the volume contains several very valuable tables, not accessible elsewhere to the ordinary scholar. These are (1.) a list of later Greek (i.e., post-Aristotelian) words in the New Testament; (2.) lists of words borrowed from the Hebrew, or the Latin, or other foreign tongues; (3.) lists of words and of significations peculiar to New Testament Greek, with occasional references to Josephus, Philo and the LXX, and (4.) lists of words peculiar to each of the New Testament writers. These are all given with a proper caveat in the preface against their misapplication. The concluding table is a collection of the verbal forms which might occasion a beginner some perplexity. This is so full as to leave nothing to desire. We cannot conclude the notice without expressing regret that the accomplished scholar who has given this boon to students should have so carefully avoided any mention anywhere of his eminent predecessor in the same field, the lamented Edward Robinson.

T. W. CHAMBERS.

How to Spell "Domine."

UNDER this title a recent issue of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette contained a letter from the Rev. Dr. Chambers, from which we make the following extract:

"The modernizing of the Latin Dominus (Lord) has different forms and different applications. In Scotland the form is Dominie, and the application is to schoolmasters. Every one remembers Dominie Sampson, of Scott's 'Guy Mannering;' and within ten years a volume concerning North British school teachers had for its title 'Scottish Dominies.' In Holland, on the contrary, the form of the word is Domine, and it is applied exclusively to ministers of the Gospel. Hence the use of the term became prevalent in the Dutch churches of this country. In all the records that I have seen the spelling is uniformly as I have given it. It seems to me desirable that the distinction should be carefully observed. Dominie is a Scotch name for the master of a school; Domine is the Dutch name for the pastor of a church, and as used by those familiar with it from infancy it is both respectful and affectionate."

Thanksgiving.

A PROCLAMATION.

BY the President of the United States.

It has long been the custom of the people of the United States, on a day in each year especially set apart for that purpose by their Chief Executive, to acknowledge the goodness and mercy of God and to invoke His continued care and protection.

In observance of such custom, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 25th day of November, inst., to be observed and kept as a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

On that day let all our people forego their accustomed employments, and assemble in their usual places of worship, to give thanks to the Ruler of the Universe for our continued emjoyment of the blessings of a free Government, for a renewal of business prosperity throughout our land, for the return which has rewarded the labor of those who till the soil, and for our progress as a people in all that makes a nation great. And while we contemplate the infinite power of God in earthquake, flood, and storm, let the grateful hearts of those who have been shielded from harm through His mercy be turned in sympathy and kindness toward those who have suffered through His visitations. Let us also in the midst of our thanksgiving remember the poor and needy with cheerful gifts and alms, so that our service may by deeds of charity be made acceptable in the sight of the d.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 1st day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and eleventh.

[Seal.] GROVER CLEVELAND.

By the President:

T. F. BAYARD, Secretary of State.

Burdette on Physicians, Theologians, and Their Critics.

THE words of a sensible layman often have more weight with men than those of a minister, however much he may be esteemed. Among the lay preachers on all the affairs of life no one commands a larger audience than Robert J. Burdette, who mingles wit and wisdom as few men can. In his last contribution to the Brooklyn Eagle, after commenting on the officious attentions of those he calls "the volunteer aids on the medical staff," he goes on in this style:

Isn't it a little singular that people who are not physicians never seem to think that a doctor takes any thought concerning his patient? "Here," says the friend, or quite as likely the stranger, to the patient, "I'll tell you what will cure you right up; bring you square round and put you on your feet in five days." Then he mentions a remedy, so-called, that has stared at the world with unblushing impudence from dead wall, fence, rock and lurid almanac cover ever since brass was invented. Well-meaning and quite intelligent people make these suggestions, and are greatly surprised if the sufferer intimates that his learned physician probably knows something of the nature of the disease, and the best remedies. These good people think that the physician is so engrossed in his profession that he hasn't time to keep up with the wonderful medical discoveries of the day. But what, then, is his profession?

So there is always a class of laymen who know more theology than the ministers. "Away with these musty, antiquated ideas of the seminaries and colleges! Give us progressive thought, and advanced ideas!" But, somehow, when you review the matter calmly, you are inclined to connect theological seminaries with thought and ideas. It seems reasonable to suppose such things grow there quite as well and as healthily as they are apt to in the soil of the tannery, the counting-room, the law office the bakery, the lumber yard, the coal yard, and other places wherein the layman spends his days. Professional knowledge, even in the ministry, isn't to be despised. "I love flowers and religion," says Rev. Sam Jones; "but I despise botany and theology." Yes, and some of these days, in his love for flowers, he will pluck a beautiful bouquet of the brilliant leaves of the poison ivy, and then there will be the mischief to pay. A thorough knowledge of botany does not destroy our love for flowers, and it makes us love more wisely. Some of the beautiful scarlet berries are poison, and some of them are good to eat. The botanist never eats the poison ones himself, and he warns his friends who love these things ignorantly against touching them.

Our Church.

We are thankful for items of Church News compactly stated; or for marked copies or clippings from local exchanges, which we would not otherwise see. To insure publication in next number, they must reach us by noon on Monday. A condensation of items is unavoidable.

The Corner-Stone Laid.

ON the 26th of October, at 2 P.M., the Consistory, members and friends of the Second Church of Kalamazoo, were assembled to lay the corner-stone with appropriate ceremonies. Rev. A. Vennema prefaced the liturgical service with a full sketch of the history of the organization, and read the list of documents and papers to be placed in the box, among which was the INTELLIGENCER. Rev. P. Moerdyke delivered a short address, Rev. Mr. Gould, of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the city, offered prayer, and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. N. H. Dosker, pastor of the mother church, to whose influence and vigorous advocacy this Second Church is so greatly indebted.

It may be said that this infant church expressed its faith not only in the recital of the creed as part of the ceremonies, but especially in thus beginning to build without the funds needed to go on in this good work. It was an act of faith. The pastor has confidence in the success of the enterprise. He and his church rely upon the promised help of God and His people to carry them through.

They deserve the most generous and prompt financial assistance. No missionary undertaking of our denomination has better claims upon its liberality. No new enterprise in the East or West is more necessary, and, we are confident, none will better repay the liberality of its friends.

This church has a noble mission, an excellent prospect, but, to do its work well, should receive immediate aid in response to its pastor's many appeals. The people are doing their own utmost best, they are full of enthusiasm and hopefulness, and, with the needed gifts now secured, their progress will be rapid and healthy.

Delay in extending such assistance will work harm in many ways. They may lose the ardor of their enthusiasm, may grow discouraged, and months of disappointment at the start may cost years of impaired efficiency in the future. Therefore, let every individual and congregation desirous of promoting a cause that will so speedily justify all outlay and gratify its helpers, respond at once to their call for your contributions. P. MOERDYKE.

....NEW YORK CITY.—The installation of the Rev. A. E. Kittredge, D.D., as pastor of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church took place Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d, 1886, at 8 o'clock. The church was crowded with a large and interested congregation, and the pulpit was decorated with attractive greens and plants. The Rev. Alfred H. Demarest, President of the Classis of New York, conducted the exercises and read the form for installation. The Rev. Messrs. D. H. Martin and W. W. Knox conducted the devotional preliminary service, and the Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs preached the sermon on the text, St. Luke 24: 49, "Tarry ye at Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high," in which, with characteristic vigor of thought, elegance of diction, and eloquence of delivery, he dwelt upon the achievements of the Apostolic Church, the necessity and nature of the power from on high which came upon them, and the unity of the Church; not in uniformity of organization and worship, but in the presence of this power from on high.

The form of installation was read by the President, and charges were delivered by the Rev. Dr. T. W. Chambers to the pastor, and by the Rev. G. H. Smyth to the people, in which he dwelt upon the onerous labors of the pastor and the duties of the flock to support and obey its shepherd. Several hymns were sung heartily by the large congregation during the service, and the choir and the quartette rendered a number of selections very acceptably. The exercises closed with an earnest prayer for the Divine blessing and the benediction, pronounced by the pastor. Many tarried to congratulate the pastor and Consistory, and wish them abundant success, in regard to which they have many reasons to feel assured. E. J. R.

We depart from our almost uniform custom and publish the charge to the pastor.

Dr. Chambers said: A charge usually implies a statement of a preacher and pastor's duties and an exhortation to fulfil them, but such an address to one who by long years in the ministry has shown himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, would be impertinent, not to say absurd. Instead of this, therefore, I propose to give you in the name of the Classis a welcome, and that the more earnest and emphatic inasmuch as you come to us from another body, and we wish you to feel yourself at home. You have, as it were, crossed an invisible line in passing from the Presbyterian Church to the Reformed. Both are alike and yet different, as children of the same parents have the family likeness yet vary in individual traits. Both hold the same doctrine, called, as you please, Calvinistic, or Augustinian, or Pauline, but it is variously expressed. The Westminster Standards set forth one type of this faith, our five creeds (Apostles', Nicene, Athanasian, Belgic Confession and Dordracene Canons) express another, and as we think, a more genial one. Besides, we hold more firmly to ancestral traditions. For the first hundred years after the Reformation all the Reformed (in Germany, Bohemia, Switzerland, France, Holland, Scotland and England,) held fast to a liturgy. Their offices were moulded mainly after the pattern set by Calvin, who, when exiled from Geneva, was employed at Strasburg, in common with some English exiles under the Marian persecution, in framing suitable vehicles of devotion. The Westminster Assembly put an end to this so far as the non-prelatical portion of the British people were concerned; but all the rest of the Reformed held the old usage, and among them our Holland fathers, from whom we have inherited our Liturgy. Most of it is left optional, but the offices for the Sacraments, for Orders and for Discipline are made by the Constitution of the Church and by immemorial usage obligatory, and wisely so, to guard against error or indiscretion in matters so important.

You are come here to a peculiar and most important work. If an angel were to look just now at our country and pronounce upon its greatest needs, he would, I think, say that they were two. One, the vast tract west of the Mississippi where such is the immensely rapid growth and diffusion of the population that, although our Methodist brethren (God bless them!) build a church every day in the year, and the Presbyterians one every week, and we one every month, the needs of the occasion are by no means supplied. The other, our great cities which are, as has been said, "great sores on the body politic," because filled with an immigrant and alien population, who are estranged from the Gospel, and often appear like a vast mass of heathenism lying under the sound of the church bells. This need is greater than the other. The danger is imminent and increasing. For a generation the pastors and people of the city have been struggling to solve the problem, and have not succeeded. The effort is still going on. You are most welcome as an additional laborer in the great field. It is common to say that edifices like this one are only religious club houses where a set of people of common interests meet to have their literary tastes gratified and their ears entertained by one whom they have chosen for the purpose. And this is all. But it is not true; at least I know of no case in which it is true. Evangelical churches are established and maintained primarily to nourish the religious life of those who belong to or attend them, but next, or rather as a part of this vitality, to be of service to others, to shine as a city set on a hill, to win souls to Christ, and to extend His kingdom to the East and the West, even to the ends of the earth.

To join in this good work you are now installed here. It is over a church which has a history. Founded early in the century it has had a goodly array of faithful pastors—Bork, DuBois, Hunt, Hardenberg, Ganse and Reed—all men of mark. The first one on the list was a spiritual son of Dr. Livingston (converted by a sermon he preached in a barn near Poughkeepsie when driven by the war from New York) and the spiritual father of Dr. John Scudder, the head of that goodly family which in the second generation and the third has yielded so many bright ornaments of the evangelical ministry at home and abroad. The last one was a man who did a wondrous work here and whose loving fidelity endeared him beyond measure to all who knew him. These men you succeed. As a result of their labors you have a nucleus of great value—men who have gone through fire and through water—who are welded together by the discipline of trial, and who, therefore, are to be relied upon as a stable and fixed quantity. They will stand by you in sunshine and in storm. And with this strong fulcrum for your lever, you may lift far off regions.

The Lord was pleased abundantly to bless your ministry in this city years ago, and to do the same in a yet greater degree in your recent charge in Chicago. We pray and hope that He will enable you to do still more here and now, outstripping all the past, and bringing a multitude of souls to the fellowship of Christ.

Another Missionary Meeting.

THE sixth annual meeting of the "Woman's Classical Missionary Association of Cayuga" was held in the Reformed Church of Utica last week, Wednesday and Thursday. Vice-President Mrs. E. M. Babcock, of Syracuse, presided. At the first session, Wednesday afternoon, an address of welcome by Mrs. S. Crittenden was made in behalf of the Utica Branch; the report of Miss C. Gridley, the Secretary, was presented, an interesting paper was read on "Medical Missions," and a spirited discussion on "The Methods of Mission Work," was engaged in.

At the evening session, after the usual preliminary exercises, Rev. Wesley R. Davis, D.D., of Albany, delivered an able address on "The Power and Aim of Missions." He was followed by Rev. John A. DeBaun, D.D., of Fonda, who spoke on "Our Personal Obligations to Missions." Rev. Dr. Hartley closed the meeting with a few remarks on mission work in general.

Thursday morning Mrs. E. M. Babcock read a thoughtful paper on "Our Work and Present Duty;" reports were received from delegates, by which it was shown that there is a flourishing mission in almost every church of the Classis, and much good work being done.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the reading of a letter from Pundita Ramabi, of Madras, an accomplished young Hindoo widow.

At a short business session, suitable resolutions were adopted, and officers for the ensuing year elected.

....STUYVESANT, N. Y.—On Wednesday, November 3d, Mr. George Zabriskie Collier was ordained a minister and was installed pastor of the Church of Stuyvesant. The President of Classis, the Rev. Dr. E. A. Collier, presided and read the form.

The Rev. Dr. F. N. Zabriskie preached the sermon, which was an admirable presentation of the Christian minister as a soldier-servant, or knight, of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Rev. Dr. W. H. Campbell, with apostolic tenderness and wisdom, delivered the charge to the pastor; and was followed by Rev. Dr. John B. Drury who spake earnestly and appropriately to the people.

Revs. J. B. Campbell, of Rhinebeck, and John H. Salisbury, of Coxsackie, assisted in the devotional exercises. And all these united in the impressive laying on of hands. The day was one of autumn's loveliest. The well-rendered music, the decorated church and the large congregation were indications of the interest with which these services had been anticipated. The attention and evident gratification of all showed that these anticipations were fully realized. That the highest hopes of pastor and people may be far exceeded is the devout prayer of many deeply interested hearts. The benediction of the newly installed pastor closed the delightful services. S. C.

....BROOKLYN, N. Y.—A dedication service, conducted according to the Liturgy of the Reformed Church, set apart to the worship of God the new and pleasant chapel of the "Greenwood Heights Protestant Union Sabbath-school" of this city. Organized by a few faithful workers who felt the pressing need of some place of religious instruction and worship in a locality where no accessible church or Sabbath school was in existence, this enterprize was commenced December 21st, 1884, in two small and unsuitable rooms in the second story of a private house. Thirty-five scholars attended the first session of the school and less than ten dollars was in the hands of the organizers for the payment of all expenses. Now in less than two years, and largely by their own efforts, the originators of this enterprize rejoice in the possession of land and chapel worth fully $1,500, subject to an indebtedness of only $300, a well-organized school of eighty children, a weekly prayer-meeting and monthly preaching service. The dedication service on November 7th was conducted by Rev. A. DeW. Mason, pastor of the South Reformed Church, whose people have been among the most active nursers and sympathizers of the movement.

The school is a union school, self-supporting, independent of denominational ties, and in a hitherto utterly uncultivated field has a wide and growing sphere of usefulness which it is earnestly and successfully endeavoring to fill for the glory of the Master and the good of souls.

A. DEW. M.

...BOARD OF EDUCATION. WHAT SHALL BE DONE?—The General Synod at its last session made an appeal for young men as students for the ministry. While the Church was yet calling upon the Lord of the harvest, He was answering. Within six weeks the Board has taken under its care twenty-four young men. Of these seven are in the Seminary at New Brunswick; six are in Rutgers College four are in Hope College; and seven are in grammar schools. This makes a total of sixty three on the roll. Others are coming, so that in a few weeks there will probably be seventy students who look to the Board for assistance. The friends must see that this necessitates ten thousand dollars from individuals and churches. It begins to look now as if we shall be straitened, not for men, but for means. We shall be, unless the Church comes promptly to the front. May we not confidently expect an earnest appeal from each pastor, and a generous response from the people?

GILES H. MANDEVILLE, C. S.

SYNOD'S ROOMS, N. Y., November 8th, 1886.

....THE PASTORS' ASSOCIATION met in the Synod Rooms, 34 Vesey street, on Monday morning and listened to an interesting essay by the Rev. W. W. Clark, of Staten Island, on "Bible Readings and How to Prepare them." Next Monday the Rev. A. G. Vermilye, D.D., will present a paper on the subject: "Woman's Place in the Social Meeting of the Church." All ministers of the Reformed Church are cordially invited to attend.

....PATERSON, N. J.—The First Church, Rev. J. L. Danner, pastor, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire last Sunday evening. The fire was discovered under the vestibule floor about seven o'clock. Before it had time to spread much it was extinguished by the Fire Department. A defective flue is supposed to have been the cause of the fire. The pastor thinks it will cost $1,000 to repair the church.

....BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Rev. John C. Guenther was installed pastor of the German Evangelical Church on Sunday evening. There was a large congregation present. There were flowers in profusion about the pulpit, and the rail around the organ loft was hid by bannerets and entwined evergreen. The Rev. John H. Smock, President of the North Classis of Long Island, presided and read the form; the Rev. John U. Guenther, father of the newly installed pastor, preached the sermon; the charge to the pastor was made by the Rev. Franz Hartig, and that to the people by the Rev. Dr. J. M. Wagner, a former pastor. The singing was an interesting feature of the services.

....NEWARK, N. J.—No more solemn and impressive service has entered into the life of the North Church than that of last Sabbath in the spacious and beautiful Sabbath school-room at the unveiling of a memorial tablet to the late Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, who, during his life, had identified himself with this Church from its inception. In his remarks, the Rev. Dr. Waters, the pastor of the church, offered a warm tribute to the memory of Mr. Frelinghuysen, and in well-chosen words congratulated the large gathering of scholars, teachers and friends, on the appropriateness of this memorial to one who labored so faithfully and brought to bear such eminent talent in his work as President of the Sabbath-school for nearly thirty years.

Prof. C. E. Hart, a former pastor of the church, bore testimony in a glowing eulogy to the value of Mr. Frelinghuysen's cooperation with the pastor in his work, of his unflagging zeal as a member of the consistory, and of that unswerving loyalty to the church of his choice and of his ancestry which will embalm his memory, without the aid of sculptured inscriptions, in the hearts of all true sons of the Reformed Church, especially its younger members, who may safely trust him as an example of the noble citizen, and as an ideal churchman. In the unavoidable absence of Rev. Dr. Campbell, of New Brunswick, N. J., the Rev. Dr. Few-Smith, of Newark, offered short closing remarks.

The tablet, which is placed in the west wall of the Sabbath-school, is of white marble, designed after the Gothic style, and is elaborate in the carving of its details. On its face is the following inscription:

Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, a Christian in whom there was no guile. Wise, consistent, true and faithful in all things. President of the Sabbath-school for nearly thirty years. To him, under God, this church largely owes its existence and prosperity. In grateful remembrance of his devotion to the Sabbath-school the teachers and scholars rear this monument. Born August 4th, A.D. 1817; died May 20th, 1885.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet." W.

...The Hoxton Academy Chapel Sunday-school, the first established in London, celebrated its 102d anniversary on Sunday, Oct. 17th.

Inter-Seminary Missionary Alliance.

SEVENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION AT OBERLIN, OHIO, OCT. 28–31.

DURING the spring of 1880 the hearts of many of the students in the theological seminaries of our country were stirred to a greater zeal for missions. The working of the Spirit caused several who were more deeply interested to consult with friends in other seminaries, and a general meeting was called at the Union Theological Seminary of New York, at which it was proposed to organize an Alliance to be known as the Inter-Seminary Missionary Alliance, whose aim should be "the furtherance of practical interest in, and consecration to the cause of foreign and home missions on the part of theological students, both as prospective missionaries and prospective pastors." The first convention was appointed to meet with the students of our own Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, N, J., in December. Since that time yearly conventions have been held, and a constantly increasing interest has been reported from the seminaries represented.

The seventh annual convention was opened at Oberlin, O., Oct. 28th, by an informal reception of delegates in the morning. At 1.30 P.M. devotional exercises were held, followed by an address of welcome by President Fairchild, of the seminary, after which Mr. Fleck, of the Allegheny Seminary, read a paper upon "The Missionary Outlook," from which the following extract is taken:

"Before the union of the Church to the Lamb of God there is a supreme duty to be accomplished—namely, to Christianize the world. More than 30,000 pagans are dying daily, while education can enlighten the mind, the Church of Christ alone can enlighten the conscience and save the souls of the perishing. To-day the world is open, and 'welcome' is written over the door of every nation. One hundred missionary societies have 3,000 ordained ministers and 35,000 Christian workers to announce the Gospel to 850,000,000 pagans. $10,000,000 were raised last year for their support."

The discussion which followed brought out the fact that more men were wanted everywhere, and that for every convert to Christianity, 70 pagans are born into the world.

In the evening Dr. Leonard, Missionary to Utah, portrayed in glowing words the difficulties of that strange field. A work similar to Foreign Missions, for the Mormons must have their mental as well as their moral faculties enlightened before they can appreciate a pure Gospel. He was followed by Dr. Woods, of Cleveland, who spoke of "The Threefold Mystery of Christianity."

The second day of the Convention opened with the usual devotional service. A paper on Africa was read by Mr. Schiedt, of Lancaster Seminary. In his review of the country there were reported, 604 stations; 675 missionaries; 7,387 native associates; 575,884 Christians In the discussion which followed reference was made to the great University at Cairo, at which 10,000 Moslem students were preparing to go forth as missionaries of their faith.

Reports were then given, from the seminaries represented, which showed an increasing interest in all parts of the country. Thirty-three seminaries reported 234 delegates present, 75 of the last year's classes having gone as foreign missionaries and 35 to the home field; this includes but 33 of the 92 evangelical seminaries of the United States.

In the afternoon Mr. Ellis, of the Yale Divinity School, read a paper on "Our Frontier as a Mission Field." As America is to be a force in evangelizing the world, she must be thoroughly Christianized herself. The West is rapidly growing, infidelity and atheism are increasing to an alarming extent. The work has just begun among 11,000,000 people who are destitute of the Gospel. This was followed by the question box, from which Dr. Ashmore, assisted by six missionaries, answered a variety of questions placed there by the delegates. Next on the programme was a paper by Mr. Fleck, of the Wittenberg Seminary, 'How to Promote Missionary Interest in Our Colleges and Seminaries." Have a genuine missionary crank. This is the age of specialists. A good library is necessary, and the kind of consecration which says, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me do?"

The evening was occupied by Rev. Mr. McDowell, of Tiffin, O., who gave a very interesting account of the organization of the Alliance, and an address by Rev. Dr. Schauffler, of Cincinnati, who has been engaged in mission work among the Bohemians of the West, a class difficult to approach, of whom there are 80,000 in the great cities of the West, and among them only three workers who understand the language.

On the third day of the Convention the first paper was read by Mr. Smith, of the Vanderbilt University, in which he discussed the peculiar interest of China as a mission field, its extent, its enormous population, its antiquity, and our relations to her as a nation. After an interesting discussion, addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Smith, of China, Dr. Taylor, of Persia, and Dr. Davis, of Japan. Then a paper on the subject "Every Christian a Missionary," was read by Mr. Palmer, of Auburn Seminary.

Following the devotional exercises of the afternoon was a paper by Mr. Fuller, of Newton Seminary, "Why Should I Go to the Foreign Field?" It is a work which developes our utmost powers, it has made heroes of weak and unlearned men, has given us Livingstone, Carey and Moffatt, besides a host of other great names. A Church is blessed and prospered according as it gives to missions, and upon foreign missions depends the fate of the world. Instead of hindering home work it has increased it.

Two addresses were then made by Secretaries of Foreign Boards, after which a business meeting was held. The report of the Treasurer showed a balance of $586.44; 55 seminaries have joined the Alliance.

The address of the evening was by President Payne, D.D., of Delaware College, on the "Outlook and Call," considering the field in three aspects: Its vastness, its ripeness and its promise, all advancing to a higher end. To live in a great day and not to see its greatness is pitiable indeed.

The fourth and last day of the Convention dawned auspiciously, the consecration service showed the depth of feeling which existed among those who would conquer the world for Christ. Rev. Dr. Evans, of Cincinnati, preached a stirring sermon from Rom. 1:14. Our indebtedness to the world for all that it has done for us, and to Christ for His great love shown to us, we are to repay by our service toward the world, and by consecrating ourselves and all that we have to Christ's work.

At 2 P.M. a social meeting was held with missionaries and the representatives of missionary Boards. At 3 P.M. addresses were made by two members of the College Missionary Band. After the close of this service a special meeting was held to ascertain how many were willing and desirous to enter the field of foreign missions; over 80 signed the pledge to that effect.

The final meeting was held in the evening at 7 P.M. Dr. Ashmore gave some of his experience as a missionary, and answered questions bearing on the work. Five minute addresses were then given by twelve of the delegates, who were natives of as many foreign fields; their short reports of the condition of their own countries formed one of the most enjoyable meetings. Before closing, short sentences of farewell were spoken by one hundred of the delegates and foreign missionaries. After joining hands the Convention united in singing "Blessed be the tie that binds," and the Convention adjourned to meet next year at Alexandria, Va.

J. M. ALLEN.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, New Brunswick, N. J.

....The Moravians have sent eight missionaries to the Eskimos of Alaska, in reply to an appeal of Rev. Dr. Sheldon Jackson of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions. One of the missionaries, on whose practical talent the hope of the mission rested, was unfortunately drowned on August 10th.

....Mr. Spurgeon is sick again. English papers now say that his periodical attacks of illness are due to overwork and not to a tendency to rheumatism.

News of the Week.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 3.—For Mayor of this city, Abram S. Hewitt received 90,456 votes; Henry George, 67,930; Theodore Roosevelt, 60,474, and the Prohibition candidate 576. Rufus W. Peckham was elected Judge of the Court of Appeals of this State; Edward Patterson of the Supreme Court, and P. H. Dugro of the Superior Court, by large majorities—all Democrats. Robert S. Green, (Dem.) elected Governor of New Jersey, and General Beaver (Rep.) of Pennsylvania. ....A farewell dinner to the French guests given at the Hotel Brunswick by the Lafayette Post, G. A. R....Chrysanthemum exhibition opened at Cosmopolitan Hall, 48th street and Broadway....Surveyor Beattie, victim of the Custom House tragedy, is expected to recover....Hon. A. V. Schenck, of New Brunswick, ex-President of the State Senate, sues The Fredonian for $10,000 for libel.

THURSDAY, 4.—John Bright derides English fears and jealousy of Russia....Mr. Gladstone advises Lord Brabourne to post himself better in English history....Vienna advices state that a train was wrecked between Nicolateff and Odessa, killing forty soldiers....Uruguay is passing through a political crisis....At the meeting of the National Liberal Federation held at Leeds yesterday, Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule policy was confirmed....More rioting in Belfast....Russia's patience reaches its limit in the Bulgaria question....The presence of Count De Lesseps in this country leads to new efforts toward a settlement of the differences between the Trans-Continental lines, notably the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Panama Railroad Company ...Killing resumed at Swift's packing-house on a small scale....The French visitors arrived at Washington, D.C., last night....The Blue Mountain Lake House in the Adirondacks burned. Loss $40,000. ....Addison Cammack, of New Orleans, is dead.

FRIDAY, 5.—Tzankoff demands the resignation of the Bulgarian Ministry. One of the ministers appeals to Mr. Gladstone to raise his voice again in behalf of the independence of Bulgaria....Lords Salisbury and Churchill refuse to receive a deputation of Socialists, thinking that it would not inure to public advantage....Dispatches from Kabul say that the Ghilzais surprised and annihilated a regiment of Duranis, who were going to Kabul....Viecute Recendez, the Mexican, who killed his wife and children, was shot dead in the jail yard in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, yesterday....Defaulter John F. Hoke, late bookkeeper of the Merchants' National Bank of Peoria, Ill., has been arrested in Montreal....Master Workman Butler, Knights of Labor, call out Armour & Co's. butchers, Chicago; if they disregard the order, and stay at work—of which there seems to be indication—it will settle the strike....Five hundred miners at Mount Carmel, Penn., strike for a 10 per cent advance in wages....Great excitement in Burlington, N. J., over the elopement of Charles Myers, a young married man, with the young wife of Henry Homer, a merchant ...A brass tablet in memory of General Grant, the gift of George W. Childs and A. J. Drexel, is to be placed in St. James P. E. Church at Elberon, N. J. ....Ex-Alderman Francis McCabe declared insane by the jury on the testimony of his wife, Drs. W. A. Hammond, Meredith Clymer, and A. McL. Hamilton....The Court House at Lancaster, N. H., burned. ....The loss by fire in this country in October foots up $12,000,000, which is 50 per cent greater than the average October fire loss for the last ten years....Henry Ward Beecher gives his impressions of England and Ireland....Prince and Princess Kamatsu, Japan, are doing this city....Cooper Institute crowded with Anarchists. Mrs. Parsons cheered.

SATURDAY, 6.—Mr. Gladstone has declined a proffered national testimonial. ....Adam Head was shot and killed at Salina, Kansas, in a political quarrel....A prisoner under a life sentence for murder in the State Prison at Wethersfield, Conn., deceived his keeper by placing a dummy in his cell and escaped.

(Continued on page sixteen.)

Our Contributors.

The Sunbeam's Message.

BY J. K. LUDLUM.

A BEAUTIFUL Sunday morning,
The sky as blue as in June,
Although it was late October,
And winter was coming soon.

The sunlight flooded the roadside,
The meadows and babbling brooks;
But my heart was dark and gloomy,
And gloomy and dark were my looks.

For I was unsettled and troubled,
As the question had come to me:
Will you believe on the Saviour
Or not? Which will it be?"

I entered the church as the organ
Pealed forth the opening hymn,
Circling the arches and floating
Into each corner dim.

Grandly the great church echoed
The pulsing, jubilant song,
That pealed from the gilded organ,
And rose from the gathered throng.

The sunlight streamed thro' the windows,
Softened to blue and gold,
But the pulpit was cast into shadow
Where the tones of the organ roll'd.

The service went on to the sermon,
The sermon neared its close,
And still my mind was unsettled,
Still the question arose.

"Will it never be answered—never?"
I murmured with bended head,
When, with his hand on the Bible,
The white-haired minister said:

"Dear friends, why won't you accept Him?
Think what He has done for you!
Would one of you now in His service
For your neighbor the same thing do?

"Think of the Prince of heaven,
Forsaken by every one!
Even Peter protesting he loved Him,
Denied Him ere night was done!

Think of the scorn and taunting
He bore for love; and how
He carried the cross on His shoulders,
The crown of thorns on His brow!

"I leave it for your deciding,
Dear friends. Oh, let it be wise!
Think of the cross on His shoulders,
The thorns o'er His loving eyes!"

Just then thro' the high, arched window
A sunbeam struggled down
On the snowy hair of the pastor
Like a wonderful, dazzling crown.

While the gentle face beneath it
Was glorified by the ray
From the golden, mystical sunlight,
As he murmured, "Let us pray."

Again thro' the wide, dim arches,
The tones of the organ roll'd,
But now my heart throbb'd with the music,
For that ray of sunshine gold

Settled the troublesome question,
And it faded no more to arise.
The sunlight was gold, and the heavens
Blue as June to my eyes,

As I walked up the dusty roadside,
Past the dancing meadow-brooks,
For my heart was light and happy,
And happy and glad were my looks.

NEW YORK CITY.

Infidelity or Indifference.

BY PROF. J. G. LANSING, D.D.

INFIDELITY is a want or withholding of belief or confidence; a disbelief of the inspiration of the Scriptures, or of the divine origin of Christianity.

Infidelity, therefore, implies something of a mental process, while indifference is purely a moral condition. Infidelity belongs more to the head, while indifference belongs to the heart. And because this is so, indifference is far more common and far more to be dreaded than infidelity.

Much passes under the name of infidelity which is misnamed, which might be said to be not worthy of the name, for infidelity is certainly higher in the moral scale than indifference. Infidelity implies at least some thought, some study, some knowledge, however wrong may have been the methods, and however bad may be the results. Indifference implies no such thought or study, but an absorbing devotion to selfish, fleshly, worldly pursuits. Infidelity has at least given some study to the Word. Indifference studies nothing but the world. Infidelity does not believe. Indifference does not care. And the last is the worst.

We speak of the infidelity of the times. We should the rather speak of the indifference of the times. The great mass of people do not belong to the ranks of infidelity; there are comparatively few infidels. They belong to the ranks of indifference. They show an utter disregard as to religion, not because they have searched the Scriptures and found those things to be not so; not because they have read the works of infidel writers and accepted their views; not because they have studied and reasoned these things out for themselves and have come to such conclusions; and therefore not because they are infidel, but because they are entirely indifferent as to all these things. They neglect the study of the Bible, they do not attend church, they give little heed to religious observances, they are not deeply engaged in great movements for the progress of Christianity,—why? It is not because they do not believe in the Scriptures, not because they do not believe in the Church, not because they do not believe in Christianizing mankind, but because they are indifferent to all this, while altogether engrossed with self and the world. They love something else far more and so are amazingly indifferent as to this.

This indifference is something lower in the moral scale than infidelity. It is more deadly in its character. It is more difficult to deal with. The reason is evident. It is stated in the Scriptures, "Out of the heart are the issues of life." Infidelity belongs largely to the head. Indifference touches and involves the whole heart. And the heart rules the head. Men invariably follow—not the law of logic, but the law of love. That which they love is that which they really believe and do. When that love is absorbed in self and the world there is indifference as to religious things. Indifference has no other explanation. The heart is taken and monopolized elsewhere. So indifference strikes at the root and involves the whole life. And, therefore, indifference is more dangerous in nature and more difficult as to treatment. It is much more difficult to convert the affections than to convince the intellect. But certainly the former is always the first and greater work; for what the heart loves, the head will follow. Hence the wisdom of the Scriptures, "Give me thine heart."

Infidelity is really, then, only a mental outcropping of indifference, and indifference is only the negative side of worldliness and wickedness. Underlying infidelity as soil and seed is indifference. The genuine infidel (not the honest doubter) became first utterly indifferent, and he became utterly indifferent because the heart was carried away with the world and the things of the world. It was the remark of that keen observer and writer, the late Dr. Arnot of Edinburgh, that it could be proven by a large induction of facts that men who had become infidel in opinion had first become wicked in conduct.

From its very nature, infidelity belongs to those outside the kingdom of God. But indifference attaches itself both to those outside and those inside the Church, and particularly the latter. Some of the most awful accusations brought by God against His chosen people, and some of the most fearful judgments visited upon them, were precisely because of such a state of indifference. That is, in many respects, the worst sin of the two attached itself specifically to God's people. The indifference of those outside the Church will begin to cease when there is an alarm at the indifference of those within. Repentant Nineveh waits on reluctant Jonah.

